THE PREFACE.

MY former Collections having bin found useful, and the intent of the Second Part being only to lengthen the same Clue, that may guide the Reader through the dark Labyrinth of those Years, there's the less need of an Introduction to this Book.

I seem to come to my Reader, [illegible] to give him my Hand to lead him [illegible] dare in his own Country [illegible]

Man's Life is [illegible] what is doing in it, and [illegible] and it is but fit that of all parts of the World, every Man should know his own Country best.

For that reason I have chosen to be a Collector of Matters of Fact, rather than to write in the usual form of [illegible] to pretend to have seen into the Closets of Statesmen and Church-Mens Minds, and to have [illegible] and [illegible] the first Models by which they wrought. In such an Attempt I might have bin a false Guide to my Country-Men against my will, and have assumed to my self to be wiser than they.

But whilst I entertain the Reader only with a bare and simple Narrative of what was done, and by whom, and when, every Man is left to his native freedom to judg of Men and Things, to find out the Causes by the Effects, to compare Transactions past, with such as now occur, to make his own Comment upon every Fact, and from such Text to read to himself, his own improvement, Lectures of Prudence, Policy, and Morality.

The Reader should not have staid so many Years in the Dark, where I left him, at the Dissolution of the Parliament 4 Caroli, if I could have bin sooner permitted to have sent him through the Press.

Theſe further Lights every conſidering English-Man knows in general, that after that time there was a great change in the way of the English Government, no Parliament being held for twelve Years and upwards, one only met without making a Seſſion by paſſing an Act, and was Diſſolved within three weeks.

I ſuppoſe moſt Men cannot but wiſh to know in particular the Arts and Methods uſed in Government in ſuch a long ſuſpenſion of the Excerciſe of the Supream Legiſlative Power, ſo that neither the King could have any Aſſiſtance from the People, to ſupport the Honour, Strength, and Intereſt of the Nation; nor the People any Relief of their preſſing Grievances, or any Proviſions made by Law for the Security and Advancement of their common Welfare.

I hope every ſtudious Reader may reaſonably ſatisfie himſelf by the following Papers, of the true State of the Government and Kingdom, during the diſcontinuance of Parliament, whilſt I keep my ſelf cloſe to my Province, of relating only in my Annals the ſeveral Proclamations, Commiſſions, Inſtructions, Orders, or Acts of Council-Table, Patents and Grants which then paſſed; together with the proſecution of the ſame, by Judgments, Decrees, Orders, and other Proceedings of the Courts of Star-Chamber, High-Commiſſion; of the Preſident and Council of the North, and ſeveral other Courts.

It will be the Reader's part to call them all into Judgment, to Try, Condemn, or Acquit them, according to their ſeveral Merits; it belongs to him, by forming Inductions from the particular Facts, to enable himſelf to underſtand the Deſigns then managed, and the Methods propounded to effect them.

The Reader may with eaſe, by Reflections made upon theſe Annals, inform himſelf by whoſe Counſels the King ſteered in his Government during the long Intermiſſion of Parliaments; What Means and Methods were deſigned, practiſed, or attempted to levy Mony for ſupport of the King in his way of Government without Parliaments; What unuſual Powers of Judicatory were aſſumed and exerciſed in the menage of the Government during that time; What Principles and Maxims in Law were endeavoured to be eſtabliſhed; What Doctrine and Diſcipline were obtruded upon the Church of England; And what were the Effects and Conſequences, not only in England, but alſo in Scotland and Ireland, of the manner of governing whilſt Parliaments were diſcontinued.

Perhaps theſe Collections may be read by moſt occaſionally; ſometimes the Reader may deſire to be ſatisfied what was done upon ſome Emergency or notable Accident; and ſometimes to ſee a particular Argument in Law, or a Deciſion of ſome memorable Caſe, or the Tranſactions of ſome one Year, (few having leiſure ſo deliberately to read all theſe Annals, as to obſerve nicely whoſe hands were moſt conſtantly upon the Helm of the Kingdom, from 1619 to 1640, or by what Rules they ſteered, either in the Matters of State, or the Diſtribution of Juſtice, or the Affairs of the Church); and for that reaſon it may be an eaſe to the Reader to know before-hand the Perſons that were upon the Stage, or in the Retiring Room, in every Scene of the whole Interval of Parliament, and the ſeveral Parts they acted.

The principal Conduct of all Affairs about the Government, was committed by the King to three of his Council, Dr. William Laud Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury; James Marqueſs of Hamilton, after Duke Hamilton; and Sir Thomas Wentworth, after Baron, then Vicount, and laſtly Earl of Strafford; many other noble Perſonages were of the King's Council, but the Power and Authority reſted in theſe, whoſe Advices and Reſolutions in all the Matters of State and higheſt Moment [by their conſtant correſpondence when they were far diſtant each from other] were brought to the Council Table for Countenance and Execution.

Theſe three great Miniſters of State had each his more peculiar Province, yet they had all an influence on the whole Government. The Earl of Strafford reſided much in Ireland, and was buſy to execute there the Advices which he had given his Maſter at the Council-Table, and ſuch mutual Advices as were conſtantly given and received between the Arch-Biſhop and him. The Marqueſs of Hamilton had the Conduct of the Scotiſh Affairs, yet with the concurrence of the Arch-Biſhop, who preſided in all the moſt ſecret Councils concerning all the three Kingdoms; and the Addreſſes in Matters Temporal as well as Spiritual, were made through him to the King by the moſt Noble Perſonages. This Triumvirate was ſolely depended upon for Advice in the greateſt Exigencies of the Crown. It appears by the Arch-Biſhop's own Diary, that after ten Years diſcontinuance of Parliaments, the Advice was from theſe three great Men to the King to call a Parliament; the Arch-Biſhop entred it upon the 5th of December 1639, thus:

The King this day declared his Reſolution for a Parliament, in caſe of the Scotiſh Rebellion; and the firſt Movers of it were, the Lord Deputy of Ireland, the Marqueſs of Hamilton, and my Self; and the Reſolution voted at the Board to Aſſiſt the King in extraordinary Ways, if the Parliament ment ſhould prove peeviſh and refuſe, &c. And before the Council did then riſe, it was declared the Parliament was to meet the 13th of April, 1640.

The Reader will need no fuller ſatisfaction of the influence which this Arch-Biſhop had upon the King, than his own Diary; and for that reaſon I have inſerted it in the beginning of ſeveral Years in theſe Annals: Not knowing how to relate more impartially, or to evince more clearly the truth of the Matter of Fact, which that Diary contains, eſpecially in ſome particulars, which would have bin of very doubtful credit, had they dropt from any Pen but the Arch-Biſhop*'s own.*

I ſhall inſtance only in one Fact entred in this Diary; the Offer made to him by a Meſſenger from the Pope of a Cardinal's Cap, and his Anſwer, That ſomewhat dwelt within him which would not ſuffer that, until Rome were otherwiſe than it is. Few would either have believed that the Papiſts Deſigns of ſubverting the Proteſtant Religion were advanced in thoſe days to that height of Hope, as to attempt the Metropolitan of England to accept of ſuch a Preferment from Rome, or that ſo great a Counſellor and Miniſter of State to the King ſhould ſuffer ſuch a bold Attempt againſt his Crown and Dignity, and ſuch an Underminer of the Proteſtant Religion to paſs away unqueſtioned, to proſecute his Treaſonable Deſigns, of Introducing a Foreign Power and Religion.

I cenſure not that Great Prelat for what he did, or omitted; but I give the Reader the reaſon of my inſerting his Diary, being willing to put it out of doubt who were the King's moſt confiding Cabinet Counſellors, in the Years whereof theſe Annals give an Account.

After the Diſſolution of that Parliament, wherein the Petition of Right was granted, a Proclamation came forth, forbidding the People to raiſe or nouriſh Reports or falſe Rumors of Parliament; and it ſeems (by what followed) the Kingdom for twelve Years together was governed without a Parliament.

One of the firſt Fruits of thoſe Advices to the King, was to provide well for the Support of his Crown, that there might be ſufficient Supplies of Monies to anſwer all its Wants during the Intermiſſion of Parliaments, and there wanted not thoſe that had variety of Inventions to draw Mony from the People, whilſt none could be charged upon them in the Ancient Legal Courſe.

The firſt Advice that was given, was not only to continue Tunnage and Poundage without any conſent of Parliament, but alſo to inhance the Book of Rates upon ſeveral Merchants Goods, and the Collections of ſuch Rates to be enforced out of the Courſe of ordinary Courts of Juſtice.

The next Deſign for Mony was, by Proclamation to revive an obſolete Law about Knighthood, under colour whereof Summons were ſent throughout the Kingdom to every Man poſſeſſed for three Years of 40 l. per Annum, who did not appear before the King at his Coronation to be made a Knight, to ſubmit to ſuch Fines as they could compound for; and James Maleverer of Arncliff, in the County of York, Eſq; put himſelf upon the Judgment of the Court of Exchequer, what Fine they ſhould think fit to impoſe upon him: but the Court doubting the Law would not bear them out, refuſed that Regular Courſe of impoſing a Fine, and put the Party ſubmitting, to go and compound with Commiſſioners in the Country, contrary to the intent of the Law.

Another Advice to advance the King's Revenue, was, To grant Patents under the Great Seal; by which Monopolies were created, in a manner, of all ſorts of Commodities; as Soap, Salt, Wine, Leather, Sea-Cole, Cards, Pins, even to the ſole gathering of Rags; which Projects were countenanced with the name of Incorporations. And the Titles of all Proclamations countenancing the new Corporations, as well as Proclamations of Matters of State, are put in the end of every Year, in order of Time, in the Body of the Collections, and ſome in the Appendix.

Another Advice was given, to raiſe a Revenue for the King, by granting of Commiſſions under the Great Seal for Offenders to Compound; and the better to effect the ſame, ſome Examples were made by Sentence in the High Court of Star-Chamber againſt ſeveral Perſons, to pay great Fines, as for Depopulations, Nuſances in Building between High and Low-Water Mark, for pretended Encroachments upon the Foreſts, with other things of that nature, and accordingly Commiſſions were iſſued out, and Offenders in that kind did compound, which brought in a conſiderable Revenue.

But of all the Inventions for raiſing of Monies during the Intermiſſion of Parliaments, the Ship-Writs (as they were called) for impoſing Ships and Furniture upon every part of the Kingdom, upon the Inland as well as upon the Port-Towns, and taxing Mony for the ſame at the King's Pleaſure, by his Writ expreſſed; and that as often and in as great proportion as his Majeſty ſhall judg needful, was the greateſt diſſatisfaction to many of the Nobility and Gentry, they alledging that way of Supply included in it ſelf a claim of the King's unto the whole Eſtates of the Kingdom, when he would ſay he wanted

Monies, upon that occaſion, the Judges having then declared the King to be the ſole Judg of the Danger.

The Diſputes and Conteſts that aroſe from this way of levying Monies, will be found in the following Annals; and the Author hath related that great and memorable Caſe of Ship-Mony more fully than others, becauſe there is ſo much excellent Learning ſhewed in the Arguments made therein before all the Judges of England in the Exchequer-Chamber, which were never yet publiſhed in print: therefore he hath ſelected out the Arguments made by two of the Counſel, viz. Oliver St. John of Lincolns-Inn Eſq; his Argument for Mr. Hambden, and Sir John Banks Kt. the King's Attorny General his Argument for the King; both which, and all the Arguments of the reſt of the Counſel, as alſo of the twelve Judges, the Author took with his own Pen verbatim (as near as he could) except ſometimes through defect in hearing, by ſome accidental interruption, a Word, or the exact citing of a Record, or other Paſſage might happen to be omitted.

In theſe Arguments the young Students of the Law will find Matters of great Antiquity before the Conqueſt, mentioned as pertinent to this Caſe, out of Ancient Authorities and Hiſtorians in the time of the Saxons and Danes, made uſe of as introductive to this Caſe of Ship-Mony. And ſuch mention is alſo made of Matters of State, as comes near Arcana Regni, of a higher nature than the Arguments in any other known Caſe, the higheſt Prerogative of the King in Caſes of the greateſt Exigency being there brought into debate.

And that the Reader may more clearly judg of the Conſequence of the Caſe, the Author hath annexed an Account of what Mony was levied out of every County by virtue of this Tax, the ſame amounting to about 200000 l. per Annum for five Years, as may appear by the inſerted Account of Sir William Ruſſel then Treaſurer of the Navy.

The Reader will alſo find in theſe Collections, a large Account of the Proceedings in the Court of Star-Chamber for ten Years; ſome Caſes are briefly reported, others more conſiderable are ſet down at large, with ſome Speeches made by the Lords when they gave Sentence in open Court, as in the Caſe of William Prinn Eſq; when he loſt his Ears the ſecond time; and in the Caſe of the Biſhop of Lincoln, when he was twice ſentenced in that Court, and impriſoned in the Tower; and in divers other Remarkable Caſes.

Likewiſe the Reader will find a particular and large Account of the Tranſactions of Affairs in Scotland, wherein the Year 1637. the firſt Sparks of Diſcontent there brake out; and when Marqueſs Hamilton, the King's High Commiſſioner, the next Year (1638) was ſent down to compoſe the Differences and Commotions in that Kingdom, but without effect. And the next Year after (1639) when the King marched with an Army againſt the Scots, and encamped near Berwick, where the Author then was when a Pacification was concluded; as likewiſe at the Fight at Newborn, the Great Council at York, and Treaty at Rippon, Anno 1640. At all which Places the Author was preſent, and it's hoped the Reader will find much ſatisfaction in a punctual Account of the Tranſaction of Affairs in thoſe Places.

And as for a clear Account of the Proceedings in Scotland during the ſaid Years, the Author is the better enabled to give the ſame, by the help of that exact Hiſtory of the Lives of the two Duke Hamiltons, written by that Learned Divine Dr. Gilbert Burnet, whoſe Example, in ſetting down Vouchers for what he doth write, is a worthy and good Example for any Hiſtorian to follow.

And another help to the Author was, the Records of Scotland, whilſt they remained here, which after the taking of Sterling-Caſtle, were brought from thence to be kept in the Tower of London.

The Author alſo endeavoured to get what other Informations he could, by Proclamations, Declarations, and Proteſtations, pro and con, concerning thoſe Commotions in Scotland; all which Matters, and alſo other things, throughout the whole Collections, the Author ſets down for moſt part at large, becauſe he would not confine the Reader to his Abſtract, nor limit him to minutes of material Evidences of Truth, except it be in ſome leſs conſiderable Matters, and hopes the Reader will pardon him for ſo doing.

Another thing ſomewhat conſiderable, which the Author doth mention, (with which ſome Readers, martially inclin'd, will not be diſpleaſed) is an account of Actions of War, and Military Proceedings in Germany, wherein the Subjects of Great Britain were concerned, upon the ſending over of ſix thouſand Men, under the Conduct of Marqueſs Hamilton, in the Year 1631, to aſſiſt the King of Sweden, in order to the Recovery of the Palatinate, &c. And alſo of the Proceedings of the Ambaſſadors ſent upon Treaties with the Emperor, and afterwards with the King of Sweden, about the Reſtitution of the Prince Elector [illegible] to [illegible] first [illegible] of the [illegible]

REMAINS

For the Year, 1629.

IN the Preface to this ſecond Part, the Author acquaints the Reader how it happened that theſe following Additions, which come under the Title of Remains, were omitted in the firſt Part of Hiſtorical Collections, and not then inſerted in the Year 1629, as was intended.

Among the things (ſo omitted) no mention was made of an Expreſſion in the Diary of Dr. William Laud, then Biſhop of London, of which the ſubſequent Parliament took ſpecial notice, (viz.) That that Parliament which was Diſſolved (the King being preſent) upon the 10th of March, 4. Car. 1. had laboured his Ruin. And probably the reaſon for that Memento might be, becauſe the Houſe of Commons in their Remonſtrance in that Parliament had reflected upon that Biſhop. Unto which Remonſtrance an Anſwer was given in the King's Name, (but omitted alſo in the Firſt Part) penned by the ſaid Biſhop of London, being of his own hand-writing, produced afterwards at his Trial, and was to this effect.

The King's Anſwer to the Commons Remonſtrance.

'WE are not bound (ſaith his Majeſty) to give an account of our Actions to any but to God only; yet out of the Honour and Integrity of our Grace, the Love and Care of our People, the great and hearty deſire we have to take off all Fears and Jealouſies from our Loyal and Loving Subjects, We have thought fit to declare theſe Reaſons following, why we have called in this Remonſtrance, which yet we preſume and conſtantly believe was framed and delivered up unto us with good Intentions, tho by a miſguided Zeal.

'For firſt, That Remonſtrance begins at Religion, and fears innovation of it by Popery: But we would have our Subjects of all ſorts to call to mind what Difficulties and Dangers we endured, not many years ſince for Religion's ſake; that we are the ſame ſtill, and our Holy Religion is as precious to us as it is, or can be to any of them, and we will no more admit Innovation therein, than they that think they have done well in fearing it ſo much.

'Tis true, that all Effects expected have not followed upon the Petition delivered at Oxford, but we are in leaſt fault; for that Supply being not afforded us, diſenabled us to execute all that was deſired, and cauſed the ſtay of thoſe legal Proceedings which have helped to ſwell up this Remonſtrance; yet let all the Counties of England be examined, and London and the Suburbs with them, neither is there ſuch a noted increaſe of Papiſts, nor ſuch cauſe of fear as is made;

‘nor hath any amounted to ſuch an odious tolerating as is charged upon it, nor near any ſuch.

‘For that Commiſſion ſo much complain'd of, both the Matter and Intent of it are utterly miſtaken; for it doth not diſpenſe with any Penalty, or any courſe to be taken with any Papiſts, for the exerciſe of their Religion; no, nor with the pecuniary Mulct, or not-Conformity to ours. It was adviſed, for the increaſe of our Profit, and the returning of that into our Purſe: which abuſe, or connivance of Inferior Miniſters, might, perhaps, divert another way: if that, or any other ſhall be abuſed in the Execution, we will be ready to puniſh upon any juſt Complaint.

‘The next Fear is, the daily growth and ſpreading of the Arminian Faction, call'd, a cunning way to bring in Popery; but we hold this Charge as great a wrong to our Self and our Government, as the former; for our People muſt not be taught by a Parliament Remonſtrance, or any other way, That we are ſo ignorant of Truth, or ſo careleſs of the profeſſion of it, that any Opinion, or Faction, or whatſoever it be call'd, ſhould thruſt it ſelf ſo far, and ſo faſt into our Kingdoms, without our knowledg of it. This is a mere Dream of them that make, and would make our Loyal and Loving People think we ſleep the while.

Dr. Laud Bp of London, and Dr. Neale Bp of Wincheſter.

‘In this Charge there is great wrong done to two Eminent Prelates that attend our Perſon: for they are accus'd without producing any the leaſt ſhew, or ſhadow of proof againſt them; and ſhould they, or any other, attempt Innovation of Religion, either by that open, or any cunning way, we ſhould quickly take other order with them, and not ſtay for your Remonſtrance.

‘To help on this, our People are made believe, there is a Reſtraint of Books Orthodoxal: but we are ſure, ſince the laſt Parliament began, ſome, whom the Remonſtrance calls Orthodox, have aſſumed to themſelves an unſufferable liberty in Printing. Our Proclamation commanded a Reſtraint on both ſides, till the Paſſions of Men might ſubſide and calm: And had this bin obey'd, as it ought, we had not now bin toſſed in this Tempeſt; and for any diſtreſſing or diſcountenancing of Good Preachers, we know there is none, if they be (as they are called) Good, but our good People ſhall never want that Spiritual Comfort which is due unto them. And, for the Preferments which we beſtow, we have ever made it our great care to give them, as Rewards of Deſert and Pains: But as the Preferments are ours, ſo will we be Judg of the Deſert our Self, and not to be taught by a Remonſtrance.

Ireland.

‘For Ireland, We think, in caſe of Religion, it is not worſe than Queen Elizabeth left it; and for other Affairs, it is as good as we found it, nay, perhaps better: And we take it for a great diſparagement of our Government, that it ſhould be voiced, That New Monaſteries, Nunneries, and other Superſtitious Houſes are erected and repleniſhed in Dublin, and other great Towns of that our Kingdom: for we aſſure our Self, our Deputy, and Council there, will not ſuffer God and our Government ſo to be diſhonoured, but we ſhould have had ſome account of it from them; and we may not endure to have our good People thus miſled with Shews.

‘There is likewiſe ſomewhat conſiderable in the Time when theſe ‘practices to undermine true Religion in our Kingdom are ſet on Foot. The Remonſtrance tells us it is now, when Religion is oppos'd by open Force in all other Parts: but We muſt tell Our People, there are no undermining practices at Home againſt it, if They practiſe not againſt it that ſeem moſt to labour for it. For while Religion ſeems to be contended for in ſuch a Factious way (which cannot be God's way) the heat of that doth often melt away that, which it labours earneſtly (but perhaps not wiſely) to preſerve. And, for God's Judgments which We and our People have felt, and have cauſe to fear, We ſhall prevent them beſt by a true and religious Remonſtrance of the amendment of our Lives, &c.

Upon the Diſſolution of the laſt Parliament, the People were highly diſcontented, and uttered unpleaſing Speeches and Diſcourſes; That if a Parliament was not preſently called again, all things would be unſetled and out of Order, and Trading would fail, and Conteſts would ariſe about Tunnage and Poundage, &c.

Whereupon his Majeſty put forth a Proclamation, on the 27*th* of March, for ſuppreſſing of falſe Rumors touching Parliaments, to this Effect.

Againſt falſe Rumors of Parliament.

‘That notwithſtanding his Majeſties late Declaration for ſatisfying of the Minds and Affections of his loving Subjects, ſome ill diſpoſed Perſons do ſpread falſe and pernicious Rumors abroad, as if the ſcandalous and ſeditious Propoſition in the Houſe of Commons, tumultuouſly taken up by ſome few, after that by his Majeſties Royal Authority he had commanded their Adjournment, had been the Vote of the whole Houſe, whereas the contrary is the Truth: which Propoſition was a thing of a moſt wicked and dangerous Conſequence to the good eſtate of this Kingdom, and it appeareth to be ſo by thoſe impreſſions which this falſe Rumor hath made in Mens Minds, whereby, out of cauſeleſs Fears, the Trade of the Kingdom is diſturbed, and Merchants diſcouraged to continue their wonted Traffique. His Majeſty hath thought it expedient, not only to maniſeſt the Truth thereof, but to make known his Royal Pleaſure; that thoſe who raiſe, or nouriſh falſe Reports, ſhall be ſeverely puniſhed; and ſuch as chearfully go on with their Trades, have all good encouragement; not purpoſing to overcharge his Subjects by any new Burthens; but to ſatisfy himſelf with thoſe Duties that were received by the King his Father of Bleſſed Memory, which His now Majeſty neither can, nor will diſpenſe withal. And Whereas, for ſeveral ill ends, the calling again of a Parliament is divulged, howſoever his Majeſty hath ſhewed by his frequent meeting with his People, his Love to the uſe of Parliaments; Yet the late abuſe having, for the preſent, driven his Majeſty unwillingly out of that Courſe: He ſhall account it preſumption for any to preſcribe any time to his Majeſty for Parliaments; the Calling, Continuing, and Diſſolving of which is always in the Kings own Power. And his Majeſty ſhall be more inclineable to meet in Parliament again, when his People ſhall ſee more clearly into his Intents and Actions; when ſuch as have bred this interruption ſhall receive their condign Puniſhment, and thoſe who are miſled by them, and ſuch ill Reports as are raiſed upon this occaſion, ſhall come to a better underſtanding of his Majeſty and Themſelves.

Duke of Rohan
1628/29.

The Duke of Rohan, the Head of the Proteſtant Party of the Reformed Religion in France, (not knowing that the King of England had diſſolved the Parliament) implored his further Aid, on the behalf of the Reformed Churches in France, in a Letter dated the 12*th* of March 1628. being two days after the Parliament was diſſolved; and was to this effect.

The Duke of Rohan's Letter to the King.

SIR,

The deplorable accident of the loſs of Rochel, which God hath pleaſed to permit to humble us under his hand, hath redoubled, in the Spirit of our Enemies, the paſſion which they have for our Ruine; and the hopes to attain thereunto: but it hath not taken away from thoſe Churches of the Provinces that Courage, or Affection of oppoſing, by a juſt and vigorous defence, to their unjuſt Deſigns. This is that which hath made them take up a Reſolution, and aſſemble themſelves together, and to ſtand in a Body amidſt theſe Commotions, to aſſiſt me with their good Counſel, and provide, with me means for their Deliverance. And becauſe the moſt powerful Means, which God hath raiſed them upon Earth, is the Aid which our Churches have received, and do expect from your Majeſty, the general Aſſembly have deſired, That my Letter (which ſolely hitherto repreſented unto your Majeſty the Intereſt of the publick Cauſe) might be joined to the moſt humble Supplication, which they repreſent. I do it, Sir, with ſo much the more Affection, becauſe I am Witneſs, that this poor People breath after your Aſſiſtance, having once laid down their Arms, which the Oppreſſion of the Enemy made ſo neceſſary: and becauſe they knew it was your deſire, took them up again, when they learned that your Majeſty obliged them to it by your Counſel, and by your Promiſes. Upon this ſole Aſſurance, they have expoſed themſelves to all Dangers, overcome all Obſtacles, conſumed their Goods, and are ſtill ready to ſpill their Blood, even unto the laſt drop. Your good Will they have found more dear than their Lives: and, notwithſtanding the Promiſes and Menaces, which their Enemies have made uſe of to move them, they have not been induced to make any Breach of thoſe Oaths, by which they were tied never to hearken to any Treaty, but with your Majeſties Conſent. All the Churches of this Kingdom, which are linked together to an unexampled fidelity, are glorious Objects of your Charity and Power. You are (Sir) Defender of that Faith, which they profeſs. Do not ſuffer it to be unjuſtly oppreſſed: You have ſtirred up their Affections by your Royal Promiſes, and thoſe ſacred Words, That your Majeſty would employ all the Power of your Kingdoms to ſheild thoſe Churches from the ruine that threatned them, and have been, next to the favour of God, the only Foundation of their Hopes; they have alſo thought it to be one of the higheſt Crimes they could commit, to doubt of the performance thereof. If the beginning of their Miſeries hath moved your Compaſſion, this ſad ſubject hath increaſed upon them with ſo much Violence, that there is nothing, but your Aſſiſtance can prevent their abſolute Deſtruction: for at this day the greateſt Miſdemeanors which our Enemies accuſe us of, and publiſh, that it cannot be expiated, but by our Blood, is the imploring and hoping for your Aſſiſtance. Our Goods for this are confiſcated and deſtroyed; our Farms deſolate and burned to Aſhes; our Heads expoſed to the Block; our Families baniſhed; our Temples demoliſhed. And every where, where the cruelty of our heinous Enemies can extend, Men and Women are beaten to Maſs with Staves.

In ſhort, the Horror and Perſecution we endure is ſo great, that our Words are too weak to expreſs them.

Furthermore, We ſee, even at our Doors, the powerful Armies, which only wait the time to deſtroy thoſe retiring places that are left, and after that baniſh the exerciſe of Religion, and maſſacre the Faithful throughout the Kingdom. Hereupon, if I ſhould intreat your Majeſty not to Abandon us; I fear by theſe Words to offend a great King, ſo powerful, and ſo faithful: but I will take upon me the boldneſs, by reaſon of our preſſing neceſſities, to ſupplicate your ready Aſſiſtance, to hinder our falling under the ſtrength of our Enemies. Your Majeſty need not ſearch elſewhere, but in your own profound Wiſdom and Experience, to render your ſuccor redoubtable to thoſe that deſpiſe it, and advantageous to thoſe People that expect it. By this means you will gain the greateſt Glory that can be deſired; you will free from Fire and Sword 300000 Families, which pray to God continually for your Proſperity; will preſerve a People, whom God hath purchaſed by his Blood, and that have kept their Faith towards God and Man amidſt the greateſt Diſtractions and cruel Sufferings; will place the Fidelity of your Word, the Reputation of your State, and your Armies in a point worthy of ſo much Grandeur, and in checking the boldneſs of thoſe, who undertake to blaſt it daily with unworthy Reproaches, will add to your Title that of the Reſtorer of the moſt innocent People in the World, and the moſt inhumanely perſecuted.

As to my own Concerns, Sir, I make no mention to your Majeſty of my Intereſt. I might (having the Honour to be what I am) do it without blame, as to outward appearance: but it is ſo long ſince I had conſecrated them to the uſe of the Publick; that I ſhall always eſteem my condition happy enough, provided the Church be not miſerable; and that I may have this advantage, to be known by ſuch occaſions which your Majeſty doth not diſprove of, that I am,

At Rohan the 12th of March, 1629.

Your Majeſties Moſt Humble, and moſt Obedient Servant.

HENRY of ROHAN.

An Addreſs from the Deputies of the Reformed Churches.

Deputies came alſo from the Reformed Churches, and gave the King to underſtand, that they were informed a Treaty of Peace was intended to be propounded, between the two Crowns of England and France, by ſome Miniſters of Forreign Princes. That in caſe the Treaty do ſucceed, they humbly pray his Majeſty of Great Britain, to inſiſt upon the Capitulation made upon his Mediation, and for which he paſſed his Word, that the Reformed Churches ſhould perform on their parts, which they kept inviolably, till there were Forces placed, and kept in Forts againſt them, contrary to the Capitulation; and ſo, in their own Defence, were neceſſitated to take up Arms.

To the Duke of Rohan's Letter, His Majeſty returned an Anſwer, which was to this effect.

The Effect of the King's Anſwer to the D. of Rohan.

'That his Majeſty underſtands there is an Intention, by the Mediation 'of ſome Forreign Princes, to propoſe a Peace between the two 'Crowns of England and France, which probably he may incline unto; 'and

An. 1629.

‘and therefore adviſeth the ſaid Duke, and thoſe of the Reformed Religion, timely to apply themſelves to the French King, and to get as advantageous Terms for himſelf, and thoſe engaged with him, as he could procure: The King further informing the Duke, that he was conſtrained to diſſolve the Parliament, which he had lately reaſſembled, from whom he expected further Supplies of Mony; but failing thereof, he was not in a condition to contribute ſuch further Aid and Aſſiſtance, either by Mony or Arms, as the Duke of Rohan, and thoſe that adhered unto him, might expect, and their preſent Neceſſities require; His Majeſty expreſſing his ſorrow, that the Condition of his Affairs was ſuch, that he could not anſwer his and their Expectation.

The Duke of Rohan ſeeks to the French King for a Peace.

The Duke of Rohan, upon the aforementiond advice of the King of England, forthwith made Addreſs to the French King, in order to a Peace, on behalf of himſelf, De Soubieze, and others of the Reformed Religion engaged with them: To which Addreſs, after ſome indiſpoſition thereunto in the French King, He at laſt agreed upon Articles, and Hoſtages were given, and a Peace concluded accordingly, and performed on both ſides; and an Act of Parliament paſſed in France to confirm the Articles of Peace ſo agreed upon.

March 24. 16$\frac{28}{29}$.

AT this time there was delivered to the Lords of the Privy Council, an Humble Petition of John Talbott, Edward Porter, Henry Tellier, and John Shepheard, the four Engliſh Captains employed by his Majeſty in the defence of Rochel, during the whole time of the Siege.

A Petition of the diſtreſſed Rochel Captains.

They humbly offer unto your Lordſhips Conſideration, the great Miſeries and Pains they endured during the Siege in Rochel, being above 14 months feeding long on Hides and Parchments, and ſtinted in that.

That during that time the Petitioners, had every one of them deducted 3 s. 6 d. the week out of their Pay, by the Pay-Maſter, which he pretended to be for Billet Money; whereas the Petitioners, and their Officers did, when Victuals was to be had for Mony, buy ſuch Victuals as they had, at a very dear rate, from the Rochellers, putting his Majeſty to no Charge at all for the ſame.

That your Petitioners were at extraordinary charge, above 200 l. a Man to maintain themſelves and their Companies in that miſerable Service, for Cloaths and other Neceſſaries, for which they grew indebted, and ſtill owe unto the Engliſh Merchants trading there.

They therefore pray their Lordſhips to take the Premiſes into conſideration.

To this Petition, their Lordſhips returned Anſwer;

That they do take notice of the Petitioners great Sufferings, and as occaſion may be offered, for his Majeſty's Service, they will be mindful of them.

The Biſhop of London, after the Diſſolution of the ſaid Parliament, thought it his Duty to preſent to his Majeſty certain Conſiderations in reference to the Church, Entituled;

Conſiderations

Conſiderations for the better ſettling of the Church-Government.

The Biſhop of London preſents a Paper to the King concerning the Church-Government.

THat his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed;

(1.) To command the Lords, the Biſhops, to their ſeveral Sees, excepting thoſe which are in attendance at Court.

(2.) That none of them reſide upon his Land, or Leaſe that he hath purchaſed, or on his Commendam, if he hold any, but in one of his Epiſcopal Houſes; and that he waſte not the Woods where any are left.

(3.) That they give charge in their Triennial Viſitations, and at other times, both by themſelves, and the Arch-Deacon, that the Declaration, for ſetling the Queſtions in difference be ſtrictly obſerved.

(4.) That a ſpecial charge be given them againſt frequent and unworthy Ordinations.

(5.) That a ſpecial care be had over the Lecturers in every Dioceſs, which by reaſon of their Pay are the People's Creatures, and blow the Bellows of their Sedition.

For the abating of whoſe Power, theſe ways may be taken.

1. That the Afternoon Sermons in all Pariſhes may be turned into Catechiſing, by Queſtions and Anſwers, according to an Order ſet out by King James, of bleſſed Memory.

If this cannot be, then,

2. That every Biſhop ordain in his Dioceſs, That every Lecturer do read Divine Service in his Surplice before the Lecture.

3. That where a Lecture is ſet up in a Market-Town, it be read by a Combination of Grave and Orthodox Divines near adjoining.

4. That if an Incorporation do maintain a Lecturer, that he be not ſuffered to Preach, till he take upon him Cure of Souls within that Incorporation.

5. That the Biſhop do countenance and encourage the grave Orthodox Divines of his Clergy, and gain them in the ſeveral quarters of his Dioceſs, to be preſent at ſuch Lecturers Sermons, as are near them; that ſo the Biſhop may have knowledg.

6. That the Biſhop ſuffer none under Noble-Men, and Men qualified by Law, to have any private Chaplain in his Houſe.

7. That his Majeſty may be graciouſly pleaſed, that Men of Courage, Gravity, and Experience in Government, be preferred to Biſhopricks.

8. That Emanuel and Sydney Colleges in Cambridg, which are the Nurſeries of Puritaniſm, may from time to time be provided of Grave and Orthodox Men for their Governors.

9. That his Majeſty's high Commiſſion be countenanced by the preſence of ſome of his Majeſty's Privy Council, ſo oft at leaſt as any matter of moment is to be ſentenced.

10. That ſome courſe may be taken that the Judges may not ſend ſo many Prohibitions.

An. 1629.

11. That his Majeſty would be graciouſly pleaſed, once in half a year, to call for an account of all, or ſo many of theſe as he in His Wiſdom ſhall think fit.

A conſideration alſo to be had,

1. As to the general Feoffees for Benefices and Preferments.
2. A new authoriſing of the Injunctions.

Alſo after the Diſſolution of the ſaid Parliament, his Majeſty moſt graciouſly declares himſelf as to Religion, and the Right and Property of the Subject; ‘That it is, and always hath bin Our hearts deſire, to His Majeſties Declaration as to Religion, Liberty and Property.

‘be found worthy of that Title, which We account the moſt glorious
‘in all our Crown, Defender of the Faith. Neither ſhal We ever give way ‘to the authorizing of any thing, whereby any Innovation may ſteal or ‘creep into the Church, but to preſerve that Unity of Doctrine and ‘Diſcipline eſtabliſhed in the time of Queen Elizabeth, whereby the ‘Church of England hath ſtood and flouriſhed ever ſince; And that ‘We have by Our Proclamation and Commandment, ordered the ‘Laws to be put in Execution againſt Prieſts and Popiſh Recuſants, to ‘fortify all ways and approaches againſt that Forreign Enemy.

‘And as We have bin careful (ſaith his Majeſty) for the ſetling of Re‘ligion, and quieting the Church, ſo were We not unmindful of the pre-‘ſervation of the juſt & ancient Liberties of our Subjects, which we ſecu-
‘red to them by Our gracious Anſwer to the Petition in Parliament, ha‘ving not ſince that time done any Act whereby to infringe them; but ‘Our care is, and hereafter ſhall be, to keep them entire and inviolable,
‘as We would do our own Right and Soveraignty, having for that pur‘poſe enrolled the Petition and Anſwer in our Courts of Juſtice.

As his Majeſty thus declared himſelf concerning Religion, and the Subjects Right and Property, ſo the Lords of the Privy Council did proceed in ſetling the Militia of the Kingdom, and of Tunnage and Poundage, to preſerve the Narrow Seas. Alſo to put the Laws in execution againſt Popiſh Recuſants; to which purpoſe theſe particular Orders and Directions were given.

Cuſtoms of Tunnage and Poundage required to be paid.

1. As concerning Tunnage and Poundage, (the great Conteſt in the laſt Seſſions of Parliament) the Privy Council thus proceeded: They directed Warrants to the Officers of the Cuſtoms in the Port of London, to ſeize and detain the Goods of any that ſhall attempt to Land without Warrant, till the Cuſtoms be paid.

2. And they farther ordered; That ſuch Merchants Goods as remained on Ship-board, be removed into Store-Houſes at the Cuſtom-Key, and, for want of Room, into the Tower, to remain there, till his Majeſties Duties, and the Freight due to Ship-Maſters, were ſatisfied.

3. And whereas Attempts were made by Replevin, directed to the Sheriff of London, to obtain thoſe Goods out of the King's Store-Houſes, the Meſſengers of the Council were appointed to detain them in their keeping; and to apprehend, and keep in ſafe cuſtody, all Perſons that ſhould make reſiſtance in this Caſe.

4. Alſo Letters of Command were ſent unto the Officers and Chief Magiſtrates of moſt Ports of the Kingdom, to aſſiſt the Officers of the Cuſtoms, in caſe of oppoſition, that might be made by Refractory Perſons.

5. In like manner Sir Francis Cottington was authorized to call before him thoſe Merchants that had bin truſted by the Collectors for Sums grown due by Cuſtoms, and protracted the payment thereof; and to require them, without delay, to pay in the ſeveral Sums which they owe to his Majeſty; and upon refuſal, to injoin them to attend the Lords of the Council.

Rich. Chambers his goods ſeized for non-paiment of Cuſtoms; and his Fine of 2000 l. in the Star-Chamber not to be extended upon the Goods.

6. Richard Chambers, whoſe Goods were detained in the Commiſſioners hands, for non-payment of Cuſtoms, being fined to his Majeſty in the Sum of 2000 l. in the Court of Star-Chamber; and the Fine eſtreated in the Exchequer, and from thence Proceſs of Extent iſſued out to levy the ſame. It was afterwards ordered by the Court of Exchequer, that the Goods ſhould be delivered to the ſaid Chambers, upon payment of ſo much Mony into the Court, as the Duties demanded for the King did amount unto; or levying of ſo much Goods as ſhould amount to double the value of thoſe Monies. The Privy-Council required the Commiſſioners not to deliver the Goods, until the Fine was firſt levied; the Order of the Exchequer no ways intending, or being intended to prevent the ſame, and then to obſerve the Order of Court.

Merchants deſign to ſend their goods beyond Seas, to avoid paying of Cuſtoms.

7. About the ſame time a Ship returning from the Streights, laden with ſtore of fine Wares, belonging to the London-Merchants, and conſign'd for London, was appointed by the Merchants to come to an Anchor in Dover-Road: Whereupon the Council being inform'd that the Merchants intended to defraud the King of his Cuſtoms, by unlading their Goods into Catches, and other ſmall Veſſels, and Landing at unlawful Hours, in obſcure places, commanded the Officers of Dover to take a particular account of the Goods, and to put them into Store-houſes; unleſs ſecurity was given to ſend them to the Cuſtom-Houſe Key at London. But a farther ground of the Warrant was this; becauſe the Merchants were purpoſed to ſend their Goods into Holland in Catches, and not to land them at all; which purpoſe was held by divers Merchants; and afterwards an Order was made againſt this ſecret Conveying of Wares and Merchandizes beyond Sea in Catches, and other ſmall Veſſels, to defraud the King of his Cuſtoms.

Orders to ſearch in Ware-houſes, &c. in caſe a default be made to pay Cuſtoms.

8. There was alſo a ſtrict Order made, enabling the Meſſengers of the Council-Table, to enter into any Ship, or Veſſel, Houſe, Ware-Houſe, or Cellar; and to ſearch in any Trunk or Cheſt, and to break any Bulk whatſoever, in default of the payment of Cuſtoms; and to apprehend all Perſons that ſhall give out any ſcandalous Speeches againſt his Majeſties ſervice, or cauſe any diſturbance.

Militia of the Kingdom for Public defence and ſafety.

For the Publick Defence and Safety, by the ſetled Militia of the Nation, (the Trained Bands) this courſe was taken. The Privy-Council, in their Letters of Inſtruction to the Lords Lievtenants of Counties, expreſſing the King's Diſpleaſure, at the great neglect of Muſters in moſt parts of the Kingdom, required them to take care that the Trained Forces, both Horſe and Foot, be compleat, according to the Modern Faſhion, and be perfectly inſtructed in the Exerciſe of Arms: And that the Captains and Officers be able to perform their ſeveral Charges; and that both Officers and Souldiers be not only

only able and ſufficient Men, but well-affected in Religion; that they take the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy; and that if a Soldier enrol'd remove his dwelling out of the Town or Pariſh of his abode, notice be given thereof to the Deputy-Leiutenants of that Diviſion; to the end that in caſe he have Licence to depart, his Company may be made up again. And in caſe any Mannor, Manſion-Houſes, or Lands, which formerly found, or contributed toward the finding of Horſe, or Foot, do not furniſh the Muſters, as formerly, by reaſon of the dividing of ſuch Eſtate among Co-heirs, or coming into the hands of any Joynters, or Tenant in Dower, or the purchaſe of new Owners, that the ſame be ſupplied by the Owners, or Occupiers thereof, that no ſuch alteration may diminiſh the Bands, which ſhould rather be increaſed, eſpecially the Horſe. That the beſt ſort of Men provide themſelves Arms for their particular uſe; that the Beacons be repaired, and continued in good Order; that a proportion of Powder, Match and Bullets be kept in the Magazines. And in regard of the great deficiency in the Horſe-Bands; and Neglect in thoſe that ſhould ſhew their Horſes, it was required that good Bond be taken for his Majeſties uſe, of thoſe that ſhew not, or whoſe Horſes, Arms and Furniture are deficient, that they ſhall perſonally appear with their Horſes and Arms, to ſhew them on the firſt of October next.

Lord Mayor of London's Order for Militia.

The Lord Mayor of London received the like command concerning the Trained Forces within the City, and concerning the Arms and Furniture, the Commanders and Officers, and a convenient Magazine.

Captains of Train'd Bands.

Moreover, the Council taking into Conſideration the Unwillingneſs, Excuſes and Refuſals of ſome Gentlemen to undertake and perform the diſcharge of Captains of Trained Bands, which are the ordinary Forces and Strength of the Kingdom: Declared and Ordered, That the Lord-Leiutenants, in the Counties of their Leiutenancy, ſhall appoint for Captains, upon the vacancy of the Charge, ſuch Gentlemen as they ſhall find moſt fit and capable: and they ſhall return to the Board the Names of all ſuch as ſhall refuſe to undertake, or execute the ſame, that they may be proceeded with in ſuch manner, as their Contempt in a Caſe of this Nature and Importance ſhall deſerve.

Muſter-maſter.

And for the exerciſing and keeping of the Train'd Bands in good Equipage and Order, each County was Aſſeſſed at a certain Rate, for the entertainment of a Muſter-Maſter, who was appointed for that Service: this Money was to be granted by the Grand Jury, and collected by the High Conſtables of every Hundred; the Perſons refuſing this payment, are to be returned to the Council-Table.

But divers refuſing to ſubmit to theſe Taxes, the Lieutenants and Deputy-Lieutenants were commanded to ſign the Aſſeſment with their own hands; that if any ſhould deny hereafter to pay, they ſhould make them enter into Bond to anſwer this their Contempt at the Council-Table.

Alſo after the Diſſolution of the Parliament, a new occaſion is offered to his Majeſty of expreſſing his ſenſe of, and his zeal againſt Popiſh Recuſants.

Popiſh Recuſants to be proſecuted.

'AS We were careful to make up all Breaches and Rents in Religion at home, ſo did We by Our Proclamation and Commandment for the execution of the Laws againſt Prieſts and Popiſh Recuſants, fortify all ways and approaches againſt that Forreign Enemy; 'which if it hath not ſucceeded according to our Intention, We muſt 'lay the fault where it is, in the ſubordinate Officers and Miniſters in 'the Country, by whoſe Remiſneſs Jeſuits and Prieſts eſcape without 'Apprehenſion, and Recuſants from thoſe Convictions and Penalties 'which the Law and Our Commandment would have inflicted on 'them.

And his Majeſty in Council made a ſtrict Order to ſeize upon all Engliſh going to Embaſſadors Houſes to hear Maſs, requiring the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs, Juſtices of Peace, and others, to aſſiſt the King's Meſſengers, in the apprehending of any of the King's Subjects going to Maſs, requiring the Laws to be put in execution againſt them. And, to ſhew the clearneſs of his Intention, doth declare that he hath begun already at his own Houſe, not permitting any to go to the Queen's Chappel, but thoſe of the Queen's own Houſe who do attend her, and requires the Privy-Council to acquaint Forreign Embaſſadors with this his Intention.

Recuſants going to Embaſſadors Houſes prohibited.

About this time alſo the Lords of the Council Ordered the Attorney General to take care, that the Statute 3 Jacobi be put in execution againſt Recuſants dwelling within 10 Miles of London; and that the Statute of Confinement be executed againſt all ſuch of them as are Lodgers about the City: and that he cauſe a Bill of Indictment to be Exhibited at the next Seſſions, againſt the Keeper of New-Priſon, for ſuffering Prieſts committed to his Cuſtody to walk abroad at their Pleaſure.

The Statute 3 Jac. to be put in Execution.

About the ſame time a Letter was ſent from the Council to the High Sheriff, and Juſtices of Peace in Northumberland, expreſſing how his Majeſty was credibly informed that the number of Popiſh Recuſants in that County, which of late years was very ſmall, is now through too much remiſneſs in the execution of the Laws againſt them, increaſed to ſuch an exceſſive number, as hath given his Majeſty juſt cauſe to be highly diſpleaſed therewith, and may juſtly give exceeding great offence to all his well-affected Subjects. Wherefore they thought fit (as they Declare) for the timely preventing the farther growth of ſuch an unſufferable Evil, whereby Almighty God is diſhonoured, his Majeſties moſt gracious and Religious Government may be traduced, and the Peace and Safety of the Kingdom endangered, to ſignify unto them his Majeſties expreſs Pleaſure, that they make exact inquiry into the number of Popiſh Recuſants Convicted, or Unconvicted, which may be juſtly ſuſpected, and return a Certificate. Alſo that they take care that the Laws againſt them be put in execution without Partiality or Connivance; and that they give unto the Board a faithful account of their Proceedings herein, as they tender the good of Religion, the Recuſants in Northumberland not proſecuted according to Law.

the happy Government of the Common-wealth, and as they would avoid his Majeſties great Diſpleaſure.

Prieſts and Jeſuits to be ſent to Wisbich.

And for putting the Laws and Statutes in Execution made againſt Jeſuits, Prieſts, Popiſh Recuſants and others who had taken Orders by Authority derived or pretended to be derived from the See of Rome, a Proclamation iſſued forth that they be proceeded againſt and brought to Trial. It was therein farther Declared, that if upon Trial they ſhall be Convicted, and if there be cauſe to reſpite the Execution of any of them, it was reſolved not to let them lie in common Goals, but, according to the example of former times, to ſend them to the Caſtle of Wisbich, or ſome other ſafe Priſon, there to remain in ſtrait and cloſe Cuſtody.

In purſuance of which Proclamation the Lords of the Council wrote their Letter to the Biſhop of Ely, thereby ſignifying the King's Pleaſure and Command, that he do forthwith prepare and make ready the Caſtle of Wisbich in the Iſle of Ely, to lodg all Prieſts, Jeſuits, &c. which ſhall be ſent thither. Giving him notice alſo at that time that one Southwood a Romiſh Prieſt, is to be removed to that place.

Prieſts and Jeſuits in Scotland.

In Scotland alſo, the Prieſts and Jeſuits were very active in promoting their Religion; the People in many places coming publickly to Maſs, being chiefly countenanced thereunto by Marqueſs Huntley, Earl of Nidsdale, Athol, Abercorn, and ſome others of the Nobility of Scotland of the Roman-Catholic Religion. But this gave ſuch great diſtaſte to the Council of Scotland, that they proceeded by way of Proceſs againſt the ſaid Marqueſs and Earl, who flying into England for refuge, and not appearing according to Summons, were all of them put to the Horn; but in England they found no good reception, and ſo returned.

Corporation of Starch-makers.

Theſe things beforementioned of publick Concern for the Kingdom being ſettled by the Lords of the Privy Council, they in the Month of July this Year thought it their Duty to take into Conſideration what probable ways might be taken to get Supply for his Majeſty; and the firſt thing taken into Conſideration, was to raiſe Moneys by his Majeſties granting of Patents to incorporate Companies, and to bring Revenues thereby yearly into the Exchequer, by Indentures between His Majeſty on the one part, and the Patentees on the other part. In proſecution of which Deſign it was thought fit to confirm a Grant made by King James to incorporate the Starch-makers into a Company, ordering them Rules for the making of Starch, and avoiding annoyances thereby. Whereupon his now Majeſty for the better regulating that Trade, appointed a Surveyor to overſee the ſame in every part, and that his Majeſty's Commiſſioners, which hereafter to that purpoſe he ſhall appoint, ſhall be ready to hear and diſpatch all Complaints touching the Premiſes; and if they ſhall find any, whoſe offence and miſdemeanor deſerves to be made more exemplary, they are to take care that ſuch Offenders ſhall undergo the cenſure and ſeverity of the Court of Star-Chamber for that contempt of the King's Prerogative Royal; and alſo that all Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, &c. ſhall cauſe all and every the Offenders, whoſe offences deſerve exemplary Puniſhment againſt any Branch, Article or part of his Majeſties Royal Proclamation (Dated the 30*th* of June) to be bound with Sureties in good Bond to the King's Uſe, for their appearance before the King and the Privy Council, and in the Court of Star-Chamber, there to anſwer their Contempts.

Afterwards there was a Contract by Indenture, between the King of the one part, and the Maſter, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants, and Commonalty of the Society of Starch-Makers of London on the other part, whereby the ſaid Society doth covenant to pay into his Majeſties Exchequer, the ſum of 1500 l. for the firſt Year; and for the ſecond Year, the ſum of 2500 l. And after the ſaid two Years ſhall be ended, to pay per annum to his Majeſty 3500 l.

Next to this, it was propoſed to raiſe Monies by Compoſition with Recuſants, as in the following Order is expreſt.

Recuſants to compound for their Forfeitures.

‘WHereas his Majeſty had formerly granted ſeveral Commiſſions for Leaſing Lands of Recuſants, lyable to Forfeitures; with Inſtructions for the direction of his Commiſſioners in that Service: and in expectance of a due Reformation of the manifold Neglects and Abuſes of his Inferior Officers and others, whereby that part of his Revenue had been much leſſened, and thoſe who were backward in their Religion, encouraged to perſiſt in their obſtinacy and blindneſs, his Majeſty hath now cauſed thoſe Commiſſions and Inſtructions to be revived, and in many parts altered, for his Majeſties better Profit and Service.

All which was publiſhed by Proclamation, to the intent that ſuch as ſhould be willing to contract, or to farther the ſervice on that behalf, might attend the ſaid Commiſſioners.

And whereas ſome had contracted for ſuch Leaſes, who did not ſue out the ſame, his Majeſties declared Will and Pleaſure was, That ſuch Perſons who had ſo contracted, ſhould paſs their Leaſes under Seal before the end of Michaelmaſs Term next, or elſe their Contracts to be utterly void.

On the 24*th* of March, 16$\frac{28}{29}$, A ſecond Proclamation was iſſued out for the Apprehenſion of Richard Smith, a Popiſh Prieſt, ſtyl'd, and calling himſelf the Biſhop of Calcedon, to this effect.

Concerning the Biſhop of Calcedon, a Popiſh Prieſt.

‘THat his Majeſty by his Proclamation, bearing date the 11*th* day of December laſt paſt, (for the Reaſons therein expreſſed) did ſtraitly command, That none of his Subjects ſhould harbor or conceal the ſaid Smith, but that forthwith they ſhould arreſt and apprehend his Body, and bring him before the next Juſtice of the Peace to the place where he ſhould be apprehended; whom his Majeſty thereby commands to be committed to Priſon without Bail or Mainpriſe; and preſently to inform his Majeſty, or his Privy Council of his Apprehenſion. And the King did thereby declare; That if any Perſon ſhould then after, directly or indirectly, harbor or conceal the ſaid Smith, or uſe or connive at any means whereby the ſaid Smith might eſcape from being apprehended or arreſted, that his Majeſty ſhould extend the utmoſt ſeverity of his Laws againſt every ſuch Offender, as by his Proclamation more at large appears. Which Proclamation hath not yet wrought that good Effect which his Majeſty expected;

An. 1629.

‘ the ſaid Smith being ſtill hidden and harboured by thoſe, who being infected and blinded with Popiſh Superſtition, prefer their Reſpects to him, before their Duty to their King, and the fear of his high diſpleaſure, and the Conſequence thereof. His Majeſty therefore, by the Advice of his Privy Council, hath thought fit by this his ſecond Proclamation, to renew his former Command in that behalf.

‘ And to the end that none of his Subjects may hereafter excuſe themſelves, by a pretended ignorance of the danger they ſhall fall into, if they ſhall harbour or conceal him, His Majeſty doth hereby publiſh and declare, That the ſaid Smith is not only a Popiſh Prieſt, and with high preſumption taketh upon him to exerciſe Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, pretended to be deriv'd from the See of Rome, within this Realm, and endeavoureth to ſeduce the King's Subjects from the True Religion eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, (which by God's Aſſiſtance, his Majeſty ſhall ever conſtantly maintain) but doth alſo ſeditiouſly and traiterouſly hold correſpondence with the King's Enemies, tending to the diſturbance of the State.

‘ And therefore his Majeſty doth now again renew his former Command for the Apprehenſion of the ſaid Smith; and doth hereby farther ſignify, That whoſoever ſhall lodg, harbor, or relieve the ſaid Smith, or any other Prieſt, Jeſuit, or other, having taken Orders by Authority pretended to be derived from the See of Rome, ſhall incur the danger of the King's Laws made againſt the Harborers, Lodgers, and Relievers of Prieſts, to the full extent thereof; which by the Statutes of this Realm is Felony.

‘ And the King doth further hereby declare, That whoſoever ſhall diſcover the ſaid Smith, and cauſe him to be apprehended, as aforeſaid, ſhall have a Reward of one Hundred pounds in Mony, to be preſently paid unto him by the King; and ſhall alſo have the benefit of ſuch Penalties and Forfeitures, which ſhall or may accrue unto his Majeſty, and be forfeited by that Perſon in whoſe Houſe the ſaid Smith ſhall be found to have bin harboured or concealed.

‘ And his Majeſty doth farther charge and command hereby (as by his former Proclamation His Majeſty did) all and ſingular the Judges, Juſtices of the Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Conſtables, and all other his Officers, Miniſters, and Loving Subjects; that if they ſhall find any Perſon offending herein, that then they, and every of them, proceed with all diligence and readineſs, not only againſt the ſaid Smith, but alſo againſt all ſuch as ſhall harbor, conceal, or connive at his Concealment; or ſhall not uſe their beſt endeavours for his Diſcovery and Apprehenſion, according to the utmoſt extent of the Laws.

This Biſhop, as is hereafter mentioned, had bin, ſince the laſt year of King James, ſeverely perſecuted by the Regular Prieſts in England, who at laſt over-power'd the Biſhop's Faction here, and forced him to fly for ſuccor into France, where we was receiv'd by Cardinal Richelieu.

Le Maiſtre and Rudeſindus, write on behalf of the Biſhop.

It may not be impertinent to give ſome account of this Biſhop of Calcedon, and of what eſteem he had here in England in the exerciſing of his Function.

N. k

N. le Maiſtre a Sorbon Prieſt, writes thus of him; That after the Death of William Biſhop of Calcedon in England, moſt of the Secular Prieſts, together with the Benedictines, for the advancement of the Romiſh Catholic Religion, became Suitors to the Pope and his Conclave, to have one or more Biſhops created by the Pope to be ſent over into England, to ordain Prieſts, give Confirmation, and exerciſe Epiſcopal Juriſdiction there. The Regular Prieſts, and ſome others here, did ſtifly oppoſe this Deſign, but the Epiſcopal Secular and Benedictine Party prevailing, Pope Urban by his ſpecial Bull, bearing date the 4th of Auguſt, Anno 1625, created Richard Smith Biſhop of Calcedon, and ſent him over into England to exerciſe Epiſcopal Juriſdiction, and to be Superintendent over the Prieſts within the Engliſh Dominions, according to the Tenure of his Bull. But the Regular Prieſts writ divers printed Treatiſes againſt Epiſcopacy, and the inconveniency of having a Biſhop in England, whoſe Books were referred to the Examination of the Faculty of Paris, and there cenſured; but they raiſed up ſuch a Faction and Perſecution againſt this their New Biſhop of Calcedon in England and Ireland among the Popiſh Party, that they chaced him out of England into France, where he was entertained by Cardinal Richlieu.

And the ſaid Le Maiſtre writeth further, That this Biſhop was a moſt Illuſtrious Champion, &c. fit to be ſetled in England, where the heat of Perſecution hath ceaſed, through the dignity of a magnanimous King, and moſt invincible Prince by the Bourbonian Star, which hangs over theſe Countries in a moſt dear Wife; by which Stars, peradventure the Tempeſt of Perſecution will in time be appeaſed, &c.

And Father Rudecindus, Preſident of the Engliſh Benedictines, writes to the Sacred Congregation, conſecrated to the Propagation of the Faith, dated from the Covent of St. Gregory of the Benedictines, at Doway in Flanders; wherein (among other things) he doth with great dolor of mind lament the Oppoſition given to Matthew Kellyſon and Richard Smith, antient Prieſts, who, among others, were nominated to his moſt holy Lord, to undergo the Epiſcopal Charge in the Engliſh Miſſion, (for he reckons above 60 Benedictine Monks in England ſubject to his Congregation, and does prepare far more in their Covents to the Functions of Miſſion); and doth teſtify that the ſaid venerable Prieſts, Dr. Matthew Kellyſon and Dr. Richard Smith, are in great veneration in England; and that Dr. Kellyſon was chief Profeſſor of Divinity for many years in the Univerſity of Rhemes; and that Dr. Richard Smith was firſt conjoined in the Society of Studies to the moſt Learned Biſhop of Luſſion, now Cardinal of Richlieu; and concludes, We Benedictines, your humble Servants and Sons, do humbly pray that you will be pleaſed to grant a Biſhop to our England, ſeeing that no Province of the Catholic World hath more need of one, the obſervance of Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline being not able to be preſerved without Epiſcopal Authority. Neither is it to be doubted, for we have already ſeen the good ſucceſs under the firſt Biſhop, that another Biſhop being conſtituted, you would behold more joyful Fruits within one two years in the Engliſh Miſſion, than hitherto ye have beheld for 60 years now elapſed. And we ſee not why the Regulars, with their Privileges given them by the Apoſtolic See, may not as happily agree with a Biſhop and Secular Clergy in the Engliſh Miſſion, as well as we ſee they every where do out of England, &c.

The Biſhop of London in his Diary on the 29*th* of March, in which Month the Parliament was Diſſolved, makes this Memorial following.

March 29. 1629. A Libel againſt the Biſhop of London.

On Sunday, two Papers were found in the Dean of Pauls Yard before his Houſe, the one was to this effect concerning my ſelf. LAUD, Look to thy ſelf, be aſſured thy Life is ſought, as thou art the Fountain of all Wickedneſs; Repent thee of thy monſtruous Sins before thou be taken out of the World, &c. And aſſure thy ſelf neither God nor the World can endure ſuch a vile Councellor to live, or ſuch a Whiſperer, or to this effect. The other was as bad againſt the Lord Treaſurer. Maſter Dean delivered both Papers to the King that Night.

Lord (ſaid the Biſhop) I am a grievous Sinner, but I beſeech thee deliver my Soul from them that hate me without a cauſe.

Iriſh Agents.

Ireland having been a long time without a Parliament, and Grievances upon the People abounding in that Kingdom, the Lord Faulkland then Lord Deputy condeſcended to the deſires of the Nobility and Gentry of that Kingdom, that each Province in Ireland ſhould chuſe fit Perſons to go into England to attend upon his Majeſty, and preſent what they had to offer on behalf of themſelves, and the People: to which purpoſe he gave them leave to name Commiſſioners for every Province, and particular Commiſſions were granted accordingly, and this which followeth was granted to the Province of Munſter. The reſt of the Commiſſions to other Provinces being to the ſame effect.

The Lord Deputies Commiſſion to the Iriſh Agents for Munſter.

'WHereas it hath pleaſed the Right Honourable the Lord Deputy, 'upon the humble ſuit of ſome of the Nobility of this Realm, 'in behalf of themſelves and other his Majeſties Subjects here; That 'ſome fit Agents ſhould be ſent over into England to preſent unto His 'Majeſty ſuch things as may be to the behoof of his Majeſties Service 'and good of this Kingdom; His Lordſhip hath condeſcended to the 'ſaid ſuit, and authorized by his Lordſhips Letters of the 26*th* of June '1627, the Gentlemen and Freeholders of the ſeveral Counties of the 'Province of Munſter, and the ſeveral Corporations of the ſame, to 'aſſemble and agree upon ſuch Agents for the ſaid Province to make 'the ſaid Propoſitions as they ſhould think fit.

Which ſaid Letters of the Lord Deputy's were ſeconded and confirmed by other Letters of his Lordſhips to the ſame effect, dated the 26*th* of July, the year aforeſaid.

'We the Agents of the ſeveral Counties, and Corporations of the 'ſaid Province, have accordingly met at Fermoy the laſt of Auguſt the 'Year aforeſaid, and have by common Aſſent nominated, deputed and 'appointed, like as by theſe Preſents we do nominate, depute and appoint 'our Truſty and well beloved John Lord Baron of Carraghmore, Sir 'Edward Fitz-Harris Baronet, Sir John Mead Knight, and Richard 'Osborn Eſquire, to be our Agents for the ſaid Province of Munſter;

5 Caroli.

‘and do appoint and authorize them or any of them, to join with the Agents of the reſt of the Provinces of this Kingdom, in preſenting of our Grievances to the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty; ratifying and allowing what our ſaid Agents, or any three of them, ſhall do. Witneſs our hands the laſt of Auguſt, 1627.

Signed

Sir William Sarsfield.

Sir Daniel Obrian, &c.

The Commiſſioners arriving at Court in the Month of September, preſented the following Petition to his Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of your Majeſties Subjects, appointed Agents to prefer certain Humble Requeſts and Petitions to your Highneſs, in the behalf of your Kingdom of Ireland.

Humbly ſheweth,

‘THat your Majeſties Suppliants did in the behalf of your Subjects of Ireland offer unto your Majeſty to remit and releaſe unto your Highneſs 150000 l. or thereabouts already borrowed from them, or paid to your Majeſties Army there; and further to grant three Subſidies to be paid in the next three Years, which humble offers your Petitioners are now only authorized to make; as alſo do preſent certain humble Requeſts to your Highneſs, according to the inſtructions given them, of your Majeſties faithful Subjects of your Kingdom of Ireland: which Offers though they do not extend to that Greatneſs, as from your Highneſſes other more flouriſhing Kingdoms may be expected, yet conſidering the State and Poverty of the ſaid Kingdom, they are as much as the Subjects are poſſibly able to afford at this time.

‘And leſt it might be conceived or be objected by any, that theſe Offers are in any ſuch kind as though your Higneſs's ſaid Subjects did intend to contract with your Highneſs, and that they would not after the ſaid three years expreſs their loyal and dutiful deſires to do your Majeſty Service, by further contributing to your Highneſs's occaſions, your ſaid Petitioners do moſt humbly beſeech your Highneſs to call to mind with what celerity, alacrity, and true hearty affection and duty your ſaid Subjects, and their Anceſtors in all the times of your Majeſties royal Predeceſſors, have made demonſtration of themſelves, by ſhedding their Blood, and extending their Means in the Service of the Crown from time to time; and to conceive of your ſaid Subjects, that as they muſt acknowledg themſelves moſt bound to your Majeſty, ſo they will be ever willing with all their Ability, Means and utmoſt Power, to contribute to your Majeſties Affairs from time to time, not doubting that your Highneſs will in your Paternal Care of your loyal and faithful Subjects there, take ſuch courſes that they ſhall never be preſt beyond the neceſſity of Times and their Abilities.

An. 1629.

'And in regard the ſaid Kingdom hath lately and now doth ſuſtain 'great Burdens, as well by your Petitioners Attendance here as other- 'wiſe, that your Highneſs will be graciouſly pleaſed to give a favour- 'able and ſpeedy diſpatch to this Affair, that your ſaid Subjects being 'eaſed of a great Charge, might be the better able to ſatisfy your High- 'neſs, according to their Deſire and true Intention.

And they will ever moſt humbly pray, &c.

The particular Grievances preſented by the ſaid Agents, were many and long, being fifty five in Number; to each of which Grievances one by one, the King did give a particular Anſwer, either giving preſent eaſe to the ſame, or putting things into a way of future remedy. The Titles to the Anſwers were thus expreſſed.

Apoſtiles, Anſwers, and Reſolutions to the humble Requeſts of his Majeſties Subjects of the Kingdom of Ireland.

Some of their complaints were againſt the courſes held in the Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, touching the extortion of 13 s. 4 d. 10 s. and 6 s. 8. Sterling for every Chriſtening, Marriage, and Burial, which being taken from the poor Huſband-man, by whoſe labour the Landlords and Gentlemen ſubſiſt, enforceth him often with his Family to beg and quit his Reſidence: whereſore ſuch Exactions being without limits, taking what they pleaſe, they procure from the Lord Deputy Warrants of Aſſiſtance to attach and impriſon any ſuch Perſon. And though thoſe Warrants of unjuſt complaints of the foul abuſes ariſing from them, have been recalled, and not to be allowed but by Act of State, publiſhed in that behalf: Yet are they now lately renewed, and the Subjects thereupon reſtrained without legal Warrant; which being abuſively carried in this violent courſe, will in ſhort time draw all the Treaſure in the Kingdom from the Laity to the Church; wherein, as for other Duties exacted, and not warranted by Law, they deſire redreſs.

Alſo againſt exorbitant Fees taken for Proceedings in Courts of Juſtice at Dublin, greatly to the impoveriſhment of the People.

Alſo againſt employing of Soldiers to fetch in the King's Revenue, and doing other things which ought to be performed by Men in a civil Capacity.

Alſo that the Soldiers be confined to their Garriſons, and when called to march out, that Money may be given unto them to maintain them when they are abroad.

Alſo that his Majeſty would be pleaſed to take away all Monopolies, Reſtraints and Grants of that kind to private Men for ſelling of Aqua-vitæ, Wine, Ale and Beer, ſealing of Barrels; abuſe by ſhort Ploughs, Tanning of Leather, &c.

That no new Charge be laid or impoſed on the Subjects of that Kingdom without their own conſent, being ready to contribute to the utmoſt of their Abilities in any his Majeſties Service.

That his Majeſty may be pleaſed to call a Parliament for the preſent rating of the Subſidies to be granted to his Majeſty for the Favors and Graces aforeſaid, and for ſecuring the Subjects Eſtates, granting a general Pardon, and providing for ſuch other things as ſhall be neceſſary for his Majeſties Service, and the good of the Common-wealth.

In Ireland they call a Parliament irregularly.

The King in his gracious Anſwer to this laſt Requeſt, declared his Pleaſure to call a Parliament to meet in Ireland, which did ſo overjoy the Iriſh Agents, as they writ Letters thereupon into Ireland, intimating as if they there might preſently iſſue out Writs for a Parliament to meet: which was a great Error in them ſo to do, being contrary to the Law and former courſe of proceedings; forgetting that they muſt firſt obtain a Grant under the Great Seal of England to enable them to iſſue Writs for a Summons of a Parliament in that Kingdom. Which extraordinary haſte of theirs, occaſioned this enſuing Order of the Council Board in England.

Order of Reference to the Judges, concerning a Parliament in Ireland.

‘WHereas the Board hath underſtood by Letters from the Lord Deputy and Council of Ireland, that they had already iſſued the Writs for the ſummoning of a Parliament to be held in that Kingdom in November next. Foraſmuch as the Writs of Summons have been iſſued illegally contrary to the Statutes made in that behalf, Anno Hen. 7. And 3 Eliz. And the due formality of a Licence, which ought to have been firſt obtained of his Majeſty under the Great Seal of England, was not obtained, whereby the ſaid Summons is in it ſelf Null and of none Effect, and the Parliament, (if any ſhould enſue thereupon) would be utterly void and fruitleſs. The Board for this Conſideration thought fit and Ordered, That all the Judges of his Majeſties Court at Weſtminſter, that are now in or near the City of London, ſhall be prayed and required forthwith to meet together, and calling to their Aſſiſtance the Commiſſioners for Iriſh Cauſes, eſpecially Sir Francis Ainſlow, Vice-Treaſurer of Ireland, and Sir Henry Holcroft, together with the King and Queens Attorneys and Solicitors General, or as many of them as may be had, and take into their Conſideration as well the ſaid Letters written to the Board concerning the ſaid Summons and the Errors committed in precipitately iſſuing of the ſaid Writs, as a Certificate made by the ſaid Commiſſioners touching the due preparations for the calling of a Parliament in Ireland, and upon the whole matter, as ſoon as may be, to certify their Opinions in writing what courſe they think fitteſt to be held for redreſs, and rectifying of the before rehearſed erroneous Proceedings, whether by revoking of the former Summons, ſuperceding or reſpiting them for a time, or iſſuing out of new, and by what means it may be done, ether by Letters, Proclamations, or otherwiſe, as they ſhall think beſt, and moſt expedient for his Majeſties Honour and Service; that ſatisfaction and full aſſurance may be given to his Subjects of that Kingdom, of his Royal Intention to proceed in the calling of a Parliament, ſo ſoon as things may be done in ſuch manner and form as they ought to be, according to the antient Cuſtom.

May it pleaſe your Honourable Lordſhips.

The Judges opinions concerning a Parliament haſtily called in Ireland.

‘ACcording to your Lordſhips Order the 19*th* of September laſt, we have taken into our Conſideration the Letters written from the Lord Deputy of Ireland, touching the Summons of a Parliament already made there, and the former Certificate made by his Majeſties ‘Commiſſioners for Iriſh Cauſes, as was directed by the ſaid Order. Upon Conſideration whereof we find that the ſaid Summons already made, is unwarrantable; and that if a Parliament ſhould be aſſembled and proceed thereupon, all that ſhould be done therein, would be utterly void.

‘The Statute of 10 Hen. 7. commonly called Poyning's Act, and the Statute 3 and 4 of Phil. and Mary, expounding and explaining the doubts conceived upon that Act, do preſcribe an abſolute form of ſummoning a Parliament in that Kingdom, which muſt be by a Certificate firſt made by the Lord Deputy and Council from thence, of ſuch Acts as they would offer to his Majeſties Conſideration, with the Reaſons and Motives for the ſame to be enacted there, and that Certificate to be under the Great Seal of Ireland: Which Acts, ſo propounded, muſt be returned back from hence, approved or altered by his Majeſty, as by him ſhall be thought fit; together with his Majeſties Licence for ſummoning of a Parliament under the Great Seal of England, and then, and not before, the Summons of a Parliament there is to iſſue; wherein if any failure be of thoſe Circumſtances preſcribed by theſe two Laws, which continue in force in that Kingdom, all that ſhall be done will be utterly void. We have alſo taken into our Conſideration, the Lord Deputies Commiſſion, wherein he hath power given him to ſummon the Parliament, but that is limited to be according to the Laws, Statutes, and Cuſtoms of that Kingdom, and with the King's Conſent firſt had, and not otherwiſe; which hath not been obſerved in the Summons of this intended Parliament in any of the points before mentioned, and therefore this Summons, notwithſtanding that power, is illegal and void.

‘We have alſo obſerved the paſſage in the Lord Deputies Letter, as if by an Adjournment this might be remedied; but we are of opinion that that is not a right way, becauſe it fails in the ground of the Summons, So that upon the whole matter we humbly offer our Opinions, That the beſt courſe to be held for the rectifying of the Premiſes, and for avoiding of all miſ-inſtructions thereupon, will be this: That directions be given from hence with all poſſible ſpeed for a Proclamation to be there made, wherein this miſtaking, and the reaſons thereof, may be publiſhed, that ſo the Aſſembly may be prevented, until by a due and orderly preparation, Summons may be legally, according to the ſaid Laws and Statutes, and that by the ſame direction they be adviſed to make due preparation for a Parliament, according to the recited Acts. Whereupon his Majeſty may be graciouſly pleaſed to ſend his Licence and Conſent under the Great Seal of England for the ſummoning of the Parliament, and ſo all may after proceed legally altho with ſome loſs of time, which cannot now be prevented. And if your Lordſhips ſhall ſo approve thereof, we humbly conceive it would not be amiſs for the better expedition of the Service, and for the avoiding of all miſtakings, that the form of a Proclamation to the effect aforeſaid were ſent thither, but to be made and proclaimed there, that the error may appear to have come from themſelves, as the truth is; which will moſt probably take away all jealouſy from the People. But we are of opinion that no General Writ of Superſedeas of the former Writ of Summons can be awarded, becauſe there neither was, nor can be any one General Writ of Summons, and afterwards particular Writs of Superſedeas to 'every one ſummoned, would be infinite and inconvenient. All 'which we moſt humbly ſubmit to your Majeſties great Wiſdom and 'Judgment. Serjeants-Inn in Chancery-lane, Octob. 2. 1628.

In this conjuncture, the Lord Faulkland Lord Deputy of Ireland, put forth in the King's Name this enſuing Proclamation.

Proclamation by the L. Deputy and Council againſt Prieſts, Jeſuits, &c.

'Foraſmuch as we cannot but take notice that the late intermiſſion 'of legal Proceedings againſt Popiſh pretended or titulary Arch-'Biſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Deans, Vicars General, Jeſuits, Friars, 'and others of that ſort, that derive their pretended Authority and 'Orders from the See of Rome, hath bred ſuch an extraordinary inſo-'lence and preſumption in them, as that they have dared of late not 'only to aſſemble themſelves in public Places to celebrate their Super-'ſtitious Services in all parts of this Kingdom, but alſo have erected 'Houſes and Buildings, called Public Oratories, Colleges, Maſs-Houſes, 'and Convents of Friars, Monks and Nuns, in the eye and open view 'of the State and elſewhere; and do frequently exerciſe Juriſdiction 'againſt his Majeſties Subjects, by Authority derived from the See of 'Rome, and (by colour of teaching and keeping Schools in their pre-'tended Monaſteries and Colleges) do train up the Youth of this 'Kingdom in their Superſtitious Religion, to the great derogation and 'contempt of his Majeſties Regal Power and Authority, and great 'offence of many of his Majeſties good Subjects, contrary to the Laws 'and Eccleſiaſtical Government of this Kingdom, and the impove-'riſhment of his Majeſties Subjects in the ſame.

'These are therefore to will and require, and in his Majeſties Name 'ſtraitly to charge and command all, and all manner of ſuch pre-'tended or titulary Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Deans, Vicars General, 'Arch-Deacons and others, deriving any pretended Authority, Power 'or Juriſdiction from the See of Rome, That they, and every of them, 'forbear from henceforth to exerciſe any ſuch Power, Juriſdiction, or 'Authority within this Kingdom; and that all ſuch Abbots, Priors, 'Jeſuits, Friars, Monks, Nuns, and others of that ſort, as aforeſaid, 'do forthwith break up their Convents and Aſſemblies in all Houſes 'of Friars, Colleges, Monaſteries, and other Places, whereſoever they 'are or ſhall be conventually or collegiately aſſembled together within 'this Kingdom, and to relinquiſh the ſame, and to diſpoſe and ſepa-'rate themſelves.

'And that all and every of the Orders before-named, and other 'Prieſts whatſoever, do from henceforth forbear to Preach, Teach, or 'celebrate their Service in any Church, Chappel, or other Public 'Oratory or Place, or to teach any School in any place or places 'whatſoever within this Kingdom.

'And

An. 1629.

‘And we do further charge and command all and ſingular the Owners of ſuch Houſes of Friars, Colleges, Monaſteries, Schools, Oratories, Maſs-houſes, and Nunneries, That they and every of them reſpectively, in default of the Perſons before-named, their voluntary relinquiſhing of the ſaid Houſes of Friars, Colleges, Monaſteries, Schools, Oratories, Maſs-houſes, and Nunneries, do forthwith expel and thruſt forth all and ſingular ſuch Friars, Jeſuits, and other Monaſtical Perſons out of the ſame, and do convert the ſame to more lawful Uſes, upon pain to have their ſaid Houſes ſeized upon to his Majeſties uſe; and both the one and the other to be proceeded againſt for their unlawful Aſſemblies, and maintenance of ſuch unlawful Conventicles and corrupt nurture of Children, in the ſevereſt manner that by the Laws and Statutes of this Kingdom, and Eccleſiaſtical Government of the ſame, may be had or extended; whereof they and every of them are to take notice, and to yield due obedience thereunto, as they and every of them will avoid his Majeſties high Indignation, and the conſequence thereof.

The Proteſtant Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops in Ireland were about this time ſo much ſcandalized to ſee the boldneſs of the Titular Popiſh Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Jeſuits, Friars, &c. reſiding in Ireland, to erect Houſes publickly to celebrate their Popiſh Superſtitious Services, &c. as they thought fit to publiſh a Declaration, in nature of a Proteſtation, againſt Popery, and a Toleration thereof, to the effect following.

The Proteſtation of the Biſhops in Ireland againſt Popery.

‘THe Religion of Papiſts is Superſtitious and Idolatrous, their Faith and Doctrine Erroneous and Heretical, their Church (in reſpect of both) Apoſtatical; to give them therefore a Toleration of Religion, or to conſent that they may freely exerciſe their Religion, and profeſs their Faith and Doctrine, is a grievous ſin, and that in two reſpects: Firſt, It is to make our ſelves acceſſary, not only to their ſuperſtitious Idolatries, Hereſies, and in a word to all the Abominations of Popery, but alſo (which is a conſequent of the former) to the Perdition of the ſeduced People which periſh in the Deluge of the Catholic Apoſtacy. Secondly, To grant them a Toleration in reſpect of any Mony to be given, or Contribution to be made by them, is to ſet Religion to Sale, and with it the Souls of the People, whom Chriſt our Saviour hath redeemed with his Blood; And as it is a great ſin, ſo it is a matter of moſt dangerous Conſequence: The conſideration whereof we leave to the Wiſe and Judicious, beſeeching the zealous God of Truth, to make thoſe who are in Authority zealous of God's Glory, and of the advancement of true Religion, zealous, reſolute and couragious againſt all Popery, Superſtition and Idolatry.

An Order of the Ld. Mayor of London, for reforming the Abuſes on the Sabbath-day.

‘WHereas I am credibly informed, That notwithſtanding divers good Laws provided for the keeping of the Sabbath-Day Holy, according to the expreſs Commandment of Almighty God, divers Inhabitants and other Perſons of this City, and other Places, having no reſpect of Duty towards God, and his Majeſty, or his Laws, but in contempt of them all, do commonly and of cuſtom greatly prophane the Sabbath-Day, in buying, ſelling, uttering, and venting ‘their Wares and Commodities upon that Day for their private Gain. Alſo Inholders ſuffering Markets to be kept by Carriers, in moſt rude and prophane manner, in ſelling Victuals to Huckſters, Chandlers, and all other Comers. Alſo Carriers, Carmen, Cloth-workers, Water-bearers, and Porters carrying of Burthens, and Watermen plying their Fares; and divers other working in their ordinary Callings. And likewiſe that I am further informed, That Vintners, Alehouſe-keepers, Tobacco and Strong-water-ſellers, greatly prophane the Sabbath-Day, by ſuffering Company to ſit drinking and bibbing in their Houſes on that day; and likewiſe divers by Curſing and Swearing, and ſuch-like Behaviour, contrary to the expreſs Commandment of Almighty God, his Majeſties Laws in that behalf, and all good Government. For the Reformation whereof, I do hereby require, and in his Majeſties Name ſtraitly command all his Majeſties Loving Subjects whatſoever: And alſo all Conſtables, Headboroughs, Beadles, and all other Officers whatſoever, to be aiding and aſſiſting to J. S. the Bearer hereof, in finding out and apprehending all and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons as ſhall be found to offend in any of theſe kinds; and them, and every of them to bring before Me, or ſome other of his Majeſties Juſtices of the Peace, to anſwer to all ſuch Matters as ſhall be objected againſt them, and to put in good ſecurity for their good behaviour. Whereof fail you not, as you or any of you will anſwer at your peril.

Richard Deane

Mayor.

The French King ſhortly after the ſurrender of Rochel, was engaged to proſecute a War in Italy, which he declared was begun by the Spaniard in taking Mantua and Monteferrat, contrary to Capitulation; which obliged him to remedy with violence thoſe Uſurpations of the Spaniards over the Duke of Savoy, the French King's Allie, and ſent Cardinal Richlieu with an Army into thoſe Parts; of whoſe prudent Conduct in his Expedition formerly againſt Rochel, his Majeſty had had good experience.

Articles of Peace between England and France, agreed upon at Suſa in Italy.

It ſo hapned, that at Suſa in Italy, in the Month of April, by the Mediation of the Venetian Ambaſſador, Articles of Peace between the King of Great Britain and the King of France were agreed unto; and which were by that Agreement to be made public by both Princes the 10*th* of May following.

And accordingly the French King ordered them to be firſt publiſhed at Privas, (being gone from Suſa to the Camp before that City) to which his Forces had laid ſiege after the taking of Rochel; hoping by the ſurrender thereof, to bring the Proteſtants in Languedoc to terms of Peace.

And the Seiur Le Bretagne, French King at Arms, publiſhed the Peace there on the 10*th* of May, 1629, in purſuance of his Majeſties verbal Command, marching before on Horſe-back, with Trumpet in hand, Colours flying, having mounted his Coat of Arms on his ſhoulders, his Cap Hat on his Head, and his Scepter in his Hand: and this publication was made in the ſight of the Beſieged in Privas, and within leſs than Canon-ſhot of the Town. The

The French King that day ſent a Summons to St. Andre Montauban, the Governor of Privas, to render the Town; which he then refuſed to do, yet on the 29th of May it was ſurrendred, but in great confuſion and ſlaughter of Men in the Town, by an accident that fell out.

The 10th day of May, was publiſhed in England the Peace with France.

The Peace with France publiſhed in England.

‘WHereas there hath fallen out an interruption of Amity between the King's Majeſty and the moſt Chriſtian King; which the Common Friends and Ancient Allies of both the Crowns have earneſtly laboured to repair, by propounding and negotiating a Reconcilement between them upon honourable Conſiderations, as well to their Kingdoms, as to the general Eſtate of Chriſtendom. The King's Majeſty thereupon conſidering how pleaſing it is to Almighty God, and neceſſary to the preſent conſtitution of Publick Affairs, to have Concord and good Intelligence with ſuch as be his Neighbours; and are further ſo nearly allied unto him, hath renewed the ancient Amity between the two Crowns, their Realms, Countries, Cities, Towns, Lands, Dominions, Territories, Signiores, Caſtles, and Subjects, by Land, Sea, and Freſh-water. By which Peace it is already provided, that all Hoſtility and War, as well by Sea as Land, ſhall ceaſe on either part from the 14th day of April laſt; and that the ſaid Kings and their Subjects ſhall live together in Peace; and that it ſhall be lawful for their Subjects freely, peaceably, and quietly, to go, come, remain, and to uſe and exerciſe their Trade and Commerce, and do all things elſe whatſoever in each others Countries, as freely as it hath bin done in any former time of Peace had between the ſaid Realms, and according to the ancient Treaties and Alliances between them, with opening of ſafe and free Trade betwixt the two Kings Dominions, according to theſe Treaties.

‘And it is further ordained by the ſaid Peace, in regard there are many Ships at Sea with Letters of Mart, which cannot ſo ſoon take knowledg of this Peace, nor receive direction to forbear Hoſtility, that as whatſoever hath bin, or ſhall be done during the ſpace of two months after the ſaid 14th of April laſt, ſhall not derogate from, nor hinder the ſaid Peace of the two Crowns: So as whatſoever hath bin, or ſhall be taken within the foreſaid time, ſhall be reſtored, as well on the one ſide as on the other.

‘All which Premiſes his Majeſty hath thought meet to notify to all manner of his Subjects of what eſtate ſoever, ſtrictly charging and commanding them, to obſerve, and perform, and accompliſh all that hereunto belongeth, as it is certainly promiſed to be publiſhed on the French King's ſide, the date of theſe Preſents being the Tenth of May, 1629.

The Articles of Peace were to this Effect.

Articles of Peace between the 2 Crowns of England & France, 1629.

1. THat the two Crowns ſhall remain agreed to renew the ancient Alliances betwixt them, and to keep the ſame inviolably, opening again the Commerce ſure and free. And concerning the ſaid

Commerce, if there is any thing to be added or diminiſhed about the ſame, it ſhall be done on both Parts freely and willingly, as it ſhall be thought convenient.

2. And foraſmuch as it ſhould be difficult to make the reſtitution on the one and the other part of the divers Prizes, which during this War have bin taken, the two Crowns are agreed that there ſhall be made no Reſtitution. And there ſhall alſo not be granted any Repriſal by Sea, nor by any other ways whatſoever, for what is paſt between the two Kings and their Subjects during this laſt War.

3. Concerning the Articles and Contract of the Marriage of the Queen of Great Britain, the ſame are to be confirmed faithfully. And as for the ſaid Queen's Houſhold, if there be any thing to be added or diminiſhed, it ſhall be done by a mutual conſent freely and willingly, as it may be judged fit and convenient for the Service of the ſaid Queen.

4. All former and ancient Alliances both of the one and the other Crown, ſhall remain in their full force, they receiving no Alteration by the preſent Treaty.

5. The two Kings being by this preſent Treaty reunited in the ſame good Affection and Intelligence where they were formerly in, ſhall imploy themſelves, and endeavour mutually to give Aid and Aſſiſtance unto their Allies and Friends, according as by the Conſtitution of Affairs, and by the advantage of a common Good ſhall be required and ſuffered. And all this to the end thereby to procure an entire Quietneſs for Chriſtendom; for the good whereof the Ambaſſadors of the two Crowns ſhall receive Propoſitions and Overtures.

6. All theſe things being re-eſtabliſhed and accepted on the one and the other Part, there ſhall be ſent reciprocally extraordinary Ambaſſadors, Perſons of Quality, with the Ratification of the preſent Agreements; The which ſhall bring with them the denomination of Ordinary Ambaſſadors, that are to reſide in the one and the other Royal Court, thereby to confirm again the Union, and to hinder all occaſions that might trouble the ſame.

7. And whereas there are yet many Ships abroad in the Sea with Letters of Mart, and Commiſſion to fight againſt their Enemies, which cannot ſo ſoon have knowledg of this Peace, nor receive Order to abſtain from all Hoſtility; therefore it ſhall be agreed upon by Article, That whatſoever ſhall be taken during the ſpace of two months after the ſignature of this preſent Treaty, ſhall be reſtored on the one and the other ſide.

8. The two Kings ſhall ſign theſe preſent Articles on the 24*th* day of the Month of April, which ſhall afterwards be conſigned and delivered at the very ſame time by their Commandments into the hands of the Lords Ambaſſadors of Venice, reſiding near their Royal Perſons, to be mutually delivered to the ſaid two Kings at their prefixed day, as ſoon as each of them ſhall have knowledg of the other that they have the ſaid Articles in their hands, and from the day of the Signature, all Acts of Hoſtility both by Sea and Land ſhall ceaſe, and Proclamations needful to this effect ſhall be publiſhed upon one day within the two Kingdoms. Given, &c.

Certain Prieſts ſet at liberty.

His Majeſty at the inſtance of the Queen, in regard of the Peace concluded between the two Crowns, is graciouſly pleaſed that certain Prieſts

Prieſts and Recuſants, who then were in ſeveral Priſons, ſhould be releaſed, and delivered to the French Ambaſſador to be tranſported beyond Seas, notwithſtanding any former Orders againſt ſuch Releaſes and Deliverances.

The Queen delivered of a Son.

May 13. about three of the Clock in the Morning, the Queen was delivered before her time of a Son; he was Chriſtened and died within a ſhort time, his Name Charles. This was Aſcenſion-Eve; and the next day being Aſcenſion-day, a little before Midnight, the Biſhop of London buried him at Weſtminſter.

July 7. French Wines prohibited.

Upon the Petition of the French Merchants, as well as of the Company of Vintners in London, the Importation of French Wines was prohibited for the ſpace of ſix months, by reaſon of the great quantities in Merchant's Cellars, already happening by the liberty taken during the time of the late Diſturbance with France; and command was given not to import any French Wines in Forreign Bottoms, contrary to the Laws.

July 12. Againſt ſelling of Ships to Strangers.

His Majeſty being informed that ſundry of his Subjects, Maſters and Owners of Ships, reſpecting more their private Gain, than the public Good and Safety of the Land, did ſell and diſpoſe to Strangers and Foreigners, their Ships, and other Veſſels, tending to the weakning of the Navigation of the Kingdom, Doth now publickly declare and command, that none of his Subjects do at any time hereafter preſume to ſell or alien any Ship or Veſſel, unto any Perſon, either born or reſident out of the King's Dominion, upon ſevere Penalties.

In this Month of July his Majeſty was pleaſed to order his Privy Council, to write a Letter on the behalf of Sir Pierce Crosby Knight, directed to the Lord Faulkland, Lord Deputy of Ireland, taking ſpecial Notice of his Service at the Iſle of Retz.

A Letter on the behalf of Sir P. Crosby.

Whereas his Majeſty, upon due conſideration of the extraordinary readineſs and ability of Sir Pierce Crosby, in the levying and tranſporting of thoſe voluntary Troops employed under his Command at the Iſle of Retz, as alſo upon good experience, as well of his own as of the Officers and Souldiers well approved ſufficiency and fidelity in that Service, is reſolved to continue them ſtill in Employment; and hath therefore thought fit, with the Advice of this Board, to tranſmit them back again into Ireland, there to be entertained upon the Liſt of his Majeſties Army. And whereas you have received former direction from his Majeſty, bearing date the 4th day of June laſt, to raiſe ſeven new Companies to make up the number of forty eight. Now his Majeſtie's expreſs Will and pleaſure is, and We do in his Majeſties Name require your Lordſhip, that you forbear to raiſe any new Companies, notwithſtanding any former direction; and that you take effectual order that the Regiment of Sir Pierce Croſby, conſiſting of ten Companies beſides the Colonel's, may preſently be liſted as part of his Majeſties Army, under the ſame Captains and Officers that now command them; and that upon their landing in that Kingdom, the ſaid Sir Pierce Croſby, and Souldiers under his Command, may receive ſuch treatment and uſage as is preſcribed.

This Gentleman ſome years after fell under the diſpleaſure of the Court of Star-Chamber; of which more in its proper time and place.

The ſwearing of the Peace by the French King Lewis the 13*th.*

The 16*th* day of September, the French King ſwore the Peace in this Tenor.

‘Lewis by the Grace of God, the moſt Chriſtian King of France and Navarre. We ſwear and promiſe upon our Faith and Royal Word, upon the Holy Evangeliſt, on which We have laid Our Hand to that purpoſe, in the preſence of Sir Thomas Edmonds Knight, Embaſſador Extraordinary from the moſt High, moſt Excellent and Puiſſant Prince CHARLES, alſo by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, Our moſt Dear, Beloved and Good Brother-in-Law, Couſin and antient Allie, That We will accompliſh, obſerve, and cauſe to be obſerved and accompliſhed really and bonâ Fide, all and every the Points and Articles agreed upon, and imported by the Treaty of Peace and Reconciliation made and concluded between Us, and Our ſaid moſt dear Brother, and Brother-in-Law, Our Kingdoms, States, Countries and Subjects, the 14*th* of April laſt. Which Treaties and Articles We having heretofore approved and confirmed, do approve and confirm de novo; and do ſwear and promiſe before God, with joined hands, that We will obſerve the ſame without any contradiction directly or indirectly, nor will permit it any ways to be oppos'd; So help us God. In witneſs whereof We have publicly ſigned theſe Preſents with Our own Hand, and put thereunto Our Seal, in the Church of Fontainbleau the 16*th* day of September, in the Year of Our Lord 1629, and of Our Reign the 20*th*.

The Grand Seignior ſends his Viſier to beſiege Babylon with 200000 Men.

The Grand Seignior about this time reſolving upon the Siege of Bagdet, or Babylon, the third time, ſends his Grand Viſier, Conſeron Baſſa to execute the Deſign, with Ammunition and Neceſſaries for his Army, which conſiſted of 200000 Men. His Military Diſcipline was admirable, for he puniſhed every Souldier with Death that wrong'd any one, upon the ſingle complaint of the Perſon injur'd.

The French Conſul complains of the Engliſh Conſul

Engliſh Merchandizes ſeized.

In order to this Siege, the Grand Viſier ſet forth from Nicomedia, and arriv'd at Aleppo on Tueſday the 25*th* of September. During his ſtay at Aleppo, which was from the 25*th* of September, to the 8*th* of October, he executed many for their Crimes and Offences: But the Engliſh Conſul was the firſt that was ſenſible of his ſeverity upon this Occaſion. There were four Men of War, Corſaires, who being met in the Port of Alexandria, they pillaged there three ſmall Veſſels of Marſeilles, there being a War at that time between England and France; and upon the French Conſul's Complaint to the Baſſa of Aleppo, the Engliſh Magazines and Merchandizes were ſeized, and moſt of the Merchants impriſoned, which made the Engliſh return them the Veſſels and Goods they had taken, and for the reſt agreed with the Baſſa, the Aga of Alexandria, Caddi and other Officers of Juſtice, but at the charge and coſt of above 50000 Crowns.

The Grand Viſier being encamped, he ſent for the Engliſh Conſul; and the Engliſh Merchants there on the 27*th* of September went to find the the Baſſa in his Tent; but beeing too late, they had no audience at that time.

The Morrow, being the 28*th*, the French Conſul viſited him very early, and was much careſſed by the Viſier; but he uſed the Engliſh Conſul ſtrangely, who came not till the Afternoon, and contrary to the Cuſtom, made him ſtand before him, whereas there uſeth to be a Seat appointed for him oppoſite to the Viſier, who asked him, with great paſſion, Why the Engliſh did make that attempt in a Free Port? The Conſul replied, They were not Pirates, but Men of War belonging to their King of Great Britain. He anſwered, with greater fury, Then thy King hath violated the Capitulations, and I am no longer obliged to obſerve them; and commands his Executioners to take the Conſul and his Interpreter, and hang them both before the Caſtle: But the Interpreter being not able to walk by reaſon of his corpulence, they would have hang'd him on a Tree, but that the Conſul gave them thirty Ducatoons to cut off the Interpreter's Head; which they did, and furniſhed the Conſul with a Horſe, and carried him Priſoner to the Caſtle, where he was put into a ſordid naſty Hole, not permitting any of his Friends to ſee him; ſo that they thought they would murder him in the night; but this was only to ſcrue Mony out of him, for ſeven days after he obtain'd his Liberty at the Rate of 30000 Ducatoons, as it is related in the French Mercury.

Condemns the Engliſh Conſul and his Interpreter to be hang'd.

The Engliſh Conſul ſaves his Life by 30000 Ducatoons.

On the 11*th* of October, the King expreſſed his pleaſure concerning the decay of Churches, to this effect.

To repair Churches and Chappels in decay.

‘THat having of late taken ſpecial notice of the general Decay and Ruin of Pariſh-Churches in many parts of this Kingdom; and that by Law the ſame ought to be repair'd and maintain'd at the proper charge of the Inhabitants, and others having Land in thoſe Chappelries and Pariſhes reſpectively; who had wilfully neglected to repair the ſame, being conſecrated Places of God's Worſhip and Divine Service: His Majeſty doth therefore charge and command all Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops, That they take ſpecial care of the repairing and upholding the ſame from time to time, and by themſelves, and their Officers, to take a view and ſurvey of them, and to uſe the power of the Eccleſiaſtical Court, for putting the ſame in due execution; and that the Judges be requir'd not to interrupt this good Work, by their too eaſy granting of Prohibitions.

Goldſmiths ſhops in Cheapſide.

At this time the City of London was in great ſplendor, and full of Wealth, and it was then a moſt glorious ſight to behold the Goldſmiths Shops all of one row in Cheap-ſide, from the end of the Street called the Old-Change near Pater-Noſter-Row, unto the open place over againſt Mercers-Chappel, at the lower end of Cheap; there being at that time but three or four Shops of other Trades that interpoſed in the Row. Whereupon the Lords of the Privy Council were pleaſed, on the 18*th* of November, to make this following Order.

‘FOraſmuch as his Majeſty hath received information of the unſeemlineſs and deformity appearing in Cheap-ſide, by reaſon that divers Men of mean Trades have Shops there amongſt the Gold-ſmiths; which diſorder, it is his Majeſties expreſs pleaſure to have reformed;

'Whereas by occaſion that Sir Heneage Finch Knight, and ſome Aldermen, did this day attend the Board upon other buſineſs, there was 'the ſame time alſo mention made of the aforeſaid deformity. It was 'thereupon thought fit and accordingly Ordered, That the two Lord 'Chief Juſtices, with ſuch other Judges as they ſhall think meet to call 'unto them, ſhall conſider what Statutes, or Laws there are, to enforce the Goldſmiths to plant themſelves for the uſe of their Trade, in 'Cheapſide, Lumbard-ſtreet, and the parts adjacent, and thereupon return Certificate to the Board in Writing, with all convenient expedition. Of which Order the ſaid Lord Chief Juſtices are hereby 'prayed and required to take notice, and to perform the ſame accordingly.

On the 19*th* of December, proviſion was made againſt the Tranſporting of Timber.

To prohibit the Tranſportation of Timber.

'WHereas his Majeſty and the Board, having been informed of the 'great decay of Timber, as well within the Kingdom of Ireland 'as here in England, and that Ship-Timber, and Pipe-Staves, and more 'particularly Knee-Timber, is grown very ſcarce both here, and in 'that Kingdom, and therefore the preſervation thereof doth much 'concern the good and ſafety of his Majeſties Dominions. Their 'Lordſhips being careful to prevent the Tranſportation thereof, have 'this day thought fit and Ordered, that the Lord Treaſurer do forthwith give effectual Order and Directions to the Officers of the Ports 'of England, That no Ship-Timber, eſpecially Knee-Timber, or Pipe-Staves, be Tranſported to any parts out of this Realm, without ſpecial direction from his Majeſty, or this Board. And that the like Order be given to the Officers of the Ports of Ireland, for the reſtraint 'of all Tranſportation out of that Kingdom.

The Death of Bethlem Gabor.

In the Month of November this year, Bethlem Gabor, Prince of Tranſilvania, who had aſſiſted the Confederate Proteſtant Princes in the War, died of a Dropſy, to the great regret of the Turk, to whom he rendred many ſignal Services, and to the great ſatisfaction of the Emperor, who looked upon him as his moſt Puiſſant and redoubtable Enemy. Here followeth his Will.

His laſt Will and Teſtament.

The laſt Will and Teſtament of Bethlem Gabor was opened, the particulars whereof were as followeth; as it appeared upon the peruſal thereof, viz. That he did give and bequeath to his Imperial Majeſty one Horſe very richly harneſſed, together with 40000 Duckets in ſpecie; as alſo to his Majeſty the King of Hungaria, one of the beſt Horſes that ever was ſeen, with the Collar, Bridle and Saddle embroidered all over with Gold, Silver and precious Stones; and withal 40000 Duckets in ſpecie. To the Emperor of the Turks, ſuch another gallant Horſe, with 40000 Duckets in like manner. To his Wife, the Princeſs of Tranſilvania, 100000 Duckets, 100000 Rix-Dollars, 100000 German Florins, and three conſiderable Signories, which ſhe was to enjoy, during Life; and made the Emperor of the Turks his ſole Executor.

The 30*th* of December, certain Inſtructions were ſent from his Majeſty to the Arch-Biſhops of Canterbury and York, under this Title, viz.

An. 1629.

Inſtructions for the moſt Reverend Father in God, Our Right Truſty, and Right Intirely Beloved Councellor, George Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, concerning certain Orders to be obſerved, and put in Execution by the ſeveral Biſhops in his Province.

Afterwards called Regal Inſtructions, differing in ſome things, from the Biſhop of London's Conſiderations before mentioned.

‘THat the Lords the Biſhops give Charge in their Triennial Viſitations, and at other convenient times, both by themſelves, and the Arch-Deacons; that the Declaration for the ſetling all Queſtions in difference, be ſtrictly obſerved by all Parties. That there be a ſpecial Care taken by them all, that their Ordinations be Solemn, and not of unworthy Perſons.

‘That they take great Care concerning the Lectures in their ſeveral Dioceſſes, for whom We give theſe ſpecial Directions following.

1. ‘That in all Pariſhes the Afternoon Sermons be turn'd into Catechiſing by Queſtion and Anſwer, where, and whenſoever there is not ſome great Cauſe apparent to break this Antient and profitable Order.

2. ‘That every Biſhop ordain in his Dioceſs, That every Lecturer do read Divine Service, according to the Liturgy printed by Authority, in his Surplice and Hood, before the Lecture.

3. ‘That where a Lecture is ſet up in a Market-Town, it may be read by a Company of Grave and Orthodox Divines near adjoining, and in the ſame Dioceſs; and that they preach in Gowns, and not in Cloaks, as too many do uſe.

4. ‘That if a Corporation do maintain a ſingle Lecturer, he be not ſuffered to preach, till he profeſs his willingneſs to take upon him a Living with Cure of Souls within that Corporation; and that he do actually take ſuch Benefice, or Cure, ſo ſoon as it ſhall be fairly procur'd for him.

5. ‘That the Biſhops do countenance and encourage the Grave and Orthodox Divines of their Clergy; and that they uſe means, by ſome of the Clergy or others, that they may have knowledg how both Lecturers and Preachers within their Dioceſſes behave themſelves in their Sermons, that ſo they may take order for any Abuſe accordingly.

6. ‘That the Biſhops ſuffer none, under Noblemen, and Men qualified by Law, to have any private Chaplain in his Houſe.

7. ‘That they take ſpecial care that Divine Service be diligently frequented, as well for Prayers and Catechiſms, as Sermons; and take a particulare note of all ſuch as abſent themſelves, as Recuſants, or otherwiſe.

8. ‘That every Biſhop, that by Our Grace and Favour, and good Opinion of his Service, ſhall be nominated by Us to another Biſhoprick, ſhall, from that day of nomination, not preſume to make any Leaſe for three Lives, or 21 Years, or concurrent Leaſe; or any ways to renue any Eſtate, or cut any Wood or Timber, but merely ‘ly to receive the Rents due, and quit the Place: For we think it a ‘hateful thing, that any Man's leaving the Biſhoprick, ſhould almoſt ‘undo the Succeſſor. And if any Man ſhall preſume to break this ‘Order, We will refuſe Our Royal Aſſent, and keep him at the place ‘he hath ſo abus'd.

9. ‘And laſtly; We command you to give Us an account, every ‘Year, the ſecond of January, of the performance of theſe Our Com‘mands.

Theſe Regal Injunctions were ſent to the Arch-Biſhops of Canterbury and York, and by them to all the Biſhops in both the Provinces.

The Miniſters and Lecturers about London, ſummoned upon this occaſion before the Bp. of London.

And in purſuance thereof, the Biſhop of London ſummoned all Miniſters and Lecturers within the City and Suburbs of London, and making a ſolemn Speech, preſſed obedience to his Majeſties Inſtructions, as being full of Religion and Juſtice, and advantagious to the Church and Common-wealth; tho they were miſtaken by ſome, before it was poſſible for them (as he ſaid) to ſee and weigh them.

And afterward the ſaid Biſhop, in order to procure ready Obedience to the King's Inſtructions, wrote this enſuing Letter to ſeveral Arch-Deacons.

The Biſhop of London's Letter concerning the King's Inſtructions for the Clergy.

SIR,

THeſe are to let you underſtand, That his Majeſty, out of his Royal and Princely Care that the Government of the Church be carefully looked unto by the Biſhops, and others with whom it is truſted, hath lately ſent certain Inſtructions to my Lord's Grace of Canterbury, and of York, to be by them diſperſed to the ſeveral Biſhops of each Dioceſs within their Provinces; to the intent, that whatſoever concerns any Biſhop perſonally, or otherwiſe, in reference to thoſe of the Clergie which they are to govern, may be by every of them readily and carefully performed. The Inſtructions which concern the Perſons to be Governed, are only the Third, for keeping the King's Declaration, that ſo Differences and Queſtions may ceaſe; and the Fifth about Lecturers, and the Seventh concerning private Chaplains in the Houſes of Men not qualified; and the Eighth about, either Recuſants, or any other that abſent themſelves from Church and Divine Service. All the reſt are perſonal to the Biſhops; yet becauſe they are ſo full of Juſtice, Honour, and Care of the Church, I ſend to you the whole Body of the Inſtructions, as they came to me, praying and requiring you, as Arch-Deacon of London, to ſend me at or before Wedneſday the third of February next, both the Chriſtian and Sirnames of every Lecturer within your Arch-deaconry; as well in places exempt, as not exempt; and the place where he preacheth, and his Quality and Degree. As alſo the Names of ſuch Men as being not qualified, keep Chaplains in their Houſes. And theſe are farther to pray, and in his Majeſties Name to require you, that you leave with the Parſon or Vicar of the place, a Copy, not of all, but of the four Inſtructions mentioned, with the four ſeveral Branches belonging to the Lecturers, with a charge, That the Parſon or Vicar deliver another Copy of them to the Church-Wardens; and that you do not only call upon them for Performance now preſently, but alſo take a great care from time to time, that at the end of your next Viſitation, and ſo forward at the end of every ſeveral Viſitation, I may, by your ſelf or your Officials, have true notice how they are perform'd, and where, and by whom they are diſobeyed: For ſo much my Lord's Grace of Canterbury requires of me, as you ſhall ſee by the Tenor of his Grace's Letters to me here incloſed. I pray you in any caſe not to fail in this, for if you ſhould, when I come to give up my Account, I muſt diſcharge my ſelf upon you; and that neglect would make you go backward in his Majeſties favour, beſides whatſoever elſe may follow. Thus, not doubting of your care and fidelity in this behalf, I leave you to the Grace of God; and ſhall ſo reſt,

Jan. 4.
1629. Your very loving Friend,

Will. London.

Mr. Bernard queſtion'd in the High Commiſſion, for ſome words in his Prayer before Sermon.

On the 28*th* of January, Mr. Bernard Lecturer at St. Sepulcher's Church, London, had this Expreſſion in his Prayer before Sermon; Lord, open the eyes of the Queen's Majeſty, that ſhe may ſee Jeſus Chriſt, whom ſhe hath pierced with her Infidelity, Superſtition, and Idolatry. For theſe Expreſſions he was queſtion'd in the High Commiſſion Court, and the Court did declare, that the ſame were ſcandalous and unadviſed Speeches, derogatory to ſome particular Perſon of moſt eminent Place, which the Court did not deſire to have repeated: But in regard the ſaid Mr. Bernard made an humble ſubmiſſion, the Court deſired the Biſhop of London to acquaint his Majeſty therewith, and afterward Mr. Bernard was diſmiſſed.

A Letter from the Lords of the Council to the Mayor of Chicheſter, January the 4*th*, 16$\frac{28}{29}$.

WE have bin made acquainted with your Letters of the 4*th of* January inſtant, to our very good Lord the Earl of Dorſet, concerning the oppoſition threatned by divers of the Inhabitants of that Town, in the Billeting of Souldiers directed to be ſent thither, by Letters from this Board of the 28*th of this laſt Month. The manner and circumſtances whereof, in threatning to ſhut the Gates of the City againſt them, as if you aſſumed to be a Free-State, and to give Law to your ſelves, with other Inſolencies both in Speech and Action; which ſeem to us ſtrange and unheard of from Perſons living under a Civil Government; As that the ſame being come to his Majeſties Ears, he doth much marvel, and is highly diſpleaſed therewithal. And whereas we underſtand that two of the Burgeſſes of the Town have been the principal Encouragers of the ſaid Oppoſition, by taking upon them to tell you (the Mayor) that there could be no more Billeting of Souldiers by Law; and accordingly adviſed you (the Mayor) to take heed what you did, for that the Parliament would call you to an account for it, We therefore, by his Majeſties expreſs command, have ſent the Bearer hereof, one of the Meſſengers of his Majeſties Chamber, with Warrant for the taking into cuſtody, and bringing before us the ſaid two Burgeſſes; requiring you to be aiding and aſſiſting unto him in the execution of his ſaid Warrant. And we do likewiſe will and require you the Mayor, together with your Recorder, and two other Aldermen, ſuch as you ſhall think fit, to make your ſpeedy repair hither to attend us at our next ſitting at* Whitehal. Hereof you may in no wiſe fail. And ſo, &c.

In Ireland the Popiſh Biſhops, Abbats, Vicars, Jeſuits, &c. and others of that ſort, aſſembled themſelves throughout the Kingdom, in publick places to celebrate their Services, and erected Buildings, Colleges, Convents of Monks and Nuns, in the Eye and open view of the State, exerciſing Juriſdiction by Authority derived from the See of Rome, which every day took growth; And His Majeſty and the Lords of the Council being advertiſed thereof from Ireland, on the 31 of January 1629, wrote the enſuing Letter, directed to the Lords Juſtices and Council of Ireland.

A Letter to the Lords Juſtices, and Council of Ireland.

A Letter from the Privy Council in England to the Lords Juſtices in Ireland, againſt the Convents of Friars, Nuns &c. erected in Ireland.

BY your Letters we underſtand how the ſeditious Riot, moved by the Fryars and their Adherents at Dublin, hath by your good Order and Reſolution been happily ſuppreſt; And we doubt not but by this occaſion, you will conſider how much it concerneth the good Government of that Kingdom, to prevent in time the firſt growing of ſuch evils. For where ſuch People are permitted to ſwarm, they will ſoon make their Hives, and then indure no Government but their own, which cannot otherwiſe be reſtrained, than by a due and ſeaſonable execution of the Laws, and ſuch Directions as from time to time have been ſent from his Majeſty and this Board. Now it redoundeth much to his Majeſtes Honour, that the World ſhall take notice of the ability and good ſervice of his Miniſters there, which in Perſon he hath been pleaſed openly in Council, and in moſt gracious manner to approve and commend, whereby you may be ſufficiently incouraged to go on with like reſolution and moderation till the Work be fully done, as well in that City, as in the other places of that Kingdom. The carriage whereof we muſt leave to your own good diſcretions, whoſe particular knowledg of the preſent ſtate of things, can guide you beſt when and where to carry a hard or a ſofter hand; only this we hold neceſſary to put you in mind, that you continue in that good Agreement among your ſelves, for this and other Services, which your Letters do expreſs, and for which we commend you much. That the good Servant of the King and State may find encouragement equally from you all, and the ill-affected may find no ſupport or countenance from any, or other connivance uſed, than by general advice, for avoiding further evils, ſhall be allowed. And ſuch Magiſtrates or Officers, if any ſhall be diſcovered, that openly, or under-hand, favour ſuch diſorders, or do not their duties in ſuppreſſing them, and puniſhing the Offenders, you ſhall do well to take all fit and ſafe advantages, by the puniſhment or diſplacing of a few, to make the reſt more cautious. This we write not as miſliking the fair courſe you have taken, but to expreſs the concurrence of our Judgments with yours. And to aſſure you of our Aſſiſtance in all ſuch Occaſions, wherein for your further Proceedings, we have adviſed, and his Majeſty requireth you accordingly to take Order, Firſt, That the Houſe where ſo many Fryars appeared in their Habits, and wherein the Reverend Arch-Biſhop and the Mayor of Dublin received the firſt affront, be ſpeedily demoliſhed; and be a mark of terror to the Reſiſters of Authority: and that the reſt of the Houſes erected, or imployed there, or elſewhere in Ireland, to the uſe of Superſtitious Societies, be converted to Houſes of Correction, and to ſet idle People on work, or to other publick uſes, for the advancement of Juſtice, good Art or Trade. And further, that you uſe all fit means to diſcover the Founders, Benefactors, and Maintainers of ſuch Societies and Colleges, and certify us their Names. And that you find out the Lands, Leaſes, Rents or Revenues applied to their uſes, and diſpoſe thereof according to the Law. And that you certify alſo the Places, and Inſtitutions of all ſuch Monaſteries, Priories, Nunneries, and other Religious Houſes, and the Means of all ſuch Perſons as have put themſelves to be Brothers or Siſters therein, ſpecially ſuch as are of Note, to the end ſuch evil Plants be not permitted any more to take root in that Kingdom, which we require you to take care of. As for the ſupply of Munition, which you have reaſon to deſire, we have taken effectual order that you ſhall receive it with all convenient ſpeed. And ſo, &c.

Mr. Chancey, a Miniſter, queſtioned in the High-Commiſſion.

Mr. Charles Chancy, Miniſter of Ware, uſing ſome Expreſſions in his Sermon: That Idolatry was addmitted into the Church; That the preaching of the Goſpel would be ſuppreſſed; That there is much Atheiſm, Popery, Arminianiſm, and Hereſy crept into the Church. And this being looked upon to raiſe a fear among the People, that ſome alteration of Religion would enſue; He was queſtioned in the High-Commiſſion, and by Order of that Court the Cauſe was referred to the Biſhop of London, being his Ordinary, who ordered him to make a Submiſſion in Latin.

Certificate againſt Mr. Palmer, for non-Obedience to the Inſtructions.

Mr. Dean, Arch-Deacon of Canterbury, in purſuance of the aforeſaid Inſtructions, did certify, that Mr. Palmer, a Lecturer in St. Alphage, Canterbury, had no Licence to preach there. That he read Prayers againſt the Miniſter's Will; and Cathechiſed, but not according to Canon. That in the Cathechiſing he took upon him to declare the King's Mind in his Inſtructions. That he had never heretofore read Prayers, or uſed the Surplice in the Pariſh. That he preached a Factious Sermon in the Cathedral Church, and detracted from Divine Service there. That Factious Parties in all the Pariſhes in the Town are his Auditors.

Hereupon the Commiſſioners willed Mr. Palmer to deſiſt; but they did further certify, they had ſince been informed that his Grace the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury (meaning Arch-Biſhop Abbot) hath authoriſed Mr. Palmer to preach again, but he did not long continue there.

‘HIS Majeſty having heretofore received certain Information, as ‘well by the Miniſters and Elders of the Dutch Churches both in ‘the Parts beyond the Seas, and in our City of London, as by the ſpe‘cial earneſt Recommendation of our Deareſt Siſter, and Her Royal ‘Conſort, our Dear Brother the Prince Elector Palatine, of the moſt ‘diſtreſſed and lamentable Eſtate, of the poor exiled Miniſters of the ‘Palatinate, their Wives and Children, who falling into the power of their cruel Enemies, have been ſpoiled of all their Temporal Eſtates, and expoſed unto unexpreſſible Miſeries, and are now enforced, as Exiles, to retire and hide themſelves from the violence of their Adverſaries, in ſeveral Cities, Towns, and other Places, where they live in very great penury and want; moſt of them having formerly had plentiful and liberal Means to ſuſtain their own Charge, and to be helpful to others, whoſe Caſes are the more to be deplored, for that this extremity is fallen upon them for their Sincerity and Conſtancy in the true Religion; which we together with them do profeſs, and which we are all bound in Conſcience to maintain to the utmoſt of our Powers. Whereas theſe Religious and Godly Perſons being involved amongſt many others their Country-men, in that common Calamity, might have enjoyed their Eſtates and Fortunes, if with other Back-ſliders in the time of trial they would have ſubmitted themſelves to the Anti-chriſtian Yoke, and have renounced or diſſembled the profeſſion of the true Religion. The King taking theſe things into his Princely Conſideration, and being moved with the Bowels of Compaſſion towards them, as feeling Members of the ſame Body, whereof Chriſt alone is the Head. And being certainly informed, that thoſe of the United Provinces, and divers other Proteſtants in other places, have bountifully contributed towards their Neceſſities. And the King being aſſured that all his loving Subjects of this his Kingdom, who have long enjoyed the freedom of the Goſpel, and have taſted largely of the Comfort thereof, will not be inferior to any in a work ſo full of Piety and Charity towards their diſtreſſed Brethren.

‘His Majeſty, Out of his Princely Grace doth Order and Grant, that a General Collection be made of the charitable Devotions and Liberalities of all his loving Subjects throughout this his Realm of England and Dominion of Wales, towards the relief and ſuccour of the ſaid poor Exiles.

After this Patent was paſſed the Great Seal, the Biſhop of London being diſſatisfied at ſome Expreſſions therein, moved his Majeſty concerning the ſame, and prevailed to have the Patent cancelled, to the end theſe Words following might be left out, viz. Which Religion we together with them profeſs, and are all bound in Conſcience to maintain to the uttermoſt of our Power. And accordingly that Patent under the Great Seal was cancelled, and a new Patent to all the intents and purpoſes as the former, was granted, and did paſs the Great Seal; The Words laſt abovementioned being wholly left out.

The King's affection to, and great care of his only Siſter the Queen of Bohemia.

Towards the latter end of this year, the King did ſeriouſly take into his Thoughts and Care the diſtreſſed Condition of his only Siſter, the Queen of Bohemia, being driven out of the Palatinate by the Emperor, and her Huſband's Patrimony given to the Duke of Bavaria, and therefore was willing to hearken to the Ambaſſadors of Forreign Princes who applyed to His Majeſty in their Maſters Names to join with the French King to mediate a Peace between the King of Poland and the King of Sweden, then at Warrs together. Which Mediation thoſe two Kings immediately undertook, and prevailed for a Truce for ſix years; the one fearing leſt the Emperor being victorious againſt the confederate Proteſtant Princes, ſhould through his ſucceſs endeavour to extend his Empire to the prejudice of France; and the other hoping by making a Peace between the Swede and the Pole, to get the Swede's Aſſiſtance for the recovery of the Palatinate.

The King of Sweden deſigns an expedition into Germany.

The King of Sweden after making the ſaid Truce, finding the Inclinations of his Army for Action abroad, reſolved to keep them together in order to a deſign upon Germany, giving out that he would relieve the oppreſſed Princes and People of thoſe Provinces in Germany, and endeavour to reſtore them to their antient and undoubted Rights and Liberty.

Sends an Ambaſſador into England.

In order to this Deſign, he ſent an Ambaſſador into England to treat for Aſſiſtance, and the King of Bohemia and the Queen, writ effectually to the King of England her Brother upon the ſame account; the Queen of Bohemia alſo writ to Marqueſs Hamilton, her neareſt Kinſman and greateſt Confident, to be Inſtrumental with the King her Brother, to aſſiſt the King of Sweden with Forces.

The King reſolves to raiſe 6000 Men.

His Majeſty readily complyed with the deſires of the King and Queen of Bohemia, and reſolved to raiſe an Army of 6000 Men, to go under the Conduct of Marqueſs Hamilton, which ſhould not appear to the World to be any otherwiſe raiſed, than as the voluntary aſſiſtance of his Subjects, for it was not then convenient publicly to diſoblige the Emperor, while Sir Robert Amſtrother was Ambaſſador at that Court, to endeavour the Reſtitution of the Palatinate; and hopes there were at the ſame time by a Treaty with Spain to gain the ſame.

Col. Alex. Hamilton and Ramſey ſent to the King of Sweden.

Hereupon towards the latter end of this Year, the Marqueſs ſent Col. Alex. Hamilton, Brother to the Earl of Haddington, to the King of Sweden, with a general offer of his Services; which was affectionately received by that King, who preſently ſent him a Commiſſion to be General of what Army he ſhould bring over. And to expedite a Treaty with the Swede, upon what terms and conditions the Marqueſs ſhall engage upon that Deſign: His Lordſhip alſo ſent unto the King one David Ramſey, a Scottiſh Man (a Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to the King of England) who well underſtood the German Language, and was recommended to his Majeſty by the King and Queen of Bohemia, as one who had approved himſelf faithful to the Intereſt of the Palatinate Cauſe.

About this time the Emperor upon ſeveral Remonſtrances, commands his Edict in favour of the Romiſh Eccleſiaſtics at Auſpurg and other parts, to be put in Execution, which is in the Circle of Suabia, where the Imperial Commiſſioners arrived in the City of Auſpurg, with ſome Companies of the Peaſantry, raiſed in the Territories of the Biſhop of the ſaid City; where they gave the Governor of their Miniſtry to underſtand his Imperial Majeſties Mandate and Pleaſure, That they ſhould reſtore all Eccleſiaſtic Goods to their lawful Proprietors; and during the execution hereof, all the Churches of the City were ſhut up. They alſo acquainted the Proteſtant Paſtors of the Auguſtan Confeſſion with the ſame Mandate; That they muſt wholly forbear the exerciſe of their Religion; that thoſe among them who had the priviledg of Burgers, may continue there, and for the reſt, they were commanded to depart the City, and retire to ſome other place. During the ſaid execution, all the Inhabitants were enjoined joined to confine themſelves to their Houſes, and to follow their Trade there, without ſtirring forth.

The Exerciſe of Auſpurg Proteſtant Religion to be aboliſhed.

Some ſmall time after, his Imperial Majeſty finding it expedient that the Exerciſe of the Profeſſion of Auſpurg ſhould be abſolutely and totally aboliſhed there; and being adviſed that there were in that City ſome Perſons who oppoſed his Imperial Majeſties Decrees in that behalf. Hereupon the Emperor's Commiſſaries, the Biſhop, Magiſtrates, and Clergy, threatned even to plunder and burn all that they had; and commanded them to abſtain from ſeditious Expreſſions upon pain of Death: And declared to the Proteſtant Paſtors, That they were to withdraw themſelves for the time to come, for that the Catholic Biſhop ſhould, as his proper right, hold the ſaid Epiſcopal See.

Eccleſiaſt. Juriſdict. recommitted to the lawful Catholic Biſhop.

The Proteſtants inſiſt on the Emperor's Grant in 1628

The ſame Edict was alſo executed in the Town of Halberſtadt on the 26*th* of December, the Imperial Commiſſioners being received very ſplendidly by the Duke of Fridland and Count Tilly. Two days after their Reception, they began to conſider of the Places and Revenues to be reſtored to the Catholics; and though the Proteſtants detaining them, pretended to defend themſelves by the aſſurances of the Emperor's Grant made to them; the Commiſſaries notwithſtanding all that, proceeded in their Deſigns with rigor.

The Duke of Fidland inveſted with the Dukedoms of Mecklenburg.

Alſo Walleſtein Duke of Fridland, and his Heirs, were ſolemnly inveſted by the Emperor at Vienna with the Dukedoms of Mecklenburg, and that by right of a Fee Imperial, and by vittue of a certain Declaration of his Imperial Majeſties publiſhed againſt the Dukes of Mecklenburg, and ſent to the Elector of Saxony, whereby they ſtood accuſed of High Treaſon, Rebellion, &c. And that, if they did not ſubmit to this Declaration, they ſhould be proceeded againſt by the Ban of the Empire.

The King of Sweden hearing of theſe and other violent proceedings againſt the Proteſtant Princes, haſtned his preparations for an expedition into Germany; and in the beginning of the next year 1630, concludes upon Tearms with Marqueſs Hamilton, for the aſſiſtance of 6000 Men to be tranſported into Germany; of which more particularly in time and place in the next year.

Prince Charles proclaimed King.

An Inſtrument in Writing was on the 27*th* of March drawn up, declaring the death of King JAMES, and that by his Deceaſe, the Imperial Crowns of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, are rightfully come to the High and Mighty Prince CHARLES: Which Writing was in the firſt place ſigned by John Gore, then Lord Mayor of London; After him by George Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury; John Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, Keeper of the Great Seal of England; then by the Lords Temporal, and ſuch other Nobility and Gentry as appeared together at that time. Which Writing, after the ſaid Subſcriptions, was publiſhed in Print by Bonham Norton and John Bill.

We hope the Reader will not think his time miſpent, to take a view of the Titles of King Charles his Proclamations, as they came forth in order of time, from the firſt Year of his Reign. Wherein the Reader may obſerve where the Court was kept when any of thoſe Proclamations were ſigned. And the Author in the Appendix doth alſo ſet down the ſubſtance of many of the moſt material of thoſe Proclamations for the Reader's further ſatisfaction.

For the Year 1630.

WE begin this Year in order of Time, with a Letter dated the firſt of April, written from the Biſhop of Kelmore in Ireland, to the Biſhop of London, to this effect.

Biſhop of Kelmore's Letter to the Biſhop of London, of the increaſe of Popery in Ireland, and of the decay of Churches.

I Have bin (ſaith he) about my Dioceſs, and can ſet down, out of my knowledg and view, what I ſhall relate; and ſhortly to ſpeak much ill matter in a few words. It is very miſerable every way; The Cathedral of Ardagh, (one of the moſt ancient in Ireland, and ſaid to be built by St. Patrick) together with the Biſhop's Houſe there, are down to the Ground: The Church here built, but without Bell or Steeple, Font or Calice. The Pariſh Churches all in a manner ruined, unroofed and unrepaired. The People, ſaving a few britiſh Planters here and there (which are not the tenth part of the Remnant) obſtinate Recuſants; a Popiſh Clergie more numerous by far than we, and in the full exerciſe of all Juriſdiction Eccleſiaſtical by their Vicars General, and Officials, who are ſo confident, as they Excommunicate thoſe that come to our Court, even in Matrimonial Cauſes; which affront hath bin offered my ſelf by the Popiſh-Primate's Vicar-General: for which I have begun a Proceſs againſt him. The Primate himſelf lives in my Pariſh, within two miles of my Houſe: The Biſhop in another part of my Dioceſs farther off; every Pariſh hath his Prieſt, and ſome two or three a piece, and ſo their Maſs-Houſes: Alſo in ſome places Maſs is ſaid in the Churches. Friars there are in divers places, who go about, though not in their Habits; and by their importunate begging, impoveriſh the People, who indeed are generally very poor.

On the ſixth day of April, his Majeſty cauſed to be publiſhed this Proclamation for the better ordering of thoſe who repair to the Court for the Cure of the Diſeaſe called the King's-Evil.

Concerning the cure of the Diſeaſe called the King's-Evil.

'WHereas by the Grace and Bleſſing of God, the Kings and Queens of this Realm, for many Ages paſt, have had the happineſs, by their ſacred Touch, and Invocation of the Name of God, to cure thoſe who are afflicted with the Diſeaſe called the King's Evil: And his now moſt Excellent Majeſty, in no leſs meaſure than any of his Royal Predeceſſors, hath had good ſucceſs herein; and in his moſt gracious and pious diſpoſition is as ready and willing as any King or Queen of this Realm ever was, in any thing to relieve the diſtreſſes and neceſſities of his good Subjects; yet in his Princely Wiſdom, foreſeeing that in this, as in all other things, Order is to be obſerved, and fit Times are neceſſary to be appointed for the performing of this great work of Charity: His moſt excellent Majeſty doth hereby publiſh and declare his Royal Will and Pleaſure to be; That whereas heretofore the uſual times of preſenting ſuch

'perſons

An. 1630.

‘ Perſons to his Majeſty for this purpoſe were Eaſter and Whitſontide;
‘ that from henceforth the times ſhall be Eaſter and Michaelmaſs, as ‘ times more convenient both for the temperature of the Seaſon, and
‘ in reſpect of any Contagion, which may happen in this near acceſs
‘ to his Majeſties Sacred Perſon; and his Majeſty doth accordingly
‘ will and command, That from the time of publiſhing this Proclama‘ tion, none preſume to repair to his Majeſties Royal Court, to be healed
‘ of that Diſeaſe before the Feaſt of St. Michael now next coming.

The Form of Divine Service uſed at the time of this Solemn Ceremony, was as followeth.

The Goſpel was read written in the 16th of St. Mark,
Jeſus appeared unto the Eleven, &c.
And the Goſpel written in the firſt of St. John,
In the beginning was the Word, &c.
And as often as the King putteth the Angel about their Necks, repeat theſe words,
That Light was the true Light, which lighteth every Man into the World.

After this the Lord's Prayer is ſaid; and another Prayer on the behalf of the Diſeaſed, that they receiving Health, may give thanks to God, &c.

William Earl of Pembrook on the 10th of April departed this Life; he was the third Earl from his Creation, Lord Warden of the Stannerys, Governour of Portſmouth, Knight of the Garter, Lord High-Steward of the King's Houſhold, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxford; He ſupt the night before his Death with the Counteſs of Bedford at Biſhops-gate, upon the day of his Birth, being then of the Age of ſeventy Years; he went home from thence to Bainard's Caſtle, admiring his Health, and ſaid, He would never truſt a Woman Propheteſs for the Lady Daves ſake; who told him, He ſhould die that day of his Birth. He went to Bed very well, but died of an Apoplexy before eight in the morning. He was told of the time of his Death long before it happened by the ſaid Lady. Which Lady often ſaid to a greater Perſon than this Earl, That great misfortune would befal him, for which ſhe was ſome time impriſoned.

This Earl died without Heir, and his Honour deſcended to Philip Herbert his Brother, Earl of Pembrok and Montgomery.

The news of his Death came ſpeedily to the knowledg of the Univerſity of Oxford, who two days after choſe the Biſhop of London Chancellor; and the Univerſity ſhortly after came up to the Ceremony, and gave the Biſhop his Oath.

The timely conformity of the Miniſters of York to the Regal Injunctions.

The Miniſters of the City of York having given proof of their Obedience, in obſerving the late Inſtructions for the Clergy, did on the 24th of May make an Addreſs to the Arch-Biſhop of that Province, and to the Lord Preſident of the North, for a more ample allowance.

This Cauſe was preferred to the Lords of the Privy-Council, who were pleaſed to take notice thereof; and for the encouragement of their Endeavours, as being fruitful in part already, and giving hope of more Fruit by Catechiſing, and other Divine Exerciſes, thought fit that an Addition ſhould be made to their Yearly Maintenance, not exceeding Twenty four Pounds by the Year.

And they conſider'd a courſe that had bin held in the like Caſes in the City of London and Norwich, and other Places, which might ſerve for Precedents. And ſeeing by Order from the Board, there was an allowance of one penny in a ſhilling to be paid, according to the yearly Rent of Houſes in Norwich, granted to the Miniſters, and that willingly by the moſt, very few refuſing, they concluded upon ſuch a courſe to be uſed in York, though not exactly reſtrain'd to that proportion.

An Order of Council for increaſe of Maintenance for them.

Wherefore they directed a Letter to the Lord Arch-Biſhop of York, the Lord Preſident of the North, and the Lord Mayor of York, and ſix of the ancienteſt Aldermen of that City, to enter into a ſerious conſideration, how the Wants of theſe Miniſters might be ſupplied, by levying an indifferent and competent Sum out of every Man's Houſe-Rent as might not be burthenſom; but ſo augmenting their allowance, as to enable and encourage them to proceed in that laudable courſe which they had begun.

The Lords of the Privy Council, in order to bring in more Revenue to the Crown, adviſed the King to put forth a Proclamation, declaring his pleaſure to confirm to his Subjects their Defective Titles, Eſtates and Poſſeſſions, (as well by colour of former Grants, as without any Grant from the Crown); to which purpoſe a Commiſſion was lately renewed and granted; which Proclamation bore date May 27, to this effect.

Defective Titles.

‘WHereas the King's moſt excellent Majeſty, in his gracious Favour towards his Loving Subjects, did not only renue his Commiſſion of Grace, but alſo by his Proclamation given at Whitehall, dated the 6th day of December, in the fourth Year of his Reign, did declare, That in his gracious intention towards his ſaid Subjects, he had authorized the Lords, and others of his Privy-Council, and others of his Judges, and Counſel learned, by his ſaid Commiſſion, to ſell, grant, and confirm to ſuch of his Subjects, whom it might concern, their Defective Titles to their Eſtates and Poſſeſſions, in ſuch Manours and Lands which they did enjoy; not only under colour of ſome Defective Titles, void or inſufficient Grants, or by Letters Patents of Concealments, but alſo for thoſe Manours and Lands which they did poſſeſs, meerly by Intruſion and Uſurpation, without any colour of Right and Title, they never having had any Grants thereof at all, either from his Majeſty, or any of his Predeceſſors; and yet their ſaid Eſtates and Poſſeſſions are not ſetled by Act of Parliament, made in the one and twentieth Year of the Reign of his Dear and Royal Father King James, of bleſſed Memory, lately deceaſed, entituled, An Act for the general Quiet of the Subjects againſt all pretences of Concealment; conceiving that the ſaid Subjects would have bin as forward to have embraced his ſaid intended Grace towards them, for their own good and relief, as he was graciouſly pleaſed to offer it unto them. But his Majeſty finding the contrary, and the ſame wholly to be neglected, might now in Juſtice and Reaſon, reduce to the Crown all ſuch other Manours and Lands whereto

An. 1630.

‘his Highneſs hath Right and Title, and which were not ſetled by the ſaid Act to the increaſe of his Revenue. But his Majeſty not being willing to conſtrue this in the worſt ſence, and having nothing more in his Princely deſire than the general Good of his Subjects, preferring their Peace and Quiet before his own Benefit, hath once more not only renewed, but alſo for the greater relief of his ſaid Subjects, enlarged his ſaid Commiſſion of Grace, to ſundry his ſaid Lords and others of his Privy-Council, Judges, and Counſel learned, giving them the like Authority to compound with ſuch of his Loving Subjects, whom it may concern, and ſhall ſeek compoſition at their hands for any of the Manours, Lands, Tenements, and other the Hereditaments of the ſeveral Natures and Qualities contained and expreſſed in the Schedule, which his Majeſty hath cauſed hereunto to be annexed, whereby each one, whom it concerneth, may take knowledg, for what and how he may be relieved by the ſaid Commiſſion, if in time and by a due courſe he ſhall ſeek the ſame.

‘But his Majeſty doth further declare his Royal Pleaſure by his publick Declaration to be, That if thoſe whom it may concern, ſhall not by or before the Feaſt of All Saints next, attend his Majeſties Commiſſioners for ſuch moderate and reaſonable Compoſitions as ſhall be found fit and equal for them, for or concerning any of the ſaid Premiſes ſo by them intruded upon, and unjuſtly detained from his Majeſty, that his Majeſty will not in prejudice of his juſt Title and Revenue, defer his own Benefit any longer, but either take a legal courſe for the reducing of ſuch Manours and Lands, and other the Premiſes (of ſuch Perſon and Perſons as ſhall any longer neglect his gracious Offer) to the encreaſe of his Revenue; or otherwiſe grant the ſame over unto ſuch others, as ſhall be Suitors to him for the ſame.

‘And his Majeſty the better to be informed who imbraceth this his Royal Grace, and who neglecteth the ſame, hath appointed and commanded Robert Tipper of Grays Inn his Majeſties Servant, to attend his Majeſties Commiſſioners, as in former times he hath done, who is to acquaint his Majeſties ſaid Commiſſioners with the ſtate of the ſeveral Caſes of thoſe that ſhall ſeek a Compoſition as aforeſaid, and who do accept this his Majeſties Grace, and who not; whereupon ſuch further Proceeding may be had according to their ſaid ſeveral Neglects, as his Majeſty in his wiſdom ſhall think fitteſt.

Inſtructions were alſo given by the King to the ſaid Commiſſioners, how to proceed and make Compoſition with ſuch Perſons as ſhould make ſuit for the ſame; which ſee at large in the Appendix.

Prince Charles born.

On the 29th of May Prince Charles was born, a little before one of the Clock in the Afternoon; and the Biſhop of London had the honour to ſee him before he was an hour old. At his Birth there appear'd a Star viſible that very time of the day, when the King rode to St. Paul's Church to give thanks to God for the Queen's ſafe delivery of a Son. But this Star then appearing, *ſome ſay was the Planet Venus; others Mercury, the Sign of Merlin's Prophecy. The ſplendor of the Sun ſhall languiſh by the paleneſs of Mercury, and it ſhall be dreadful to the Beholders. Any Planet (ſays the Aſtrologer) within its degrees of the Sun is very unfortunate; and Mercury being the Lord of the Aſcendent, cendent and Mid-heaven, was a chief Significator of the Prince his Perſon, who being afflicted by the preſence of the Sun, yet miraculouſly God did by his power make this Star ſhine bright in a clear Sun-ſhine day, which was contrary to Nature. Thus much out of the Reign of King Charles, from his Birth to his Grave. Page 141. Beſides, the Author of this ſecond Part, was preſent at this appearance of the Star at that time, when the King and his Nobles rid on Horſeback to St. Pauls.

The next day being the 30th of May, the King writ a Letter to the Biſhop of London, under the Privy Signet, to give him publick notice of the Prince's Birth.

CHARLES REX.

The King's Letter to the Biſhop of London concerning the Birth of the Prince.

Right Reverend Father in God, Right Truſty and Wellbeloved Counſellor, We Greet you well. Whereas it hath pleaſed God of his infinite Grace and Goodneſs to vouchſafe unto us a Son born at our Manour of St. James, the 29th day of this preſent Month of May, to the great comfort not only of our ſelves in particular, but to the general Joy and Contentment of our Loving Subjects, as being a principal means for the eſtabliſhment of the proſperous eſtate and Peace of this and other our Kingdoms, whoſe Welfare We do and will ever prefer before any other earthly Bleſſing that can befall us in this Life. We therefore according to the laudable Cuſtom of our Royal Progenitors in like caſe heretofore uſed, have thought fit to make known unto you theſe glad tidings, being well aſſured that with all dutiful and loving Affection you will imbrace whatſoever may make for the proſperous advancement of the publick Good.

On the ſaid 29th of May, a great Cauſe was brought to hearing in the Star-Chamber, concerning a Diſcourſe, entituled, a Propoſition for his Majeſties Service to bridle the Impertinency of Parliaments. Wherein the King's Attorney General was Plantiff, the Earl of Bedford, the Earl of Clare, the Earl of Somerſet, Sir Robert Cotton, John Selden, Oliver St. John, and others Defendents: which Information we have inſerted at large in the Appendix to the firſt part of Hiſtorical Collections; here now followeth the Anſwers of the Defendents, and the Judgment of the Court thereupon, viz.

After the King's Attorney General opened the aforementioned Information: The Anſwer of Robert Earl of Somerſet to the ſaid Information, was alſo opened by his Council, to this effect:

The Earl of Somerſet's Anſwer.

The Cauſe againſt the Earl of Somerſet, &c. brought to Hearing.

That the Diſcourſe, as he believed, was either the ſame that was ſhewed him in the time of his Attendance near his late Majeſty King James, or had many of the ſame things in it: And finding no cauſe of concealing a Propoſition made in a former King's time, and having no Apprehenſion, that Scandal to his Majeſty, or the preſent Government, might thereby happen, he caſually imparted it to the Earls of Bedford and Clare, who after peruſal thereof, delivered their Opinion concerning it, at their next meeting; 'That it was a phantaſtick Project of 'ſome brain-ſick Travellor, who had made Collections of ſome Princes 'in Italy, and other Foraign States, no way ſuitable to the Government of this Kingdom. ——

An. 1630.

And further ſaid, that (beſides that one time) there was never any Conference, nor any paſſage by Letter or otherwiſe, betwixt them concerning it, or with any other Perſon, and denied that he either contrived the Propoſition, or knew of the contriving thereof, or ever imagined that his Majeſty would innovate the ancient Form of Government, diſpoſe of the Eſtates of his Subjects without their Conſents, make or repeal Laws by Proclamation without conſent of Parliament, plant Garriſons in his principal Cities and Towns, or put in execution any part of the ſaid Diſcourſe: And the reaſon why he did not preſent the Diſcourſe to his Majeſty, or ſome of the Lords of the Council, or ſome Magiſtrate, was, becauſe he did not conceive the ſame did in any ſort concern the time of his Majeſties Government, but was contrived in ſome former time, as appeared manifeſtly, by the particulars therein contained; and that about 16, or 17 years ago, Sir David Fowles ſhewed him the Project, to whom he replied, 'That he was ſatisfied 'no uſe could be made thereof, and ſo he redelivered it, and concluded that the divulging thereof, was in his opinion pardoned by the 'general Pardon granted upon his now Majeſties Coronation.

The Anſwer of the reſt of the Defendents.

The reſt of the Defendents denied any their contrivance thereof, alledging the Author (as they were informed) was living beyond Sea, and that they ought not to be queſtioned for it, being writ in the time of King James, and not in reference to his now Majeſties Government, denying that they had the leaſt thought or intention to ſcandalize the Government; for that they rejected the Diſcourſe as ſoon as they read it, as a fooliſh & impertinent iſſue of ſome projecting Brain; and they averred their deteſtation of ſuch a Project, and that they bore Loyal Hearts to his Majeſty, and bleſſed God for the happy and peaceable Government under him.

Sir David Fowlis his Examination.

After the Publication of the Cauſe in order to a Hearing, it appeared by the Depoſitions of Sir David Fowlis, that he received the ſaid Writing from one Mr. Yates, in the time of King James, who brought it from Sir Robert Dudly at Florence, together with a Letter, deſiring him to deliver it to the Earl of Somerſet, that he might communicate it to King James, which was done accordingly, and that in his hearing the Earl ſignified a diſlike thereof. And that he received it back from the Earl (being the Original) and kept it by him till the Lords of the Council ſent for it, and that he made no Copy thereof.

It appeared alſo by the Depoſitions of other Witneſſes, that this Diſcourſe nine years ago, was bought by them in Little Britain amongſt other Manuſcripts.

The Court enters upon the Hearing of the Cauſe.

So this Cauſe coming to Hearing, a great preſence of Nobility being in Court, the Attorney General opened the Charge. But before much proceeding, his Majeſty ſent word unto the Lord Keeper Coventry, then in Court, that the Queen was brought to Bed of a Son, and a private Meſſage alſo was delivered to him from the King; whereupon the L. Keeper declared in Court, that His moſt Sacred Majeſty had taken this matter into his moſt ſerious Conſideration, and although the ſame was of ſo High a Nature, as it was neceſſary to be brought in queſtion, (being contrary to many Laws and Statutes, and the common Law it ſelf,) yet his Majeſty ballancing the ſame in the Scales of Juſtice and Mercy (the Author of the Diſcourſe being diſcovered to live beyond the Seas) found theſe Defendents rather fitting to be Objects of his Mercy, than Juſtice, they being ſome of them Noblemen, and ſuch as his Majeſty did and doth well eſteem and like of, in his Royal Opinion.

And that his Majeſty was the rather inclined to extend his goodneſs, in regard of the time; It having now pleaſed the great Juſtice of Heaven to bleſs his Majeſty and his Kingdom with a Royal Iſſue of his Body, a hopeful Prince, the great joy and long expectation both of King and Kingdom.

No further Proceedings to be againſt the Defendents.

Upon this Declaration of the King's pleaſure, the Lord Keeper made known, that the Court by his Majeſties ſpecial Command was to proceed no further in the hearing of this Cauſe: But ordered the Project, or Book, to be burnt, as ſeditious and ſcandalous both to his Majeſty, the State and Government of this Kingdom. And ordered the Proceedings to be taken off the File.

Articles agreed unto by the King of Sweden.

Two days after the birth of the Prince, Guſtavus Adolphus King of Sweden on the 31 of May, ſigned the Articles agreed unto between that King and the Marqueſs of Hamilton, about the bringing of an Army of 6000 Men into Germany, for the Aſſiſtance of the King of Sweden, and in order to the relief of the Palatinate.

The Condition of Agreement between the King of Sweden and Marqueſs Hamilton.

‘VVEE Guſtavus Adolphus by the Grace of God King of the Swedes, Goths, and Vandals, Great Prince of Finland, Duke of Eſthone and Carel, and Lord of Ingria, &c. To all and ſundry whom it concerns, make it known and certain, That whereas the Illuſtrious and our ſincerely beloved Lord James Marqueſs of Hamilton, Maſter of the Horſe to the moſt Serene King of Great Britain, out of his Zeal for the publick Good, and for acquiring eternal Fame, hath reſolved, to dedicate himſelf, and the Fortunes and Forces of all he is concerned in for reſtoring our oppreſſed Friends in Germany; and for that end hath offered to us by the Illuſtrious and our ſincerely faithful Colonel Alexander Hamilton, his Fidelity and Service; and that he will on his own expence gather a ſtrength of ſix thouſand Men, and bring them over as ſoon as may be, to any place we ſhall appoint, either againſt the Imperialiſts, or any other of our Enemies, and maintain them on his own Charge, and do us all faithful and vigorous Service with them, till this great Affair be brought to a good iſſue; Provided we ſhall authorize this his Deſign with our Protection, and give him the under written Aſſiſtance: Therefore there being nothing dearer to Us than to make all vigorous reſiſtance to the common Enemies of Liberty, and having in high eſtimation the brave Undertakings of Generous Men, we not only would not reject, but have heartily embraced the nobleneſs of ſo good Reſolutions: We have therefore admitted, like as by the vigour of theſe Preſents, We admit the ſaid Lord Marqueſs in our Service, Armies, and Military Councils, on the following Conditions.

1. ‘Whenever he ſhall ſignifie to Us that he is ready to bring over his Forces, We ſhall aſſign him a place for his Landing, either to come and joyn with our Armies, or to make an Impreſſion elſewhere, as we ſhall think fit.

2. ‘If we appoint him to Land in any place, from whence he ſhall not come ſtraight to us, We ſhall for ſtrengthening his Forces ſend, to the place we ſhall aſſign for his Landing, four thouſand Foot out of our Armies, whom we ſhall furniſh with all Neceſſaries, and maintain on our Charges a whole year.

3. Be-

An. 1630.

3. 'Becauſe the ſaid Marqueſs thinks two thouſand Horſe are neceſſary for his Foot, for whoſe Levy and Pay he promiſes all Aſſiſtance; We ſhall therefore think of all ways and means for raiſing and maintaining theſe.

4. 'We not only give the ſaid Illuſtrious Marqueſs the Abſolute Command of this Army in our Abſence, but ſhall alſo join to him a Councellor, with whom he may conſult in all things, that ſo his Deliberations be more expedite and clear.

5. 'Whatever the Illuſtrious Lord Marqueſs ſhall take from the Enemy, the Lands and Territories ſhall belong to Us, but the Revenues and all the Emoluments ſhall go to him, and to the Relief of his Army; yet ſo as theſe Revenues ſhall be gathered decently and in order, without Depredations or Plunderings: Since Our Deſign is not to oppreſs thoſe who have been already enough preſſed, but rather to deliver them from the Oppreſſions of others, as much as by the Divine Aſſiſtance we can.

6. 'That the Marqueſs may more effectually perform what he hath bravely reſolved, and may ſooner make thoſe Warlike Inſtruments of his own Invention, on which he relies much in his Expedition, We ſhall not only (with the firſt occaſion) furniſh him with a hundred Ship-pounds of crude Iron, but ſhall alſo aſſign Hammers for working it according to his Deſign; of which Inſtruments he hath promiſed to leave a Model with Us, and We ſhall be careful that none of our Servants ſhall make uſe of them, before he hath firſt made trial of them himſelf.

7. 'We ſhall alſo furniſh him with three hundred and ſeventy Ship-Pounds of Iron Ball for his Guns, and two thouſand five hundred Pikes, and as many Muſquets.

8. 'Whenever the Marqueſs ſhall advertiſe us of his needing Gun-Pouder, we ſhall aſſign him Bills of Exchange in Holland for buying ſeventy two Ship-pounds of Gun-pouder.

9. 'If any other Kings or States ſhall concur with us, all they contribute ſhall be at our Deſpoſal: but if the Marqueſs his neceſſities require further aſſiſtance, We ſhall not abandon him, but faithfully aſſiſt him as much as our Affairs ſhall permit.

10. 'For all which the ſaid Illuſtirous Lord Marqueſs with all his Forces hath promiſed Fidelity to us, and ſhall be bound to it as well as our Men, and thoſe who receive our Pay are; for which both he, and all his Captains ſhall be particularly engaged.

'But becauſe there is to be a Treaty betwixt our Commiſſioners and the Imperialiſts at Dantzick; therefore if a Peace ſhall be there concluded, ſo that We ſhall not need the ſervice of the Marqueſs and his Army, he hath obliged himſelf to pay for the foreſaid Materials at their entire Value.

'All which things being thus concluded, and to be firmly obſerved by Us, We have ſubſcribed theſe Articles with our Hand, and commanded our Royal Seal to be put to them, at our Caſtle in Stockholm the laſt of May, Anno Dom. 1630.

The Marqueſs afterwards ſign'd the Counterpart of theſe Articles, differing only in ſome words of explanation.

Another remarkable Cauſe ſhortly after was heard in the Court of Star-chamber againſt Alexander Leighton, Doctor of Divinity. The Caſe was thus.

Dr. Leighton his Cauſe heard Jun 4th

An Information was formerly exhibited in the Star-chamber againſt Alexander Leighton a Scotſman born, and a Doctor of Divinity, came to be heard the 4th of June in the Court of Star-chamber, for framing a Book, entituled, An Appeal to the Parliament, or a Plea againſt Prelacy. Which he printed and publiſhed, during the ſitting of the laſt Parliament: and delivered it to diverſe Perſons in a way of preſenting juſt Complaints (as he gave out) to the then Commons Houſe of Parliament, 4 Carol. 1.

Information in the Star-Chamber againſt Dr. Leighton.

The Defendent was charged by the ſaid Information with framing, publiſhing, and diſperſing a Scandalous Book againſt King, Peers, and Prelates, wherein amongſt other things he ſets forth theſe falſe and ſeditious Aſſertions and Poſitions following.

1. ‘That we do not read of greater Perſecution and higher Indig-
‘nity done upon God's People in any Nation profeſſing the Goſpel,
‘than in this our Iſland, eſpecially ſince the death of Queen Elizabeth.

2. ‘He terms the Prelats of this Realm Men of Blood, and Enemies
‘to God and the State, and ſaith, That the maintaining and eſtabliſhing
‘of Biſhops within this Realm is a main and maſter-Sin eſtabliſhed by ‘Law, and that Miniſters ſhould have no Voices in Council Deliberative

3. ‘He avowed the Prelacy of our Church to be Antichriſtian and ‘Satanical, and terms the Biſhops, Ravens, and Magpies, that prey upon
‘the State.

4. ‘He terms the Canons of our Church, made Anno 1603, Non- ‘ſenſe Canons.

5. ‘He diſallowed and contemned the Ceremony of Kneeling in the ‘receiving of the Sacrament, alledging that the ſuggeſtion of falſe
‘fears to the King by the Prelacy, and the ſeeking of their own un‘lawful ſtanding, brought forth that received Spawn of the Beaſt, kneel-
‘ing at the receiving of the Sacrament.

6. ‘He affirms that the Prelats did corrupt the King, foreſtalling his ‘Judgment againſt God and Goodneſs, and moſt audaciouſly and ‘wickedly calleth his Majeſty's Royal Conſort, our gracious Queen, the ‘Daughter of Heth.

7. ‘He moſt impiouſly ſeems to commend him that committed the ‘barbarous and bloody Act of Murdering the late Duke of Buckingham,
‘and to encourage others to ſecond him in the like wicked and deſpe-
‘rate Attempt, to the deſtruction of others.

8. ‘He layeth a moſt ſeditious Scandal upon the King, State, and ‘Kingdom, wickedly affirming, that all that paſs by us ſpoil us, and we ‘ſpoil all that rely upon us. And amongſt other particulars, inſtanceth
‘the black pining death of the famiſhed Rochelers, to the number of ‘15000 in four months: by which Paſſages and wicked Poſitions and ‘Aſſertions, he did as much as in him lay, ſcandalize his Majeſties Sa- ‘cred Perſon, his Religious, Wiſe, and Juſt Government, the perſon of ‘his Royal Conſort the Queen, the Perſons of the Lords and Peers of ‘this Realm, eſpecially the Reverend Biſhops.

An. 1630.

9. ‘That in another place of the ſaid Book, endeavouring to ſlander not only his Majeſty's Sacred Perſon and Government, but alſo to detract from his Royal Power, in making Laws and Canons for Government Eccleſiaſtical; and in matters concerning the Church, he ſaith, That the Church hath her Laws from the Scripture, and that no King may make Laws in the Houſe of God: for if they might, then the Scripture might be imperfect.

10. ‘And further charged, that in another place of the ſaid Book, thinking to ſalve all with an expreſſion of his Sacred Majeſty, he hath theſe words following; What pity it is, and indelible diſhonour it will be to you the States Repreſentative, that ſo ingenuous and tractable a King ſhould be ſo monſtrouſly abus'd, to the undoing of himſelf and his Subjects?

Dr. Leighton's Anſwer.

The Defendent in his Anſwer confeſſed the writing of the Book, but with no ſuch ill intention, as by the ſaid Information is ſuggeſted; his end therein being only to Remonſtrate certain Grievances in Church and State, under which the People ſuffered, to the end the Parliament might take them into conſideration, and ſo give ſuch Redreſs, as might be for the Honour of the King, the Quiet of the People, and the Peace of the Church.

June 4.

At the hearing of the Cauſe, the Defendent's Anſwer was read at large, and the aforeſaid Particulars, charged in the Information as Seditious and Scandalous, were alſo read out of the Book. After which the Court proceeded to give Sentence, and did there declare, That it evidently appeared upon Proof, that the Defendent had printed five or ſix hundred of the ſaid Books, and that in their opinions he had committed a moſt odious and heinous Offence, deſerving the ſevereſt puniſhment the Court could inflict, for framing and publiſhing a Book ſo full of moſt peſtilent, deviliſh and dangerous Aſſertions, to the ſcandal of the King, Queen and Peers, eſpecially the Biſhops.

The two Lord Chief Juſtices being preſent, delivered their opinions, that they would without any ſcruple have proceeded againſt the Defendent as for Treaſon committed by him, if it had come before them; and other Lords, expreſly affirm'd, that it was his Majeſties exceeding great Mercy and Goodneſs, that he was brought to receive the Cenſure of this Court, and not queſtioned at another Tribunal as a Traitor.

And their Lordſhips by an Unanimous Conſent adjudged and decreed, that Dr. Leighton ſhould be committed to the Priſon of the Fleet, there to remain during Life, unleſs his Majeſty ſhall be graciouſly pleaſed to enlarge him; and he ſhall pay a Fine of 10000 l. to his Majeſty's uſe.

And in reſpect the Defendent hath heretofore entred into the Miniſtry, and this Court for the Reverence of that Calling, doth not uſe to inflict any Corporal or Ignominious Puniſhment upon any perſon, ſo long as they continue in Orders, The Court doth refer him to the High Commiſſion, there to be degraded of his Miniſtry; And that being done he ſhall then alſo for further puniſhment and example to others, be brought into the Pillory at Weſtminſter, (the Court ſitting) and there Whipped, and after his Whipping be ſet upon the Pillory for ſome convenient ſpace, and have one of his Ears cut off, and his Noſe ſlit, and be branded in the Face with a double SS, for a Sower of Sedition; dition; and ſhall then be carried to the Priſon of the Fleet, and at ſome other convenient time afterwards ſhall be carried into the Pillory at Cheapſide, upon a Market-day and be there likewiſe Whipt, and then be ſet upon the Pillory, and have his other Ear cut off, and from thence be carried back to the Priſon of the Fleet, there to remain during Life, unleſs his Majeſty ſhall be graciouſly pleaſed to inlarge him.

This Sentence being given toward the end of Trinity Term, and the Court not uſually ſitting after the Term, unleſs upon emergent occaſions, and it requiring ſome time in the Eccleſiaſtical Court, in order to the Degradation of the Defendent, it was Michaelmas Term following before any part of the Sentence could be put in Execution; but November the 4*th* he was accordingly degraded; and on Wedneſday November the 10*th* (being a Star-Chamber day) he was to have undergon the Execution of this Sentence; but the evening before he eſcaped out of the Fleet, where he had been kept a cloſe Priſoner, and Information hereof being given to the Lords of the Privy Council, they ordered this Hue and Cry to be Printed to retake him.

A Hue and Cry againſt Dr. Leighton, by Order of the Privy-Council.

VVHereas Alexander Leighton, a Scottiſh Man born, who was lately ſentenced by the Honourable Court of Star-Chamber, to pay a great Fine to his Majeſty, and to undergo Corporal Puniſhment, for writing, printing, and publiſhing a very Libellous and Scandalous Book againſt the KING, and his Government; hath this eleventh day of November eſcaped out of the Priſon of the Fleet, where he was a Priſoner: Theſe are in his Majeſties Name to Require and Command all Juſtices of Peace, Mayors, Sheriffs, Bayliffs, Cuſtomers, Searchers and Officers of the Ports, and all others his Majeſties loving Subjects, to uſe all diligence for the Apprehending of the ſaid Alexander Leighton; and being Apprehended, ſafely to keep him in Cuſtody, until his Majeſty ſhall receive Notice thereof, and ſhall give further direction concerning him. He is a Man of low Stature, fair Complexion; he hath a yellowiſh Beard, a high Forehead, between forty and fifty years of Age.

This Hue and Cry followed him into Bedfordſhire, where he was Apprehended, and brought again a Priſoner to the Fleet. Concerning whoſe Eſcape, and executing of the Sentence upon him afterwards, the Biſhop of London in his Diary on the Fourth of Novemb. makes this Memorial, Viz.

'Leighton was degraded at the High-Commiſſion, Tueſday the 9*th* of 'November; that night Leighton broke out of the Fleet, the Warden 'ſays he got or was helped over the Wall, and moreover profeſſed he 'knew not this till Wedneſday noon, he told it not me till Thurſday 'night. He was taken again in Bedfordſhire, and brought back to the 'Fleet, within a Fortnight. Friday, November the 16*th*, part of his 'Sentence was executed upon him in this manner, in the New Palace 'at Weſtminſter, in Term time:

1. 'He was ſeverely whipt before he was put in the Pillory.
2. 'Being ſet in the Pillory, he had one of his Ears cut off.

3. ‘One Side of his Noſe ſlit.

4. ‘Branded on one Cheek with a red hot Iron, with the Letters S. S. ſignifying a Stirrer up of Sedition, and afterwards carried back again Priſoner to the Fleet, to be kept in cloſe Cuſtody.

‘And on that day ſeven night, his Sores upon his Back, Ear, Noſe, and Face being not cured, he was whipt again at the Pillory in Cheap-ſide, and there had the Remainder of his Sentence executed upon him, by cutting off the other Ear, ſlitting the other Side of the Noſe, and branding the other Cheek.

The ſevere Puniſhment of this unfortunate Gentleman many people pitied, he being a Perſon well known both for Learning, and other Abilities; only his untempered Zeal (as his Country-men then gave out) prompted him to that Miſtake, for which the Neceſſity of Affairs at that time required this Severity from the hand of the Magiſtrate, more than perhaps the Crime would do in a following Juncture.

Afterwards thoſe who procured his Eſcape were taken and brought into the Star-Chamber, and proceeded againſt. Viz.

The Defendents practiſing with one Leighton, a notable Offender, to procure his Eſcape out of the Fleet; Levingſton put off his Cloak, Hat and Breeches, being all of a Grey colour, and Anderſon his Doublet, and Leighton put theirs on, and in that diſguiſe they all went out of the Fleet unſuſpected; but was afterwards taken again, and for theſe Offences, and reſpect had of their Penitency, they were only fined 500 l. apiece, and committed to the Fleet during the King's pleaſure.

A new Office of Receiver.

In Trinity Term this Year the King wrote Letters to all the Juſtices and Barons of the Exchequer, to conſider of Orders for the better execution of the new Office of Receiver and Collector of Fines and Forfeitures, granted to John Chamberlain his Majeſty's Phyſician, and to Edward Brown Eſquire, by King James, and confirmed by his Majeſty; and after hearing the Patent read before the Judges, and conſideration had thereof, they writ to the Lord Keeper and Lord Treaſurer as followeth.

Right Honourable,

The Judges Opinions concerning that Office.

YOur Lordſhips may be pleaſed to be informed, that we lately received his Majeſty's Gracious Letters of 13 May laſt, directed to us his Juſtices of either Bench, and Barons of the Exchequer, and to his Attorney-General, thereby requiring that whereas He had lately confirmed to John Chamberlain his Majeſty's Phyſician, and to Edward Brown Eſq. the Office of Receiver and Collector of Fines and Forfeitures, lately erected by his late Father of bleſſed memory, that we ſhould aſſemble our ſelves, and ſit down and publiſh ſuch and ſo many Orders for the execution of the ſaid Office, as to Law and Juſtice ſhould appertain, and ſhould be thought requiſit and neceſſary: according to which his Majeſties Command, We did aſſemble together, and upon hearing his Majeſty's Gracious Directions read, did apply our ſelves to the due performance of them. But ſo it is (may it pleaſe your Lordſhips) that upon conſideration taken by us of the ſaid Letters Patents to the end aforeſaid, we found it would prove a great difficulty for us to frame or deviſe Orders for the Execution of them, for that it doth appear to us that they are both againſt Law and his Majeſty's Profit: We therefore thought it our Duties according to our Oaths, to proceed no further in this buſineſs untill we had made his ſacred Majeſty acquainted herewith, and for that purpoſe we addreſſed our ſelves unto your Lordſhips, as unto Counſellors of great Truſt about his Majeſty, to preſent this our Intimation unto him, that by your Honours means we may know his Majeſty's further pleaſure herein; and for your Lordſhips better Information herein, we do hereby preſent unto your Lordſhips a ſhort and brief Note of the Exceſſes and Irregularities of the ſaid Letters Patents. The Exceptions were ſet down by way of Articles, and after all the names of the Juſtices and Barons ſubſcribed, there were two of them, one for either Lord, and directed to them on the outſide as Letters.

The King of Swedland declares the Cauſes of his expedition into Germany.

Shortly after the King of Sweden ſigned the Agreement with the Marqueſs of Hamilton. He thought fit before he croſſed the Baltick-Sea with a Fleet, to come in perſon with an Army into the Bounds of the Empire to declare himſelf under publick proteſtation, That he meant no Hoſtility unto the Empire, or Perſon of the Emperor: Declaring further that his coming was principally to Releive that Diſtreſſed Prince, his Couſin and Confederate the Duke of Stetin & Pomeren, who at that time, and for three years before, had bin injuriouſly oppreſſed by the Emperor; That he was not only engaged by ancient Alliances and Confederacies to aid the State of Pomerland (thus diſtreſſed, ſpoiled, taken and diſarmed,) but it concerned him alſo in point of State and good Policy, not to ſuffer the the Duke's Enemy to be Maſter of thoſe Coaſts of the Baltick-Sea; whence he might at pleaſure infeſt Sweden, and at his leaſure and opportunity invade it. That his League with the ſaid Duke was Defenſive only, and not for any Offenſive War againſt the Emperor.

Theſe Complaints, Aggrievances and Provocations of the King of Sweden were in fair and reſpectful manner, by Letters firſt preſented to the Emperor, and when that courſe brought no Redreſs, then for juſtification of his Proceedings, and by way of Apology, were the Circumſtances enlarged; and the whole printed for the World to judge. In which his Majeſty of Sweden farther Declared; That having been by his oppreſſed Neighbours and Confederates invited to their releif; He for a long time rather expected the Emperor's goodneſs towards the Subjects of Germany, than deſired to intereſt himſelf againſt him, with whom he ſo much wiſhed the continuation of Amity. That the Quarrel was firſt begun by the Emperor, who in the late Wars of Pruſſia, between Sweden and Poland, had prohibited the King of Sweden to make any Levies of Men, or proviſion of Victuals, or Ammunition in Germany; apparently granting the ſame liberty unto his enemy, the King of Poland. That the Emperor himſelf had heretofore ſent two ſeveral Armies under his own Enſigns into Pruſſia, in the aid of the Pole, his Enemy. The firſt in the year 1627, under the Command of the Duke of Holſtein, and the ſecond 1630, conducted by Arnheim, Marſhal of the Field unto Walleſtein. That his Courier riding Poſt with ‘his Packets, hath been ſtayed; His Letters unto Bethlem Gabor opened, and falſe Copies publiſhed of them; That his Embaſſadors had been ſlighted, not admitted to Audience, nor vouchſafed an anſwer; forbidden to ſtay in Germany. That upon the ſeeking of Peace by mediation of the King of Denmark, he obtained nothing but affronts and delays: and that writing to the College of Electors, then aſſembled at Lubeck 1629; he found in their Anſwers by their Letters the main point of the buſineſs not once toucht upon; and ſo no remedy that way neither.

‘That the poor Town of Stralſond; notwithſtanding it had no way wronged the Emperor, and had received Aſſeverations and Promiſes of protection from the Emperor, yet had it been block'd up by Walleſtein, Duke of Freidland; and the Iſland of Rugen, lying in the Sea, right againſt it, taken by the ſaid Freidland. That the Town and Iſland aforeſaid (his Confederates) had often complained unto him of this Injuſtice, and deſir'd his peaceful Mediation firſt, and his armed Aſſiſtance afterwards. That conſidering how things ſtood betwixt the Emperor and Himſelf; it much concern'd him not to ſuffer that Iſland and Town to be poſſeſſed by his Enemies, ſeeing they lie ſo commodiouſly for the Command of the Baltick-Sea, and ſo dangerouſly for infeſting the Coaſts of Sweden, which lie right againſt it: that the Emperor had actually moleſted thoſe Coaſts with Shipping, which he had newly gotten form Dantzick; and other Hans Towns thereabout had hindred the Swediſh Trade and Merchandizing upon the Coaſts of Germany.

The King of Sweden lands his Army upon the Coaſt of Pomeren, June 1630.

After the King had been ſeveral weeks with his Army at Sea, he landed about the midſt of the Month of June this year at a Dorp or Village in the Iſle of Uſedom, not far diſtant from Stralſond; and preſently intrenched himſelf. After him landed his Colonels and Commiſſioners with their reſpective Regiments. And upon the ſecond of July the Cannon Baggage, &c. landed; and two days after the whole Cavalry.

The 5th and 6th of July Embaſſadors came to the King from the Duke of Mecklenburg, Pomeren, and the Town of Stralſond; and the Imperial Forces were in a ſhort time driven out of that Iſland by Colonel Alexander Leſley. It was the 26th of July before the King tranſported his Army from that Iſland, to Stetin; being forc'd to bring them up the River Odor, and landed his Men within an Engliſh mile of that place; where the King drew his Forces in Battalia; and Grave Neeles, and the Lord Rea a Scottiſh-Man. Their Regiments had the Van-Guard in their march to Stetin, which being ſummoned to let the King of Sweden enter into the City, they then in the City ſeemingly deſir'd to ſtand neutral; but the Army drawing cloſe about the Town, they yeilded; And the King ſent Forces to beſiege Colbergen, a ſtrong Port Town upon the Baltick-Sea, and imployed his other Forces to take in Forts and Caſtles in Pomerania and Mecklenburgh, of which we ſhall ſpeak more particularly in the next Year 1631, when the Marqueſs of Hamilton did land his Army in Pomerania to aſſiſt the King of Sweden.

Stetin ſurrendred.

The King writeth to the Q. of Bohemia.

The King after the Arrival of Marqueſs Hamilton with the Conditions aforeſaid, wrote to his Siſter the Queen of Bohemia, to give her Aſſurance that he would haſten the Marqueſs of Hamilton with an Army of 6000 Men to aſſiſt the Swede in order to her Service; and alſo acquainted her, That he had good hopes to prevail with the Spaniard by a Treaty (then in hand) to get the Palatinate reſtored; at which the Queen was highly diſſatisfied, knowing by ſad Experience, how the Spaniard had abuſed and delayed her Father King James in former Treaties. Whereupon the King to pacifie her Paſſion againſt the Spaniard, wrote her this enſuing Letter.

The King's Letter to the Queen of Bohemia.

My only dear Siſter,

Having found that my laſt hath troubled you more than I could have imagined, (for I did ſuſpect that at the firſt it would a little ſtartle you, before you had well conſidered of it; but upon debate, I thought you would not have ſtill remained unſatisfied, as I ſee you are) I would ſtay no longer from giving you ſatisfaction (as I hope) in ſome things which without doubt you miſtake. But firſt give me leave to tell you, that it is impoſſible in this unfortunate Buſineſs of yours, either to give or take a Counſel abſolutely good; but whoſoever makes you believe otherwiſe, deceives you; ſo that the beſt counſel in this, being but the beſt Ill, muſt have many Objections againſt it; therefore I will not undertake a Diſputation, but clear thoſe things (if I ſpoil not a good Cauſe in the telling) which you apprehend to be moſt prejudicial unto you, which (as I take it) is, That if I make a Peace with Spain, it will both hinder the Aſſiſtance of our Friends, and lay my Arms aſleep for doing you Service. As for our Friends that can do us moſt good, (I mean France and the United Provinces) they cannot be further from doing you good than now they are: What the cauſe is I cannot ſay, but what it is not I can: for notwithſtanding my Treaty with Spain, I have preſſed them both, the one for making a League for the Palatinate, and Liberty of Germany: that that is made to that ſame purpoſe (which indeed was the true intent of it) they both deny, though in a diverſe faſhion; ſo that the Treaty of Spain is not the cauſe. As for Sweden, I confeſs he is to be heartned and uſed as much as may be; but I will aſſure you, I ſhall be the better able by a Peace with Spain, to help and hearten him. Now for me, I am ſo far from forgetting or leaving your Intereſts in my peaceable diſpoſition; That Spain not only promiſeth as much as I can ask for his Part for your entire Reſtitution, but confeſſeth, That if his Performance anſwereth not his Words, I have a juſt Cauſe to renew the War upon him; ſo that when I have opportunity, I ſhall not want a juſt Quarrel even with Spain by his own Confeſſion; and in the mean time, though the Peace be made, I ſhall not reſt, but do what lies in me to engage my Friends in an Offenſive and Defenſive League for the Palatinate and Liberty of Germany. Laſtly, Whatſoever may be informed you, or your Husband, the Peace of Spain is ſo far from being concluded, that as yet I have not ſeen a Draught of the Articles; and I earneſtly intreat you to believe, that what I ſhall do in this, ſhall be chiefly to do you the beſt ſervice that may be; and as I ſhall proceed in this, you ſhall have a true account, as on my Credit you have had hitherto; aſſuring you that howſoever change of Affairs may alter Councils, my Actions ſhall ever prove me to be

Your Loving Brother to ſerve you,

Charles R.

The King grants the Marqueſs the Cuſtom of the Wines in Scotland.

And to enable the Marqueſs to raiſe his Men, and tranſport them with all Military Proviſions and things neceſſary, the King granted unto him a Leaſe of the Cuſtoms of Wines in Scotland for ſixteen Years; upon which Security the Marqueſs and his Friends raiſed as much Mony as carried on the Deſign.

The Marqueſs haſtens to Scotland to raiſe his Men.

Hereupon the Marqueſs haſtens into Scotland, in order to the chuſing of his Officers, and raiſing of his Men; and in the firſt place, fixed on the Lord Rea a Scotiſh Lord, a Perſon of great reputation for a good Souldier, who chearfully accepted of that Employment under the Marqueſs for that Expedition, notwithſtanding that he had then conſiderable Commands in the Sweed's Army. The Marqueſs employed the ſaid Lord Rea, together with David Ramſey, into Holland to endeavour to get ſome good Officers there, and to diſpoſe the States of the United Provinces for the King of Sweeden's Service. But that State perceiving that the King of Great Britain did not publickly raiſe thoſe Men that were to go under the Marqueſs, but in a private manner, refuſed to give any Aſſiſtance, till his Majeſty of England did more formally and publickly declare himſelf.

The Marqueſs intends to return to Court.

After the Marqueſs had levied his Men in Scotland, his Officers were employed to train the Souldiers that were levied, and he prepared himſelf againſt the Spring in the next Year, to return to the Court in England to receive the King's Order for the Imbarquing of his Men, and to underſtand what Levies were made in England whilſt he was in Scotland; that the Souldiers levied in both Kingdoms, might meet at a certain Rendezvous, which was deſigned to be at Yarmouth, in order to their Tranſportation.

The Lord Ochiltry at Court when the Marqueſs of Hamilton arrived there.

Towards the end of this Year, the Marqueſs of Hamilton arrived at the Court of England, where was at that time Mackay Lord Ochiltry, a Lord in Scotland, by name Stuart, and who once bore the Name of the Earl of Arran, when by a Parliament which contracted a by-Name in that Kingdom, the Hamiltons were attainted of Treaſon, but afterwards both Blood, Honour, and Eſtate were reſtored to them. This Lord had no kindneſs for the Marqueſs of Hamilton, but nouriſhed a Diſcourſe, which Ramſey let fall to the Lord Rea when they were beyond Seas; and prevailed ſo far with the Lord Weſton, then Lord High Treaſurer of England, as to impart the Buſineſs to the King, being a Treaſon of an high nature (if true) to this effect; That he raiſed this new Army, with deſign when he was at the head of them, to ſet himſelf up as King of Scotland. Much credit was given to this Deſign by the Lord Weſton Lord High Treaſurer, who endeavoured to perſuade the King not to permit the Marqueſs to come near his Sacred Perſon, and in no kind to have the priviledg to lie in his Majeſties Bed-Chamber, leaſt his Majeſties Life were hazarded thereby.

The Marqueſs of Hamilton accuſed of high Treaſon.

The Lord Weſton preſſed this home unto the King, but his Majeſty kept his thoughts private to himſelf; and having a great Affection to Hamilton, as ſoon as he came into his Preſence, imbraced him with great kindneſs, and diſcovered to him what he was accuſed of, but ſaid, I do not believe it; and that the World may know I have a confidence in your Loyalty, you ſhall lie in my Bed-Chamber this Night. But the Marqueſs beſeeched his Majeſty to excuſe him, till he had received a Trial, and was cleared of the Treaſon he was accuſed of; but Notwithſtanding the King commanded him to lie in his Bedchamber.

But the King would receive no denial, yet told him he would put the buſineſs into a way of Examination; but afterwards when the Examination was taken, it was found that the one affirmed the Accuſation to be true, and the other as poſitively denied it, and that there appeared not then any concurrent proof of the ſame.

A report of theſe Examinations was afterwards made to the King's Majeſty, who was graciouſly pleaſed to refer the whole matter to a Tryal before the Lord High Conſtable, and Earl Marſhal, in the Court of Honour, of which the Reader will have a full account towards the end of the next Year in its proper time and place. In the mean time the King cauſed Rea and Ramſey to be ſecured in order to that Trial: ſo the Marqueſs proceeded in making proviſions for the imbarquing of his Army, and ordering thoſe Forces in Scotland to be in readineſs to be ſhipped, to come to the place of Randezvous when they received Orders.

At this time there were great Affairs tranſacted in the Parliament (or Diet) at Ratisbone in Germany, of which take a brief Account; whither were ſent an Ambaſſador from the King of Great Britain, as alſo another from the Elector Palatine, (accompanying the Engliſh Ambaſſador) The Paſſages and Circumſtances attending that Imperial Diet were as followeth.

The Dyet at Ratisbon.

The Emperors inclination for a Peace.

At the time of the opening of this Diet all parties were weary of the War, and the Emperor himſelf had enough of it; for the War had continued from the year 1618 (in which year the great Blazing-Star appeared) unto that time in a moſt bloody and cruel manner, inſomuch as utter deſolation was brought upon one of the moſt flouriſhing Countries in the World, which the Emperor wiſely conſidered with himſelf, that if thoſe heavy Impoſitions ſhould be continued to maintain a ſtanding Army, and thoſe Violences, Injuries and Outrages ſhould be again committed by the Souldiers of the Empire under Walleſtein, which had ſo diſguſted the People againſt the Emperor; and if other Wars ſhould thereupon enſue, the Chances whereof might happen to be uncertain, and the event in the end fatal. And further, that if at this Diet things unreaſonable ſhould be propoſed unto him by the Confederate Proteſtant Princes, if he did refuſe their deſires upon juſt grounds, he ſhould thereby oblige the Confederate Princes of the Catholick League the more firmly to aſſiſt him, then if he ſhould refuſe the calling of a Parliament (or Diet) and act upon his Imperial Authority.

The Princes Catholick for for a Diet.

And diſſatisfied with Bavaria to covet the Palſgraves Patrimony.

The Princes of the Catholic League, as alſo the Catholick party, ſeemed very deſirous of this Diet, having, as well as the Proteſtants, ſhared in the inſolencies of the Imperial Souldiers under Wallenſtein, and of the charges of the War; And the more moderate ſort of Catholicks were much diſſatisfied at the Covetouſneſs of the Duke of Bavaria, for his preſſing the Emperor ſo hard to confer the Electorſhip and Patrimony of the Prince Elector Palatine upon him, as a reward for his Services, they conceiving this action of diſinheriting a Prince of ſo great Intereſt and Alliance, would at one time or other, raiſe up friends that might diſturb the Peace of the Empire; wherefore they wiſhed the Emperor would rather confiſcate the Eſtate for life, as a puniſhment for the Father's Offence, than to diſinherit the Children, who were innocent of their Father's forward and raſh undertaking, as they termed it.

Thoſe of the Catholick League expreſſed themſelves as to the ſaid Diet, That though they did much deſire it, yet their hopes were that the Emperor would never conſent to let the Proteſtants go away without reſtitution of the Church Lands and Goods, which they pretended the Proteſtants held from them.

The Princes Proteſtant long for a Peace.

The Princes of the Union and Proteſtant Party, were no leſs thirſty of Peace, having undergone the greateſt of all hardſhips, being moſt of all overlaid with heavy Impoſitions, and with the Billeting of Souldiers of the Catholick League, and were deſirous that there might be an abſolute Oblivion of all things by-paſt, and the Empire ſettled in a firm Peace. Great Joy therefore was throughout the Empire, expecting that there would be an end of further War, and a firm and ſettled Peace concluded at this Diet. But there wanted not thoſe, who did inſinuate unto his Imperial Majeſty what was fit for him to inſiſt upon at the meeting of the Diet, from which it was not fit for the Emperor to recede; Amongſt which one was,

Private Reſolves of the Emperor, from what things not to recede.

1. That he ſhould in no wiſe conſent to a ſetlement until the Proſtants ſhould reſtore the Church-Lands and Goods unto the Catholick party.

2. Not to diminiſh his Army, but in a ſmall proportion, that he might keep up his Power by force, and a ſtrong hand, leſt the Depoſed Princes, and others, ſhould upon any opportunity of advantage, revenge themſelves upon the Emperor.

3. And therefore reſolved to keep up his Army, and not to reſtore the Prince Elector Palatine to his Dignity and Patrimony.

Notwithſtanding all oppoſition, the Emperor met at the Diet; he repreſented unto the Princes then aſſembled, that he was not the cauſe of ſo cruel a War as had been, nor would be a hinderer of the Peace, imputing all the miſchief that fell out upon the War, unto the Palſgrave, Count Mansfeldt, Brunſwick, and the King of Denmark, and that it was high time to think of a firm and ſettled Peace: But as to the Palſgrave, he propoſed to the Diet to paſs an Act, that he ſhould continue a Baniſhed Man, without all hopes of returning; and that they would never vouchſafe to entertain Peace or Amity with him.

The Emperors propoſal at the Diet as to the Palſgrave.

That the French were concluding a League with the King of Sweden; and though there were cauſes of Enmity between Him, the Emperor, and the King of Swedeland, yet if the King of Sweden would not condeſcend unto the Imperial Ambaſſadors and the King of Denmark's Mediation for a Peace, he was to be threatned with the Power of the Roman Empire, and to be chaſtiſed by Force of Arms.

Laſtly; His Imperial Majeſty propoſed that the Princes would conſult to provide Money for maintaining a ſtanding Army; for reſtoring of Martial Diſcipline, and of the manner of laying and levying Impoſitions.

In Anſwer to the Propoſals of the Emperor, the Princes Electors laid open the general Grievances and Miſeries of the Empire, the Outrages committed in the War, and exceſſiveneſs of the Impoſitions; And as the Emperor laid the fault upon the Palſgrave, the Electors laid the fault of all the miſery that had happened, upon the new Duke of Mecklenburgh (Walleſtein) General of the Emperors great Army, to whom his Imperial Majeſty had given ſuch a large Commiſſion, without the conſent of the Princes of the Empire (as never before him any Man had) That the Impoſitions which by the Laws of the Empire had wont to be aſſeſſed by the joint conſent of the Princes, had at the pleaſure of the ſaid Duke of Mecklenburgh bin impoſed, and moſt rigorouſly exacted; Inſomuch that the Elector of Brandenburgh had in a few years bin forced to contribute about Twenty Millions of Florins. The Duke of Pomerland complained, that Ten millions was paid out of his Principality of Stetin, all in one Year only; beſides other Charges and Expences with the Rabble of the Army.

The like complaint came from other Princes. In concluſion, the ſaid Electors did more particularly fall upon the ſaid Duke of Mecklenburgh, preſſing the Emperor to caſheir him, and to diſband his Army, and to have Peace made with the French King, and the Princes of Italy, and with the King of Swedland alſo.

The Complaints both of the Proteſtant and Catholick Princes were ſo many and very great againſt Wallenſtein, and the Inſolencies of his Souldiers in their Quarters, and of his Commiſſaries in their bold levying of Mony upon the Empire, as that the Emperor had nothing to ſay for him, but conſented to their Deſires, that his Command ſhould be taken from him. And two Barons of the Empire were ſent to him, with the Propoſals of the Diet preſented to the Emperor, and the Emperor's Reſolution thereupon, that he ſhould deliver up his Commiſſion.

The Emperor conſents.

All Mens Minds were full of expectation what the event of this Meſſage to a General ſo Potent, and an Army ſo Rude, ſhould produce: But contrary to all imagination, Wallenſtein complied with the Emperor's Command, left his Army and went to Nimmegen, where he remained as a private Perſon.

Wallenſtein lays down his Commiſſion.

The Electors having prevailed as to his Removal, propoſed alſo unto his Imperial Majeſty further to declare his purpoſe, that no War ſhould be made upon any without the conſent of the Princes, and that no Impoſition ſhould hereafter be levied at the pleaſure of the General of the Army.

The Electors having obtained a ſafe Conduct of the Emperor for Ruſdorfe, Ambaſſador of Frederick Prince Elector Palatine, he came to the Diet, in the Company of Sir Robert Anſtruther the King of Great Britain's Ambaſſadour, who much preſſed for Audience, about the time that News came how the King of Swedland was active in Pomerland, which made moſt of Opinion his Landing would contribute to get Reſtitution of the ſaid Elector Palatine to his Dignity and Patrimony. And Audience being granted to the English Ambaſſadour, he thus delivered his Errand.

Sir Robert Anſtruther.

‘That nothing could affect (his Maſter) the King of Great Bri- ‘tain more, than the conſideration of the daily Calamities undergone
‘by his Brother-in-Law the Prince Elector, his Wife and Children.
‘That no Place was more expedient to Treat of Peace, Reconciliati-
‘on, and Re-eſtabliſhment than in the Diet; therefore he made it his ‘ardent Requeſt to his Imperial Majeſty, That having regard to the ‘many Interceſſions of his late Father, and other Kings and Princes,
‘he would remit the Diſpleaſure conceived againſt his Brother, and ‘recal the Proſcription iſſued out againſt him.

The English Ambaſſador gets Audience.

‘True it was, his Brother had offended, and was inexcuſably guilty, unleſs the raſhneſs and precipitation of Youth might ſomewhat plead for him; but others had bin as culpable, whom yet his Imperial Majeſty had received into Favour.

‘And would he be pleaſed to extend to him the ſame Clemency, it would oblige his Maſter to demonſtrations of the greateſt Gratitude, and raiſe a glorious Emulation in others, to imitate ſo excellent a Pattern.

‘That the Palſgrave would entertain this Favour, with an Heart ſo firmly devoted to his Service, ſo as all the Intentions of his Spirit ſhould be diſpoſed to Compenſation and Reparation of his former Miſcarriage.

‘That his Majeſty held nothing ſo dear as the Affection of his Imperial Majeſty, and eſtabliſhment of a durable Peace between them; And as upon all Occaſions he hath been forward to repreſent himſelf ſolicitous for it, ſo at this time he was ready to give more ample Teſtimony, if his Imperial Majeſty was pleaſed to incline to a Treaty.

All this being fair and full of reſpect, gained Civilities to the Ambaſſadors: but it was anſwered,

The Emperors Anſwer.

‘That the preſent Affairs of Germany, which occaſion'd the Diet, were ſo important, as not to admit of any Forreign Debate; and yet upon opportunity and leiſure, the King of Great Britain ſhould receive ſuch ſatisfaction as would be agreeable to their Honour, and Confidence his Majeſty had in him.

Treaty of Peace broke off between the Emperor and the King of Swedland.

Preſently after this Audience of the King of England's Ambaſſador, more particular News was brought, That the Imperial Ambaſſadour was returned from the King of Sweden without any hopes of Peace, and that the King of Swedland had in Pomerland made himſelf Maſter of Stetin, and put the Imperial Forces to flight.

Now the Catholic Princes appear for War.

And now the Catholick Princes, who before ſeemed very deſirous of Peace, (fearing ſome private Conjunction was made with the King of Swedland by other Princes) diſpoſed the Emperor to proſecute the War, and lay Impoſitions proportionably upon them of the Catholic League.

A deſign to make Ferdinando the Emperor's Son, King of the Romans.

It is to be obſerved, that during all the time of the Diet, Cæſar made no other Propoſitions than what he did at the opening thereof; Yet underhand it was ſuggeſted by thoſe near the Emperor, what Miſeries might befal the Empire in caſe of an Inter-Regnum, magnifying Ferdinando King of Hungaria Son of the Emperor, and how acceptable it would be to the Empire, if at this Diet he was choſen King of the Romans, which is as much as Heir apparent to the Empire. The Proteſtant Electors having no inclination thereunto, in anſwer to thoſe which made this Propoſal, much commended the Emperor for his care of the Common-Wealth, but that it was contrary to the Laws of the Empire at this time to conſent thereunto.

This being not mentioned as a particular Cauſe for the calling of this Diet to create Ferdinando King of the Romans: And alſo for that by the Laws of the Empire, Franckfort is the place appointed for the

Some of the Princes Eſtates declared to be confiſcated.

Election of the King of the Romans; and thus they excuſed the Matter, but it was reſented by Cæſar; and from that time he proceeds with ſeverity as to the Church Lands, and decreed at this Diet, 'That 'thoſe Gentlemen of the Upper and Lower Palatinate, Frankenholm, 'and other Countries, who had born Arms under Count Mansfield, 'Duke of Brunſwick, and others, that their Eſtates ſhould be con'demned as confiſcated. And with the Profits thereof, the Emperor did gratify his Privy Council and others with Penſions for a reward of their Services.

The Proteſtant Princes Proteſtation againſt it.

The Proteſtant Electors, and other Princes, proteſted againſt theſe Proceedings of the Emperor, claiming thoſe Gentlemen to be within their Dominions, and that the Forfeitures of thoſe Fees and Eſtates which Cæſar had now confiſcated into his own Coffers, did by the favour of former Emperors, and long continued Cuſtoms, belong to the ſaid Princes. Urging further to the Emperor in favour of thoſe Perſons (whoſe Eſtates he had confiſcated) the Example of other Princes, who even upon the like occaſion did paſs by many Crimes, to procure a ſetled Peace in their Dominions; and amongſt others inſtanced in Coſmo de Medicis Duke of Florence, a moſt wiſe Prince, who in caſes of Diſturbance in his Dominions, always left the Eſtate of ſuch as were Attainted, unto their Children, or next Kindred, after the Death of the Offender.

The Emperor will not hearken to the Proteſtant Princes

Yet the Emperor hearkned not thereunto, but declar'd, That he could not in Honour and Juſtice but make remarkable Examples of thoſe that had born Arms againſt him, that it might be a Terror to others for the future.

And as for the Church Lands, he had already deſign'd with himſelf that they ſhould be reſtored to the Catholicks, and publiſhed the ſame by Proclamation, and that he would not recede from what he had done. And then proceeded to a Decree and Sentence againſt the Duke of Wortenburgh, the Marqueſs of Brandenburgh, the Count of Hohen and other Princes, who were by the Decree commanded to quit Church Lands and Goods, which for eighty Years they had enjoyed, by virtue of the Agreement they made at Paſſaw, Anno 1555.

Decrees that they ſhall quit the Church-Lands.

In which Decree it was declared, That the Violaters of that Agreement of Paſſaw, ſhould be adjudged as Enemies to the Empire.

The Jeſuits ſolicit againſt the Complyance.

Notwithſtanding this proceeding of the Emperor, the Catholick Princes (to all outward appearance) did very earneſtly deſire to compoſe the Buſineſs of the Church Lands, but were importuned by the Jeſuits againſt any Compliance (by whoſe means was likewiſe a rigid courſe taken at this Diet) for the Reformation of Proteſtant Churches and Schools, and for the forbidding of the Auguſtine Confeſſion to be exerciſed by the Lutherans.

The Diet broke up.

On the third of November the Diet broke up, leaving Matters in a far worſe condition than it found them, for that Men now perceived their very Hopes to be taken away, as their Liberty and Goods had bin before.

Nevertheleſs the Catholick Princes prevailed for a Diet at Frankfort.

The Catholick Princes before the Diet broke up (being ſtill inclinable to a compoſure of the Buſineſs of Church-Lands) did prevail with the Emperor, that the Diet might meet again at Frankfort upon the Main, in Auguſt following, for ending thoſe Differences.

And the Proteſtant Princes for a Diet at Lipſwick.

In the mean time the Proteſtant Princes entered into a Conſultation for their own Safety, plainly ſeeing the Jeſuitical Party too prevalent with with the Emperor; and they agreed upon a Letter to be written by the Duke of Saxony to his Imperial Majeſty, taking notice that there had bin a Conference between the Proteſtant and the Catholick Princes at the former Diet concerning Church-Lands, and that the further Treaty thereupon was referred unto a Diet to be held at Frankfort in Auguſt following, and therefore beſought his Majeſty to give liberty to the Proteſtant Princes to hold a Diet by themſelves in ſome convenient Place, that ſo by their united Council, they might be provided with an Anſwer to the Catholick Princes, at their meeting in the Diet at Frankfort, concerning the ſaid Church-Lands. The Addreſs to the Emperor was recommended, with the Mediation of the Elector of Mentz and Bavaria; and the Emperor agreed to what was deſired, and Lipſwick was the place appointed for the meeting of the Proteſtant Princes, and the time was Feb. 8. then next following.

Duke of Saxony opens the occaſion of the Meeting.

At the Time and Place appointed, all the Proteſtant Princes in Germany met in Perſon, or by their Deputies, but moſt in Perſon; and the Duke of Saxony laid open the occaſion of their meeting.

1. 'How the Church might be with a good Conſcience maintained in her ancient Liberty and happy Eſtate.

2. 'How to keep their Obedience to the Emperor, and yet preſerve the ancient Conſtitution and Peace of the Empire.

3. 'How to maintain correſpondency with the Catholick Princes in order to the Peace of the Empire.

4. 'What to anſwer for themſelves, both in general and particular, as well concerning the mainteriance of the Reformed Religion, as to the Emperor's Edict concerning Church-Lands, when they ſhould come to meet at the Diet at Frankfort.

Proteſting withal, That he would be ready to adventure Life and Goods in that Cauſe, and deſiring every Man to give his counſel freely in ſuch manner, as they might be able to render a fair account of it to his Imperial Majeſty. And after ſome time of Debate, with one joint Conſent, they did humbly complain to the Emperor what their Grievances were, and repreſented what would prove Remedies, and ſent an Expreſs therewith to his Majeſty, and are reducible to theſe Heads.

Grievances laid open to the Emperor.

1. 'That the Golden Bull, or Magna Charta, and Conſtitution of the Empire might be firmly obſerved, which hath been violated by the Emperor's late Edict for the Reſtitution of Church-Lands, and through his Endeavours, to root out the Proteſtant Religion, which hath bin the main Cauſe of the late miſerable Wars and Troubles.

2. 'They complained of particular Injuſtice done to particular Princes and Cities, by the violent taking away of the Church-Lands, as the Duke of Wurtenburgh, the Duke of Brunſwick, the Prince of Anhault, and others.

3. 'And that ſome were hindered in the Exerciſe of their Religion, as Auguſtus and Frederick, Princes Palatine, and others; and that forty eight had their Eſtates confiſcated, as the Lady Electrix Palatine, and her Son Lewis Prince Palatine, the one being the Mother, the other the Brother of the King of Bohemia, and the Duke of Mecklingburgh, ‘ lingburgh, &c. for whom the whole College of Electors had interceded in the laſt Diet, but prevailed not.

4. ‘ A complaint of the violent altering of the Feods of their Lands and Lordſhips, into which the Imperial Commiſſaries had by Force and Arms entered, changing the Tenure of the Tenants, and altering the Religion.

5. ‘ That their Lands have bin given to Souldiers, as if they had bin conquered.

6. ‘ That treble more Contributions have bin raiſed againſt no Enemy, than ever were when the Turks were in Germany; with many other Particulars. Concluding, That all this is contrary to the Oath of the Emperor, and unto the Laws of the Empire, the Privileges of the Princes, and againſt the Honour and Safety of the Empire; of which the ſeveral Electors and Princes had complained, and which by them were proteſted againſt in the late Diet at Ratisbone.

‘ Wherefore they now humbly Petition his Imperial Majeſty to be relieved; proteſting otherwiſe they are not able to endure the Burthen, but ſhall be inforced to defend their Perſons, Conſciences, Eſtates, and Subjects; reſolving notwithſtanding to continue their due Loyalty and Obedience to his Imperial Majeſty; yet in the mean time to prepare for a War, in caſe the Matters complained of by them ſhould not be redreſſed. This bore Date at Lipſwick, March 18. 1631. and the Diet broke up upon Palm-Sunday following.

Communicated to the Catholick Electors.

The ſubſtance of what they writ to the Emperor, they ſent unto the three Catholick Electors, informing them, That War would undo all, that the Inſolencies of the Commiſſaries and Souldiers were not to be endured.

The Emperor puts forth his Imperial Ban.

The Emperor not ſatisfied with their Addreſs, and underſtanding their Reſolution to levy Forces, (and hearing withal that the King of Swedland had advanced already through Pomerland in a victorious manner) put forth his Imperial Ban againſt the Lipſwick Legar, peremptorily forbidding any place of the Empire to grant, either Relief, Paſſage, or Quarter unto any of their Forces; and commanding every Man to deſtroy, kill, and perſecute, the Lipſwick Legar as Enemies; withal tenders Pardon to as many as ſhould come in; and forbidding all the Subjects of thoſe Princes, upon pain of Death, either to contribute to their Levies, or to march under their Enſigns, promiſing the freedom of Conſcience and Eſtates to all that ſhould thus obey him, and turn both their Mony and their Perſons towards the advancement of the Imperial Eſtate.

The Proteſtant League was now noiſed abroad, and another meeting at the latter end of May at Lipſwick was appointed. Tilly advances with his Army, and ſends Papenheim to reduce Magdenburgh; of which more hereafter. But let us now return to England.

The Biſhop of London had the honour, as Dean of the Chappel (my Lord's Grace of Canterbury being infirm) to Chriſten Prince Charles at St. James's. His Godfathers were the King of France, and the Prince Elector, repreſented by the Duke of Lenox, and the Marqueſs of Hamilton; The Godmother was the Queen-Mother of France, and her Perſon repreſented by the Dutcheſs of Richmond.

The

An. 1630.

The King ſtanding in need of a further ſupply, the buſineſs of Knighthood was retaken into conſideration, and with care and diligence ſet on foot, being grounded upon an old Statute entituled Statutum de Militibus, which Statute tho it had long ſlept, and was very ancient, yet was now put in execution as a Prerogative Statute, which occaſioned many Pleas in the Exchequer, but to countenance the ſame a Proclamation was iſſued forth to this effect.

July 6. 1630.

Knighthood.

Commiſſion to compound with ſuch perſons as did not appear to take the Order of Knighthood on them at the King's Coronation.

'That whereas the King having formerly ſent forth Writs to ſeveral Sheriffs of the ſeveral Counties for the ſummoning of all that had fourty pound Land or Rent by the year, to appear at the day of his Coronation, and prepare themſelves to receive the Order of Knighthood, did now award a Commiſſion to certain Lords and others of his Privy Council, to treat and compound with all thoſe who then made default, as well for their Fines and their Contempt, as for their reſpite to take that Order upon them. Whereupon multitudes were ſummoned to give attendance at the Council-Chamber at Whitehal.

The Names of the Commiſſioners of the Privy-Council touching the Order of Knighthood were theſe.

Lord Steward.
Lord Chamberlain.
Earl of Suffolk.
Earl of Dorſet.
Earl of Salisbury.
Earl of Exeter.

Lord Wentworth.
Mr. Vice Chamberlain.
Mr. Secretary Cooke.
Mr. Chancellor of the Exchequer.

Commiſſions directed into the ſeveral Counties.

Proportions for Compoſitions.

Likewiſe ſeveral Commiſſions were awarded into the ſeveral Counties, giving power of compounding with all perſons, except the Nobility, who were ordered to compound before the Lords of the Council. The Commiſſioners had this main Inſtruction, "To take no leſs "than after the rate of thrice and half as much as the Perſons compounding were found rated in the Subſidy.

Pleas put in the Exchequer againſt Knighthood.

But there were many in all parts that neglected to appear, or refuſed to Compound. Theſe were ſummoned by Meſſengers to the Council-Table, and were there told of ſevere proceedings in caſe of obſtinacy. And divers put in their Pleas into the Court of Exchequer to be diſcharged from theſe Fines. But the Commiſſioners in the Country were to inform themſelves of the true ſtate of the Livelyhood of each perſon, and to admit them to Compoſition in caſe they deſired it, otherwiſe to let them know that upon return of Certificates, they muſt expect to undergo a legal Tryal in the Exchequer.

Sheriffs neglect to return the Names of perſons.

And upon conſideration of the prejudice done to this Service, by reaſon of the partial and negligent Returns made by the Sheriffs in moſt Counties, it was ordered, That Mr. Attorney General ſhould proceed by Information in the Exchequer againſt ſuch of the Sheriffs, as ſhould appear to have been moſt negligent.

The Order of Summons from the Privy-Council, who were Commiſſioners, and directed to certain Noblemen to appear in order to a Compoſition, was to this purpoſe.

The Order of Summons for the Noblemen to compound.

‘WHereas his Majeſty hath already ſent divers Commiſſions into ſeveral Counties of this Realm, for compounding with ſuch as had not taken Knighthood at his Coronation, thereupon a great part of the Gentry of this Realm, and others of ability have made their ſeveral Compoſitions: but it was his Majeſty's Pleaſure, that ſuch of the Nobility as had not taken the Order of Knighthood at his Coronation, ſhould be treated with and compounded with by us the Lords and others of his Majeſty's Privy Council: We therefore by his Majeſty's Command, do hereby ſignifie and give notice to your Lordſhips, that we have appointed the firſt day of the next Term at nine of the Clock in the morning, to ſit upon the ſaid Commiſſion for compounding with you in the Council-Chamber: wherefore we require your Lordſhips, or ſome authorized from you to that end, to attend Us. A Warrant of Summons againſt Refuſers to compound in the Country

‘WHereas his Majeſty is given to underſtand, that you whoſe names are here under written, dwelling in the County of , have either neglected to appear, or appearing, refuſed to compound with his Majeſty's Commiſſioners appointed to treat with you in that behalf, for your not attendance at his Majeſty's Coronation, to receive the Order of Knighthood, according to the Law, you being all, as we are informed, Men of good ability; at which his Majeſty doth much marvel, conſidering that you cannot be ignorant how legal this Demand is, and conſequently how much the ſaid Commiſſion is in your favour, that nevertheleſs you ſhould refuſe to accept of his Majeſty's Grace therein: His Majeſty notwithſtanding out of his accuſtomed Goodneſs, is rather willing that thoſe who peradventure more out of miſtake, or ill example of others, than out of their own wilful oppoſition to his Majeſty's Service, have been herein miſled, ſhould be reduced to conformity by fair means, and with leaſt charge or trouble to them, than by any compulſory courſe of Law, which his Majeſty in all caſes between him and his People doth in their favour deſire to avoid as his laſt Reſort: We are therefore in his Majeſty's Name, and by his expreſs Command, hereby to ſignifie unto you, that his Majeſty expects and requires you ſhould (accordingly within ten days next after notice hereof) make your repair unto us at Whitehal, to the end that in purſuance of his Majeſty's pleaſure, we may treat with you concerning your ſaid Compoſition, before any further or more compulſary proceedings be had againſt you.

The like Warrant was directed to divers Knights and Gentlemen dwelling in other Counties.

At this time there happened a great Riot in Fleetſtreet; and for the better diſcovery and apprehenſion of thoſe Malefactors, who were Actors in the late inſolent Riots and Murthers committed in Fleetſtreet, London, upon Friday the 10th day of July, a Proclamation to this Effect was publiſhed.

A Riot in Fleetſtreet.

‘WHereas upon Friday, the tenth day of this inſtant Month, upon the occaſion of an Arreſt then made by the Sheriffs Officers of the City of London, divers inſolent Aſſaults and Tumults were made and raiſed upon the Conſtables and Watches of the City; whereupon much Blood was ſhed, and barbarous Murthers of divers of the King's Subjects have inſued, and thoſe Inſolencies ſo long continued, and at the laſt grown to ſuch height, that there was an open and violent reſiſtance and oppoſition made againſt the Lord Mayor of London, and Sheriffs of the City, aſſiſted with ſome of the Trained Bands, neceſſarily drawn forth to ſuppreſs thoſe Outrages, which were committed rather in a Rebellious than a Riotous manner. His Majeſty having taken thoſe Affronts to Juſtice, and to his publick Officers and Miniſters, into his Princely conſideration, and having already given a ſtrict charge and command, for the due Examination of thoſe ſo bold and audacious Attempts, and finding by the return of thoſe, whoſe pains have been imployed in that Service, that very few of the principal Actors can by their induſtry be yet taken or diſcovered; and his Majeſty being in a caſe of this extraordinary Quality and Conſequence, reſolved to proceed according to the ſtrict rules of Juſtice, againſt all thoſe who ſhall be found to be the Offenders, that by their examples, others may hereafter be warned not to dare to run into the like: Wherefore the King doth will and command all his Subjects whom it may concern, eſpecially the Chirurgions in or near the City of London or Weſtminſter, who have, or ſince that day had, any hurt or wounded Men in their cure, that they and every of them upon their Allegiance to the King, and the duty they owe to the publick Peace of the State, and upon pain of ſuch Puniſhments, as by the Laws, or by his Majeſty's Prerogative Royal can be inflicted upon them, for their neglect herein, do forthwith upon publication of this our Royal Pleaſure, diſcover to the Lord Preſident of the Privy Council, or to one of the Principal Secretaries of State, the Names of all ſuch perſons as they know, or by probable conjecture do ſuſpect to have bin Actors in any of thoſe late Tumults, and cauſe them to be detained or apprehended, without expecting any further or other Warrant in that behalf; and by name that they apprehend or cauſe to be apprehended whereſoever they ſhall be found, Captain Vaughan, Henry Stamford, and one Ward an Enſign.

Afterwards Stamford, and others of the Rioters were Indicted and Convicted of Murders, and Stamford executed accordingly: Notwithſtanding the Duke of Buckingham endeavoured to ſave his Life.

On the 28th of September the King taking into Conſideration, the general ſcarcity and dearth of Grain and Victuals which was like to fall out in the Kingdom, declared his Pleaſure and Commandment concerning the ſame by Proclamation, purſuant to a Book of Orders for preventing and remedying thoſe Evils, grounded upon ſeveral Statutes made in the time of Queen Elizabeth and King James, and now ordered the reprinting of the ſame; wherein are particular Directions for ſuppreſſing the Abuſes and Offences of Ingroſſers, Badgers, &c.

Habeas Corpus for Sam. Vaſſal a Merchant.

This Term an Information was put in againſt Vaſſal in the Exchequer, for not paying the impoſition of Currans, (which being 7 s. upon the 100 weight) was brought to 4 s. 10 d. The Defendent demurred in the Court of Pleas to this Information; and the Cauſe ſo depending, Vaſſal denied to pay until the Court ſhould adjudg it. Whereupon, inaſmuch as the ſame Matter had been adjudged for the King before in the Caſe of Bates, when Cook was Attorny, and that Judgment ſtood in force, not avoided by Error; the Court ordered that the King's Poſſeſſion ſhould be continued, and Vaſſal ſhould pay until other Order. And for not obeying this Order, he was committed to a Meſſenger of the Court, and for his Liberty brought a Habeas Corpus: On which Writ it appearing by the Return, that he was committed by a Court of Juſtice, upon their Act in Court, in a Cauſe properly in their cognizance, the Court did remand him to ſeek there for Juſtice, and ſo he went back to Priſon by the Award of the Court.

Michaelmaſs, 6 Car. B. R.

Octob. Michaelmaſs Term, John Selden's Caſe.

John Selden was committed to the Marſhalſey of the King's Bench, for not putting in Sureties for his Good Behaviour. There were with him in the ſame Priſon Hobart, Stroud, and Valentine. In the end of Trinity Term, 6. Car. the Sickneſs increaſing in Southwark, the three laſt named made ſuit unto the Judges of the King's Bench, to be delivered over to the Gatehouſe in Weſtminſter, to avoid the danger. The Judges thought it Charity, and by Writ to the Marſhal of the King's Bench, commanded him to deliver them to the Keeper of the Gatehouſe, and ſent him a Writ to receive them. Mr. Selden never ſent unto them whilſt they were in Town, but when they were all gone, made ſuit to the Lord Treaſurer to move the King, that to avoid this danger, he might be remov'd to the Gatehouſe; which he did, and ſent a Warrant under his Hand to the Marſhal, ſignifying his Majeſties Pleaſure to remove him to the Gatehouſe; accordingly he was removed. Thereupon when the Judges came to Town in Michaelmaſs Term, they called the Marſhal to account for his Priſoner Mr. Selden; and he preſenting unto them the Lord Treaſurer's Warrant by the King's direction, the Judges told him it would not ſerve, for he could not be removed but by Writ; and upon his Majeſties pleaſure ſignified it might ſo have bin done. And although the Judges were out of Town, yet the Clerk of the Crown would have made the Writ upon ſo good a Warrant, and it might have bin ſubſcribed by the Judges at their return. And to avoid the like Error hereafter, the Court ſent Juſtice Whitlock to the Lord Treaſurer, to let him know that Mr. Selden never looked after any of the Court, but ſought a new and irregular way to be removed without them. The Lord Treaſurer made a very honourable Anſwer, That he would not move the King for Mr. Selden to be removed by this means, until he ſent him word, on his credit, that it was a legal way; and told that Judg, that Mr. Selden was at the Judges diſpoſe to remove back when they would, for it was not the King's meaning to do any thing contrary to the Order of the Court, or their formal Proceedings: So Writs were ſent this Michaelmaſs Term to remove the four Priſoners back again to the Marſhalſey.

Acts of Bounty projected to be done by Dr. Laud Biſhop of London, and moſt of them performed in his Life-time.

In the Month of November, the enſuing Acts of Bounty were projected to be done by Dr. Laud Biſhop of London, and many of them performed in his Life-time.

1. To build at St. John's in Oxford, wherein he was bred up, for the good and ſafety of that College.

2. To overthrow the Feoffments, dangerous both to Church and State, going under the ſpecious pretence of buying in Impropriations.

3. To procure King Charles to give all Impropriations yet remaining in the Crown within the Realm of Ireland, to that poor Church.

4. To ſet upon the Repair of St. Paul's Church in London.

5. To collect and perfect the broken, croſſing and imperfect Statutes of the Univerſity of Oxford, which had lain in a confuſed heap ſome hundred Years.

6. To ſettle the Statutes of all the Cathedral Churches of the New Foundations, whoſe Statutes are imperfect, and not confirmed.

7. To annex for ever ſome ſetled Commendams; and thoſe, if it may be, ſine Curâ, on all the ſmall Biſhopricks, for Briſtol, Peterborough, St. Aſaph, Cheſter, and Oxford.

8. To find a way to increaſe the Stipends of poor Vicars.

9. To ſee the Tythes of London ſetled between the Clergy and the City.

10. To ſet up a Greek Preſs in London and Oxford, for printing the Library-Manuſcripts, and to get both Letters and Matrices.

11. To ſettle 80 l. a Year for ever out of Dr. Fryer's Land, (after the death of Dr. John Fryer the Son) upon the Fabrick of St. Paul, toward the repair, till that be finiſhed, and to keep it in good ſtate after.

12. To procure a large Charter for Oxford, to confirm their Ancient Priviledges, and obtain new for them, as large as thoſe of Cambridg, which they had got ſince Henry the 8*th*, and Oxford had not.

13. To open the great Square at Oxford, between St. Maries and the Schools, Brazen-noſe, and All-Souls.

14. To ſettle an Hoſpital of Land in Reading, of 100 l. a Year.

15. To Erect an Arabick Lecture in Oxford, at leaſt for his Life-time, his Eſtate as he ſuppoſed not being able for more, that this may lead the way, &c. The Lecture began to be read, Auguſt 10. 1636. and was ſetled for ever.

16. Then to ſettle the Impropriation of the Vicarage of Cudſden, to the Biſhop of Oxford. Wedneſday, April 19. 1637. and ſo the Houſe built by the new Biſhop of Oxford, Dr. John Bancroft, and ſetled for ever to that Biſhoprick.

17. To get a Book in Vellom fair written, containing the Records which are in the Tower, concerning the Clergy. This Book he got done at his own Charge, and left it in his Study at Lambeth for Poſterity, June 10. 1637. ab anno 20 Ed. 1. ad an. 14. Ed. 4.

18. To procure a new Charter for the College near Dublin, and a Body of new Statutes made to reſtify that Government.

19. A Charter for the Town of Reading, and a Mortmain of——

20. If he lived to ſee the Repair of St. Paul's near an end, to move his Majeſty for the like Grant from the High Commiſſion, for the buying in of Impropriations that he already had for St. Pauls, and then he hoped to buy in two a Year at leaſt.

Theſe things following the Biſhop perfected in his Life-time, according as he had deſign'd, viz.

His building of St. John's College.
The overthrow of Feoffments.
Setled Impropriations in Ireland.
Began the Repair of St. Pauls.
Regulated the Statutes of Oxford.
Setled the Statutes of the Cathedrals, and annexed Commendams to them.
Set up a Greek Preſs in London.
Obtain'd a large Charter for Oxford.
Setled an Hoſpital at Reading.
Setled an Arabick Lecture in Oxford.
Setled an Impropriation on Cudſden.
Obtain'd a Charter for the College near Dublin; and a Charter for the Town of Reading.

Againſt ſelling of Arms, Amunition, &c. to Salvages.

Conſideration being had of a Proclamation in King James his Time; whereby, among other things, the inſufferable Abuſes committed by diverſe Interlopers, Irregular Merchants, and diſobedient Fiſhermen and Mariners, who were prohibited to Trade with the Salvages of New-England; did barter away to theſe Salvages, Swords, Pikes, Muskets, Match, Powder, Shot, &c. with which they deſtroy'd the Engliſh who ſold thoſe Weapons to them. His Majeſty therefore by his Proclamation, bearing date the 5th of December, did then again prohibit ſuch kind of Trade with thoſe Salvages under great Penalties.

On the 5th of December came forth in Print, by publick Authority, Articles of Peace, Entercourſe, and Commerce, concluded in the Name of the moſt High and Mighty Kings, Charles by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. And Philip the 4th King of Spain, &c. In a Treaty at Madrid the 5th day of November after the Old Stile, the Year of our Lord God 1630. This Peace was Proclaimed on Sunday the 27th of November with great ſolemnity, and two days after ſworn unto at the Chappel at Whitehall; the King and the Spaniſh Ambaſſador Don Carlo Coloma went into their ſeveral Retirements whilſt an Anthem was ſung, and whilſt the Dean, Dr. Laud, with three other Biſhops, went up to the Altar with the Latin Bible, upon which the King laid his Hand; Secretary Cook having read the Oath, the King kiſſed the Book, and ſigned the Articles; which he delivered up to the Ambaſſador, and ſo paſſed to the Banqueting-Houſe to a Princely Entertainment.

And as to this Peace, the King declares that it is found meet and expedient, upon weighty Conſiderations moved to his Majeſty by the inter-intervention of ſome of his Friends, to lay aſide Hoſtility with the King of Spain, and ſo to remove by fair and poſſible means, the cauſe of the War, which hath bred interruption to the Amity betwixt the two Crowns; which his Majeſty doth accordingly make known to all his Loving People, that the ſaid Peace and Friendſhip being ſo eſtabliſhed, not only all Hoſtility and War is to ceaſe on both ſides from hence-forward, but alſo the former Trade and Commerce, as it ſtood in uſe and obſervance of the Treaty made by his Majeſties bleſſed Father, is reſtored and confirmed between the ſaid Kings, their Kingdoms, Territories, and Subjects, as well by Land and Sea, as Freſh-waters. The ſubſtance of the Articles are at large in the Appendix.

When this War was firſt begun with Spain, there was great hopes to have by force obliged that King to procure the Reſtitution of the Palatinate; but all that could be obtained after long Expence in War, was, That he would improve his utmoſt Intereſt in the Emperor, towards the Reſtitution of the Prince Elector.

On the 5th of January, his Majeſties Orders and Directions came forth publickly in print, together with a Commiſſion for the better Adminiſtration of Juſtice, and more perfect Information of his Majeſty, how, and by whom the Laws and Statutes tending to the relief of the Poor, the well ordering and training up of Youth in Trades, and the reformation of Diſorders, and diſordered Perſons, were executed throughout the Kingdom; which his Royal Majeſty commanded to be publiſhed and enquired of, by the Body of his Privy Council, whom he had made Principal Commiſſioners for that purpoſe; which Commiſſions, Orders, and Directions, are inſerted more fully in the Appendix.

It ſo happened, that at this time there was great fear of a Dearth, which the Lords of the Privy Council taking into ſerious conſideration, thought fit to write a Letter to the Lord Mayor and Aldermen of the City of London, requiring an anſwer to theſe particulars following.

1. What number of Mouths are eſteemed to be in the City of London, and the Liberty?
2. What Proportion of Corn will ſuffice to feed that number by the Month?
3. What Places are provided for to conſerve that Corn?
4. When the City intends to make their Proviſion?
5. What courſe the City takes to have the Proviſion well conſerv'd againſt the time of Scarcity?
6. What ſtock of Mony they provide for that purpoſe? and who ſhall be the Providers?

St. Katherines Church Conſecrated by Biſhop Laud.

St. Katherine Creed-Church being lately repaired, was ſuſpended from all Divine Service, Sermons, and Sacraments, till it were Conſecrated. Wherefore Dr. Laud Lord Biſhop of London, on the 16th of January, being the Lord's Day, came thither in the Morning to Conſecrate the ſame. Now becauſe great Exceptions were taken at the formality thereof, we will briefly relate the manner of the Conſecration, as alſo what the Biſhop ſaid in his juſtification, when he was afterwards queſtioned for the ſame in Parliament as an Innovation.

At the Biſhops approach to the Weſt door of the Church, ſome that were prepared for it, cryed with a loud voice, Open, open ye everlaſting doors, that the King of Glory may enter in! and preſently the doors were opened: And the Biſhop, with ſome Doctors, and many other principal Men, went in, and immediatly falling down upon his Knees, with his Eyes lifted up, and his Arms ſpread abroad, uttered theſe words: This Place is holy, the Ground is holy, In the name of the Father, Son, and Holy-Ghoſt I pronounce it holy.

Then he took up ſome of the duſt, and threw it up into the Air, ſeveral times in his going up towards the Chancel; when they approached near to the Rail and Communion Table, the Biſhop bowed towards it ſeveral times, and returning, they went round the Church in Proceſſion, ſaying the 100 Pſalm; after that the 19*th* Pſalm, and then ſaid a Form of Prayer, Lord Jeſus Chriſt, &c. and concluding, We Conſecrate this Church, and ſeparate it unto thee, as holy Ground, not to be profaned any more to common uſe.

After this the Biſhop being neer the Communion Table, and taking a written Book in his hand, pronounced Curſes upon thoſe that ſhould afterwards prophane that Holy Place, by Muſters of Souldiers, or keeping prophane Law Courts, or carrying Burdens through it, and at the end of every Curſe, he bowed towards the Eaſt, and ſaid, Let all the People ſay, Amen.

When the Curſes were ended, he pronounced a number of Bleſſings upon all thoſe that had any hand in Framing and Building of that Sacred and Beautiful Church, and thoſe that had given, and ſhould hereafter give any Challices, Plate, Ornaments, or Utenſils; and at the end of every Bleſſing, he bowed towards the Eaſt, ſaying, Let all the People ſay, Amen.

After this followed the Sermon; which being ended, the Biſhop conſecrated and adminiſtred the Sacrament, in manner following.

Ceremonies uſed by the Biſhop at the Conſecration of the Sacrament.

As he approached the Communion-Table he made many ſeveral lowly Bowings, and coming up to the ſide of the Table where the Bread and Wine were covered, he bowed ſeven times, and then after the reading of many Prayers, he came near the Bread, and gently lifted up the corner of the Napkin wherein the Bread was laid, and when he beheld the Bread he laid it down again, flew back a ſtep or two, bowed three ſeveral times towards it, then he drew near again, and opened the Napkin, and bowed as before.

Then he laid his hand on the Cup, which was full of Wine with a cover upon it, which he let go again, went back, and bowed thrice towards it, then he came near again, and lifting up the cover of the Cup looked into it, and ſeeing the Wine he let fall the cover again, retired back and bowed as before; then he received the Sacrament, and gave it to ſome principal Men; after which many Prayers being ſaid, the Solemnity of the Conſecration ended.

It is not inconvenient I hope to tranſgreſs in point of time, by acquainting the Reader that this matter was ſome years after objected againſt the Biſhop of London in Parliament, as an evidence of his inclination to introduce Popery, and theſe matters of Fact before recited were then proved before the Houſe of Lords; to which the Biſhop made a learned Defence, by endeavouring to juſtifie the Conſecration of Churches from the practice of Moſes, Solomon, Hezekiah, and other Princes of the Jews, in the time of the Ceremonial Law. And that it is expreſſed in the Old-Teſtament, that the Tabernacle, with all the Veſſels and Ornaments thereunto belonging, were all ſolemnly Conſecrated by Moſes; and afterwards when the Temple was built, it was ſolemnly Dedicated and Conſecrated to God by King Solomon, and all his Princes and People; He alſo argued out of Euſebius, in the time of Conſtantine and other Chriſtian Princes, of the Antiquity of Conſecrating Churches, and then he deſcended more particularly to anſwer the Charge as to the Conſecration of Creed-Church.

It was teſtified (ſaith he) that I came thither in a pompous manner. I deny it, it was only in a grave and ſeemly manner. It is objected, that as ſoon as I came within the Church Door I fell down upon my Knees; True, it was no more than my Duty, being an Oratory. Moſes and Aaron fell down on their Knees at the Door of the Tabernacle. Hezekiah and the People bowed and worſhipped, as I have proved at large in my Speech in the Star-Chamber. And, O come let us worſhip and fall down before the Lord our Maker, is the common Introitus in our own and other Liturgies. It is objected, I pronounced the Place and Ground holy; I did ſo, and it is an ordinary and legal Speech, there being a Relative, tho not an Inherent Holineſs in Churches dedicated to God's Service. Whereas it was ſaid, I threw up duſt in the Air, This I deny, and where it was alledged that this was in imitation of the Roman Pontifical; that (ſaid he) is a miſtake: for the Pontifical Preſcribes, (Cinis) Aſhes, not Duſt to be caſt abroad. For my Form of Conſecration, Biſhop Andrews made it, from whom I deſired a Copy, and had it, which I obſerved. It was objected that the form of Prayer I uſed, is in the Maſs-Book and Roman Pontifical. It may be ſo, he replied, and many other very good Prayers are in it.

After the Biſhop had made his Defence, a Reply was made by a Member of the Houſe of Commons, appointed to manage the Evidence.

1. That Moſes had an expreſs Command from God himſelf to conſecrate the Tabernacle, with all the Veſſels thereof, by anointing them with Conſecrated Oil, Exod. 40. 10, 11, 12. they being Types of Chriſt to come: But we have no ſuch Command from God to Conſecrate Churches, Church-Yards, Chappels, Altars, Veſtments, which are no Types of Chriſt already come.

2. This Conſecration was made by Moſes the Temporal Magiſtrate, (not by Aaron the High-Prieſt) without any other Ceremony than meer anointing the Tabernacle and its Veſſels and Implements with Oil; therefore this was no Warrant for Biſhop's conſecrating Churches, Church-Yards, Chappels, Altars, Veſtments, with other Ceremonies, without any anointing them with Oyl.

3. This Conſecration was only Temporary, Jewiſh, Ceremonial, aboliſhed by Chriſt's death, Col. 2. 14. &c.

4. King Solomon did not Conſecrate the Temple, nor the Veſſels and Court thereof with Oil, as Moſes did the Tabernacle, but after he had brought the Ark, Tabernacle, and all the holy Veſſels into it, with Praiſes, Thankſgiving and Inſtruments of Muſick, and after the Cloud and Glory of the Lord had filled the Houſe, he made an Heavenly Prayer only in the midſt of the Court, not in the Temple, before all the Congregation of Iſrael.

1. That the moſt Holy Place was ſo ſtiled, tho never Conſecrated: ſo Jeruſalem is very frequently called the Holy City, Mat. 4. 5. and 27. 53.

though never Conſecrated, and God told Moſes, the place whereon thou ſtandeſt is holy ground, Exod. 3. 5. though never Conſecrated by a Biſhop.

2. Our own Homilies inform us, That the Church is counted and called Holy, not of it ſelf, (not yet for its Conſecration by a Biſhop) but becauſe God's People reſorting thither, are Holy, and exerciſe themſelves in holy and Heavenly things.

3. The Hearing and Preaching God's Word, Prayer and receiving the Sacraments, therein are ſufficient of themſelves to ſanctifie, and make it Holy without any other Conſecration.

4. Sanctification in its own nature, is nothing elſe but a ſequeſtering of any thing from a common or ordinary uſe, to a Religious and ſacred purpoſe, and this may be done without a Biſhop's Exorciſm or Conjuration.

For his throwing up of Duſt, two Witneſſes expreſly depoſe it, which muſt over-ballance his bare Negation, and there is ſo little difference between Duſt and Aſhes, as they are uſually coupled together as ſynonimous in Scripture and Authors. That he took his Form from Biſhop Andrews, is only averred by himſelf, not proved by any witneſs; but that it agrees with that in the Pontifical, which we found in his Study even in terminis, is moſt clear, and therefore we cannot but preſume he derived it from thence: However if Biſhop Andrews imitated the Pontifical, and he Biſhop Andrews, the charge is much alike.

Sir Miles Hobart, and William Stroud Eſq. their Caſe.

Sir Miles Hobart, and William Stroud their Caſe about an Eſcape

ON the 23*d* of January the Attorny General exhibited two ſeveral Informations, the one againſt William Stroud, Eſq. the other againſt Sir Miles Hobart, Knight. The Charge againſt both of them therein, was for ſeveral Eſcapes out of the Priſon of the Gatehouſe: they both pleaded not guilty. And their Caſes appeared to be as followeth. The ſaid William Stroud, and Sir Miles Hobart, were by the King's Command committed to Priſon, for Miſdemeanours alledged againſt them, in their carriage in the Houſe of Commons at the laſt Parliament. Afterward in Trinity Term Anno 6. Caroli, both of them being by Order of this Court, and by a Warrant from the Attorney General to be removed unto the Gatehouſe; The Warden of the Marſhalſey (where they were before impriſoned) ſent the ſaid Stroud to the Keeper of the Gatehouſe, who received him into his Houſe lately built, and adjoyning to the Priſon of the Gatehouſe, but being no part thereof. After which receipt, the ſame night, he licenſed the ſaid Stroud to go with his Keeper unto his Chamber in Grayes Inn, and there to reſide. Sir Miles Hobart was alſo by the ſaid Warden of the Marſhalſeys delivered to the Keeper of the Gatehouſe, but being ſick, and abiding at his Chamber in Fleetſtreet, he could not be removed to the Priſon of the Gatehouſe, but there continued with his Keeper alſo. Afterwards the Sickneſs increaſing in London, they (with the Licenſe of the Keeper of the Gatehouſe, as it was proved) retired with their Under-keepers to their ſeveral Houſes in the Country for the ſpace of ſix weeks, until Michaelmas Term then next following, when by direction of the ſaid Keeper they returned to his Houſe; But in all that ſpace it could not be proved, that they were in any part of the old Priſon of the Gatehouſe, but in the new Building thereto adjoining, unleſs when they once withdrew themſelves to a Cloſe-ſtool, which was placed near to the Parlor, and was part of the Old Priſon of the Gatehouſe. This Evidence was given to both the Juries, and both them returned their Verdicts ſeverally, That they were not Guilty, according to the Information exhibited againſt them. And in this Caſe it was debated at the Bar and Bench, Whether by this receipt and continuance in the New Houſe only, it may be ſaid, That they ever had bin impriſoned? And the Judges held, That their voluntary retirement to the Cloſe-ſtool, made them to be Priſoners. They reſolved alſo, That in this and all other Caſes, although a Priſoner departs from Priſon with his Keepers Licence, yet it is an Offence as well puniſhable in the Priſoner as in the Keeper. And Calthrop made this difference between Breach of Priſon and Eſcape; the firſt is againſt the Goaler's will; the other is with his conſent, but in both the Priſoner is puniſhable; whereunto the whole Court agreed. It was alſo reſolved, That the Priſon of the King's Bench is not any Local Priſon, confined only to one Place; and that every Place where any Perſon is reſtrained of his Liberty is a Priſon. As if one take Sanctuary and depart thence, he ſhall be ſaid to break Priſon.

Ireland Defective Titles.

The 14*th* day of March, his Majeſty iſſued out a Proclamation, declaring his Royal Grace to confirm to his Subjects of the Realm of Ireland their Defective Titles, and to eſtabliſh their Eſtates and Poſſeſſions by his Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England, as the ſtrongeſt motive to quiet them, to make them ſubject to the Laws, to conform themſelves to Induſtry, and to make them opulent. See this at large in the Appendix.

An Account of the Bills of Mortality for 3 great Plagues.

There died in the firſt Year of King Charles the Firſt, Anno 1625. in London and the Liberties, of all Diſeaſes 54082, whereof of the Plague 35428.

And in the Year 1665, there died 79000 Perſons, whereof of the Plague 65890.

The Ld. Keeper's care to anſwer Petitioners.

It was the uſual cuſtom of Thomas Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, diligently to obſerve the ſitting Days of the Privy-Council; and his courſe was ever in the firſt place to hear all Petitions read; and when there had bin any Hearing upon them, or Anſwers given to them without hearing, he commanded the Clerk of the Council, to inquire if there were any more Petitions; and if none, then he uſed to riſe and leave the Council ſitting, and not to ſtay the Debate of Matters of State, or Foreign Affairs; and were the Petitioner never ſo mean, his Petition was certainly read, if the Lord Keeper was there.

A complaint by the Fiſhermen of Barkham.

An Example of which you have in the Fiſhermen of Barkham in Eſſex, who made their complaint againſt Captain John Smith, Captain of the South Blockhouſe; and Captain John Duffeild Captain of the Ship called the Seven Stars, riding at Medway, for divers wrongs and extortions of Fees, in taking Mony of the Petitioners, under pretence of requiring their Bond, and the like: Whereupon it was this day Ordered, That the ſaid Fiſhermen ſhould hereafter bring Certificates and Bonds ready made, unto Sir Thomas Fanſhaw Knight, dwelling in Eſſex, and before him ſhall Sign, Seal, and deliver the ſame to his Majeſties uſe, and leaving the ſaid Bond with the foreſaid Captain, were to proceed in their Vocation of Fiſhing, without any other Bond to be required of them after, or any trouble or moleſtation touching the ſame, notwithſtanding any reſtraint; when by the ſaid Reſtraint it is permitted to them to proceed in their Fiſhing, giving Bond not to paſs beyond Seas.

Henry

Mr. Ballaſis ſummoned to attend the Council,

Henry Ballaſis, Son and Heir of the Lord Faulconberg, was on the 6th of April called before the Council Board, to anſwer his contemptive carriage towards the Lord Wentworth, Lord Preſident of the North, and one of his Majeſties Hon^{ble} Privy Council. The Charge given againſt him was, ‘That he had come into the Room wherein ‘the ſaid Lord Preſident was at a ſolemn meeting, without ſhewing ‘any particular reverence to the ſaid Lord Preſident, as in civility and ‘duty he ought to have done. And that afterwards his Lordſhip going out of the ſaid Room with his Hat off, the Kings Mace-Bearer ‘before him, and all the reſt of the company uncovered, he the ſaid ‘Mr. Ballaſis ſtood with his Hat on his head, looking full upon his ‘Lordſhip without ſtirring his ſaid Hat, or uſing any other Reverence ‘or Civility to the ſaid Lord Preſident.

For ſeeming to affront the L. Preſident of the North.

His Anſwer.

‘To which the ſaid Mr. Bellaſis made anſwer by a ſolemn and deep ‘Proteſtation, That he came into the Room as he ſhall do into all ‘other places, fully purpoſed and ready to perform that Reſpect and ‘Reverence to the Lord Vicount Wentworth, which he acknowledged ‘to be due to the place he holds under his Majeſty; And the reaſon ‘why he did not put off his Hat to his Lordſhip going out of the ‘Room was, that his Face being turned about the other way, talking ‘with Ferdinando Lord Fairfax, his Lordſhip was paſt before he ‘was aware thereof; that otherwiſe he would have put off his Hat, ‘and given that Reverence to his Lordſhip: Proteſting again deep‘ly, that he came with no intent into the Room to offer any neglect ‘or diſregard to the ſaid Lord Preſident. Whereupon he was commanded to withdraw, and being commanded to kneel, did but ſeemingly do it. Yet by reaſon Mr. Bellaſis was a young Gentleman, and that he would hereafter behave himſelf with more Civility and Humility towards his Majeſty's Preſident, therefore did only order that the ſaid Mr. Bellaſis, as he hath now made this Profeſſion before their Lordſhips, ſo ſhould he alſo under-write the ſame with his own Hand, together with an Acknowledgment, that he is ſorry he gave ſuch occaſion of Offence and Scandal to the ſaid Lord Wentworth, which was accordingly drawn up and tendered to him: but Mr. Bellaſis refuſing to ſubmit to it and obey, was by their Lordſhips committed to the Gatehouſe.

His Commitment.

His Submiſſion and Releaſment.

Mr. Bellaſis after a months Impriſonment, was by the Lords of the Council called in again the 6th of May, and ſeemed willing to ſubſcribe the Acknowledgment: ‘But ſaid he hoped the Submiſſion was under‘ſtood to have relation to the Place, and not to the Perſon of the Lord Preſident; and being thereupon commanded to withdraw, his Friends preſently prevailing with him to ſubmit, which being ſignified to their Lordſhips, he was called in again, and ſubmitted to obey their Commands, and was thereupon ſet at Liberty.

April 10. 1631 A Commiſſion for Repairing of St. Pauls.

The Devotion of thoſe times undertook a vaſt and expenſive Work, the repairing of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's in London. To which end a Commiſſion under the great Seal was awarded to the Arch-Biſhops of Canterbury and York, the Biſhops of London and Wincheſter, to all the Lords of the Council, and all the prime Miniſters of State, to the Lords Chief-Juſtices of the Courts at Weſtminſter, and to the Lord Mayor, divers Aldermen, and the Chamberlain of the City of London, and to the Dean, and Reſidentiaries of that Cathedral.

7 Caroli.

‘His Majeſty therein Declaring; that he had taken into his ſerious and Princely Conſideration the great decays of that Building, the ſame being the goodlieſt Monument, and moſt eminent Church in all his Dominions, and a principal Ornament of the Royal City; that in reſpect of his Zeal to God's Glory, and for the Honour of his Government, he had an earneſt deſire and purpoſe to provide for the Repairing and Upholding of that Magnificent Structure, and reſtoring the ſame to its antient Beauty and Glory, according to the pious intention of his Royal Father, who granted a Commiſſion to begin and ſet forward that great and Honorable Work. And duly weighing, that as this chargeable Fabrick in the firſt founding thereof, could not but require many Years of time, and large ſupplies of publick Charity; So the ſubſtantial Repairing and Adorning thereof is not to be effected out of any Rents, or Revenues heretofore pretended to have been given to that uſe, but will require a ſtock of Money and Materials to begin the Work, and a conſtant yearly ſupply to bring it to an end. Wherefore it was his Majeſty's will and pleaſure, that all Monies to be raiſed or recovered for this Work, ſhould be paid into the Chamber of London, as the fitteſt and ſafeſt Cheſt whereinto the ſame can be put, and the Materials which already are or ſhall be brought in, ſhall be laid in Store-yards, Houſes, and Places, by Officers appointed for that purpoſe. And the Biſhop of London was authoriſed to keep a Regiſter, wherein to take the ſeveral Subſcriptions of the Nobility, Biſhops, Judges, Serjeants and Counſellors at Law, Officers and others of Quality and Ability who ſhall willingly contribute. The Judges of the Prerogative Courts of both Provinces, and the Vicars General, and the Officials of the ſeveral Biſhopricks of the Kingdom, were commanded to take ſpecial care, that out of ſuch Monies as ſhall fall into their power upon the Deceaſes of Perſons inteſtate, to be diſtributed for pious uſes, ſome convenient proportion thereof be aſſigned to the ſupply of this Charge. And the Letters Patents, for the general Contribution of all Subjects in the Kingdom, were to be drawn in a more ſpecial manner, according to the extraordinary nature of this Caſe. Alſo the Commiſſioners had Authority for taking of an exact Survey of the particular decays of the Church, and calculating the Charge thereof, for the diſcovering of all ſuch Legacies, Gifts and Sums of Money as were given, or intended, for the Maintaining, Repairing, and Adorning thereof; and for Adviſing and Agreeing upon the Forms of Letters Patents for Publick Collections throughout England and Wales; and for the orderly bringing in of all ſuch Moneys as ſhould be Collected, Raiſed, or Recovered for this Public Uſe, and of all Materials thereunto belonging, and for the well-diſpoſing thereof; and for making of meet Orders and Conſtitutions for the Preſervation of that Cathedral, and ſuppreſſing and preventing all preſent and future Annoiances, Purpreſtures and Encroachments, which tend to the Damage or Diſgrace thereof. And that the Proceedings herein may be firm and inviolable, and remain in perpetual memory, this Injunction was added, That a Certificate thereof be made into the Court of Chancery, there to remain on Record.

A Regiſter appointed for the Subſcription of Benefactors.

According to the directions in this Commiſſion, Briefs for Contributions were iſſued forth under the Great Seal, in different manners,

Briefs for Contribution iſſued forth for that effect.

according to the different condition of the places unto which they were directed. Reſolutions were taken by the Lords Committees, that 'once a Year a Certificate be made of the Mony given, and of the 'Donors names; and that the Work ſhould not begin till there were '10000 l. in Bank; and when the Scaffolds were up, and the Work 'begun; that two or three Cheſts ſhould be ſet in the Church, in 'convenient places, for receiving the Benevolencies of well diſpoſed 'Perſons.

Some Perſons remiſs in executing them.

And where-ever there was found ſlackneſs in raiſing or collecting of Monies in this behalf; Perſons of Wealth or Authority in their Country, were to be quickened by Letters Monitory ſent from the Council Table. Sir Francis Knowls and Sir Thomas Vachel, Juſtices of the Peace in Berks, received ſuch Letters, wherein they were checked for delaying to publiſh his Majeſties Commiſſion, and forbearing to expreſs their own Liberalities, and their good inclinations to ſo pious a Work, which might be a means to invite others by their good example; and were injoyned, for the redeeming of opportunities already let ſlip, to redouble their diligence, and to put the Commiſſion in execution by the beſt ways and means they could; and to return an exact Accompt of the Monies given by themſelves and others; that the King being therewith acquainted, may diſtinguiſh between ſuch as are forward and well-affected, and ſuch as are ſlack and remiſs in doing God and him Service.

Reſolutions taken by the Lords Committees for the Buſineſs of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul.

1. That once a Year Certificates be made of the Monies given, and the Donors Names.

2. That a Clerk of the Work be choſen, and a Pay-maſter, and a Purveyer.

3. The Work not to begin till there be Ten thouſand pounds in Bank. That when the Scaffolds are up, and the Work begun, two or three Cheſts be ſet within the Church, in ſuch places as ſhall be thought fit, for receiving the Benevolences of well-diſpoſed Perſons to the ſaid Work.

Moreover, The Privy-Council being informed by ſundry Hands, of a long Abuſe in that Church, which might give an Impediment to Mens Liberal Offerings, thought fit to make this Order on the 18th of January.

Abuſes to be reformed in S. Pauls Church.

'THe Council Board by ſpecial Direction and Commiſſion from his 'Majeſty, taking into conſideration the ways and means for the 'Reparation of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's, were informed at 'ſundry hands, of a long continued abuſe of the place, which might 'give a great impediment to Mens liberal Offerings to ſo pious a 'Work, if care were not taken, as well for the Religious and decent 'uſe of the inſide, as repairing of the outſide. The offence that is taken 'as well by Forreigners, as thoſe of our own Nation, is, that in time 'of Divine Service, while the upper part of the Church is uſed for Pray'ing and Preaching, the nether part of the Church is uſed as an Exchange 'for Men to meet in, to walk, talk and diſcourſe of all things; and the 'Church it ſelf, though by ſituation it ſtands convenient for Paſſage 'to and from all parts of the City; yet by that liberty is ſo far pro-'faned, as it is uſed like a Street for carriage through of all Burthens, 'Proviſions and neceſſaries Men have to uſe, or paſs from place to 'place; whereat good Men are much ſcandalized. Their Lordſhips 'finding this to be ſo unfit (the Dedication of that place conſidered) 'beſides the coldneſs it may make in Men, otherwiſe well affected 'to this Work, if the better part be not cared for, as well as the 'material Work provided for, have thought fit to declare themſelves 'thus far, to the Dean and Chapter of that Church, that they thereupon 'may ſeriouſly enter into Conſideration how this Abuſe may be re-'formed, and propound to the Board a fit Expedient. Their Lord-'ſhips for their parts offer this unto the ſaid Dean and Chapter; That in 'time of Divine Service, Prayers, or Preaching none ſhould be ſuf-'fered to be walking or talking in the Church, or nether Iles thereof; 'And at no time to have any part of the ſaid Church uſed as a through-'fare, or paſſage for Burthens, Proviſions, or other common neceſſaries 'to be carried through the Church, but for all thoſe things to take the 'common way of the Streets. What more or other things the Dean and 'Chapter ſhall find fit to add, they are prayed and required to repre-'ſent unto the Board with all conveniency, that ſuch courſe may be 'therein taken as ſhall be fit, and this pious and worthy Work encou-'raged by all the means that may be.

This Order was confirmed by his Majeſty, and publiſhed in print, as followeth.

Purſuant to the reformation of Diſorders in Cathedral Churches, particularly that of St Paul in London lately begun, his Majeſty gave forth ſpecial Commands and Orders in the terms following.

Jun. 25. 1631. Orders againſt walking in St. Paul's.

I.

'That no Man of what quality ſoever ſhall preſume to walk in the 'Iles of the Quire, or in the Body or Iles of the Church, during the 'time of Divine Service, or the Celebration of the Bleſſed Sacrament, 'or Sermons, or any part of them, neither do any thing that may 'diſturb the Service of the Church, or diminiſh the Honour due to 'ſo holy a place.

II.

'That no Man preſume to profane the Church by the carriage of 'Burthens or Baskets, or any Portage whatſoever.

III.

'That all Parents and Maſters of Families do ſtrictly forbid their 'Children and Servants to play at any time in the Church, or any 'way miſdemean themſelves in that place, in time of Divine Service, or 'otherwiſe: And if any Children or Servants ſhall be found ſo doing, 'beſides the puniſhment of the Delinquents, their Parents and Ma-'ſters ſhall be ſubject to ſuch Cenſures and Puniſhments, as is thought 'fit to be inflicted.

'Theſe Orders by command of his Majeſty are now publiſhed, to the 'intent that no Man may hereafter pretend Ignorance for his excuſe in 'any of them.

Houſes about St. Paul's to be demoliſhed.

At this time certain Houſes and Shops adjoining to St. Paul's were thought fit to be demoliſhed, for the more commodious Repairing, and better Ornament of that Cathedral; Whereupon choice was made of

of a certain number of the Commiſſioners to Treat and Compound with all perſons intereſted in ſuch Buildings, having a more eſpecial regard to Widows, Orphans, and the poorer ſort. And it was ordered, That if the Owners conformed themſelves, by demoliſhing their Houſes, by a limited time, they ſhould receive ſuch ſatisfaction, according to their ſeveral Intereſts, as their Lordſhips ſhould think reaſonable; Otherwiſe, the Sheriff of London was requir'd to ſee the ſame performed; it being not thought fit, that the Obſtinacy of thoſe Perſons ſhould hinder ſo conſiderable a Work. Hereupon Compoſitions were made with the Owners, for certain ſumms of Mony, to be paid out of the Monies deſign'd toward the repairing this Cathedral, together with the Materials of the demoliſhed Houſes. And the Biſhop of London, the Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's, and the Warden of the Petty-Canons were appointed to accept the Surrender of the Leaſes ſo compounded for, and to deliver them to the Clerk of the Privy-Council, to be put into the Council-Cheſt, there to remain in ſafe keeping.

And becauſe the Surveiors brought in, That the greateſt part of the Houſes in the Pariſhes of St. Faith's and St. Gregories, are within the Wall of St. Paul's Church-yard, and conſequently built, as was alledged, to the Nuiſance and Detriment of the Church, and might in reaſon and juſtice be ordered to be pull'd down, as well as the other Houſes that abutted upon the Church Wall; Their Lordſhips ordered that the Sub-Committees ſhould call before them ſuch Owners and Inhabitants as have their Houſes within thoſe Pariſhes, and deal with them effectually for ſome Annual Contribution, or ſum of Money, whereby Houſes and Rents might be ſetled to the uſe of the Parſon of St. Gregories, and of the Almoner and Choriſters, to make ſome recompence for the Loſs which would fall upon them by the taking down of their dwelling Houſes, and ſome other Tenements belonging to their Maintenance.

And whereas the Dean, and the Petty Canons of St. Paul's have a Quarter built on the North-ſide of the Church, in manner of a College, for their Habitation; which if wholly employ'd to the uſe of the Church, was conceiv'd convenient enough, both for them and the Parſon of St. Gregories, and the Maſter and Choriſters: Their Lordſhips ordered, that the Sub-Committees ſhould ſend for the Dean and Petty Canons, and upon their Examination and View of the Place, diſcover and certifie the Board what Tenants do inhabit, and what Inmates are lodged there.

Concerning St. Gregories Church by St. Paul's.

The Pariſhioners of St. Gregorie's having begun to make a Vault for the Burial of the Dead, from the South-ſide of St. Paul's towards the ſtreet, near the Lollards Tower, fifty foot in length, and fourteeen in breadth, it being found that in digging they bared three ſettings off from the Southſide of the Cathedral; and upon the Eaſt, and Southſide of the Lollards-Tower, five foot deep, from the firſt ſetting off above ground; The Lords of the Council ordered, leſt the Foundation of this great Building ſhould be under-wrought, that the Vault ſhould be ſhortned, ſo as neither the Griſes be bared, nor the Walls of the Church, or Tower touched; and that a ſeparation-Wall be made, and the place within be thorowly fill'd up with Earth.

Afterwards the Wall of St. Gregorie's Church was ordered by the Lords of the Privy Council to be pull'd down, as an impediment to the Work, and unſeemly to the view of the Cathedral; and the rather, becauſe it was within another Church-yard already conſecrated for Burial.

At laſt St. Gregory's Church it ſelf, being found a great impediment to the Work in hand, ſeveral ſtrict Orders were made to the Pariſhioners to take it down, and remove it to ſome other place. The Pariſhioners alleadging inability to undergo the Charge, petition'd the Lords of the Council, that they might be freed from that Injunction; but their Lordſhips finding no cauſe to vary, did ratify the former Orders. And as touching the difficulty of finding out and procuring a fit place for the erecting of a New Church within that Pariſh; and the pretended diſability to undergo the Charge of Building it, they leave it to the Pariſhioners Election, Whether they will build the ſame, or be aſſign'd to any one or more Pariſhes, in ſuch manner as the Lord Biſhop of London ſhall think fit and direct, and ſo remain till a New Church be erected.

After this they of St. Gregory's, being in number above 3000 Souls, were aſſigned to the Weſt end of Chriſt-Church; but thoſe of Chriſt-Church refuſing to admit them without Compoſition, or hard Conditions, it was ordered by the Privy-Council, that they ſhould freely aſſemble there without any farther burthen.

The Trial of Mervin Lord Audley.

UPon the 25*th* of April began the Arraignment and Condemnation of Mervin Lord Audley, Earl of Caſtle-Haven in Ireland; who being accuſed of ſeveral Crimes and Enormities, now brought to light, the King thought it meet that he ſhould have a publick and fair Trial. And in order thereunto, the Lord Keeper wrote to ſome of the Judges to haſten to Town, after their Circuits were over, to be preſent at his Trial, which was to be in Weſtminſter-Hall before the beginning of Eaſter Term, to be aſſiſting to the Lord High Steward.

The Judges that were required to be preſent were theſe.

Sir Nicholas Hyde, Lord Chief Juſtice of the King's Bench.
Sir Thomas Richardſon, Ld Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas.
Sir Humphry Davenport, Lord Chief Baron of the Exchequer.
Baron Denham.
Judg Jones.
Judg Hutton.
Judg Whitlock.
Judg Cook.

In this Caſe there were three Indictments found at Salisbury, the Wedneſday preceding Eaſter, before the Lord Chief Juſtice Hide, the Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon, and Baron Denham, Juſtices of Aſſiſe for that Circuit, and ſpecial Commiſſioners in this Caſe. The one Indictment was for a Rape upon his own Wife, for holding her by force, whilſt one of his Minions, forcibly and againſt her Will, had Carnal knowledg of her; ſo that he was Indicted as præſens, auxilians, confortans, and therefore a Principal. The other two Indictments were for Buggery with a Man.

On Friday morning before the Trial, the Judges being ſent for, all all but Denham (being met at Serjeants-Inn Hall in Fleetſtreet) theſe Queſtions were propoſed unto them by Sir Robert Heath the King's Attorney General; A memorial of which, a learned * Judg, one of the eight before mentioned, ſet down in writing to the effect following.

1. Whether a Peer of the Realm may wave his Trial by Peers, and plead he will be tried by God and the Country?

Anſwer. He may not. For his Trial by Peers is no Priviledg, but the Law, declared by Magna Charta; and if he will not plead to Trial by his Peers, it is a ſtanding Mute.

2. Whether a Peer may challenge his Peers, as in the caſe of common Jurors?

Anſw. He may not, (which I think is ſo, ſaid that Judg) becauſe they go not on their Oath, but on their Honour, and a Challenge is tried whether he ſtand indifferent as unſworn.

3. Whether a Peer may have Counſel any more than a common Perſon?

Anſw. If Matter of Law appear, he may, not for Matter of Fact.

Certain Examinations being taken by the Lords without Oath; It was reſolved, Theſe could not be uſed until they were repeated upon Oath, unleſs of the Party to be tried, which may be read without an Oath.

4. Whether the Wife in this Caſe may be a Witneſs againſt her Husband for the Rape?

Anſw. She may, for ſhe is the Party wrong'd; otherwiſe ſhe may be abuſed. In like manner a Villain may be a Witneſs againſt his Lord in ſuch Caſes.

5. Whether the Witneſſes are to be produced viva voce, if the Lord Steward require it, or the Priſoner?

Anſw. If he ſtand Mute in the Caſe of Rape or Buggery, he may have his Clergy in either.

6. Then if he may not be put to Trial on the other Indictment, may not he be for a later Buggery, and be denied his Clergie?

Anſw. On that he may, by 18. Eliz. 1.

7. Whether in caſe one ſtandeth Mute, Evidence may be opened by command of the Court concerning the Fact, though the Delinquent be to be preſſed to death for his contempt? But it is a matter in the diſcretion of the Court.

8. Whether in Caſes where Clergie is allowable, the party may pray it before he anſwer, and deny to anſwer, otherwiſe? for this is a Confeſſion.

9. Whether in Rape there muſt be Penetratio?

The Anſwer was in the Affirmative.

10. He having made ſuit to be bailed, whether it might be granted?

Anſw. Let the King, as King, adviſe of it. The Judges certified the Lord Keeper that he could not in juſtice require it; yet he might be bailed ex gratia, which was not fit in this odious Caſe.

At a ſecond Aſſembly of the ſaid Judges in Serjeants-Inn, other things were conſidered of as to this Matter.

A difference was made between a Buggerie and a Rape, in point of having Clergy, if he ſtood Mute: for it was argued he might have his Clergy if he ſtood Mute in Rape, but not in Buggerie, becauſe by the Stat. 25. H. 8. Buggerie is made Felony, which by the Common Law is not. And in the very creation of the Offence, Clergy is taken away ; whereas Clergy did lie for a Rape, until it was taken away by a Statute.

It was concluded that the Lords might Eat and Drink before they were agreed, but they could not ſeparate nor adjourn the giving up of their Verdict. This appeared out of the Report of the Lord Dacres of Gregſtock's Caſe, who was tried for Treaſon, and acquitted by his Peers, 26. H. 8.

It was agreed by the Juſtices in that Caſe of the Lord Dacres, that a Verdict cannot be given by a leſſer number of the Lords than twelve; and if twelve be for the King, and thirteen for the Priſoner, the Priſoner ſhall be acquitted.

In an Appeal, if the Defendent be Mute, he ſhall be hanged, and it is an Attainder, it being not within the Statute of Weſtminſter, Cap. 12. De paine fort & dure. No more is Treaſon. vide Stamf.

It was agreed alſo, That a Lord of the Parliament is within the Statute of Weſtminſt. 1. in caſe of Felony, and ſhall be preſſed to death.

It was agreed, If the Lord Audley ſhould have his Clergy upon his being Mute, yet he might be tried upon the other Indictments of Rape and Buggerie, and ſhould not have his Clergy, by the Statute 18. Eliz. becauſe the admitting him to his Clergy, would be a Superſedeas to all Indictments of Offences within Clergy, not of thoſe without by that Statute. For by the Common Law, he that is admitted to his Clergy, is diſcharged from anſwering any other Offence ; for by indictment of that Law, he is taken from the Power of the Secular Judg, and put into the hands of the Ordinary, whoſe Priſoner he is all his Life after.

It was reſolved from the Lord Dacre's Caſe, That the Lord Steward, after Verdict given, might take time to adviſe upon it for any point in Law ; and that his Office did continue unto him until his Judgment and Reſolution, and it was but a Commiſſion hac vice notwithſtanding.

The manner of the Trial.

There was prepared in Weſtminſter-Hall a long Gallery aſcending with twelve ſteps, beginning directly over againſt the Common-Pleas Bar; extending in length to the top of the King's-Bench ſtairs. At the higher end of the Gallery there was a long fair Table, with Benches on each ſide, for the Peers to ſit on; and at the upper end thereof there was a Cloth of State for the Lord High Steward; alſo at the lower end another ſhort Table for the Lords and Judges to ſit at. And there was alſo a place provided for the King's Learned Counſel, and Officers of the Court; and below that, the Bar for the Priſoner: Scaffolds being alſo erected on each ſide of the Hall for People to ſtand and hear the Trial.

On the day appointed the Peers came into the Hall, and took their places according to their Degrees; The Judges likewiſe came, and took their places in order: After them the King's Learned Counſel, and the Officers of the Court.

Thomas Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great Seal; being by Commiſſion under the ſaid Great Seal, dated the 13*th* of April 1631, conſtituted Lord High Steward for the time being, about nine of the Clock in the morning entred into the Hall uncovered, with ſeven Serjeants at Arms carrying ſeven Maces before him, and attended upon by Sir John Burroughs King at Arms, and Mr. James Maxwel Uſher of the Black Rod.

The Lord Steward, after he had ſaluted the Lords the Peers, who reſaluted him, aſcended the State; and being ſeated in the Chair, was preſented with his Majeſty's Commiſſion by Sir Robert Rich, one of the Maſters of the Chancery, which was openly read by Sir Thomas Fanſhaw Clerk of the Crown. Then Mr. Maxwell kneeling down, preſented his Lordſhip with a White Staff, or Rod, which he gave to one of the Serjeants at Arms, who held up the ſame by the Chair of State, on the right hand thereof.

Then the Lord Steward gave leave to all the Peers, and to all the Lords, and Judges, and Privy-Counſellors there preſent, to put on their Hats and be covered; and command was given, that none under thoſe Degrees ſhould be covered upon pain of impriſonment.

Then the Peers were ſeverally called by their Names, and each of them anſwered particularly.

The Kings Counſel there preſent, were,

Sir Robert Heath, Attorny General.
Sir Richard Shelton, Solicitor General.
Sir John Finch, Queen's Attorny General.
Sir Thomas Crew, the King's Serjeant at Law.

The Officers of the Court, were,

Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, Clerk of the Crown.
And Mr. Keeling, his Aſſiſtant.

Then the Lord Steward commanded the Indictments to be certified and brought in; This being done, the Lieutenant of the Tower was called by a Serjeant at Arms, and commanded to bring forth the Priſoner; who accordingly being brought to the Bar, attended by divers of the Guard, he made obeyſance to the Lord Steward, and the Peers, by whom he was reſaluted. Then the Lord High Steward directed his Speech unto him, which was as followeth.

My Lord Audley,

'THe King hath underſtood, both by Report, and the Verdict of 'divers Gentlemen of Quality in your own Country, That you 'ſtand impeached of ſundry Crimes of a moſt high and hainous na'ture. And to try whether they be true or not, and that Juſtice 'may be done accordingly, His Majeſty brings you this day to your 'Trial. Doing herein, as the Mighty King of Kings, in the 18*th* of 'Geneſis, verſ. 20, 21. who went down to ſee whether their Sins were 'ſo grievous as the cry of them; Becauſe the cry of Sodom and Go'morrah is great, and their ſins grievous, I will go down, ſaith the Lord, 'and ſee whether they have done altogether according to the cry of it. And 'the Kings on Earth can have no better Pattern to follow than the 'King of Heaven: And therefore our Sovereign Lord the King, God's 'Vicegerent here on Earth, hath commanded that you ſhould be here 'tried this day; and to that end he hath cauſed theſe your Peers to 'be aſſembled: And the deſire of his Majeſty is, that your Trial ſhould 'be as equal as Juſtice and Equity it ſelf: And therefore theſe Noblemen, 'your Peers, whoſe hearts are as full of Integrity, Juſtice and Truth, 'as their Veins full of Noble Blood, are this day to try you; where'fore if you be innocent ſpeak boldly and confidently, and fear not 'to juſtify your ſelf: And be aſſured, that thoſe that accuſe you, if 'you be free your ſelf, ſhall not eſcape free: But if you be guilty of 'theſe Crimes, I adviſe you to give honour to God and the King, and 'confeſs your Faults; for it is not vain Confidence, nor Subtilty, nor 'ſtanding out in denial, that hides the Truth, and all ſhifts and ſubtil'ties againſt it are but Concilia adverſus Dominum.

'Therefore if Truth touch you at the Heart, and your Conſci'ence, which is your Witneſs, and God's Grace which is greater than 'both, ſtand not againſt it.

To this Speech of the Lord Steward's, my Lord Audley thus anſwered.

May it pleaſe your Grace;

'I Have bin a cloſe Priſoner theſe ſix Months, without Counſel or 'Advice; I am ignorant of the Law, and but weak of Speech at 'the beſt; and therefore I deſire to have the liberty to have Counſel 'to ſpeak for me.

The Lord Steward replied; 'That his long Impriſonment was a 'ſpecial favour, for that it gave him time to bethink himſelf, and more 'than ever any Man had that had bin committed for ſuch Offences; 'and that he ſhould demand nothing which the Law can allow, but it 'ſhould be granted.

An. 1631.

'Then his Grace deſired to be reſolved of the Judges whether the 'Priſoner's demand to have Counſel to plead for him, might be granted 'or not? the Judges anſwered, that in criminal Cauſes Counſel is not 'to be admitted in matter of Fact, but in matter of Law it may.

Then the three Indictments were read, whereof two were for Sodomy with his Footman, and the third for a Rape committed upon his own Wife. Unto all which the Earl anſwered, not guilty; and being asked, how he would be tried, he anſwered by God and his Peers. Whereupon all the Peers put off their Hats, and the iſſue thereof was joyned.

The Ld. Steward's Speech to the Lords.

The Lord High Steward addreſſed his Speech to the Peers, and ſaid, 'My Lords, the Priſoner ſtands indicted for a Rape by one Indict'ment, and for Sodomy by two, and he hath pleaded not guilty to them 'all.

'It is my duty to charge you with the Trial of it, and you are to 'judge of it. The Offences wherewith he ſtandeth charged are to be 'proved by Evidence. And becauſe the Crimes that come this day be'fore us, may in ſome breed Deteſtation, let your Reaſon ſway your 'Judgments, and let that rule your Affections, and your Hearts and 'your Heads; for neither of thoſe ought to be put into the Ballance, 'if a Grain on either ſide may ſway the Scale.

'You are to give attentive Hearing, and then to weigh equally, 'that the Scale may lean the right way. The Judges will aſſiſt you in 'point of Law, which if you doubt of, you are to propound it to me, 'and I to them, and this your Lordſhips are to do without corpo'ral Oath; For the Law concieveth you of ſuch Integrity, that you 'will do that for Juſtice, which others do upon their Oaths, and 'therefore admit of no Challenge. And God direct you to do as you 'ought.

Sir Thomas Crew opened the Charge.

Sir Thomas Crew, the King's learned Counſel, opened the Charge againſt the Earl to this effect;

'The Perſon is Honorable, the Crimes diſhonorable, ſo foul as 'Poet never invented, nor Hiſtoriographer wrote of: the one is a Crime 'of ſuch rarity (let it be ſpoken to the Honour of our Nation) that we 'ſeldom or never knew the like; and the other ſuch, the like hath ſcarce 'been heard of.

'But they are of ſuch a peſtilential nature, that if they be not pu'niſhed, they will draw Vengeance from Heaven upon this King'dom. His Majeſty would have the Priſoner at the Bar heard 'with as much favour, as Crimes of this nature will admit. And 'when he firſt heard thereof, he gave ſtrict Command that the Truth 'ſhould be ſearched out, that his Throne and People might be 'cleared from ſo heavy and heinous Sins. Thereupon the Priſoner 'was indicted in his own Country according to the Law, and by 'Gentlemen of worth, the Bill was found; and now he is perſonally 'brought to this Bar, to be Tried by his Honourable Peers, of whoſe 'Wiſdom and Sincerity, there can be no queſtion but he ſhall have a 'juſt and honorable Hearing.

'To begin with the Indictment of Rape; Bracton tells us of King 'Athelſtan's Law before the Conqueſt, If the party were of no chaſte life, 'but a Whore, yet there may be a Raviſhment: But it is a good Plea for a 'Man to ſay ſhe is his Concubine.

'In an Indictment of Rape there is no time of Proſecution neceſſary:

'for nullum tempus occurit Regi, but in caſe of an Appeal of Rape, if a Woman do not proſecute in convenient time it will bar her. If a Man take away a Maid by force and Raviſh her, and afterwards ſhe give her conſent to Marry him, yet it is a Rape.

'For the Crime of Sodomy, Our Law had no knowledg of it, till the 15*th* of Henry the 8*th*, by which Statute it was made Felony, and herein there is no more queſtion but only this, whether it be Crimen Sodomiticum ſine Penetratione. And the Law 15*th Elizabeth* ſets it down in general; and where the Law doth not diſtinguiſh, neither muſt we.

'Your Lordſhips will be curious how you give the leaſt mitigation to ſo abominable Sin, which brought ſuch Plagues after it, as may be ſeen in the 19*th* of Geneſis, 19*th* of Judges, and 1ſt of the Romans.

'It may ſeem ſtrange how a Nobleman of his birth and quality, ſhould fall into ſuch abominable Sins; but he had given himſelf over to Luſt. And when Men once habituate themſelves unto evil, no marvel if they fall into any Sin.

'Alſo he was conſtant in no Religion, but in the morning would be a Papiſt and go to Maſs; and in the afternon a Proteſtant and hear a Sermon. He beleived not in God, he feared not God, he left God, and God left him to his own wicked way, and then what might not he run into.

'Things are ſound in him beyond imagination,his intentions were bent to have his own Wife naught; if ſhe love him ſhe muſt love A. his Page and he gives this reaſon out of Scripture, ſhe was now made ſubject to him; and if ſhe did evil at his command, 'twas his fault, he muſt anſwer for it.

'His irregular bounty towards S. is very remarkable; him he loves and honours above all, not in any honeſt but a diſhoneſt love, he calls him his Favourite, and lets him ſpend ſeveral thouſand pounds a year; and if his Wife or Daughter will have any thing, they muſt lie with S. and have it from him, ſaying, that he had rather have a Child by him then any other.

Witneſſes produced.

The Witneſſes were produced, who teſtified upon Oath, that A. coming to his bedſide, when he was in Bed with his Lady, the Earl told her, that her Body was now his, and if ſhe loved him ſhe muſt love A. and if ſhe lay with another Man with his conſent, it was not her fault but his, and that if it were his will ſhe muſt obey and do it. And then he held both the hands of his Lady and one of her legs till his Servant did lie with her. Immediately thereupon the Lady would have killed her ſelf with a Knife, but was prevented. It was proved that he uſed the body of one of his Men Servants as the body of a Woman. Alſo there were proved againſt him, ſuch other particulars as are not fit to be named, nor come to the knowledg of the World, nor to be heard among Chriſtians.

The King's Counſel concludes.

Afterwards the Counſel for the King ſpake to the Lord High Steward and the Peers to this effect, 'That in ſo dark a buſineſs, a clearer proof could not be had. For let a Man be never ſo wicked, or never ſo impudent, he will not call Witneſſes to ſee his wickedneſs, yet even this point is fully proved. And citing the 18*th* of Levit. they ſhewed that by theſe Abominations the Land is defiled, and that God will viſit the Land for this Iniquity, and ſo concluded, That God may take away his Plagues, let this wicked Man be taken away from among us.

An. 1631.

The Lord High Steward.

‘Then the Lord High-Steward directed his Speech to the Earl, and told him he ſhould be heard in his Defence, with as much patience as was admitted in his Charge, and adviſed him to ſpeak pertinently.

The Priſoner's Objections.

‘The Priſoner alledging that he was a weak Man, of a bad memory, and deſired he might not be interrupted, began his Defence, with Exceptions againſt his Wife, That ſhe was by her own Teſtimony diſhoneſt with Broadway. The Lord High-Steward anſwered, that this made againſt him, he ought not to alledge that Fact as an Imputation to his Wife, which he forced by violence.

‘Then he objected the incompetency of the Witneſſes, his Wife and his Servants, that were drawn by his Son's practice, who ſought his life; and he deſired to know if there were not a Statute that expreſſed the incompetency of Witneſſes.

The Judges Anſwer.

‘The Judges reſolved that there was none touching Witneſſes; but in caſes of High Treaſon there was a Statute concerning Accuſers. Then he demanded if his Wife was to be admitted a Witneſs againſt him. The Judges anſwered, that in Civil Caſes the Wife may not, but in Criminal or Capital Caſes of this nature, where the Wife is the party greived, and on whom the Crime is committed, ſhe is admitted againſt her Husband. It was further propounded, whether it being proved that the party Raviſhed was of evil fame, or unchaſt life, it will amount to a Rape? The Judges reſolved it a Rape, though committed on a common Strumpet. For it is an inforcing of the Will that makes a Rape, and a common Whore may be Raviſhed againſt her will, and it is Felony to do it.

‘It was alſo propounded whether it was to be judged a Rape, when the Woman complained not preſently; and whether there be a neceſſity of accuſation within a convenient time, or twenty four hours? The Judges reſolved, that in as much as ſhe was forced againſt her will, and then ſhewed her diſlike, ſhe was not limited to any time for her complaint; that in an Indictment there is no limitation of time, but in an Appeal there is.

‘Laſtly, it was propounded, Whether Men of no worth may be admitted as ſufficient proof againſt a Baron. The Judges reſolved, that any Man is a ſufficient Witneſs in caſe of Felony.

Lord High-Steward.

‘The Lord High-Steward ſpeaking to the Priſoner ſaid; My Lord, you have been graciouſly dealt with in this Proceeding; for it is not an uſual favour in ſo capital and heinous Cauſes to bring the Parties and Witneſſes face to face before Trial; but you have heard their Examinations long before, queſtioned and oppoſed them to their Faces, and are thereby better enabled to make your Defence. And his Majeſty is ſtill graciouſly pleaſed to continue his Goodneſs towards you, and hath commanded that you ſhould be heard at full. If therefore you have any thing elſe to ſay for your ſelf, ſpeak it.

The Priſoner.

‘Whereunto he anſwered, and firſt made a ſolemn Proteſtation of his Innocency: But nevertheleſs implored the Mercy of God and his Peers, and preſented to their conſideration three Woes.

‘Firſt, Wo to the Man whoſe Wife ſhall be a Witneſs againſt him.

‘Secondly, Wo to the Man whoſe Son ſhall proſecute and conſpire his Father's death.

‘Thirdly, Wo to the Man whoſe Servants ſhall be allowed to be Witneſſes to take away his life.

‘ And he willed the Lords to conſider, that it might be their own Caſes, or the Caſe of any Gentleman, or Man of worth, that kept a Footman, or whoſe Wife was weary of him, or whoſe Son being attained to Age, had a mind to draw his Servants into a Conſpiracy.

‘ That his Son was now 21 years of Age, himſelf being old and decayed, that his Son would have his Lands, and his Wife a young Husband. And that by their Teſtimony, and the Teſtimony of his Servants added to theirs, they had conſpired his Death.

After this the Priſoner, being ſo required, withdrew himſelf from the Bar.

The Lord High Steward ſpake to the Peers, ‘ That they having heard the Proofs, the Priſoner's Defence, the Doubts and Queſtions reſolved, might withdraw, if they were ſatisfied.

The Peers withdraw.

The Peers withdrew, and after an hours debate, with ſeveral Advices and Conferences with the Lord Chief Juſtice, whom they conſulted four times; having alſo in that time ſent the Earl of Warwick, and the Lord of Dorcheſter, together with the Lord Chief Juſtice, to conſult with the Lord High Steward, they returned to their places.

They give their Verdict.

Then the Lord Steward asked them one by one, beginning at the loweſt, and ſo aſcending, Whether the Lord Audley were guilty of the Rape whereof he ſtood indicted? and they all gave him in Guilty, the Lord North only excepted. Then whether he were guilty of the Sodomy? and in this fifteen of the Lords condemned him, and the other eleven freed him.

The Verdict being thus given up, the Priſoner was brought to the Bar to hear his Sentence, and the Lord High Steward ſpoke.

‘ Foraſmuch as thou Mervin Lord Audley haſt bin indicted for divers Felonies, by three ſeveral Indictments, one for a Rape, the other two for Sodomy, and haſt pleaded Not Guilty to them all, and for thy Trial haſt put thy ſelf on God and thy Peers; which Trial thou haſt had, and they have found thee guilty, What canſt thou ſay for thy ſelf why the Sentence of Death ſhould not be pronounced againſt thee?

Whereunto the Priſoner made anſwer, That he had no more to ſay, but referred himſelf to God's and the King's Mercy.

Then ſaid the Lord Steward, ‘ My Heart grieveth for that which my Tongue muſt utter; but this is the only way to cut off wickedneſs, hear therefore thy Sentence.

Thy Sentence is, ‘ That thou go from hence to the Priſon from whence thou cameſt, and from thence to the place of Execution, there to be hang'd by the Neck until thou be dead; and the Lord have mercy on thy Soul.

And having thus pronounced the Sentence, he continued his Speech, and ſaid; ‘ O! think upon your Offences, which are ſo heinous and horrible, that a Chriſtian Man ought ſcarce to name them, and ſuch as the depraved nature of Man, which of it ſelf carries him to all ſin, condemns as unnatural. You have offended, not only againſt Nature, but beyond the rage of a Man's jealouſie; and though you do not ſuffer for abuſing your own Daughter, and that having Honour and Fortune to leave behind you, you would have had the

'ſpurious Seed of a Varlet to inherit both, yet theſe are horrid Crimes. 'But, my Lord, it grieves me to ſee you ſtand out againſt the Truth 'ſo apparent. God might have taken you away when you were 'blinded in your ſins, therefore I hope he hath reſerved you as the 'Subject of his Mercy. He ſends you to ſee this day of ſhame, that 'you might return unto him; and ſeeing he doth thus lovingly draw 'you to his Service, ſpend the remainder of your time in tears and 'repentance; and this days work, I hope, will be the correction of 'many Crimes and Corruptions.

At laſt the Lord Audley deſcended to a low Petition to the Lords, 'and very humbly beſought them to mediate to his Majeſty, that he 'might not die, but be baniſhed; at leaſt, that his Majeſty would not 'ſuddenly cut him off, but give him time of Repentance.

The Trial of Broadway and Fitz Patrick in the King's Bench.

In Trinity Term in the Month of June, Giles Broadway, and Florence Fitz-Patrick were tried in the King's Bench. Broadway was he that Raviſhed the Lady Audley, while her Husband held her by force. Fitz-Patrick was he that committed the Sin of Buggerie with him, her ſaid Huſband; and both their Depoſitions were taken as Evidence againſt them. They were found guilty the 28*th* of June, in Termini fine, and the Judges of that Court preſently ſent theſe Letters under-written to the Lord Keeper to prepare him for the King.

Right Honourable,

The Judges Letter to my Lord Keeper.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip to be informed, That this day Giles Broadway and Florence Fitz-Patrick were tried before us in the King's Bench, for the ſeveral Offences of Rape and Buggery, of which they were Indicted, and they have received Judgment of Death. But we forbear the Awarding Execution, upon a Meſſage from your Lordſhip by Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, of his Majeſty's Pleaſure for the ſtay of Execution, until further direction from his Majeſty: But conceiving there is great cauſe to put the Malefactors to Execution, We thought it our duty to acquaint your Lordſhip with the Paſſages of the Trial, that his Majeſty, by your Lordſhips means, being made acquainted herewith, may ſignify his farther Pleaſure.

Broadway, who was Arraigned for the Rape, very impudently denied his own Confeſſion, taken before the Lords and Peers at the Trial of the Lord Audley: He pretended he was amaz'd, and knew not what he ſubſcribed, and profeſſed himſelf Guiltleſs, with great Execrations, to the little ſatisfaction of thoſe that heard him. He would not be ſatisfied, unleſs the Lady were produced face to face, which ſhe was; who by her Oath, viva voce, ſatisfied all the Hearers, both concerning the truth of the Fact, and his Impudence.

Fitz-Patrick, who was Arraigned for the Buggery, confeſſed his Examination to be true; but like one very ignorant, or rather ſenceleſs, would have them true againſt the Lady Audley, but not againſt himſelf, which was impoſſible. He pretended he was promiſed ſecurity from danger, if he would teſtify againſt the Lord Audley, and ſo ſought to raiſe a ſuſpicion, as if he had bin wrought on to be a Witneſs to bring the Lord Audley to his end. They were both found Guilty, with full ſatisfaction to all that were preſent. And we for our parts thought it to ſtand with the honour of Common Juſtice, that ſeeing their Teſtimony had bin taken to bring bring a Peer of the Realm to his Death, for an Offence as much theirs as his, that they ſhould as well ſuffer for it as he did, leſt any jealouſie ſhould ariſe of the truth of the Fact, and the juſtneſs of the Proceeding. But upon receipt of your Lordſhip's Meſſage, we have ſtayed Execution till his Majeſty's further Pleaſure ſhall be known: To which we ſhall humbly ſubmit our ſelves, and reſt,

At your Lordſhip's command,

N. Hide. W. Jones.
J. Whitlock. G. Croke.

The King being by this means truly informed, ſignified his Pleaſure, That they ſhould be executed, but have a weeks time for Repentance. So the Judges appointed Monday, being the 4*th* of July, for the day of their Execution, when they were executed accordingly.

A New Order for raiſing of Mony to the King's Uſe.

Playing Cards to be ſealed.

AT this time an Office was erected for the Sealing of Playing-Cards. Mr. William Watkins was put into that Employment, and Henry Cogan made Farmer of his Majeſty's Duties accruing thereupon. On June 7, the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of Cardmakers making ſome oppoſition to it, were ſent for, and required to bring with them, as well the Charter and Ordinances of their Corporation, as the Seal by them taken lately from the ſaid Watkins, and to attend the Board with the ſame; beſides it was ordered, that Fryer and Williams, two of the ſaid Cardmakers, ſhould continue ſtill in the cuſtody of the Serjeant till further Order, and till afterwards that this Buſineſs was fully heard and ſetled for the Patentees, ſo that no Cards ſhould be ſold till they were ſealed.

But afterwards a Contract was made between the King on the one part, and the Maſter, Wardens, and Commonalty of the Myſtery and Makers of Playing Cards of the City of London, on the other part; wherein they did covenant,

'That they ſhall and will readily, and every Week in and throughout the whole Year, well, and Workman-like, make ſo many ſeveral Groſs of good and Merchantable Playing-Cards, as in a Schedule thereunto Annexed. And that they ſhall and will, from time to time, for ever hereafter, bring in, and deliver unto ſuch Perſon and Perſons as the King ſhall aſſign or appoint to receive the ſame, the ſaid ſeveral reſpective quantities and proportions of Cards in the Schedule annexed.

'In conſideration of the Premiſes, the King doth covenant with the ſaid Corporation, that he ſhall and will anſwer, and pay unto the ſaid Corporation for every Groſs of the fineſt ſort of Cards, accounting twelve dozen Pair to the Groſs, 18 s. And for every Groſs of Matris Cards, accounting eighteen dozen pair to the Groſs, and delivered in by them weekly as aforeſaid, the like ſum of 28 s. and ſo rateably and proportionably the Paiments to be weekly made by the Officers or Agents of his Majeſty and Succeſſors for the time being; and they are to pay 3 s. 6 d. to his Majeſty, to the Officer or Sealer of the ſaid Cards.

The like Contract was made between his Majeſty and the Dice-makers of the City of London, paying their allotted proportion for every Bale of Dice.

A New Court for them which were not of the King's Houſhold.

The King's Letter to the Judges of the King's Bench, concerning a New Court of the Marſhal of the Houſhold.

IT pleaſed the King's Majeſty to write unto the Judges of the King's Bench, Letters in ſome manner expoſtulatory, as if they took exceptions at the erection of the New Court of the Marſhal of the Houſhold, to hold Plea de non exiſtentibus de hoſpitio Regis; which Court was firſt erected by the Grant of King James, 15 Feb. 22 Jac. and again renewed with more perfection, as was conceived, in November, 6 Caroli. And a Writ of Error being brought into the King's Bench, upon a Judgment given in this Court, the Knight-Marſhal fearing this new Grant would not be held good in Law, cauſed the King to write to the ſaid Judges as aforeſaid.

* Mr. Juſtice Whitlock.

To which Letter, an Anſwer was ſent to the King, penned by * me per Mandatum Curiæ.

The Judges Anſwer.

Dread Soveraign,

W*E make bold to inform your Majeſty, (in anſwer to your gracious Letter unto us of the* 24th of June laſt) that about two years ſince, we were conſulted with by your Attorny General, about the validity of Letters Patents of the 22 Year of your late dear Father, for the Erection of a new Court within the Verge, for thoſe not of the Houſhold; and the ſaid Letters Patents were once read over before us, being aſſembled privately about that buſineſs, and Copies were appointed to be brought unto us, to take the better conſideration thereof; but no Copies were delivered unto us, neither did we ever hear any more of the Buſineſs.

We find it alſo to be true, that ſome againſt whom Judgments had bin given in the ſaid Court, did bring them before us by Writ of Error; but did not proceed ſo far as to Argument or Judgment. And according to the New Patent ſithence granted, we knew not of it until after it was paſſed, nor were ever acquainted with the penning or paſſing thereof.

We underſtand alſo that a Writ of Error is brought before us by Fiſher againſt Wagſtaff, upon a Judgment given in the laſt erected Court, which Cauſe hath proceeded no further than to the reading of the Record. And the Error aſſigned is only this, That neither of the Parties were of your Majeſty's Houſhold. But the day to hear Counſel not being yet come, we cannot underſtand till we hear them upon what points they will ſtand.

And your Majeſty may be pleaſed to be informed, that the Cauſe cometh before us by an Ordinary Court of Proceeding, which we cannot ſtop, neither did we know of the Cauſe, nor take notice of it, until the Record was read in Court. But when it ſhall be ſpoken unto, and we know what the Queſtion will be, we will be exceeding careful and circumſpect, according to our Oaths, that your Majeſty ſhall not ſuffer any prejudice, or diminution in your Power Royal and Prerogative; neither do we make doubt but that your Majeſty hath as full and as great Power, and high Prerogative, gative, as any of your Noble Progenitors ever had, and we will ever maintain it to be ſo.

And whereas your Majeſty's Pleaſure is to be informed by us of the Defects in the ſaid laſt Patent, We have not yet heard the Counſel open them, what they are that they mean to ſtand upon. Howſoever if it be Your Majeſties Pleaſure that we ſhould by way of Conſultation take that Point into our conſideration, We humbly deſire your Majeſty, That foraſmuch as it is a matter of ſo great Importance, that Your Majeſty will be pleaſed for Your better ſatisfaction, to give Order that herein we may have the Aſſiſtance of Your Judges of the Common Pleas, and Barons of Your Exchequer. And we ſhall all endeavour to do your Majeſty true and faithful Service herein. And ſo we recommend your Majeſty by our Prayers to the Protection of the Almighty, and reſt,

Your Majeſties Faithful Servants and Subjects.

Marqueſs Hamilton takes leave of the King.

In the middle of July the Marqueſs of Hamilton having taken his leave of the King, met with the Forces out of Scotland which were to joyn with him in Yarmouth Road, their appointed place of meeting, thence he ſet Sail the 19*th* of July, the Fleet conſiſting of about forty Sail; The 25*th* they came to Elſenore Caſtle in the Sound of Denmark. The Marqueſs went on Shore to kiſs the King of Denmarks hand, who lay at Frederick-ſtadt. The 29*th* they ſet Sail again, coming to an Anchor the next day by the Iſle of Rugen. The 31 they Sailed into the Mouth of the Oder, betwixt Wolgaſt and the Iſle of Uſdom.

Arrives in Denmark.

The 2*d* and 3*d* of Auguſt were the Forces landed, being upon Muſter above 6000 able Men, among which but very few ſick, and only two died in the Voiage.

Afterwards in Pomeren.

The two next days they were all armed and waſted over the River from the Iſle of Vuſdome to Wolgaſt ſide, and there billetted in five Villages or Dorps.

He fails of 6000 Swedes to join with him.

Hereabout they ſtayed for the coming of 6000 Sweeds Horſe and Foot, which that King had promiſed ſhould joyn with the Marqueſs's Army at their landing, to bring them through the Enemies Quarters to the King. But the Marqueſs being diſappointed of the promiſed Forces to joyn with him, could not march up to the King, whereby he loſt the Honour of being engaged in the Battel of Lipſick, which happened about a month after his landing on Wolgaſt ſide, to the great regret of himſelf and his Army.

Printed Inſtructions for Muſters and Arms.

On the 27*th* of July by order of the Privy-Council, came forth in print a Book, entituled, Inſtructions for Muſters and Arms, and the uſe thereof; which in regard of the length thereof, and the Diviſions and Fractions therein, as to the manner of Muſtering, and handling of Arms, it is not mentioned in the body of the Hiſtory, leſt it ſhould prove too tedious to the Reader, but it is put into the Appendix.

At this time the Lords of the Privy-Council thought fit to write to the Lords Lievtenants of each County this quickning Letter, concerning the payment of the Muſter-Maſter.

A Letter from the Lords of the Council concerning the Muſtermaſter's place, directed to the Lords Lieutenants.

WHereas his Majeſty is informed that the entertainments of the Muſter-Maſters within the ſeveral Counties of this Kingdom, altho no more then was heretofore allowed and uſually collected, are denied to be paid by ſundry refractory Perſons, who receive ſome encouragement to oppoſe ſo neceſſary a ſervice for the common defence of his Royal Perſon and Dominions, by reaſon that the Lords Lieutenants and their Deputies make difficulty (or at leaſt dainty) in ſetting their Hands to the ſaid Aſſeſſments juſtly and equally ſet, as uſually hath been accuſtomed, as well in the Raign of Queen Elizabeth, as of King James of bleſſed memory. Now for as much as exerciſing of the Trained Bands is by this means diſcontinued, with imminent danger to the State in general, which his Majeſty in his Royal Office ought not to ſuffer: His Majeſty hath therefore commanded us to ſignifie unto your Lordſhips, that it is his expreſs pleaſure, that you cauſe the ſaid Muſter-Maſters entertainment to be rated according to the accuſtomed manner, by Aſſeſſment under your own Hands, and your Deputies; and if any Perſon or Perſons of whatſoever quality, ſhall make refuſal to pay the Rates ſo aſſeſſed on them, that then you take preſent order they be bound over, without any favour or forbearance, to anſwer their contempt before us. Now as his Majeſty is thus graciouſly careful that the Muſter-Maſter ſhall receive the Allowance due unto him for the exerciſing of that Service; ſo it is alſo his Majeſties pleaſure that yaur Lordſhips take eſpecial care to ſee him diligently perform his Duty according to the importance of the ſaid Service, &c.

Trained-bands to march to the Sea-Coaſt.

Likewiſe the Lords of the Council thought fit upon Reaſons of State to order the Trained-Bands of ſeveral Counties to march to the Sea-Coaſts for the defence of the Kingdom; and ſeveral Perſons refuſing to pay the Muſter-Maſters of the Trained-Bands, were ſent for up by Meſſengers to the Council Table, where among others appeared Edward Bulſtrod of Chilton in the County of Bucks Gentleman; but was diſcharged from any further attendance on their Lordſhips, upon giving his promiſe under his hand in writting to conform himſelf hereafter in paying the Muſter-Maſter of that County his due, according to the Aſſeſment of the Deputy Lieutenent.

The like of Henry Cavon of Crendon in the ſame County, who was diſcharged of his attendance in promiſing to pay the Muſter-Maſter his due in like manner as Edward Bulſtred did. The like for Richard Pauly and others.

Judges Opinions concerning Rea and Ramſey.

‘PReſently after my return from this Circuit, my ſelf and the reſt of
‘the Judges of the Kings Bench, were ſent for by the Lord-Keeper to London, to adviſe with him about the Affairs of his Majeſty.
‘We came thither on Monday 22*d. Aug.* except the Chief-Juſtice, who ‘was ſick. The matter conſulted of, was to give our Opinion con‘cerning the Conference had in Germany between certain Scotiſh
‘Gentlemen, about the making the Marqueſs of Hamilton the Head
‘of a Party againſt the King and his Kingdoms of England and Scotland.

'The Lord Rea a Scotiſh Baron, did Impeach Ramſey and Meldrum for moving him to this Conſpiracy: They denied it punctually, and no Witneſs could be produced. Ramſey, a Souldier, offered to clear himſelf by Combat, that he was Innocent; and the Appellant accepted of his Offer. The King was deſirous it ſhould be put upon a Duel; and we were conſulted with, 1ſt what the Offence was? 2*dly* where the Trial might be?

'We all with the Lord Keeper were of the Opinion, 1ſt. That it was an high and horrible Treaſon, if that in the Examinations were found true. 2*dly*, That the Trial might be by an Appeal of Treaſon, upon which the Combat might be joyned: But the King muſt make a Conſtable, durante beneplacito, for the Marſhal could not take the Appeal without him: That it muſt be after the manner of the Civil Law, and we were not to meddle in it. Likewiſe we were of Opinion that this Proceeding before the Conſtable and Marſhal was, as it was before the Statute of the 35*th* H.8. cap. 2. and that Statute deviſed a way how to try theſe Foreign Treaſons in England, but did not take away the other. We were alſo of Opinion that the Stat. of 1ſt Mar. Cap.10. did not take it away nor intend it; and that a Conviction in this Appeal was no corruption of Blood or forfeiture at the Common-Law. See Doughtie's Caſe in Cokes Comentaries, fol. 75. Sect. Eſcuage.

Sir Hen. Vane ſent Ambaſſador to the Kings of Denmark & Sweden.

IN the Month of September this Year Sir Henry Vane Knight, Comptroller of his Majeſties Houſhold, and one of his Privy-Council, Embaſſador Extraordinary to the King of Denmark and Sweden, and to other Princes and States of Germany; took his leave of his Majeſty and embarqued with all his Train in order to his ſaid Voyage, and arrived at Gluckſtadt ſcituate upon the Elb, in October following, by whom his Majeſty wrote this Letter to the Marqueſs.

The King's Letter to Marqueſs Hamilton.

James,

*A*Ccording to my Promiſe I have diſpatched* Henry Vane, whom I have commanded to impart unto you both his publick and private Inſtructions, ſo that it will be a good excuſe for my Laſineſs in writing ſhort unto you, and a Teſtimony to you that your abſcence neither makes me alter nor forget you; for you may be aſſured that my truſt of you is ſo well grounded, that it lies not in the power of any body to alter me from being,

Your loving Friend and Couſin,
C. R.

The Ambaſſador was no ſooner gone on his Voyage to the King of Sweden, but before his arrival in Germany, that King gave the King of Great Britain an account of the Victory obtained over Tilly at the Battel at Lipſick. The Letter followeth.

The King of Sweden writes to the King of Great Britain of the Battel of Lipſick.

GUſtavus Adolphus, &c. Since we are ſatisfied of the conſtant Propenſity your Serene Majeſty hath for us and the publick Good, and that which happened to us ſucceſsfully, and for the good of endangered Chriſtianity, that your Serene Majeſty did alſo bear a part therein, we would not omit the certifying your Majeſty of the memorable Victory, which Divine Goodneſs

An. 1631. Goodneſs afforded us. After the Elector of Saxony had join'd his Forces with ours, we marched againſt the Enemy with both Armies, and the Enemies Army under General Tilly, oppoſed us Septemb. 7, having drawn out all his Forces a mile from the Fortreſs at Lipſick. The Battel being begun, the buſineſs was briskly managed on both ſides for the ſpace of 4 hours and upward, till at laſt, by the ſingular bleſſing of God, the Enemies Army, by the indefatigable valour of our Men, was put to flight, and diſſipated, we purſuing them to the very Walls of the City. The Enemy left us their Cannon and Baggage. The General retired into the Biſhoprick of Halberſtadt, having received a Wound, they whom we purſued being left to our Souldiery and Mercy. Many of the Enemy lay dead in the Field where the Battel was fought, and among them the Serjeant Major General, and other Commanders in the Army. Among ſome thouſands of Priſoners, the Duke of Holſtein was one, and ſome others of the moſt eminent quality. The praiſe of which Succeſſes is due to Almighty God, and ought deſervedly to be attributed to his Goodneſs, and we hope, not only the ſo much deſir'd wiſhes of ſo many thouſand People of reſtoring Religion and Liberty, but alſo the facility of ſetting up the afflicted Cauſe of the King of Bohemia, ſhall now manifeſtly appear. We do not therefore diſtruſt but that your Serene Majeſty will proſecute this Victory, not only with Joy aud Affection, but alſo make uſe of ſo fair an opportunity, and that it will be your Royal Care to judg of all things henceforward to be conferr'd upon, and to conſult of thoſe things which relate to Chriſtianity and their ſafety by your Heroick Counſels. We will not any farther trouble you, but commend your Serene Majeſty to the Divine Protection for the happy increaſe of all things. Dated at Hall of the Saxons, the 13*th of* September, 1631.

Your Serene Majeſty's

Good Brother and Allie,

Guſtavus Adolphus.

A Relation of the Battel by Lipſick, written by Guſtavus Horn, the Lord Marſhal General to his Majeſty the King of Sweden.

AS ſoon as the King of Sweden had reſolved to give aſſiſtance to the Duke of Saxony, whoſe Country the Enemy had already invaded, upon the 3*d* of September, he paſſed his Army over the Bridg at Wittenburgh, and joined himſelf with the Armies of the Dukes of Saxony and Brandenburg, at Tuben, the 5*th ditto*, where firſt they deliberated and conſulted in what manner they might beſt encounter the Enemy, and whether it were wiſdom to bring it to a Battel preſently, or by delay of time to break and weaken the Power of the Enemy. His Majeſty was of opinion not to ſet all upon Fortune, much leſs to put their whole State in danger by the event of an uncertain Battel; yet, for all that, the Duke of Saxony inſiſted ſtill for a Battel, ſaying, That there was no other means to drive the Enemy out of his Country, much leſs was it poſſible that both theſe Armies could be furniſhed of all neceſſaries, eſpecially becauſe the Enemy had incorporated the beſt part of the Country. And therefore he thought fit in wiſdom to approach towards the Enemy towards Lipſick, and to encounter him with all their Might. Whereupon the King, with the foreſaid Duke, upon the 6th of September, marched with their Armies within two miles of Lipſick; which Town Tilly by Compoſition had taken in, as alſo the Caſtle; both which, by reaſon of bloody threatning, ſubmitted themſelves to Tilly: Whereupon we followed the 7th ditto, and met the Enemy a mile from Lipſick. Notwithſtanding the Enemy had both the Wind and higher Ground of us for his advantage, yet for all that we skirmiſhed very luſtily with each other in good order, both with Ours, as alſo with the Saxon's Army. The King's Army upon the right hand, and the Saxon's Army imploied upon the left hand. The King's Army was divided into the Avant-guard of the right Wing, which the King himſelf commanded, and there ſtood alſo the moſt and beſt Armed Horſemen, interlaced with certain Muſquetiers, in the Rere-guard of the ſaid Wing, commanded by General Bannier. In the Vaunt-guard of the Battel, ſtood four Squadrons of Pikes and Muſquetiers, who were commanded by theſe Chiefs, Mounſieur Duivell, Acko, Oxenſtern, Erentruiter, Hardt, and Winckle. In the Rere-guard of theſe Battails there ſtood three other Squadrons, the Count of Thurn, Hebron, and Vitſdum; and after theſe, two Regiments of Horſe upon the left Wing, by whom his Majeſty appointed Guſtavus Horn. The reſt of the Horſe were divided into the right Wing, the Vaunt-gaurd and the Rere-guard mingled with Muſquetiers. In this order was the whole Army ſet, ſo that we got half-wind of the Enemy; yet they kept the advantage ſtill of the higher Ground, where he had planted his Artillery. We marching thus in their ſight, through a foul Paſſage, the Enemy did ſome harm with his great Pieces on our Troops, chiefly among thoſe that were with Guſtavus Horn upon his left hand. And hereupon with his left Wing (where the greateſt ſtrength of his Horſe was) fell upon our left Wing. But whilſt they were thus buſied to gain Ground more and more of us, and to get the Wind, as they thought; the Horſe and the Foot Regiments of the Duke of Holſtein retreated from the Battalia; and the right Wing perceiving that the commanded Muſquetiers of our right Wing were mingled among the Horſe, and had hard entertainment of the Enemy, they drew more to their left hand; and ſo the Enemy charged more upon the Reſerve of our right Wing, than upon the Vaunt-Guard, which his Majeſty cauſed very ſeaſonably to be ſeconded with ſome Troops, in ſuch manner, that the Enemies left Wing with little ado was broken and put to flight. The Enemies Battel, conſiſting of all his Foot, being divided into four great Spaniſh Battalions of ſixteen Regiments, upon this marched from the Hill, together with their Horſe: But in regard they were ſo annoyed with our Artillery which were placed upon our left Wing, they ſo turned their Order, that moſt of them fell upon the Duke of Saxon's Army to their diſadvantage; but all their Horſe fell upon our left Wing, who were ſoon diſperſed and put to flight. And contrarily the Footmen of the Duke of Saxony almoſt fled the Field; yet whilſt the Enemy purſued the Saxons, our left Wing charged into their Flank, and upon the two Troops of Reſerves; and in this poſture we fought long, and loſt many of our Horſe. Yet, finally, after Guſtavus Horne had ſoundly charged the Enemies Battail with that Regiment of Gothland-Horſe which his Majeſty ſent him for an aſſiſtance and ſuccour, together with the commanded Muſquetiers which had bin placed in the left Wing by the King, ſo that they began to grow very thin, and were diminiſhed, their Battel preſently broke, and they were all put to flight excepting four Regiments; who by reaſon of the Smoke and Duſt, were ſo ſhadowed from our ſight, that they ſaved themſelves.

After this Defeat his Majeſty marched to Hall, and took in the Town and Caſtle; then marched forward, and took in Poſewald and Querfurt. The Duke of Saxony marched towards Bohemia. His Majeſty took in Erfurt, Gota, Hamelburgh, Mulhouſen, and Werburgh. The 20*th* of October his Majeſty came to Franken, took Carelſtadt, with the Biſhopricks of Wittsburgh and Bamburgh. The Landtgrave of Heſſen took Fulda, Vach, and Fritzlaer; He came into Weſtphalia, and took Paterborn, with ſome other Places; Roſtock rendred upon Compoſition to the Duke of Mecklenburgh. The King's Forces took in Dunckenſpil, Nortlingen, Rotenburgh. Magdenburgh was ſtrongly beſieged. His Majeſty took in Hanaw, Franckford, and Hougſt. The Saxons took in Glockow, and defeated the Emperor's Men by Croſten. The Count of Thurn took in Prague. The King's Men beat the Emperor's Men by Warheim; defeated alſo the Souldiers of the League by Swynfurt, and alſo by Elleboghen. His Majeſty paſſed the River of Rhine, and took in Mentz, Worms, Oppenheim, and almoſt all the Towns of the Lower Palatinate.

Mr. Ford, Thorn, and Hodges, appeal to the Proctors; being queſtioned for preaching againſt the King's Inſtructions, Aug. 23.

Cauſe heard before the King.

Mr. Thomas Ford of Magdalen-Hall, Mr. Giles Thorne of Balial College, and Mr. Giles Hodges of Exeter College, in their Sermons at St. Maries, uſed Expreſſions againſt the Arminians, under the Title of Pelagians, and Demi-Pelagians, for which they were Convented before the Vice-Chancellor, Dr. Smith, and others, as Offenders againſt the King's Inſtructions. They appealed from the Vice-Chancellor to the Proctors, who received their Appeals. Hereupon the Biſhop of London complains to the King of this Matter; and the King appointed to hear the Buſineſs at Woodſtock, on the 23*d* day of Auguſt. Concerning which Perſons and Proceedings before the King, the Biſhop of London makes this Memoir, viz.

The Biſhop of London's Memoir, Aug. 23.

In June and July were the great Diſorders in Oxford, by appealing from Dr. Smith, then Vice-Chancellor. The chief Ringleaders were the ſaid Mr. Ford and Mr. Thorn. And the Proctors, Mr. Bruch and Mr. Doughty received their Appeals, as if it had not bin perturbatio Pacis. The Vice-Chancellor was forced in a ſtatutable way, to appeal to the King, who with all the Lords of his Council then preſent, heard the Cauſe at Woodſtock, Auguſt 23. 1631. being Tueſday in the Afternoon.

The Sentence upon the hearing was; That Ford, Thorn, and Hodges, ſhould be baniſhed the Univerſity; and both the Proctors were commanded to come into the Convocation-Houſe, and there reſign their Office, that two others might be named out of the ſame Colleges. Dr. Prideaux, Rector of Exeter College, and Dr. Wilkinſon, Principal of Magdalen Hall, received a ſharp Admonition for their miſbehaviour in this Buſineſs.

The Crimes of theſe young Divines are more particularly ſet down int he Univerſity-Regiſter.

1. Mr. Hodges was ordered to make a publick Recantation-Sermon in St. Maries Church in Oxford, before the Univerſity, confeſſing his great Offences in Preaching contrary to his Majeſties Declaration.

2. That he ſhould make a Submiſſion and Recantation, penned to his hand in the Convocation-Houſe, before the whole Aſſembly of the Doctors, Proctors, Regent and Non-Regent Maſters, on his bended Knees.

In which Recantation he did acknowledge, 'That he fell upon the 'delivery of thoſe Points, which by his Majeſty's Royal Injunction 'were forbidden him to meddle with at all; and particularly did acknowledge that he let fall ſome paſſages, which might be taken to the 'diſparagement of the Government of the Church, in making erroneous and Heretical Opinions the way to perferment; craving the Pardon of the Univerſity in the general,and more eſpecially of the moſt 'Honorable Chancellor of that Univerſity.

Mr. Ford refuſed to make any Addreſs to be reſtored to the Univerſity: and it being intended by ſome to chooſe him a Lecturer in the Town of Plimouth, they were required not to chooſe him upon pain of his Majeſties diſpleaſure.

*Novemb.*18. Goldſmiths in Cheapſide.

At this time it was a great Eye-ſore, that the Goldſmiths-Row in Cheapſide, which hath ever been a great Ornament to the City, ſhould grow to be intermixed in a broken faſhion with Shops of meaner Trades, which did diſparage the City: whereupon the King declar'd his pleaſure, that that Deformity ſhould be taken away, and it being debated at the Council-Table, the Recorder and ſome Aldermen preſent, it was refer'd to the two Lord Chief Juſtices, and other Judges, to conſider what Laws or Statutes there are to enforce Goldſmiths to plant themſelves for the uſe of their Trade in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet: but after ſeveral Debates before the King and Council, it was ordered, that the Company of Goldſmiths ſhould take order that within a ſhort time limited, Goldſmiths-Row in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet ſhould be ſupplied with Goldſmiths; and that thoſe who keep Shops ſcateringly in other parts of the City,ſhould have Shops procur'd for them in Cheapſide, or Lombard-ſtreet, upon penalty, that thoſe of the Aſſiſtants and Livery, that did not take care herein, ſhould loſe their places. And it was further ordered, for the time to come, that all ſuch who ſhould ſerve their Apprenticeſhips to Goldſmiths, and thereupon were made Free, ſhould enter into Bond, not to keep a Goldſmiths Shop in any other part of the City, than in Cheapſide, or Lombard-Street, and that the Lord Mayor ſhould take care, that Shops be provided for them at moderate and indifferent rates.

Mr. Juſtice Whitlock thought fit, with his own hand to ſet down in writing this Memorial concerning Sir Nicholas Hide.

Judg Whitlock's Character of Sir Nicholas Hide.

'That Sir Nicholas Hide, Knight, Chief Juſtice of the Kings Bench, 'died at his Houſe in Hampſhire, ſince the laſt Trinity Term, to wit, 'upon Friday the 26th of Auguſt, 1631. How he was made Chief-'Juſtice, and when, *vide lib. ‘undertake to the King, nor adventure to give him a reſolute Anſwer in any weighty Buſineſs, when the Queſtion was of the Law, but he would pray that he might Confer with his Brethren. And the King ever gave way to it. He dyed of a hot Feaver, but made incurable by reaſon that an Impoſtume brake in his Head in the time of his ſickneſs. He was a ſpare lean Man of Body, and of an excellent temperate Diet, and promiſed long life by his Temperatneſs, to thoſe that converſed with him; he was 59 Years of age in May laſt.

In order to a Commiſſion under the Great Seal, dated the 24th of November, there began a notable Trial, before Robert Earl of Lindſey, Conſtable of England; and Thomas Earl of Arundel and Surry, Earl Marſhal of England, in the Court of Chivalry, judicially ſitting in the Painted-Chamber at Weſtminſter; together with other Honourable Perſons, namely Philip Earl of Pembrook and Montgomery, Lord Chamlain of the King's Houſhold; Edward Earl of Dorſet, Lord Chamberlain of the Queens Houſhold; James Earl of Carliſle, Edmund Earl of Mulgrave; William Earl of Morton; William Earl of Stratherne; Edward Vicount Wimbleton; Thomas Vicount Wentworth; Henry Vicount Faulkland; and Sir Henry Martin, Judg of the High Court of Admiralty, all of Counſel with the Court; Gilbert Dethick being Regiſter. Which Letters Patents being read by the Regiſter of the Court, Donald Lord Rea, the Plantiff; and David Ramſey, Gentleman of the King's Privy Chamber, Defendent, made their perſonal appearance. Then the Lord Marſhal ſpake in defence of the Court of Chivalry, and the manner of proceeding therein, according to the Law and Cuſtom of Arms, ſhewing;

'That it was legal and agreeable to Right and Juſtice, as any Judicial Proceſs in any other Court of this Realm; eſpecially when the 'nature of the Cauſe required it. And that in theſe latter Ages this 'kind of Trial hath not bin frequently uſed, but that was to be attributed to the pious and peaceable Government of the State, under 'our moſt happy and prudent King, and his moſt Illuſtrious Predeceſſors, 'the Kings and Queens of England, and the Obedience and Fidelity of 'the People of England; both which are to be aſcribed to the favour 'of Almighty God, conferring this bleſſing upon our Nation above 'all the Nations round about us.

The Lord Marſhal further ſhewed; 'That it was an Error in many, 'to apprehend, that as ſoon as an Appeal is brought into this Court, 'it was preſently to be decided by Duel; when as Dueling was the 'ultimate Trial in defect of all others. And even then it was in the 'Arbitriment of the Court, Whether a Duel ſhall be granted or denied?

The Earl Marſhal's Speech being ended, Arthur Duke, Doctor of the Civil Law, made a Speech concerning the Antiquity, Juriſdiction, and Neceſſity of the Court of Chivalry, held by the Lord High Conſtable, with the Earl Marſhal, eſpecially in Caſes of Treaſon, where the Truth can no otherwiſe be diſcovered.

Then Rea and Ramſey were called into the Inner Court, and the one ſtood on the right hand, and the other on the left of the Lord Conſtable, and Earl Marſhal.

The Lord Rea preſented his Appeal in Writing; and his Petition formerly exhibited to the King, was read in theſe words.

To the King's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The humble Petition of Donald Lord Rea.

The Lord Rea his Petition.

Moſt humbly ſheweth,

'That whereas he having heard ſundry Speeches fall from Mr. David Ramſey, importing Plots and Practices againſt Your Royal 'Crown and Realms, did, according to his Duty and Allegiance, reveal the ſame to Your Majeſty; the Truth whereof he is ready to 'maintain with the hazard of his Life, and deareſt Blood, if he be 'thereunto required. Now ſo it is (may it pleaſe Your Sacred Majeſty) that Your Petitioner (being informed by his Counſel) That 'theſe Trials, by Duel, or ſingle Combat, are ultimum Remedium; 'And that a Man may not appeal to this kind of Divine Judgment, 'but where all poſſibility of diſcovery by ordinary Trials fail, and 'cannot be had. And whereas Your Suppliant, at ſuch time as he 'diſcloſed all the Practices which he heard from the ſaid Ramſey, and 'did withal diſcover what he heard likewiſe from Robert Meldrum;

An. 1631.

‘againſt whom alſo one Captain James Borthwick hath been examined, and the Examination of Meldrum taken thereupon. And your Suppliant conceiving that if Meldrum be guilty, the ſaid Mr. Ramſey cannot be innocent, your Suppliant therefore, not out of any inclination to decline the Combat (as God who knoweth his Heart can witneſs with him) but only out of his ſincere deſire to have the truth diſcovered, in a Caſe ſo highly concerning your Majeſty's Safety, Honour and Government, moſt humbly prayeth, that you would be graciouſly pleaſed, that Meldrum may be firſt proceeded againſt according to Law, and if upon his Tryal, the Conſpiracy affirmed by your Petitioner, do not fully appear, he ſhall then with all alacrity (as in a Caſe which otherwiſe cannot be cleared) juſtifie his Aſſertions to be moſt true; either as a Defendant againſt the ſaid Ramſey, (who demanded the Combat of him before your Majeſty) or as a Challenger if the Court of Chivalry ſhall ſo award, and ſhall be bound in all Duty ever to pray for your Majeſty's long life and happy Reign.

The Petition being read, the Lord Conſtable, with the Counſel of the other Nobles, declared his Majeſty's pleaſure, that this Cauſe ſhould be tried in this Court, and gave the Appeal to be read as followeth:

‘In the Name of God, Amen. Before you, moſt Illuſtrious and Right Honorable Lords, Robert Earl of Lindſey, Conſtable of England, and Thomas Earl of Arundel and Surry, Marſhal of England, or your Lieutenants in this Court-Marſhal: I Donald Lord Rea do accuſe and Challenge thee David Ramſey in the month of May or of June in the Year of our Lord 1630, and in the ſixth Year of the Reign of our Lord Charles, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, being then alone in my Ship within or near the Port of Elſinore in the Kingdom of Swedland, in the upper part or Deck of the ſaid Ship, when thou hadſt this diſcourſe or the like, and ſpakeſt theſe or the like words to me in Engliſh, viz. You told me many abuſes in the Court of England, and that there was nothing to be looked for but Deſolation and change of Religion, and therefore you had retired your ſelf thence, ſince no honeſt Man could live there, and with many ſuch diſcourſes you laboured to poſſeſs me: to which my Anſwer was, The Lord mend thoſe evils, and no remedy but Patience. By God Donald, ſaid you, (I will uſe your own Phraſe) we muſt help God to amend it. You told me you had brought as much Gold with you as would maintain you at the rate of ſix pounds a day for three years, and you aſſured me before that time would expire, God would raiſe up ſome Men to defend his Church, and liberate honeſt Men from Slavery. I deſired if you could tell if the Marqueſs of Hamilton would come over? you ſaid, he would the morrow or next day. After I asked you what content my Lord Marqueſs had at home? you ſaid, none. I asked you what Religion my Lord Marqueſs was? you ſaid, a good Proteſtant, and before it be long he would let the world ſee his Deſign was for the defence of his Religion, and the Glory of God, and that he ſhould have an Army ſo well provided with brave Men, and all Warlike Proviſion, that he ſhould not need to be afraid with whom he Encountered. I asked you what advantage was it to us to 'make a free paſſage for the Goſpel in Germany, if we loſt it at home? You ſaid there were many honeſt Men in our Land, ſpeaking of Scotland, adding if we had once an Army over, what would you think if we ſhould take a ſtart to ſettle them alſo, for ere it be long you will hear our Country will go together by th'Ears, ſo cloſing that nights diſcourſe. He ſays at laſt, ſome ſuch thing perhaps is intended; but I will not tell you more, for my Maſter's Secrets are dear to me. The third night after, in an Iſland, you told me that Alex. Hamilton and Sir James Hamilton, were to go for England, and you for Holland, and in the mean while pretended your ſelf willing to do me Service in England. I told you I had a promiſe of the Reverſion of Orkney from the King my Maſter; if the Marqueſs would mediate with his Majeſty for it, he would do me a great kindneſs, and I ſaid, It were good for my Lord to have a Friend in that place for his ends. You moreover asked me, if there were good Harbours in Orkney, or in my Land, or in any part that might be fortified? I ſaid, Yes. You ſaid, By God it was to be thought upon; and you deſired leave to think upon it that night, and on the morrow You and Alexander Hamilton did deſire me to write a general Letter to the Marqueſs, with truſt to the Bearer, Alexander Hamilton, concerning Orkney, leſt Letters ſhould miſcarry, with great aſſurance of true Friendſhip from your Maſter, if I would continue conſtant in Reſolution, and ſo I gave you my Letter.

'Afterwards in March laſt paſt, you came to me from the Hague in the Low-Countries to Amſterdam, where you ſtayed with me eight days, and delivered me a Letter from the Marqueſs, only of Compliment and thanks, and you told me all went right with the Marqueſs, That he had gotten from his Majeſty 10000 l. in England, and the Wine Cuſtoms of Scotland for ſixteen years, which the Marqueſs would ſell, and all things went on without any demur or obſtacle, and the only ſtay was for want of Arms, Ammunition, and eſpecially Powder, and deſired me to put in hard with the Swediſh Embaſſador, which I did, and you told me that the Marqueſs had writ to you, that if the Arms and other Proviſions were obtained, they ſhould be ſent to England, and not to Scotland; at which you did marvel, becauſe his Lordſhip had changed his reſolution, being all the other Proviſions were ſent to Scotland. Alſo you told me, that my Lord had ſent over a Man to receive them, as I deſired. I told you the Letter which Mr. Lindſey brought me, deſired the Arms to be ſent to England. You ſaid, though the Arms were had, yet you would not ſend them till you had further order from the Marqueſs, and you deſired me to haſt to you the anſwer thereof. In the end you told me you had evil News to tell me, that the Marqueſſe's Lady was brought to bed of a Child.

Some few days after, in March or April laſt paſt, at Delf in the Low-Countries, I told you that I had a Letter from the King of Sweden to the King of Britain, deſiring ſome Ships for the Marqueſs. You ſaid the Marqueſs and I muſt beware of that, for then they will think that we mean to take their Land from them with their own Ships. I asked you, where our Forces ſhould meet? You anſwered me, on the Sea. I asked you, where we ſhould land? You ſaid in ſome part of your old Maſter the King of Denmark's Countrey. You asked further, What think you if we ſhould plunder ſome nook of his Land, and there-

‘thereafter go where we pleaſe; for we think * he will be the only ‘Man that will be moſt againſt us. I anſwered, I am content; for he ‘reſts in him more than you all. I asked if my Lord was to raiſe any ‘Men in England? You ſaid one Regiment. I asked you if they would ‘be true to us? You ſaid that there were Engliſh that my Lord was as ‘much aſſured of as of any Scots. I asked, where we ſhould make ‘theſe meet? You ſaid at Harwich or Yarmouth. I asked if they were ‘fortified? You ſaid, that no parts of all thoſe Coaſts in England or ‘Scotland could hold us from landing. I told you that I feared Mr.
‘Meldrum was an evil Secretary; you asked me wherein? I ſaid,
‘that Meldrum had told me many things, and that I thought he had ‘told it to others: you ſaid Mr. Meldrum knew nothing thereof when ‘you came from England, tho he might well ſuſpect, and that he ſpake
‘once to you to that time, as if all were ours, and that you had great ‘patience to hold your hands off him although he was your Couſin.
‘I told you that I was not a Souldier of Fortune; but had bread at home,
‘and might live without hazarding my ſelf in the Fortunes of War, yet ‘notwithſtanding that I would hazard my Life and Fortune with the ‘Marqueſs, only that I would know the buſineſs. You anſwered, you ‘would tell me no more of your Maſters Secrets, but that you would ‘write a Letter with me to the Marqueſs, and when I came there, the ‘Marqueſs would infuſe in me that which you would not; withal you deſired
‘me not to tell the Marqueſs what had paſſed betwixt you and me, ‘whereby the Marqueſs ſhould have all the thanks to himſelf; adding ‘that he was very cloſe, and that he would diſcover himſelf to them
‘that he knew would hazard with him. That my Brother-in-law
‘Seaforth knew all, and that the Marqueſs truſted him much. I asked
‘you what was done in my buſineſs of Orknay? You told me nothing
‘till my coming, and ſaid, It might be I ſhould have it better cheap
‘than to pay the Duty of it; and you told me England had made a ‘Peace with Spain, very prejudicial to Holland; and that Spain and ‘France were both ſtriving who ſhould firſt drink up England, but ‘you hoped we ſhould prevent them both. Beſides you told me the ‘lack of Powder was the greateſt Let. As for Arms we might get help
‘thereof in every Houſe, and that we had reaſonable proviſion thereof
‘already; and that my Lord had written to you that he had 90
‘Pieces of Cannon great and ſmall already provided. I deſired you
‘to go in perſon and ſpeak to the Swediſh Ambaſſador for the Powder,
‘and to advertiſe me in the Brill of his Anſwer, that ſo I might ‘aſſure the Marqueſs what he might expect; and you did ſend a Letter
‘by one of your own Men to the Brill, to ſhew me that you were
‘with the Ambaſſador, and hoped to have that which we ſpake of.
‘You asked my advice whether it were beſt to croſs the Seas once, or
‘to go on bravely? I anſwered, Delays were not good, which you did ‘condeſcend unto, or you uſed words and ſpeeches to that effect.

‘But if thou the ſaid David Ramſey ſhalt deny the Premiſes, or ſay ‘thou hadſt not the ſame Diſcourſe, or to the ſame effect with me, at
‘the foreſaid times and places; I the aforeſaid Donald Lord Rea, ſay
‘and affirm, That thou David Ramſey art a Falſe Traitor, and lyeſt falſly.
‘And in caſe the Premiſes cannot otherwiſe be found out by the Sentence
‘of this Court, proffer my ſelf ready by the help of God, to ‘prove and juſtifie this my Accuſation and Appeal, by my Body upon ‘thy Body, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of Weapons in a Duel,
‘to be performed in the preſence of our Lord the King, &c. Which

Which Challenge being publickly recited, the ſaid Donald Lord Rea, the Party challenging, threw his Glove in the Court, of a red or brown Colour for a Pawn or Pledg, in preſence of the aforeſaid Lord Conſtable, and Thomas Lord Marſhal, in confirmation of all contained in the Bill and Challenge.

Ramſey's Defence againſt Rea.

Then the ſaid David Ramſey anſwered in his own Perſon, and ſaid, ‘That the ſaid Bill and Appeal was and is falſe, and that the ſaid Donald Lord Rea, the Appellant or Challenger, did lie falſly, and that he was ready to juſtify and prove this in Duel, according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of Arms, and of this Court, by his Body upon the Body of the ſaid Donald Lord Rea, as it ſhould ſeem good to the Court.

And thereupon in confirmation and juſtification of the Premiſes, he threw his Glove in the Court, of a white colour, for his Pawn, or Pledg, in preſence of the Lord Conſtable, and Earl Marſhal aforeſaid; Which Gloves reſpectively Richard St. George, otherwiſe Clarenceux, King of Arms, took up and delivered into the hands of the ſaid Lord Conſtable with due reverence; and the ſaid Lord Conſtable, together with the Earl Marſhal, committed them to the cuſtody of the aforeſaid Regiſter of the Court. Then the ſaid Lord Marſhal arreſted, as well the ſaid Lord Rea the Challenger, as the aforeſaid David Ramſey Eſq; the Defendent. And the ſaid Donald Lord Rea produced Sir Robert Gordon, Sir Piercy Crosby, Sir Walter Crosby, and Sir William Forbes Knights and Baronets, and William Innis Eſq; for his Sureties, who obliged themſelves all, and every of them, & diviſim & conjunctim, to our Lord the King, for the ſaid Lord Rea, Body for Body, that the ſaid Lord Rea ſhould duly proſecute this aforeſaid Challenge, to the final and laſt determination of the ſame; and that in the mean time the ſaid Lord Rea ſhould keep the Peace of our Lord the King, againſt all and every of his Lieges, and eſpecially againſt the foreſaid David Ramſey Eſquire.

And the ſaid David Ramſey produced for his Sureties, the Right Honourable James Earl of Abercorne, and Robert Earl of Roxborough. Then the Earl Marſhal aforeſaid releaſed Donald Lord Rea the Challenger, and the aforeſaid David Ramſey Defendent, from the aforeſaid Arreſt, and at their requeſt reſpectively delivered their Bonds of Suretiſhips to be cancelled.

After this there was read in the Court, the Lord Rea's Petition to the King, for divers Noblemen and others to be of his Counſel in this Cauſe; whoſe Names he preſented in a Schedule annexed, as they are here recorded.

To the KING's moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of Donald Lord Rea.

The Lord Rea his Petition to his Majeſty.

‘Humbly beſeecheth Your Royal Majeſty in this Cauſe of Appeal againſt David Ramſey in the Court of Chivalry, to grant unto the ſaid Petitioner, that he may have the Parties, whoſe Names are in the Schedule hereunto annexed, to be of his Counſel in the ſaid Court. It is his Majeſty's Pleaſure, That only theſe ſhould ſerve, both for his Friends to adviſe him, and his Counſel to plead for him.

Ramſey's Defence.

In the Name of God. Amen. In the preſence of you moſt Illuſtrious and Right Honourable Robert Earl of Lindſey, Conſtable of England, and Thomas Earl of Arundel and Surrey, Marſhal of England, or your Deputies in your Court Marſhal; I David Ramſey Eſq; Defendent, ſay and affirm, That all and every the things contained in the ſaid pretended Appeal and Accuſation, were and are falſe, and ſuggeſted and propoſed againſt me maliciouſly, and againſt Truth, excepting what follows at the time and place underwritten; I had the under-written Diſcourſe with thee, or to the ſame effect, and no other, viz.

I David Ramſey being with thee Donald Lord Rea, in the Month of May or June, as it is in the ſaid Bill mentioned, and in the Ship there alſo mentioned, being in or near the Port there mentioned, thou deſiredſt that I would tell thee, If the Marqueſs of Hamilton would come over? and I anſwered he would. And you asking me of what Religion the Lord Marqueſs was, I ſaid, A good Proteſtant, and before it be long, he would let the World ſee his Deſign was for the Defence of his Religion, and the Glory of God. And then asking me whether he would come over with an Army? I ſaid, Yes, with an Army of brave Men, and all Warlike Proviſion, that he cared not with whom he encountred. Which Paſſages, upon often and better recollection of my memory and thoughts than heretofore, I do now remember. And you the ſaid Donald Lord Rea, having then under your Command, two Regiments of Souldiers in Service of the King of Swedland, and then and there of thine own accord ſaying to me, Thou wouldſt get leave of the ſaid King to join your ſaid two Regiments with the ſaid Lord Marqueſs his Forces, and ſerve the ſaid King in the Wars under the Lord Marqueſs. I kindly accepted that motion of yours, and deſired to confirm it in you; and I told you, that

Alexander Hamilton and Sir James Hamilton were to go for England; and you told me you had a promiſe of the Reverſion of Orkney from the King your Maſter if the Marqueſs would mediate with your Maſter for it? and I and Alexander Hamilton did deſire you to write a general Letter to the Marqueſs, with truſt to the Bearer Alexander Hamilton concerning Orkney; and aſſured you of the ſaid Marqueſs his friendſhip, if you would continue conſtant in your Reſolution, in joining your Regiments with the Lord Marqueſs, when he ſhould come over, and you gave a Letter accordingly. Afterwards in March laſt, I being then at the Hague in Imploiment for providing Furniture for the ſaid Marqueſs his Companies, which were to go over into the King of Swedlands Service, came to you from the Hague to Amſterdam, being earneſtly invited thereunto by Letters from you; where I ſtaied with you eight days, and delivered to you a Letter from the Marqueſs only of Complement and Thanks for your Offer, to join your Regiments under the Marqueſs his Command. And I told you all went right with the Marqueſs, and that I heard he had gotten from his Majeſty 10000 l. in England, and the Wine-Cuſtoms in Scotland for ſixteen years, which he would ſell; and all things for his coming over with his Forces went on without any demur or obſtacle; and the only ſtay was, for want of Arms and Ammunition, eſpecially Powder, and deſired you to put in hard for that with the Swediſh Ambaſſador, which you did after the Premiſes. And in March or April laſt, in Delf in the Low-Countries, you told me, you had a Letter from the King of Sweden to the King of Britain, to deſire ſome Ships for the Marqueſs. And you ſaid further, That the King of Sweden ſaid, He had no Ships to ſpare of his own, but he would write to our King for ſome for him; and that he the ſaid King of Sweden would allow 40000 Rix Dollars for the entertainment of the ſaid Ships to be always in readineſs upon the motions of his Army. You alſo asked me, if my Lord Marqueſs was to raiſe any Men in England? I anſwered, I heard he was to raiſe three Regiments in England, and three in Scotland. You asked me where theſe Forces ſhould meet? I anſwered, On the Sea. You asked where they ſhould Land? I anſwered, I was doubtful where, becauſe the Rendezvous was to be appointed by the King of Sweden; you ſaid further, That you was not a Souldier of Fortune, that you had Bread at home, and might live without hazarding your ſelf in the Fortunes of War; yet that you would hazard your Life and Fortune with the Marqueſs. I anſwered, I knew no more of the Marqueſs his Deſigns, than I had then told you, but that I would write to the Marqueſs to commend to him your forward affection to his Service, or to that purpoſe. I told you, that ſince my being in Holland, I did perceive the Hollanders did conceive, that England had made a Peace with Spain very prejudicial to Holland; and that divers of them had ſaid ſo in my hearing: which Paſſages concerning the ſaid Peace, upon often and better recollection of my memory and thoughts than heretofore, I do now remember, and I alſo told you, That the lack of Powder was the greateſt ſtay of the Marqueſs his coming over; and you deſired me to ſpeak my ſelf to the Swediſh Ambaſſador for the Powder, and to advertiſe you of his Anſwer, that you might aſſure the ſaid Lord Marqueſs what he might expect; and I did ſend one of my Men to the Brill, called John Thompſon, to ſhew you I was with the Ambaſſador, and hope to have what we ſpoke of.

But

An. 1631.

But whereas thou the ſaid Donald Lord Rea in thy ſaid pretended Accuſation or Appeal doſt affirm, that I ſaid other words to thee, than ſuch as are here ſet down in this my Defence; I the aforeſaid David Ramſey ſay and affirm, That thou lieſt falſly, and art a falſe Calumniator, and oughteſt to be puniſhed with the puniſhment of a falſe Traitor; and I offer my ſelf ready to prove and juſtify, by the help of God, this my Defence and Exception, by my Body upon thy Body, according to the Law and Cuſtom of Arms in a Duel, to be performed in the preſence of our Lord the King. And I humbly and inſtantly deſire, that a Day and Place may be aſſigned for the ſaid Duel, &c.

Then was read in Court the Petition of David Ramſey to the King, beſeeching his Majeſty to aſſign him the Perſon, whoſe Name was written in the Schedule annexed, to be of Counſel with him in this Cauſe, the Name written in the Schedule was Mr. Doctor Eden. The Witneſſes in this Cauſe were commanded to make their perſonal appearance in the Court, and were there examined, and divers Letters written, as well from Marqueſs Hamilton as from Ramſey, to the Lord Rea, were then produced.

Mr. Ramſey had bin releaſed from Impriſonment in the Tower upon Bail, and his promiſe to appear before the Earl Marſhal of England, or ſuch other Perſons as his Majeſty ſhould appoint, at ſuch Time and Place as ſhould be aſſigned unto him, upon three days warning; in the mean time to keep the Peace, and to confine himſelf to Richmond, having the liberty of three miles walk, with this acknowledgment, That in caſe of abſenting himſelf from ſuch Appearance, or breaking the Peace, he will be accounted guilty of the Crime, for which he ſtood committed. And for the performance of this Engagement, the Earls of Abercorne and Roxborough entred into a Bond of Four thouſand pounds to the King.

A while after Ramſey entred in the Court a Proteſtation of the Tenor following.

Ramſey's Proteſtation.

'Whereas in Obedience to his Majeſty's Commands, and in conformity to this Honourable Court, I have heretofore, contrary to ſuch Intentions as ſeemed to me moſt reaſonable, procured ſome Perſonages to ſtand engaged for my perſonal appearance in this Court, concerning this pretended Cauſe; and have, in obedience and conformity as aforeſaid, uſed the Counſel of Dr. Eden, aſſigned unto me for that purpoſe by his Majeſty, as Defendent in the ſaid Cauſe. And whereas at my firſt appearance, upon ſight of my Lord Rea's Bill, I accepted of the Trial by Combat, and ever ſince avoided and waved all Courſes uſually propoſed by Defendents to avoid the Combat, which at this preſent I am ready to entertain: And whereas ſince from the Premiſes, and the Lord Rea's pretences of proving new Matters, the final Decree in this Cauſe, to my great prejudice in my other occaſions, hath bin from time to time put off, and nothing as I conceive, under favour of this Honourable Court, proved againſt me, either to convince me of any Matter objected againſt me, or to urge me by the Law of Arms to ſubmit my ſelf to Trial by Combat, if I had a deſire to decline it. I do here again once more, and that moſt inſtantly, deſire a certain Day and Place to be aſſigned and decreed for the Combat between the ſaid Lord Rea and me, for the Trial of the Matter in iſſue between us in this Honourable 'Court; and I do with all humbleneſs deſire of this Honourable 'Court, that after all theſe delays uſed on the Lord Rea's behalf, I 'may now betake my ſelf to my ſaid firſt Intentions; and therefore I 'do proteſt, that ſo much as in me lieth, I do now diſingage, and do 'deſire this Honourable Court for ever after this time, to hold for 'diſengaged thoſe honourable Perſonages that are bound for my per'ſonal appearance. And I do humbly deſire to know what his Ma'jeſty's further pleaſure is concerning me, ſince I came hither upon 'his Majeſty's command by Letters, and am here ready to ſatisfy my 'Loyalty as his faithful Servant, with the hazard of my Life.

And ſo inſtantly deſiring and urging to be releaſed of his Obligation, and that his Sureties might be likewiſe releaſed, he was remanded to the Tower of London, and his Sureties were releaſed, and the Bonds were rendred to them.

At another ſitting, when Dr. Duke moved divers things in behalf of the Lord Rea, declaring, That with due reverence he ſubmitted to the Court in all things. The Earl Marſhal made anſwer, that the Lord Rea had governed himſelf in the whole Proceſs of the Cauſe, with much Prudence and Moderation, and wiſhed that Ramſey had uſed the like Moderation in his Defence. And he further ſaid, That now it ſeems neceſſary to lay open the Series of the whole Buſineſs: and ſo continuing his Speech, he ſhewed that our Soveraign Lord the King, ſo ſoon as he had knowledg of the Crime objected, did uſe all diligence to find out the Truth, and called the Parties before him; and the Lord Rea conſtantly affirmed the Truth of theſe things, and offered to juſtify the ſame with the hazard of his Blood and Life. And Mr. Ramſey on the other part with the like conſtancy denied the Accuſation, and ſaid, he would prove it falſe againſt the Lord Rea by Duel, if it ſeemed good unto his Majeſty. And that the King obſerving the confidence of the Parties, and the defect of other Proofs, and the Parties free choice of Duel, conſulted about the way of a publick Duel by the Authority of this Court, and took care to be informed of the Proceedings and Cuſtoms thereof. That it was certain, that this Court was the only Publick Judicature, to which the Cognizance of Treaſons committed beyond Sea appertained before the time of Henry the 8*th*; and that the Statute of 26*th* and 35*th* Years of that King, concerning another manner of proceeding therein, was not derogatory to the Authority of this Court, but only ſuperadded another way of Trial. That all private Duels were accounted and are unlawful, but Publick Duels decreed by the Authority of this Court, were always granted to be lawful in Caſes of Treaſon, when for the ſafety of the King and State, the Truth would not otherwiſe appear. That his Majeſty therefore conſented to the Requeſts of theſe Parties, that they ſhould fight a Duel for the diſcovery of the Truth in this behalf; and therefore he conſtituted and confirmed this Court under the Great Seal of England. That the Lord Conſtable, and he the Earl Marſhal, according to the King's Letters Patents, together with thoſe Noble Perſons that were of Counſel with the Court, had heard with patience whatſoever was alleadged on either ſide; and that there were three ways of determining things of this nature in this Court uſed by our Anceſtors.

Firſt; To abſolve the Accuſed; which in this Caſe, the Nature, Quality, and Circumſtances of the Fact and Crime objected being conſidered, cannot be.

Secondly, To condemn the Accuſed when the truth of the Crime objected evidently appeareth by Witneſſes, or any other way; which in this Caſe hath not been, nor ſeemeth poſſible to be, when out of the Accuſation it ſelf, it appeareth that the words were ſpoken ſecretly, and not before Witneſſes.

Thirdly, By way of Publick Duel, to the decreeing whereof the Lord Conſtable and himſelf, with the aſſent of thoſe Honorable Perſons of Counſel with the Court, did intend to proceed.

Then the Lord Conſtable together with the Earl Marſhal demanded of the Parties, Whether they had any thing more to ſpeak or propound in this Cauſe? They ſeverally anſwered they had nothing more. The forenamed Lords asked the Lord Rea, whether he would finally acquieſce in his forementioned Bill of Appeal? whereunto he anſwered he would therein acquieſce. Then they asked Ramſey, whether he would acquieſce in his anſwer to the Bill of Appeal? whereunto he alſo anſwered, that he would therein aquieſce. After this, the Regiſter read in Court the Lord Rea's Bill of Appeal, and Ramſey's Defence in the preſence of the parties. Preſently the Lord Rea ſealed his Bill with his Seal at Arms, and ſubſcribed his name with his own hand. After the ſame manner Mr. Ramſey ſealed and ſubſcribed his Anſwer.

Then the Lord Conſtable taking the Appeal in his hands, and folding it up, put it into the Glove which the Lord Rea had caſt forth in the Court for a pawn in this behalf, and held the Bill and Glove in his right hand, and in his left hand the Anſwer and Glove or Pawn of David Ramſey, and then joyning the Bill and Anſwer, and the Gloves, and folding them together, he with the Earl Marſhall, adjudged a Duel between the parties under this form of words.

In the name of God the Father the Son and the Holy-Ghoſt, the Holy and moſt Bleſſed Trinity, who is one, and the only God and Judge of Battels; We, as his Vicegerents under the moſt excellent Prince in Chriſt our Lord and King, by whom we are deputed to this, Do admit you the aforeſaid Donald Lord Rea, the Party Challenging, and you the aforeſaid David Ramſey, the Defendent, to a Duel, upon every Accuſation contained in this Bill and the Anſwer to the ſame; and we Aſſign unto you the twelfth day of the Month of April next following, between Sun and Sun, in the Fields called Tuttle Fields, in or near Weſtminſter, in the preſence of our Lord the King, to do and perform your parts to your utmoſt power reſpectively.

And we Will and Enjoyn you the aforeſaid Lord Rea the Challenger, to be in the aforeſaid Fields, and within the Liſt there, between ſeven and nine of the Clock in the forenoon of the aforeſaid day. And we enjoyn you the aforeſaid David Ramſey the Defendent, to be in the Fields in the foreſaid Liſt between nine and eleven of the Clock in the forenoon of the ſaid day, upon Peril attending you reſpectively in that behalf.

Which Decree and final Sentence pronounced, the Lord Rea craving pardon of the Court, ſpake to this Effect; Firſt, he gave thanks to the Lord Conſtable, the Earle Marſhal, and the reſt of the Lords, that they had with ſo much Patience and Juſtice heard and examined this Cauſe, and for the Juſtice therein exerciſed eſpecially for the Sentence already given. Then he proteſted before Almighty God and that Court, that he had revealed nothing againſt David Ramſey, or any other, for Malice, or Hatred, or hope of Reward, either Gain, or Honour, but only out of his Faithfulneſs to our Lord the King, and for the ſafety of his floriſhing Kingdoms, knowing that nothing is more pernicious to Kingdoms and Commonwealths than inteſtine Wars. He profeſſed that if he himſelf had not revealed the premiſſes, but ſome other acquainted with the Treaſon had firſt diſcovered it, he without all doubt had deſerved the death of a Traytor. And whereas it might be ſaid, that he by revealing it had hazarded his own Life. To this he anſwered, that he was unworthy of all Honour, yea of Life it ſelf, that was not ready to lay down, much more to hazard his own Life for the Safety of King and Kingdom. And whereas he might ſeem in the proceſs of this Cauſe to have declined a Duel; he deſired to be underſtood that whatſoever was done in that behalf, he did in hope and expectation that the Treaſon which was communicated to many, might be ſome way brought to light. For he did neither diſtruſt his own Cauſe, nor fear the Perſon of his Adverſary, nor any other in ſo juſt a Cauſe, only in this he greived, that an Adverſary equal to him in Birth, Degree, and Nobility, was not offered. And whereas many wondered that he would hazard his Life for revealing words, whereof he was doubtful whether they would amount to Treaſon or not. He ſaid, he knew much more concerning the Treaſon, than what was contained in this Bill, which by the interpoſing of Authority, was for juſt Cauſes yet to be ſuppreſſed.

As for the Duel now decreed, he profeſſed that he embraced the Sentence with all chearfulneſs, and deſired no further delay of the Combat, than that in the mean time he might provide himſelf with ſuch neceſſaries for this Duel as became his Stock and Kindred, and the Combatant and Champion of ſo great a King. That he had no private hatred to the Perſon of David Ramſey, but was now to encounter him, being by the Court declared his publick Enemy. And ſo having prayed to God for his Majeſty's ſafety, and happy Government, and imploring the favour of the Court, he made an end of ſpeaking.

After this the Court aſſigned to both Parties a day, whereon to make ſuch Propoſitions as they would think fit.

Then the Lord Rea deſired, that the Crimes and Words by him objected in his Bill againſt David Ramſey, might be declared Treaſonable, and that Ramſey were guilty of Treaſon, if he uttered thoſe Words: which the Court with an unanimous Conſent did declare ſo, and adjudg.

Ramſey moved that a ſhorter time, and ſome day within the 12*th* of April might be aſſigned for the Duel, ſaying that he would ſoon compel the Lord Rea to confeſs the falſhood of the Crime objected, if he would meet him in place convenient.

The Lord Marſhal anſwered, that the day was determined; and further intimated to both Parties that they were to be attached and kept in ſafe Cuſtody, if they gave not ſufficient caution for their appearing at the day and place appointed, and in the mean while for keeping the Peace. For the performance whereof on his part the Lord Rea produced Sureties, namely Sir Peirce Crosby, Sir William

An. 1629. Forbes, Sir Walter Crosby, Knights and Baronets, and William Jones Eſq. who bound themſelves to the King Body for Body.

Then Mr. Ramſey being asked, whether he would bring forth Sureties? Anſwered, that he was ready in the Word and Honour of a Gentleman, to oblige himſelf to whatſoever in that regard ſhould be by the Court enjoyned, but as for Sureties that he had none, or at leaſt deſired none; That it was troubleſome for him to engage Noble Perſons, who had in other reſpects interpoſed in this behalf. Whereupon the Lord Rea's Advocate deſired that Ramſey be committed to the Tower till the day appointed for the Combat.

Then Robert Earl of Roxborough publickly offered, and ſaid that himſelf and James Earl of Abercorn were ready to put in Caution for Ramſey, if the Court would admit them; and Walter Earl of Balclough made the ſame offer, and the Court admitted them, (although the Lord Rea's Advocate alleadged many things to the contrary) and they became bound Body for Body. Whereupon Ramſey was releaſed from his Impriſonment in the Tower.

The Lord Conſtable and Earl Marſhal admoniſhed both Parties to keep within the bounds aſſigned them; to wit, That the Lord Rea ſhould not go Weſtward beyond Charing-Croſs, nor Mr. Ramſey beyond Whitehal Eaſtward. Theſe bounds they might not paſs without the ſpecial Licence of the Court, or ſome juſt and reaſonable Cauſe.

The Weapons which the Court aſſigned to the Combatants, were a Spear, a long Sword, a ſhort Sword, and a Dagger; each of them with a point.

Then the Lord Rea preſented theſe Proteſtations to the Court.

Lord Rea's Proteſtation or Petition to the Lords Conſtable and Marſhal.

Firſt, He did humbly deſire of the Right Honourable Judges the Lord Conſtable and Earl Marſhal, that his Arms and Weapons might be aſſigned him for to aid himſelf therewith againſt his Adverſary in the day and place to him aſſigned: And alſo in any other day and place, if any ſhould be aſſigned him; and that he might have no Weapon of advantage, and that he might be received into the Liſts or Feild with thoſe Arms as ſhall be aſſigned him, and armed in what ſort he ſhould pleaſe; and that he might have with him all other things needful and accuſtomed by right to aid himſelf at need againſt his Adverſary although they be not expreſly written; and deſired that his Adverſary, ſhould have no other Weapon, nor of other ſize than thoſe that he the ſaid Lord Rea ſhould have: And if the ſaid Adverſary ſhould bring into the Liſt any other Weapons, or of other ſize than the Court ſhould aſſign him, that ſuch Weapon ſhould be taken from him, and that he be allowed no other.

The Order of the Court.

It ſeemed reaſonable to the Court, that he ſhould be received into the Liſts armed as is fit: And as for the Weapons, was to have a Spear, a long Sword, a ſhort Sword and a Dagger, each with a point, as above ſaid, and for the reſt the Court would do reaſon, according to the Cuſtom and Law of Arms.

Item, The ſaid Challenger did pray that his Counſel might be received into the Liſts or Field with him, for to counſel him what ſhould be needful, and that he might have a Chirurgeon with his Ointments and Inſtruments to ſerve and aid him when need required, and he did pray, that his Counſel might remain with him, until the words Leſſer les Armes were cried.

The Court willeth, That he ſhall have ſufficient Counſel, a Chirurgeon with his Ointments and Inſtruments within the ſaid Liſts, as appertaineth, until the words Leſſer Les Armes be pronounced.

Item; He did pray, That he might have within the ſaid Liſts or Fields, a Seat or Pavilion, or other Coverture to reſt himſelf, that he might have Bread, Wine, or other Drink; Iron-Nails, Hammer, File, Sciſſars, Bodkin, Needle and Thread, Armorer and Tailor with their Inſtruments, and other Neceſſaries to aid and ſerve him in and about his Armour, Weapons, Apparel and Furniture, as need required.

The Court willed, That he have a Seat and ſuch Coverture as he ſhall pleaſe, without fixing any thing in the Ground; Bread, Wine, and other Neceſſaries, in ſuch caſes requiſite, till the words Leſſer Les Armes were pronounced.

Item; He did pray, that he might have liberty to make trial of his Arms and Weapons within the Field, to put them off, and to put them on, and change them at his pleaſure; to nail, faſten, or looſe his Arms and Apparel, and other things needful; to Eat and Drink, and to do all other his Neceſſities.

The Court granted until the words Leſſer Les Armes were pronounced.

Item; He did pray, That after he did once come into the Fields and Liſts, that his Adverſary ſhould not be permitted to make him ſtay and attend too long, under pain of being Convict.

To this the Court returned anſwer, The Court will do you reaſon.

Item; He did pray, That if it ſhould happen, either by the delay of his Adverſary, or any other Impediment, that he ſhould not be able to prove his intent upon his Adverſary in the day aſſigned him, between Sun and Sun, that then he might have further time and day allowed and aſſigned him for the proof thereof on his ſaid Adverſary.

To this the Court anſwered, The Court in this Caſe will do as anciently hath been uſed according to the cuſtom and Law at Arms.

Item; He did pray, That the Field and Liſts might be well and ſafely guarded for him until the end of the Battel, and as well in the Night as in the Day, until that with the Aid of God he ſhould make good, and prove his intent upon his Adverſary.

It was anſwered, The Court will do herein as is right.

Item; He did humbly pray, That if God ſhould ſo diſpoſe, as that he died in the proſecution of this his righful Appeal in this behalf, that then his Heirs, without any impeachment or hinderance, might take his Body and give it Chriſtian Burial, in ſuch place as he ſhall appoint by his laſt Will and Teſtament.

It was anſwer'd, This muſt be at the King's pleaſure.

Item; He did pray, That notwithſtanding that the cuſtom of Arms will, that he ſhould bear into the Field certain things neceſſary for him, that theſe, or ſome of theſe things, may be brought by others in eaſe of him, and that they might be ſaved and carried back for him, if in caſe God ſhould pleaſe to give him the Victory, as he may of his ſpecial Goodneſs and Mercy.

Hereupon this Order was made by the Court;

Order of Court.

The Court willeth that you do herein according to the Cuſtom of Arms uſed in like Caſes before this time.

An. 1631.

Item; He did deſire, That the ſame day when with God's help he did intend to prove his Intent upon his Adverſary, he might have all other things neceſſary for him, and accuſtomed by Right and Law of Arms, although they were not expreſſed in theſe his Proteſtations.

To this it was anſwered, The Court herein will do that which ſhall ſeem reaſonable unto them.

Item; He did pray, That theſe his Proteſtations, nor the Copy of them, might be delivered nor ſhewed to his Adverſary, nor to any of his Counſel, or other Perſon, whereby his ſaid Adverſary might have knowledg thereof: Further praying, and deſiring that theſe his Proteſtations and Demands might be graciouſly granted unto him, by thoſe Honourable Lords, as the Right and Law of Arms did require.

It was anſwered, The Court would herein do that which ſhould be reaſon.

Item; He did pray, That it might be lawful for him to go or ride into Tuttle-Fields, in or near Weſtminſter, at his pleaſure, and ſo often as he ſhould think fit, to view the Ground which ſhould be aſſigned him for the proving of his Intent, and for ſuch other ends as ſhould be moſt for his advantage for the proving his intent upon his Adverſary.

Order and Anſwer.

To this the Court anſwered, It ſeemeth reaſonable unto the Court, that at convenient times, which ſhould be ſignified and expreſſed under the hands of the Lord Conſtable and Earl Marſhal, what ſhould be lawful for him to do as was deſired.

Item; He did humbly pray, That ſince by the Law and Cuſtom of Arms, and of the Honourable Court, the Defendent is never to be allowed Counſel, nor to have any Aſſiſtants, nor to have any Petitions of Favour granted, except in due time he ſhall have deſired, or ſhall have proteſted that he would deſire them. And that in this Caſe his Adverſary publickly hath proteſted againſt the having of Counſel, and all other Aids and Aſſiſtants in this Court, as by the Acts of the Court appeareth, he humbly prayeth that he might not have any Counſel, nor Aids, nor Aſſiſtants aſſigned unto him in this behalf; and that no Petitions or Proteſtations (if he ſhall make any) might be granted unto him; and in this he humbly deſired the Juſtice of that Honourable Court.

Anſwer was made, The Court would do herein upon conſideration, as to the Cuſtom and Law of Arms appertained.

The Dimenſions of the Weapons were as followeth.

A Long Sword, four foot and a half in length, Hilt and all; in breadth two inches.

Short Sword, a yard and four inches in length, Hilt and all; in breadth two inches.

Pike, fifteen foot in length, head and all.

Dagger, nineteen inches in length, Hilts and all; in breadth an inch.

The Weapons were not to exceed this Proportion, but the Parties might abate of this length and breadth if they thought fit.

Theſe Proteſtations and Petitions were accepted and regiſtred.

Afterwards Mr. Ramſey preſented a Petition to the Lord High Conſtable, and to the Earl Marſhal.

Ramſey's

Ramſey's Petition.

To the Right Honourable the Lord High Conſtable, and the Lord Marſhal of England;

The humble Petition of Mr. David Ramſey, Gent. of his Majeſty's Privy-Chamber in Ordinary.

Shewing,

'That in regard there can be no Preſident ſhewed forth by Authentical Record, whereby the choice of Arms was ever heretofore permitted or granted to the Challenger, or refuſed to the Defender, ſutable to the Cuſtom and Law of all Chriſtian Nations; as likewiſe in regard the Challenger himſelf, as I ſuppoſe being aſhamed of his Proteſtations and Demand for Defenſive Armour, has in good Company denied the ſame, and aſcribed it to your Lordſhips impoſing. He therefore according to the ſaid Law of Nations, and Cuſtom of the Kingdom, doth humbly intreat that there be no other Arms allowed for the Trial, than ſuch as he hath bin already Suitor for, (viz.) Rapier and Dagger, as being in the number of ſuch as your Lordſhips were pleaſed to nominate, which are the moſt common in all Gentlemen's Opinions, and that are carried by all and every Man that is acquainted with the management of them.

'Laſtly, Intreating, That if there chanced to be found any want or miſtake in the formality of this, that your Lordſhips will be pleaſed to paſs over the ſame, and attribute it to the abſence of the Lawyer allowed by your Lordſhips, having now no other Counſel than the Juſtice and Equity of his Demand. And as in Duty bound, he ſhall never be wanting, either in Action or Speech, to ſhew his gratitude for theſe your Lordſhips ſo juſt and noble Favours.

To the foregoing Petition, this following Anſwer was returned.

Decimo Aprilis 1632.

The firſt part concerning my Lord Rea, the Lords having called Sir William Balfour, (the Witneſs vouched by Mr. Ramſey) and heard him, but could not prove what was alledged.

The ſecond part, concerning the Election of Arms, the Lords thought it was not fit to be granted, the Cuſtom of this Court being otherwiſe, and other Arms being already aſſigned by the Court.

On the 10*th* of April Rea and Ramſey appeared again before the Court, ſitting in the Council Chamber at Whitehall; at which time the Lord High Conſtable and the Earl Marſhal ſignified to the Parties, That it was the King's Pleaſure, for certain juſt and urgent Cauſes, to prorogue the day of Combat, from the 18*th* of April, to the 17*th* of May; and they prorogued the ſame accordingly; and required Rea and Ramſey to appear in Tuttle-fields, upon the day laſt aſſigned, at the hours appointed in the former day: for the performance whereof, both the Challenger and the Defender produced their ſeveral Sureties, and the Cautions and Sureties for the former day were by the Court remitted.

An. 1631.

The Lord Rea deſired to know the pleaſure of the Court, whether he might uſe Defenſive Arms? and in caſe he might, whether according to his own diſcretion, or as the Court ſhall regulate?

The Judges of the Court anſwered, That the Offenſive Weapons and their Dimenſions were aſſigned by the Court already; but both Parties might uſe Defenſive Weapons at their own diſcretion.

May the 12*th* the Court reaſſembled, and the Parties were called, and anſwered to their Names.

Then the Conſtable, together with the Marſhal, declared, That upon hearing and examination of this Cauſe, they had not found David Ramſey guilty of Treaſon, nor was the Treaſon intimated made appear by the Lord Rea, though he had ſo long time attempted it; yet they found that he had ſeditiouſly committed many contempts againſt his Majeſty, the reformation whereof his Majeſty reſerved to himſelf; and therefore the Court Decreed, That they (the ſaid Lord Rea and David Ramſey) ſhould both be committed to the Tower of London, till by Sureties to be approved by his Majeſty, they gave in ſufficient Caution, that neither in their own Perſon, nor by any in their Families, nor by their procurement or aſſent, they would attempt any thing one againſt the other, and that ſo long, till it ſeemed good to his Majeſty to ſet them at liberty; and ſo they were both arreſted by order of the Lord Conſtable and Marſhal, and by Serjeants at Arms delivered over to Sir William Balfour, Lieutenant of the Tower.

Then a Letter was brought from his Majeſty by Richard St. George, King of Arms, to the Lord Conſtable and Marſhal, by which his Majeſty revoked his Letters Patents, given to the ſaid Lords for the Trial of this Cauſe, not willing to have it decided by Duel. And ſo there was nothing more done in it.

But now let us return to Marqueſs Hamilton, where we left him in his Quarters in Germany, who loſt no time after the Battel at Lipſick, but went himſelf to the King at Worben, paſſage being then more open. The King excuſed his not ſending the Forces he had promiſed, for that he was reſolved ſpeedily to give Tilly Battel, and ſo could not weaken his Army, and appointed the Marqueſs to remove from thoſe Villages near Stetin; and accordingly on the 20*th* of September, the Army went up the Oder from Stetin, ſome pieces of Ordnance they carried with them by Land, and the reſt by Water, and according to order were quartered about Cuſtrein, Frankfort upon the Oder, Landſbergen, Croſar, and places thereabouts; where a third part of his Army languiſhed and died of the Plague, and other Sickneſſes.

The Marqueſs had not bin long at his Quarters at Cuſtrein, when he received Orders to beſiege Magdenburgh, wherein were 3000 Men: The Marqueſs's Army being then very feeble by ſickneſs, the King of Sweden ſent Bannier with 3000 Foot and 1000 Horſe to join with him, and to block up and beſiege Magdenburgh; which they ſo ſtreightned, as on Chriſtmaſs Eve they came to a Parley. But on the ſecond day of their Treaty, one of the Count Mansfields, their Governor, had notice that Papenheim was coming with Relief; whereupon the Treaty broke up, and Bannier would have bin retiring: But the Marqueſs preſſing his ſtay, he produced his Orders to command all the Dutch and Swediſh Forces, and not to hazard an Engagement; whereas that gallant Commander, Sir Jacob Aſhly, (who was then with the Marqueſs) viewing the Paſs deſigned for the Marqueſs's Retreat, in caſe Papenheim did advance, aſſured the Marqueſs and Bannier, they might in leſs than an hours time march away in ſpight of Papenheim's Army, and therefore not yet to remove, was his advice: whereupon the Marqueſs propoſed to Bannier to fight Papenheim; but Bannier not willing to hazard his Men, marched away; ſo Papenheim afterwards advancing, got into the Town, and carried away the Garriſon of Souldiers, and ſome Ordnance, with Ammunition, and ſo quitted Magdenburgh, yet left ſome Cannon behind him, (having not Draught-Horſes to carry the ſame away, nor intending to make that Place a Garriſon any longer): There the Marqueſs did ſtay till the beginning of February 1631, Engliſh Style; and the King ordered him to march to Halberſtadt to quarter his Army thereabouts.

As to the Negotiation of Sir Henry Vane, his Majeſty's Ambaſſador to the King of Swedland now in Germany, take this brief Account.

The Ambaſſador's Inſtructions.

Sir Henry Vane had in Commiſſion firſt to go to the King of Denmark to remove all ſuſpicion out of his mind, and firmly to reconcile him to the King of Sweden.

Secondly, To move the Princes and Republick of Germany to take part with the Swede.

Thirdly; To make ſtrict Peace between the Crowns of Poland and Swedland.

And laſtly; To enter into a League with the King of Sweden upon Emergent Occaſions.

The Ambaſſador after his arrival at Gluckſtadt came to Erford, from whom the Marqueſs received this enſuing Letter.

The Ambaſſador writes to Hamilton.

My Lord,

The firſt of mine which this Bearer wil give your Lordſhip, will tell you the extreme regret I have had ſince my coming into theſe Parts, that I could not have the honour to hear from your Lordſhip, yea, ſcarce hear of you.

I received your Lordſhip's of the 20th, delivered me this evening by one I ſent to Lipſick, my ſelf being hindred from going that way, in regard the Enemy lay between Brunſwick and Lipſick, ſo as I could not paſs without danger, which cauſeth me to take the way of Erford. To morrow I ſet forward towards Wirtſbourgh, which his Majeſty of Swedland hath aſſigned me for my Audience; which as ſoon as I have had, I ſhall diſpatch an Expreſs to your Lordſhip, and be glad to receive your Lordſhip's particular Commands, of which I ſhall be as vigilant and careful as if they concerned my ſelf. I hope yet ſome one of your Lorſhips will overtake me before I ſhall ſee the King; for it will be Thurſday before I ſhall arrive at his Court, and I preſume it will be four or five days before he will give me Audience.

Erford, Octob. 27. 1631.

The Ambaſſador excuſes his not waiting on the King of Denmark.

The Ambaſſador, after his arrival, underſtood that the Duke of Saxony being become deſperate, by reaſon of Tilly's Inſolency in his Country, had joined himſelf with the Swedes, and that when their Armies were united, had obtained a glorious Victory upon the Emperor's Forces near Lipſick; and that the King of Sweden making uſe of that Victory, was gone forward as far as Franconia: judging therefore that it concerned him to make haſte, he excuſed himſelf by a Letter to the King of Denmark, and went forthwith to Wirtzburgh, where he continued for ſome time. At length he was admitted to Audience, firſt at Franckfort, then afterwards at Mentz, but it was the latter end of January before he had Audience.

Admitted to have Audience in January.

We give you here the ſubſtance of what paſſed between him and the King of Sweden on the 29th of January 1631, at Franck fort on the Main, as followeth.

‘THe Ambaſſador at his firſt Audience with the King of Sweden, on January the 29th, according to our Style, told the King, That he had come ſooner, but that his Majeſty's Command ſtaied him at Mentz. The King bid the Ambaſſador welcome, and told him, he heard the King of Bohemia was upon his way to come up to him; and asked him, when he thought he ſhould be here? To which the Ambaſſador anſwered, he thought to morrow. At which the King ſtarted, and ſaid, it could not be: the Ambaſſador replied, he thought yes, for he had received ſuch advertiſement from the States Agent at Collen; and ſaid further, the King of Bohemia was come in conformity to his Majeſty's deſire unto him; and that he hoped his Majeſty would take his Cauſe actually in hand, according to his public Maniſeſto, whereby he would acquire to himſelf much Honour, becauſe none was ſo much wronged and oppreſt as he. The King replied, he would firſt make an Alliance with the King of Bohemia, and would be alſo glad that the Alliance between himſelf and the King of Great Britain ſhould proceed; and asked the Ambaſſador, whether he had plenary Power? and whether the King of Great Britain would make the Confederation perſonal with him, or not? and whether he would be content to give Mony and not Men? To the firſt he anſwered, he had Plenary Power; and that for the perſonal Confederation between the two Crowns, his Maſter was content to accept it; and for Mony in lieu of ſending Men, he thought an Expedient might alſo be found for that, providing his Majeſty would undertake the Reſtitution of the King of Bohemia unto his Eſtates and Dignities, and not to lay down his Arms until both were effected. All but this Condition he liked well; but to that he anſwered, he could not do that without having War with France and Bavaria; and that in the late Treaty between France and the Catholick League concerning the Neutrality, there was an Article; but as for that of Bavaria, it ſhould be remitted to a future Treaty between the Kings of Britain and France; and for what he held of the Spaniards, he was willing to return. The Ambaſſador anſwered, That that Article, and all others in that Treaty, was as much to the prejudice of the King of Bohemia as could be, and conſequently to his Maſter's Ends; and he wiſhed in the end it might not prove diſadvantagious to the proſperity of his Affairs, by being too long amuſed, which could not be but ‘advantagious to his Enemies,and of dangerous conſequence to himſelf and the Cauſe; that for his part he did not think it counſellable for his Maſter to make an Alliance with his Majeſty of Sweden, upon the hopes of a future and contingent Treaty between Britain, France, and Bavaria: But if his Majeſty would oblige himſelf to perform the Conditions he propoſed, he the Ambaſſador was ready to begin the Treaty to morrow. And the King replied that he could not ſtipulate to make War upon Bavaria at this preſent, but it might be hereafter, and if the King of Great Britain would follow his Counſel,he thought it might either be done by War or Treaty, and ſaid, if we had concluded before the arrival of the French,he could then have undertaken War upon Bavaria, but it was not for him to undertake againſt the Houſe of Auſtria, France and the Leagues, if he could by means of the Neutrality lay France and the Catholick League by.

‘The Ambaſſador anſwered, For our coming too late, there was no fault to be juſtly imputed to us; for had his Majeſty of Sweden demanded reaſonable Conditions,the Alliance had been concluded: but Leagues,and Buſineſs of ſo great Importance,could not but have ſlow motions; yet he beſought his Majeſty of Swedland to give him leave to commemorate the proceedings of his Maſter towards him ſince his Majeſty's coming into Germany, viz. that he had permitted him to make as many Levies of his Subjects as he had deſired; That he had ſince ſent the Marqueſs of Hamilton to him with a Royal Aſſiſtance, and ſo opportunely, as it could not be denied but that the Marqueſs landed his Army at a ſeaſonable time, to the amuſement of the Emperor, and the encouragement of the Confederate Proteſtant Princes, as appeared by the effects that followed thereupon, by the ſpeedy uniting of their Army under his Command. And that though his Swediſh Majeſty, next under God, was the only immediate Inſtrument to whom the Glory of this great Revolution was to be attributed, yet it could not be denied but that the Subjects of Great Britain had done him great and Remarkable Service, both in theſe and his former Wars, and that theſe were neither to be concealed nor forgotten, nor the real Aſſiſtance now ſent unto him.

His Majeſty of Sweden acknowledged, ‘that the King of Great Britain had proceeded with him as a Friend; that he was a wiſe and vertuous Prince, and that none could wiſh more proſperity to his Perſon and Affairs than he did,and that he would do his beſt to aſſiſt him in the buſineſs of the Palatinate: but he would then have him follow his advice; That he had too long depended upon the Spaniſh Treaty, which was a fault, and had prejudiced us much; that nothing was to be expected from them but Parols. The Ambaſſador replied, if that were a fault, it behoved him to be wary in his Negotiation, not to make an Alliance that might be diſadvantagious to his Maſter, either in Honour or Judgment; That whatſoever ſhould be the event, he doubted not but that God would bleſs both his Counſels and Actions. His Majeſty of Sweden replied, that for the preſent he could not ſtipulate to make War with Bavaria, though he intended not to let him eſcape, for that it could not be but of great advantage if he could ſecure the Catholicks, which he was in a fair way to effect; for according to his Articles delivered unto Charnaſſay, the Electors of Triers and Cologn had accepted of the Neutrality. The Ambaſſador asked,whether his Majeſty had received any Act of their ‘own? he ſaid, No, But the Marqueſs of Preſſay had aſſured him thereof, that he had not yet heard of Bavaria, neither could he yet ſay any thing thereunto, until either Charnaſſay or Horn, whom he had ſent into France, were returned.

‘His Majeſty of Sweden then ſaid, he would make him two Propoſitions, which were, He would either oblige himſelf to reſtore the King of Bohemia what the Spaniard held, and treat with France and Bavaria for the reſtitution of what he poſſeſſes; which if he would not reſtore, He would then undertake a War with him, ſo the King would enter into an Alliance with him againſt the Spaniards, if he ſhould attaque him in any of his Dominions. He anſwered, that was a point of ſo great Weight as he durſt not take upon him to make any preſent anſwer, but thought that his next from England would give ſome light.

The reſult of all was, that upon the King of Bohemia's arrival, it was reſolved that the Chancellor of the Swedes and himſelf ſhould enter into Treaty.

In this Audience he ſpake of 12000 Men to be allowed by the King of Great Britain, and 25000 l. a month, which he demanded for the maintenance of them, but he inſiſted not thereupon, and therefore he held not fit to mention it in this Diſcourſe, but by way of Memorial.

He inſiſted alſo upon the eſtabliſhing of the Lutheran Religion in the Pallatinate, and the King of Bohemia's Countries.

The Ambaſſador tranſmitted to Mr. Secretary Cook the paſſages at this Audience at Franck-fort, to be imparted to his Maſter the King of Great Britain.

Magdenburgh being quit by Papenheim, and Marqueſs Hamilton Commanded by the King of Sweden to remove thence, the King of Swedland put a ſtrong Garriſon into the ſame, under the command of the Lord Faulconberg of 4000 Men, and the Town raiſed 2000. Now ſeeing we are upon this great (but ſhortly after miſerable) Town, have a little patience to read what befel it by the cruelty of Tilly, in the begining of this year.

In the beginning of April 1631 Engliſh ſtile, Gen. Tilly now diſcovers himſelf to undertake what Papenheim had been about, viz. the Conqueſt of the Town and Archbiſhoprick of Magdenburgh. Firſt, take a word as to the ſituation thereof: The Country of Magdenburgh is ſituated upon the Weſt of Brandenburgh, from which the River Elb parts it; upon the South it touches upon Saxony, upon the Weſt joining with Brunſwick and Halberſtadt; and upon the North of it is the Elb again, with the two Dutchies of Lunenburg and Lawenburgh; the Country hath the name from the chief City Magdenburgh, which is one of the antient Hans-Towns of the Empire, and that honoured with an Archbiſhop's See, and he the Primate of all Germany.

The People be Lutherans of the Auguſtan Confeſſion, the Archbiſhoprick in the hands of a Lay-Man, Chriſtian William, a Prince of the Electoral Houſe of Brandenburgh, his Title is Adminiſtrator of the Biſhopricks of Magdenburgh and Hall, and Primate of Germany. This bred the Quarrel, becauſe he not giving way to Reformation of the Religion, (that is, the Adminiſtrator being againſt the bringing in of Popery again) and the reſtoring of the Church Lands to the Catholicks, whereupon it being againſt Articles of Agreement, was preſcribed and bandied by the Emperor, and ſome Forces ſent into his Country, actually to ſeize upon the ſame. His Subjects, notwithſtanding they were alſo far out with the Emperor (as having conſented with other Hans-Towns, not to ſuffer any Imperial Souldiers to be quartered or billited upon them, and had raiſed ſome 2000 Souldiers for their own Guards) yet being now terrified by the Emperor, durſt not aſſiſt their Prince, until at laſt they were encouraged by the King of Sweden, who promiſed to ſtick cloſe by him: Whereupon, about the end of July 1630, the Adminiſtrator ſets forth his Declaration, proteſting againſt the wrong done him by the Emperor, and putting himſelf under the Protection of the King of Sweden.

With this Prince had Francis Charles, Duke of Saxon-Lawenburgh, now conjoined himſelf.

And about the end of November 1630, the King of Sweden ſends a Noble Gentleman, the Lord Faulconbergh, Lord Marſhal and Lord Chamberlain of his Majeſty's Houſhold, with 4000 Men to be put in Garriſon there, the Town having alſo raiſed 2000 Men for their Defence.

Upon the 12*th of April*, Tilly firſt preſents himſelf in full Battalia within a Mile of the City: at which time beleived it was that he would at leaſt have fallen upon the great Star-Sconce, or Toll-Houſe by the old Flue; but that day attempted he no more, than to beat ſome Guards out of their Redoubts into the City.

The 13*th* he lays his Seige; Himſelf, Papenheim, Savelli, and Mansfeild, round begirting the City. This done, twelve peices of Cannon are planted againſt the Bridge over the Elb; upon which he made 568 Shot that ſame day: his intent being to cut that paſſage off, that the Town by it might ſend no Succour to the foreſaid Sconce or Toll-Houſe, but the General Faulkenbergh conveniently planting ſome Pieces upon the Toll-Houſe, which at laſt diſmounted the Enemies Cannon. This not ſucceeding, Tilly falls Pel-Mell at once upon both theſe places, giving eight ſeveral Aſſaults unto them: but the Lord Faulkenbergh with four whole Cannon double charged with Stones, old Iron, &c. about 12 a Clock at night made them to give over: ſome Priſoners the next day which were taken, confeſs there were 2000 Men that day ſlain of the Aſſailants. This Toll-Houſe was a notable peice of Fortification, built on the other ſide of the Elb. To this Tilly now turns all his Battery; here falls he to mining, and all to no purpoſe.

On the 15*th* both by Land and Water he lays at it: but three hundred Muſquetiers being by him ſent in Boats, to aſſail it on the Water ſide, were by thoſe of the Fort driven aſhore, and drowned, or ſlain by the Citizens; 200 alſo at the ſame time, loſt their lives on the Land ſide.

Now was news brought into Tilly's Camp of the King of Sweden being upon his March, for the relieving of the Beſieged. A Council of War thereupon being called, ſome Troops are ſent towards Wittenbergh, and the Deſſanbridg, there to ſtave off the Kings Forces; the news of his coming again ſlackning, April 21. to work Tilly falls again: and giving on upon the Toll-Houſe, that notable Piece is forſaken by the Magdenburghers, who at their Retreat offering to fire it, the place was Reſcued by the Imperialiſts. Upon this were all the Forts on that ſide of the Elb, either taken, or given over, the Bridge alſo by Tilly burnt, and Approaches made unto the City, which was from thence immediately Battered. Now were the Beſieged forced to burn their own new Town, where 2000 Imperaliſts immediatly lodging themſelves, fell to mining, and ſhooting Granadoes into the City.

The 29th, by a Sally out upon theſe in the new Town, are about a hundred ſlain; the Mines do no hurt, until one Farniback, a notable Engineer, takes them in hand, who ſapps himſelf under the Town-Ditches to the very hard Walls, which he much ſhakes by ſpringing the Mine: in reward of which Service and ſome others, the Emperor makes him a Colonel, granting him a Commiſſion to raiſe two new Regiments.

May the 2d, the Imperialiſts in the new City having ſuddenly in the night time caſt up a Battery, ſhrewdly puniſh the Beſieged.

May 7th, General Tilly comes himſelf into the New-Town, together with Papenheim, then General of the Ordnance, and the Count of Scomberg, Serjeant Major General, and a great ſhew of Ladders is made, as if there were a purpoſe of a general Scalado. Tilly's hope was, that the Town would preſently parly upon ſight of theſe Preparations; but they taking the Alarum at it, inſtantly man all their Bulwarks.

The 8th day is ſpent in Shooting at a certain high Tower, from which the Town Cannon did much plague the Beſiegers. This day Tilly ſends a Trumpeter to Summon the Town; they ſend another to him, ſignifying their willingneſs to yeild, might but their Adminiſtrator ſtill enjoy his Biſhoprick, and the Town their Priviledges. This not conſented unto;

The 9th day, Papenheim attempting to ſcale the Walls, is by a Sally beaten off: in which ſome of the Enemies Mines being diſcovered, are by Countermines in the Town defeated.

That day another Trumpeter is ſent into the Town; towards evening there was much buſtling obſerved, and carriages to and again in the Enemies Leaguer: Yea, they were perceived to riſe with their whole Army, (as the Town thought) and to March to Orterſleben, half a mile from them. All that night was the Lord Faulkenberg upon the Walls: who perceiving in the morning no danger of aſſault, calls the City together into the State-Houſe to give anſwer to the Enemies Trumpet; yea ſo ſecure they were, that the over-watcht Souldiers are ſuffered to go from their Courts of Guard, to take ſome ſleep: and the Townſmen were gone to Church to give God thanks for their deliverance from the Siege. Thus the Walls being found empty, about ſeven on the Tueſday morning, May the 10th, Papenheim having given the Word Jeſu Maria to his Souldiers, and a white ſtring about their Arms; makes towards the Heydecker-Port; where having thrown Turffs and Faggots into the Ditch to fill it up to the middle, the Imperialiſts run with Scaling Ladders upon their backs, the Walls are in a trice mounted, the Town entred, and the Souldiers fall to killing. Faulkenberg now flying in upon them, beats them back to the very Walls again: but a Port being by this time opened, and the Enemies Horſe let in, the Valiant Faulkenberg is ſlain with a Shot, the Adminiſtrator hurt, both in the Thigh and Head, and ſo taken. Whilſt all thus goes to wrack, a mighty Fire breaks out (how none knows) and it being a great windy day, all was on the ſudden become one great Flame, the whole Town was within twelve hours ſpace utterly turned to Aſhes, excepting 139 Houſes, ſix goodly Churches are burnt; the Cathedral, together with St. Mary's Church and Cloiſter, were by the Monks and Soldiers diligence, preſerved. Twenty thouſand People at leaſt were here killed, burned, and ſmothered, whereof 6000 drowned in the Elb. Tilly's Walloons would give quarter to few: and the Crabatts never uſe to give, or beg any.

May the 12*th* came Tilly into the Town; and finding ſome hundreds of Women and Children in the Church, he gives them their Lives, and ſome Bread to maintain them; next day he forbids pillaging.

Upon Sunday, May 15. becauſe he would have this fair Cathedral, now ſtained in Blood, made glorious, cauſes it to be cleanſed, and new conſecrated.

James Maleverer proceeded againſt in the Exchequer, concerning the Knighthood buſineſs.

WHereas it was commanded, to the Sheriff of the County of York, by Writ under the Seal of his Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, dated the 16*th* day of May, in the 7*th* Year of his Majeſty's Reign that now is, That he ſhould diſtrain James Maleverer Eſq; to appear before the Barons of his Majeſty's ſaid Court of Exchequer, in the Octaves of the Holy Trinity then next following, to make Fine to the King for his Treſpaſs and Contempt in not coming to the preſence of the King, before the One and thirtieth day of January, in the firſt Year of his ſaid Majeſty's Raign, to take upon him the Order of Knighthood, according to the form of a Proclamation in that behalf formerly made; at which day of the ſaid Octaves of the Holy Trinity, the ſaid Maleverer did appear, and pleaded to the ſaid Writs, That although his ſaid Majeſty the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January, and for three days next before the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January, was reſident and remaining at his Palace at Whitehall in the County of Middleſex; and that the ſaid James Maleverer, the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January, and three days next before the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January, was reſident and remaining at Arncliff, in the ſaid County of York, which is diſtant from the ſaid Palace of Whitehall, the ſpace of one hundred and fourſcore miles: and that the ſaid James Maleverer, the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January aforeſaid, or at any time before, had no Lands or Rents in his own hands, or in the hands of Feoffees to his uſe, out of the ſaid County of York; and that that part of the ſaid County of York which is neareſt to the ſaid Palace of Whitehall, is diſtant from the ſaid Palace of Whitehall the ſpace of one hundred and thirty miles; and that no Proclamation, by virtue of any Writ of Proclamation, for the appearance of any Perſons whatſoever, to take the ſaid Order of Knighthood, was made in any part of the ſaid County of York, before the thirtieth day of January, in the ſaid firſt Year of his Majeſty's Raign; by reaſon whereof the ſaid James Maleverer could not perſonally come to the preſence of his ſaid Majeſty, to take the ſaid Order of Knighthood before the ſaid one and thirtieth day of January, in the ſaid firſt year of his Majeſty's ſaid Raign; yet the ſaid James Maleverer for his Fine in the Premiſes, did humbly ſubmit himſelf to the ſaid Court, and demanded to be diſcharged of the ſaid Iſſues returned and impoſed upon him by reaſon of the Premiſes. Yet notwithſtanding the ſaid Plea and Submiſſion of the ſaid James Maleverer; and after the ſame was made as aforeſaid, and entred upon Record in his Majeſty's ſaid Court of Exchequer; and the ſaid Court moved for

An. 1631. ſtay of the ſaid Proceſs, and diſcharge of the Iſſues. Sir H. D. being then Lord Chief Baron of the ſaid Court of Exchequer, contrary to his Oath, and contrary to the Laws of this Realm, and to the great impoveriſhing of the ſaid James Maleverer, did (together with the reſt of the then Barons of the ſaid Court) refuſe to impoſe any Fine whatſoever upon the ſaid James Maleverer, and told him, That the ſaid Court had no power to fine him, and that he muſt compound with certain Commiſſioners for that purpoſe appointed. And did further order and direct ſeveral other Writs of Diſtringas, to iſſue forth out of his ſaid Majeſty's Court of Exchequer, under the Seal of the ſaid Court, directed to the ſeveral high Sheriffs of the ſaid County of York, whereby the ſaid Sheriffs were commanded further to diſtrain the ſaid James Maleverer to appear, as aforeſaid; upon which ſaid Writs of Diſtringas, ſeveral great and exceſſive Iſſues were returned upon the Lands of the ſaid James Maleverer, amounting to the ſum of two thouſand pounds, or thereabouts; a great part whereof the ſaid James Maleverer was inforced to pay; and in like manner the ſaid Sir H. D. (together with the reſt of the then Barons of the ſaid Court of Excqeuuer) did order and direct ſuch and the like unjuſt and undue Proceedings; and the ſaid Proceedings were had and made accordingly againſt Thomas Moyſer Eſq; and againſt ſeveral other Perſons his Majeſty's Subjects in ſeveral parts of this Realm, to the utter undoing of many of them.

Jan. 20. Sope-makers incorporated.

In order to increaſe the Crown-Revenue by the way of Grants, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, the King creates a New Corporation within the City of Weſtminſter, by the Name of the Society of Sope-makers, made to theſe Perſons following; Sir Henry Compton Knight of the Bath, Henry Gilford, Nicholas Forteſcue, Baſil Brook, Edward Stradling, Richard Weſton, William Ford, Sir James Banks, Knight; George Gage, Francis Townly, Beverly Bretton, Thomas Jones, and Thomas Ruſſel, Eſquires, and their Succeſſors; and to remain as a Society or Body Corporate, by the Name of the Governor, Aſſiſtants, and Society of Sope-makers, and that they ſhall have the ſame to them and their Succeſſors.

Giving them and their Succeſſors power to erect and admit Perſons into their Society, and to purchaſe Lands and Hereditaments to them and their Succeſſors, in Fee and Perpetuity, for Life or Years, and diſpoſe of the ſame as they ſhall pleaſe.

And the King by the ſaid Patent doth nominate and appoint Sir Richard Weſton Knight, to be the firſt Governor of the ſaid Society; and the ſaid Sir Henry Compton and others to be the Aſſiſtants.

And all Sope-boilers who will not come into their Corporation, are to be prohibited the Trade of Sope-boilers. And a good Revenue yearly was brought into the King's Exchequer, as is hereafter mentioned, viz. 10000 l. by way of Advance; and 8 l. per Tun paid alſo into the Exchequer.

Hiſtorical Collections

For the Year 1632.

WE begin this Year in a new method, which we purpoſe to obſerve for the following Years, being a brief Account or Diary of ſome remarkable Paſſages in order of Time for the whole Year of 1632, by commencing the Year with a Copy of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury's Diary, written with his own hand; which we (being preſent) ſaw produced at the Lords Bar at the time of his Trial; wherein are many things contained, which will ſave us the labour to mention in the Body of Hiſtorical Collections, and will gain greater Belief with the Reader (being his own words) than if they had bin never ſo truly related by any Author upon Credit: And if there be Matters of leſs moment contained in the Diary, which are not ſo clear for Hiſtory, yet are they ſubject Matter for Obſervation; and the Reader may ruminate in his Thoughts what the meaning ſhould be of ſome dark Expreſſions, which we do not undertake to explain, neither are we ſo uncharitable to make publick in print the ſaid Diary, as ſome * have done, ſeeming thereby to reflect on ſome Paſſages which had bin better omitted than publiſhed, but we paſs them over.

The Biſhop of London's Diary for the Year 1632.

I Preached at Court, Saturday, May 26.

Trinity-Sunday-Eve, I conſecrated the Lord Treaſurer's Chappel at Roehampton.

May 29, Tueſday, my meeting and ſetling upon expreſs terms with K. B. in the Gallery at Greenwich, in which buſineſs God bleſs me.

June 15. Mr. Francis Windebank, my old Friend, was ſworn Secretary of State; which place I obtained for him of my Gracious Maſter King Charles.

June 10. Monday, I married my Lord Treaſurer Weſton's Eldeſt Son, to the Lady Frances, daughter to the Duke of Lenox, at Roehampton.

June 25. D. S. with me at Fulham, Cum Ma. &c.

July 10. Dr. Juxon, the Dean of Worceſter, at my ſuit, ſworn Clerk of his Majeſty's Cloſet; that I might have one that I might truſt near his Majeſty, if I grew weak or infirm, as I muſt have a time.

July 17. I conſecrated the Church at Stanmore Magna in Middleſex, built by Sir John Wolſtenham.

December 2. Sunday, The Small Pox appeared upon his Majeſty, but God be thanked, he had a very gentle Diſeaſe of it.

Decemb. 27. Thurſday, The Earl of Arundel ſet forwards towards the Low Countries, to fetch the Queen of Bohemia and her Children.

Decemb. 25, I preached to the King, Chriſtmaſs-day.

An. 1632.

Jan. 1. My being with K. B. this day in the afternoon, troubled me much, God give me a good iſſue out of it.

Jan. 15. K. B. and I unexpectedly came to ſome clearer Declarations of our ſelves, which God bleſs, &c.

Feb. 11. Monday night till Tueſday morning the great Fire upon London-Bridg, many Houſes burnt down.

Wedneſday Feb. 13. The Feoffees, that pretended to buy in Impropriations, were diſſolved in the Chequer-Chamber. They were the main Inſtruments for the Puritan Faction, to undo the Church; The Criminal part reſerved.

Feb. 28. Thurſday, Maſter Chancellor of London, Dr. Duke brought me word, how miſerably I was ſlandered by ſome Separatiſts; I pray God give me Patience, and forgive them.

March 6. Aſh-wedneſday, I preached at Whitehal.

There were at this time ſome who were averſe to the way of the times, and did not forbear to ſpeak againſt new Doctrines and Ceremonies: as appears by the following Proceedings in the High Commiſſion.

May 6.
Mr. Barnard queſtioned in the HighCommiſſion Court, and cenſured, the Archbiſh. being preſent.

Mr. Nathaniel Barnard, Lecturer of St. Sepulchers London, in his Sermon preached at St. Maries in Cambridge, delivered ſmart paſſages againſt poſſibility of Salvation in the Faith and Worſhip of the Church of Rome, as it was Decreed in the Council of Trent; and againſt the Introducing of Pelagian Errors, and Romiſh Superſtitions into our Church; for which he was articled againſt in the High-Commiſſion-Court. His Text was, 1 Sam. 4. 21. The Glory is departed from Iſrael, (becauſe the Ark of God was taken away.) For which he was cenſured, and ordered to make this Recantation.

The Recantation ordered for Mr. Barnard, (which he refuſed to make) was as followeth.

'WHereas by a Sermon, made by me in this place the 6th of 'May laſt, upon this Text, 1 Sam. 4. 21. [The Glory is departed 'from Iſrael, becauſe the Ark of God was taken] I had this Paſſage; ' [And the Apoſtle, Rom. 1. 16. affirmeth of the preaching of the Goſpel; 'that it is [the Power of God unto Salvation] id eſt, It is that Mean 'by which God maniſeſteth his Omnipotent and Irreſiſtible Power, in the 'Converſion and Salvation of all thoſe, who from Eternity were ordained 'hereto by God's abſolute and immutable Decree.]

For which Paſſage he was enjoyned to make this Recantation following:

'And I do here publickly acknowledg, that hereby (contrary to his 'Majeſty's Command in his Declaration lately publiſhed, and printed 'with the Articles of Religion) I did go beyond the general meaning 'of that place of Scripture, and of the ſaid Articles, and drew the ſame 'to maintain the one ſide of ſome of theſe ill-raiſed differences which 'his Majeſty's ſaid Declaration mentioneth: And this I did rather out 'of a deſire to thruſt in ſomewhat into my ſaid Sermon, in affirmation 'of one ſide of the ſaid Differences, than any ways occaſioned by the 'Text I then preached of.

'For which I here publickly profeſs my hearty Sorrow, and do humbly crave pardon of God Almighty, of his Majeſty, and of this Congregation.

‘And whereas in the ſame Sermon I had this Paſſage,

‘[If God's Ordinances for his publick Worſhip in their purity are the Glory of a Nation; then it follows that they who go about to deprive a Nation of any of God's Ordinances for his publick Worſhip either in whole, or in the leaſt part of them, (id eſt) in their purity and integrity, they go about to make that Nation baſe and inglorious; and if ſo, then are they enemies to that Nation, and Traitors to it, if it be their own Nation: for Treaſon is not limited to the Royal Blood; as if he only could be a Traitor who plotteth and attempteth the diſhonour, or ſhedding thereof; but may be, and is too oft committed againſt the whole Church and Nation: which laſt is ſo much the worſe of them two, by how much the End is better than the Means, and the Whole of greater conſequence than any one Part alone. Whereby we may learn what to account of thoſe among our ſelves (if any ſuch be) which is better known to you than to me, who endeavour to quench the Light, and abate the Glory of our Iſrael, by bringing in their Pelagian Errors into the Doctrine of our Church eſtabliſht by Law, and the Superſtitions of the Church of Rome into our Worſhip of God, as high Altars, Crucifixes, and bowing to them (id eſt) (in plain Engliſh) worſhipping them; whereby they ſymbolize with the Church of Rome very ſhamefully, to the irreparable ſhipwrack of many Souls who ſplit upon this Rock.]

‘I do now upon better information find, that many erronious and dangerous Aſſertions, and Conſequences unfitting to be here expreſt, may be collected and inferred out of the ſaid words; and I do therefore hereby publickly recant all the ſaid Words, as they are, by way of uſe or inference and application, uſed by me, to be very raſhly and inconſiderately uttered, and to be very undutiful towards his Majeſty. I do humbly refer and ſubmit my ſelf to his Majeſty's Clemency and gratious Acceptance for the interpretation of my meaning of the ſame; and I am heartily ſorry, and do humbly crave pardon, that words and applications ſo dangerous and ſcandalous to the preſent ſtate of the Church of England proceeded from me.

‘Thirdly, Whereas in the ſame Sermon I had this paſſage;

‘[By God's Ordinances here I underſtand chiefly the word Sacraments and Prayer, in that purity and integrity, wherein the Lord Chriſt left them, not blended and adulterated with any ſuperſtitious Inventions of Man, for then they ceaſe to be God's Ordinances, and he owns them no longer.]

‘I deſire this paſſage may be taken and underſtood as I ſpake and meant it, and not otherwiſe; that is, not that I hold all humane Inventions added to God's Ordinances to be ſuperſtitious; for I account that Tenent not only falſe but palbably abſurd and fooliſh. But to exclude all thoſe humane Inventions which may hinder the preſervation of the Doctrine and Diſcipline of this Church of England in that purity and integrity, wherein through God's Gracious Goodneſs by his Majeſty's Laws Eccleſiaſtical we do enjoy them.

‘Fourthly and laſtly; Whereas by ſome other Paſſages in my ſaid Sermon was (as I underſtand) conceived by ſome not only to caſt Aſperſions upon the preſent ſtate of our Church, and ſome principal Members and parts thereof, thereby to bring it and them into ſcandal and diſlike; but even under ſome ambiguous words, as if it were to move to take up Arms for Redreſs, although with recalling or re-

An. 1632.

‘ſtraining the ſame in terms afterwards, and ſaying thus;

‘[Let us pray theſe Men either to Converſion (if it be God's bleſſed Will) or to their Deſtruction, Fiat Juſtitia pereant illi, and calling them crafty Achitophels, &c.]

‘I do here acknowledg and profeſs I had no ſuch intentions, neither do I know any cauſe why my ſelf, or any other, ſhould ſo bitterly inveigh againſt any in our Church. I am therefore heartily ſorry that I gave cauſe to any of the Hearers to conceive ſo: And I humbly crave pardon for it.

Mr. Bernard refuſed this Recantation, yet in general terms profeſſed his ſorrow for any Overſights, and unbeſeeming Expreſſions in his Sermon. He was fined in the High Commiſſion Court a thouſand pound, and ſuſpended his Miniſtry; Condemned in coſts of Sute, and committed to Priſon, &c.

The Trial of Rea and Ramſey in the Court of Honour before the Lord High Conſtable and Lord Marſhal.

On the 8*th* of May this Year, a period was put to the great Trial in the Court of Honour before the Lord High Conſtable, and Lord Marſhal, between Rea and Ramſey, concerning the formentioned Accuſation of High Treaſon againſt Marqueſs Hamilton, which begun to have a Hearing in November the laſt Year, and was now decreed by that Court in this Year to be determined by Combat: which in regard it is a Trial Remarkable after the Proceeding of the Civil Law, we have given the Reader an account thereof at large, however take his Majeſty's thoughts of it, as it is expreſſed in this Letter to the Marqueſs.

The King writeth to Marq. Hamilton of the proceeding in the Trial between Rea and Ramſey.

James,

Since you went I have not written to you of Mackay's buſineſs, becauſe I neither deſire to propheſie nor write half News; but now ſeeing (by the Grace of God) what ſhall be the end of it, I have thought fit to be the firſt Advertiſer of it to you. I doubt not but you have heard, that (after long ſeeing of Proofs for clearing the buſineſs as much as could be, and Formalities which could not be eſchewed) the Combat was awarded, Day ſet, Weapons appointed: But having ſeen and conſidered of all that can be ſaid on either Side, as likewiſe the carriage of both the Men, upon mature deliberation I have reſolved not to ſuffer them to fight. Becauſe, firſt, for Mackay he hath failed ſo much in his Circumſtantial Probations, eſpecially concerning Muſchamp, upon whom he built as a chief Witneſs; that no body now is any way ſatisfied with his Accuſations. Then for David Ramſey, though We cannot condemn him for that which is not, yet he hath ſo much, and ſo often offended by his violent Tongue, that We can no ways think him innocent, though not that way guilty whereof he is accuſed; wherefore I have commanded the Court ſhall be diſmiſſed, and Combat diſcharged, with a Declaration to this purpoſe, That though upon want of good Proof the Combat was neceſſarily awarded, yet upon the whole matter I am fully ſatisfied that there was no ſuch Treaſon as Mackay had fancied. And for David Ramſey, though We muſt clear him of that Treaſon in particular, yet not ſo far in the General, but that he might give occaſion enough by his Tongue of great Accuſation, if it had been rightly placed, as by his fooliſh preſumptuous Carriage did appear.

Combat diſcharged.

This is the ſubſtance, and ſo ſhort, that it is rather a Direction how to believe others, than a Narrative it ſelf; one of my chief ends being that you may ſo know David Ramſey, that you may not have to do with ſuch a Peſt as he is, ſuſpecting he may ſeek to inſinuate himſelf to you upon this Occaſion:

Wherefore I muſt deſire you, as you love me, to have nothing to do with him.

To conclude now; I dare ſay that you ſhall have no diſhonour in this Buſineſs; and for my ſelf, I am not aſhamed that herein I have ſhewed my ſelf to be,

London, May 8.
1632.

Your Faithful Friend, and Loving Couſin,

CHARLES R.

Four Biſhops advanced.

By the Interceſſion of the Biſhop of London, this Year, Walter Curl was Tranſlated from the Biſhoprick of Bath and Wells to Wincheſter.

Robert Wright from the Biſhoprick of Briſtol to that of Coventry and Lichfield.

Auguſtine Lindſey was made Biſhop of Peterborough.

And Dr. Pierce Biſhop of Bath and Wells.

Concerning the well making of Sope.

‘His Majeſty intending the advancement of the Native Commodities of this Realm, and the prevention of divers Deceits commonly uſed in the making of Sope, with Forreign and unſweet Materials; and of the exceſſive Rates in the ſale of ill Sope, at the pleaſure of the Sope-boilers, being no Body Politick, nor govern'd by any good Order: And reſolving to make the Manufacture of Sope and Pot-aſhes a Work of his own People, did, by Letters Patents dated the 20*th* of January laſt paſt, incorporate divers Perſons, by the Names of Governors, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the Society of Soapers within Weſtminſter and Middleſex; and that it ſhould be lawful for them, and their Succeſſors, to exerciſe the ſaid Art and Myſtery; and that they ſhould chuſe skilful Perſons out of the ſaid Society, to overſee all Works, Workmen, &c. uſing the ſaid Art and Myſtery, and to prevent fraud and deceit therein. And that none of the ſaid Sope ſhall be put to ſale, before the Overſeers ſhall have overſeen the ſame, and have marked it for good; and to puniſh the Gainſayers and Rebellers of his Majeſty's Proclamation.

‘And the Governors, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the ſaid Society, did by Indenture, ſealed with their Common Seal, made between his Majeſty of the one Part, and them of the other part, covenant, to erect and maintain ſuch Workhouſes as might make 5000 Tun of good Sope, and a further proportion if need ſhould require.

‘And his Majeſty, by his Letters Patents, did erect an Office for keeping of Patterns, and making the Eſſay of Sope to be made by the Governors, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the Society of Sopers of Weſtminſter; and appointed F. C. to be the firſt Eſſay-maſter, and to take an Oath for the true execution of his Office.

‘His Majeſty therefore did charge and command the ſaid Society, That they uſe no other Oil in making of their Sope, but Olive-Oil, and Rape-Oil, by which means the Sope may be ſweet, good, and ſerviceable; and that none do put to ſale any Sope, Pot-aſhes, &c. before they be Eſſayed, and tried to be ſound good and ſerviceable, and ſo marked by the Deputies of the ſaid Society.

June 20. The King commands the Gentry to keep their reſidence at their Manſions in the Country; and forbids them to make their habitations in London, and Places adjoyning.

The King being informed, that of late Years a great number of the Nobility, Gentry, and Abler ſort of his Subjects, with their Families, reſorted to the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Places adjoining, and there made their Reſidence, more than in former Times; contrary to the Ancient Uſage of the Engliſh Nation, which had occaſioned divers Inconveniencies: for whilſt their Reſidence was in the Country, they ſerved the King according to their Degrees and Ranks, in aid of the Government, whereby, and by their Houſe-keeping in thoſe parts, the Realm was defended, and the meaner ſort of People were guided, directed, and reliev'd; but by their reſidence in the ſaid Cities of London, Weſtminſter, and parts adjoining, they had not Emploiment, but lived without doing any Service to Prince or People: A great part of their Mony drawn out of their ſeveral reſpective Counties, and ſpent in the City, in exceſs of Apparel, provided from Forreign Nations, to the enriching of other Nations, and conſumed their time in other vain Delights and Expence, even to the waſting of their Eſtates.

‘His Majeſty therefore touched with a deep ſence of thoſe Inconveniencies, doth ſtraightly charge and command, that before the end of forty days, his Lords Spiritual and Temporal, Lieutenants, Deputy Lieutenants of Counties, Juſtices of Peace, Baronets, Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, and all Clerks having Benefices with Cure, Prebendaries, or Dignities in Cathedral or Collegiat Churches, that have Manſion-houſes, and Places of Reſidence in other Parts; that they do reſort to the ſeveral Counties where they uſually reſided, and there keep their Habitations and Hoſpitality, &c. except ſuch as are of his Majeſty's moſt Honourable Privy-Council, or bound to daily attendance on the King, Queen, or their Children.

‘Further declaring, That it was his firm reſolution to withſtand this great and growing Evil, by a conſtant ſeverity towards the Offenders; and therefore gave this timely warning, that none hereafter might preſume to tranſgreſs.

July 16. Againſt Building on New Foundations in London.

The King at this time took into his Princely Conſideration, the ſtate of his City of London, being his Royal Chamber, and Imperial Seat of his Kingdom, renowned over all parts of Chriſtendom.

‘And foreſeeing that the Honour, Government, Health and Safety of the City, is of great conſequence unto his Majeſty, and the whole Kingdom: And that his Royal Progenitors, in former Times, eſpecially his Royal Father, of bleſſed Memory, King James, and the moſt excellent Princeſs Queen Elizabeth, in their Times had carefully provided for the ſame, ſtraightly prohibiting the erecting of Houſes and Buildings upon new Foundations, and the entertaining of Inmates in and about this City, which would multiply the Inhabitants to ſuch an exceſſive number, that they could neither be govern'd nor fed; and for putting theſe his Majeſty's Commands in due execution, he did make, and ſeveral times renew Commiſſions, directed to the Lord Mayor of the ſaid City, and divers other Perſons of Honour and Worth, grounding the ſame upon the Rules of Law and Juſtice, as againſt publick and common Nuiſances, as well as upon Reaſons of State and Government, all tending to the publick Good ‘of the People; but that taking not ſo full effect hitherto, as the King expected, his Majeſty hath now again reſolved to renew that his Commiſſion to divers Honourable Perſons, and others of Worth and Underſtanding, requiring them forthwith in their own Perſons, as by other good ways and means, to inquire and find out the Offenders, and Offences againſt this his Majeſty's Declaration, and to make Certificate thereof to the Council-Board, or in the Court of Star-Chamber, to the end that ſuch Proceedings may be had againſt them, as may ſtand with the King's Honour, and the Laws of the Land. See more of this at large in the Appendix, which contains alſo his Majeſty's particular Rules for the putting this Commiſſion in execution, which are very large.

Concerning the Poſtmaſter of England for Foreign Parts.

Whereas the King's Royal Father, King James, did conſtitute an Office, called, The Office of the Poſtmaſter of England for Foreign Parts, who ſhould have the ſole taking up, ſending, and conveying of all Pacquets and Letters into thoſe Parts, with power to take moderate Salaries; and did appoint and conſtitute firſt Matthew de Queſter to execute that Imploiment; afterwards William Frizel and Thomas Withering, and their Deputies, to do all things appertaining to the ſame.

The Merchants of the Engliſh Nation, praying his then Majeſty to continue them in that Office, his moſt Excellent Majeſty that now is, affecting the welfare of his People, and conſidering how much it imports his State and this Realm, that the Secrets thereof be not diſcloſed to Foreign Nations, by a promiſcuous uſe of tranſmitting, or taking up of Foreign Letters, was pleaſed on the 19th of July, to appropriate the ſaid Office to Frizel and Withering aforeſaid, with prohibition to all others to intermeddle therewith.

The City of London about the Death of Dr. Lamb is fined.

Doctor Lamb, commonly ſo called, was now living, though neither Doctor nor any way Lettered, but a Man odious to the Vulgar for ſome Rumors that went of him, as a Conjurer, or Sorcerer. He was quarrel'd withal in the Street in London; and as the common People more and more gathered about him, ſo they pelted him with rotten Eggs, Stones, and other Riffraff; juſtled him, beat him, bruiſed him, and ſo continued purſuing of him from Street to Street, till there were five hundred People in a plump following him: This continued three hours at leaſt, until Night, and not a Magiſtrate or Officer of Peace, once ſhewed himſelf to ſtop the Tumult; and ſo the poor old Man, being above eighty Years of Age, died of this violence, and no Inquiſition was taken of it, nor any Malefactor ever diſcovered. For which Negligence, an Information was put in the King's Bench, by Mr. Attorny Noy, againſt the Mayor and Citizens; and they ſubmitted to the Grace of the Court, and were fined by the ſaid Court 1500 Marks by the Common Law, and not upon the Statute of 28. Ed. 3. nor upon the Statute of 4. H. 4. ſee the Statutes.

The Information.

The Information brought againſt the Mayor and Commonalty of London, was to this effect.

Term Paſch. 8. Car. Dr. Lamb.

‘Whereas they were incorporated by that Name, and it was a Walled City, and recites the Statute of 2. E. 4. That the Mayor for the time, and all who have been Mayors, ſhould be Juſtices ‘of the Peace within the City; and that the Sheriffs are made among themſelves, and Coroners appointed by themſelves, and that by Law they ought to ſuppreſs Riots, and unlawful Aſſemblies. Notwithſtanding in Jun. 4. Car. in the day time, That one John Lamb, alias dict. Doctor Lamb, was ſlain in a Tumult, and none of the Offenders taken, nor any Perſon known or indicted for that Felony. And upon this Information, the Mayor and Commonalty appeared, and confeſſed the Offence, & poſuerunt ſe in gratiam Curiæ, &c. for which they were amerced to 1500 Marks; for it was conceived to be an Offence at the Common Law, to ſuffer ſuch a Crime to be committed in a walled Town, tempore diurno, and none of the Offenders to be known or indicted; vide 3. E. 3. Corone 299. 22. E. 3. Coron. 238. 8. E. 2. Coron. 425. Stamf. fo. 33. Cok. lib. 7. fo. 7. 3. H. 7. 15. Dyer. 210. And Noy, Attorney General, ſhewed a Record, Mich. 18. E. 3. Rot. 132. an Indictment of a Town in Devonſhire, for ſuffering an Aſſembly, as it were, to hold Aſſizes in mockery of Juſtice. And 21. H. 6. a Preſentment before Forteſcue, againſt the Town of Norwich; That there was a great Riot in Norwich, and one Gladman took upon him to be King, and went with a Crown of Paper, in a riotous manner, to the Priory of Norwich, &c. And although it appears not upon the Roll, quid inde venit, yet per Rot. Patent. 27. H. 6. Memb. 13. their Liberties for that Cauſe were ſeized, and regranted.

Auguſt 1. Concerning the Earl of Strafford his Trial, as to an Article, charging him with words ſpoke at York Aſſizes.

Thomas Lord Vicount Wentworth, Lord Preſident of the Council in the North, in Auguſt this Year, at the Publick Aſſizes held at the Caſtle in the County of York, let fall ſome words, which the Gentlemen of the Country then preſent, took great exception at; and afterwards the ſame were laid to his Charge by the Parliament as a Crime.

Here followeth the words, and the Lord Vicount Wentworth's Anſwer in his Defence; for it were unjuſt to ſet down the Crime, and not the Defence of the Accuſed, although it be a Digreſſion in point of Time.

To prove the words the firſt Witneſs that was produced did teſtify;

Auguſt.

That when Sir Thomas Leyton was Sheriff of Yorkſhire, in the Year 1632, he heard the Earl of Strafford ſay theſe words, That ſome nothing would content but Law; but they ſhould know, the King's little Finger ſhould be heavier than the Loins of the Law: and that this was ſpoken in the place where the Judges ſat in York Caſtle, at the Aſſizes that Year.

And the High Sheriff himſelf being produced, teſtified, that his Lordſhip ſaid, Some would not be ſatisfied but by Law, but they ſhould have Law enough, for they ſhould find the King's little Finger ſhould be heavier than the Loins of the Law; and that his Lordſhip was upon the Bench when he ſpake thoſe words.

The Teſtimony of theſe two Perſons, was confirmed in ſubſtance by another Witneſs, whoſe Examination was read, himſelf being dead; they all agreed the time when theſe words were ſpoken, to be in the Year 1632, or 1633.

DEFENCE.

DEFENCE.

The Defendent knows not whether it be material for him to anſwer this or no, becauſe the words are charged upon him to be ſpoken in Auguſt, after the 21 of March, 8. Car. which appears to be when he was in Ireland; but he will not ſtand upon ſuch niceties, (there might be a miſtake in point of time) he deſires the Truth may appear. The words ſaid by him, were quite contrary to the Charge: he ſaid, The little Finger of the Law was heavier than the King's Loins. The occaſion of which words was this, There came divers Levies in the Year when Sir Thomas Layton was High Sheriff, for divers great Sums of Mony for Iſſues in the Knighthood Buſineſs, on ſome that had compounded, and paid their Mony to him the Defendent, who was the Receiver of that Mony, which he paid into the Exchequer; yet theſe Iſſues came out of the Exchequer by ſome Error above, and were levied with very great rigor by Sir Thomas Layton. When the Defendent came down, he ſhewed Sir Thomas Layton how the Men were injured by ſuch Proceſs, and deſired him to return their Mony to them again, and he would ſee him diſcharged. And then to give ſatisfaction to the Country, he told them, That the Commiſſion for Knighthood-Mony, was a Commiſſion of Grace and Favour; and that their compounding with the King was an eaſe to them, and much greater eaſe than by a proceeding at Law would have fallen on them, the very Iſſues being three or four times more than they had compounded the whole for. And thereupon I applyed that Speech, The little Finger of the Law is heavier than the Loins of the King; and if he ſhould have fallen to threaten, he had ſpoken contrary to the end purpoſed by him, which was to incline them; and none of the Witneſſes againſt him ſpake any thing to the occaſion of that Speech. It is long ſince theſe words were ſpoken, and they were never yet complained of, and he muſt have a ſtrong Memory, that will ſwear poſitively to the very words ſpoken ſeven or eight years ago; and ought to have better ears than one of the Witneſſes produced, who appears to have ſuch an infirmity in his hearing, that he muſt be whooped to at the Bar before he can hear; and ſure his Sence of Hearing is much amended, elſe he could not hear my Lord of Strafford at that diſtance, to the place where he ſat as High-Sheriff in open Court. Then he produced two Witneſſes, the one teſtified that he heard a Gentleman of the County ſay, who was preſent at that Aſſizes, that my Lord ſpake the words in manner and occaſion, as related by his Lordſhip; and another Witneſs (now a Member of Parliament) who was preſent at that time upon the Bench teſtified the ſame.

REPLY.

Though as to point of Time the Month was miſtaken in the Article, yet that is not at all material, the Offence is, That his Lordſhip ſpake the words, and that he was on the Bench when he ſpake them.

As to his Lordſhip's exception to the Witneſs, which he ſaid had need have better Ears; it was replyed, he had not bin deaf above two Months; and that two other Witneſſes concurred fully in the Point with his Teſtimony. And for the firſt Witneſs produced in his Lordſhip's behalf, it is but a Hearſay from one that ſpake it at the Table.

Hereupon the Sheriff was again interrogated, who teſtified upon Oath, That he had his Hearing well till about Chriſtmaſs laſt, and ſaid, he ſtood within four yards of the Earl of Strafford when he ſpake theſe words at York Aſſizes.

Two other Witneſſes were produced, who teſtified the forementioned words to be ſpoken by his Lordſhip, the firſt whereof gave an Account of the Occaſion.

In Anſwer to this new Teſtimony the Earl ſaid, That the Point he muſt inſiſt upon is, That the very words, if they had been ſpoken by him as they are laid, are no Treaſon within the Statute, and that being a Point of Law, he craved leave to reſerve himſelf to be heard by his Counſel in a fitting time.

Then ſaid the Gentleman that managed the Evidence againſt him, Your Lordſhip may be pleaſed to take notice, that there are five Witneſſes expreſs in the Point. Upon which your Lordſhip's Judgment is expected.

Concerning greedy Cormorants and Hoarders of Corn, forbidding to tranſport any Corn.

Conſiderations being had the 30th of September, of the manifold evil Practices, which for private Gain are too often put in practice, as well by Hoarders of Corn, as by Merchants and others, to enhance the Price thereof, which appeared in the time of the late Dearth: And yet falſe Rumours are ſpread and divulged of great Tranſportation of Corn, licens'd by Authority, to the diſhonour of the King and State; It was then declared by King and Council, 'That all the ſaid Rumours were moſt falſe, untrue, and ſcandalous, and the penalty of the Laws was ordered to be ſeverely inflicted on the Divulgers thereof; with a ſtrict Prohibition that for the ſpace of one Year no Corn or Grain be Tranſported; to the intent that the Plenty which then was, might not be turned to the enriching only of a few greedy Cormorants.

Counterfeiting of Seals uſually affixed to Colcheſter Bays.

One Thomas Jupp, a Clothworker of the City of London, being on the 12th of October at Bar of the Court of Star-Chamber, his Majeſty's Attorney-General, Mr. Noy, informed the Court that he had taken the Examination of the ſaid Thomas Jupp, concerning the Counterfeiting of Seals affixed to the Bays of Colcheſter, and the fixing them to other Bays of meaner condition; and ſhewed forth certain Iron Stamps, and pieces of Bays ſealed with Counterfeit Seals, put to Bays not of the making of Colcheſter, but of leſs eſtimation. And his Examination being read in Court, and he confeſſing the truth thereof; The King's Attorney-General prayed that ſome exemplary Puniſhment might be inflicted upon him. Whereupon the Court did declare in theſe terms, 'That the Offence of the ſaid Thomas Jupp is a falſe Cozenage and Deceit to the Buyers, and a Prejudice to the Sale of their Clothes; and therefore the Court doth adjudg and decree the ſaid Thomas Jupp to be committed to the Fleet, fined a Thouſand Pounds to the King, and be ſet upon the Pillary in Cheapſide, with a Paper in his Hat, declaring the nature of his Offence; and alſo to be ſet upon the Pillory at Cornhil-Exchange, Blackwell-Hall, Bocking, and Colcheſter, upon ſeveral Market-days, with the like Paper on his Hat.

Now foraſmuch as the Decree of the Court in this Caſe is drawn up with great care, to prevent the like Abuſe for the future; We have inſerted the ſame at large in the Appendix.

A Complaint againſt a Judg for delivering an Erronious opinion about the ſetting Prices upon Corn.

Whereas by the Statute made in the Reign of King Henry the 8*th*, prices of Victuals are appointed to be Rated in ſuch manner as in the ſaid Statute is declar'd; but it is manifeſt by the ſaid Statute, Corn is none of the Victuals thereby intended. Nevertheleſs ſome ill-affected perſons endeavouring to bring a charge upon the Subjects, contrary to Law, did ſurmiſe, that the prices of Corn might be rated and ſet according to that Statute, and thereupon great gain might be raiſed to his Majeſty by Licenſes and Diſpenſations, for ſelling Corn at other Prices: and a Command from his Majeſty being procur'd to the Judges, and ſent to them by Mr. Noy, his Majeſty's Attorny General, to deliver their Opinions touching the Queſtion, Whether Corn was ſuch Victuals as was intended to have the Price rated within the ſaid Statute? In anſwer to which Demand, Sir R. B. one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the King's-Bench, in furtherance of the ſaid unlawful Charge endeavoured to be impoſed, as aforeſaid, the 30th day of November, in the eighth Year of his then Majeſty's Reign, did deliver his Opinion, That Corn was ſuch Victual as was intended to have the Price rated within the ſaid Statute. Which ſaid Opinion was afterward declared by Parliament to be contrary to Law, and the plain ſenſe and meaning of the ſaid Statute, and contrary to that Judge his own knowledge; and the Parliament afterwards, among other things, impeached him, That this Judgment was given and delivered by him with a purpoſe and intention, that the ſaid unlawful Charge might be impoſed upon the Subject.

Decemb. 20. Concerning Gold-Weights

'The King taking into his Conſideration, That the ordering of Coin, and the value of Coin within this Realm pertaineth to his Majeſty, as a part of his Regality; and that the making and allowing of Weights and Counterpoiſes of Current Money, whereby diſcovery ſhall be made of the Juſtneſs thereof, is proper to the King; And that many Complaints have bin made of many and great Abuſes daily committed within the Kingdom; That divers Counterpoiſes of the King's Mony of Gold, (commonly called Gold-Weights) and Beams and Ballances for the poiſing of thoſe Moneys, are made and put to ſale, marked with the King's Enſigns, yet are not equal and juſt, whereby the Subjects are deceived.

'Wherefore for Redreſs of ſuch Abuſes, and that the Beams and Ballances may be equal, the Kings Majeſty hath taken into his own hands the making, aſſiſing and iſſuing of thoſe Counterpoiſes, or Weights with Grains; and hath appointed Sir Thomas Aileſbury to have the ſole making and putting to ſale thoſe Gold Weights, ordered to be of a round and circular form; prohibiting all others to make any of them, other than ſuch as ſhall be licenſed by the ſaid Sir Thomas Aileſbury, who is required to take care that the ſaid Gold Weights & Grains, or half Grains, ſhall be made ſo as the whole Kingdom may be ſupplied therewith. And that the Offenders againſt this his Majeſty's declared pleaſure ſhall be proceeded againſt in the King's High-Court of Star-Chamber, or elſewhere.

At this time there was ſuch plenty of Gold in the Kingdom, and ſuch ſcarcity of Silver, that the Drovers and Farmers, who brought their their Cattel, Sheep and Swine to be ſold in Smithfeild, would ordinarily make their bargain to be paid in Silver, and not in Gold; And beſides in this time people did ordinarily give two pence, and ſometimes more, to get twenty ſhillings in Silver for the exchange of a Twenty-ſhilling piece in Gold full Weight.

And in and about London and Weſtminſter, as well as in other parts, moſt people carried Gold Scales in their pockets, to weigh Gold on all occaſions, and had them from that Office for that purpoſe erected.

The Feoffees Inſtruments for Impropriations called in queſtion in the Exchequer. William Noy, Attor. Gen. Plantiff.

The Biſhop of London, as is already mentioned, having formerly projected the overthrow of the Feoffees for the buying in of Impropriations, as the main Inſtruments of the Puritan Faction to undo the Church; The Cauſe was brought by Information into the Exchequer, by Mr. Noy the King's Attorny General, Plantiff, againſt William Gough, Richard Sibbs, Giles Off-ſpring, John Damport, Clerks. Sir Tho. Crew, Knight; Robert Eyers, an Apprentice of the Law; John White, Sam. Brown, Utter Barriſters at Law. Nickolas Rainton, Alderman of London. John Gearing, Rich. Davies, George Harwood, Francis Bridges, Merchants; William Leman, Thomas Foxley, Clerks; and Mr. Price, Defendents.

The Information was to this effect.

The Information.

'That ſince the tenth Year of the Reign of the late King, theſe 'Feoffees, to the intent to procure into their hands divers Manours, 'Lands, and Tenements, Rectories, Tythes, Oblations, and Sums of 'Money, which well-diſpoſed People ſhould give to the ſuſtaining 'and endowment of Perpetual Vicars, having Cure of Souls, and other 'Charitable Uſes; did of their own Authority erect and make themſelves into a Society, or Body Corporate, called ſometime by the name 'of the Collectors of St. Antholins; and uſed to hold Aſſemblies and 'Councils, and make Ordinances, appoint Regiſters and Actuaries for 'their doings: And have gotten into their hands Sums of Money, intended by the Donors for the foreſaid Pious Uſes; With part whereof they had purchaſed divers Rectories, Tithes, Prebendaries, Lands 'and Tenements, the Remonſtrances whereof are regiſtred in a Book, 'and had not imploied the ſame as was intended by the Givers, as by 'Law they ought.

Mr. Attorney further ſhewed, That it did appertain to his Majeſty's care, That ſuch Donations for Augmentation of Divine Worſhip and Publick Works of Charity, be not withdrawn, diminiſhed, or miſimployed, but be rightly diſtributed; and that an Accompt thereof ought to be made to his Majeſty in this Honourable Court, or elſewhere. That without the Writings, Evidences, and Regiſters remaining in the cuſtody of theſe Perſons, or their Officers, there could be no perfect Charge whereon to make an Accompt. Wherefore for diſcovery of what Lands, Goods, Chattels, and Sums of Money, had come into their hands, and how the ſame were imploied, and what Evidences and Regiſters remained in their keeping; and for an Accompt to be made of the diſtribution of all; He prayed Proceſs of Subpœna againſt them to appear in this Court.

The Defendants Anſwer.

The Defendents appeared, and made Anſwer, 'That they believed 'Impropriations in the poſſeſſions of Lay-Men, not imploied for the 'Maintenance of Preachers, was a great damage to the Church of England;

‘England; and that the purchaſing thereof for the maintenance of Divine Service and Preaching, is a Pious Work. And that as divers Men may by the Law join in the purchaſing of Manours and Lands, ſo without offence of Law they might confer how they might raiſe Moneys out of their own Purſes, and from their Allies and Friends, to purchaſe Impropriations for the maintenance of Worthy, Painful, and Conformable Preachers; and that the Lands and Revenues were ſufficiently conveyed unto Richard Stock, Alderman Hoyley, Chriſtopher Sherland, deceaſed, together with themſelves.

‘That they referr'd themſelves for the ſeveral States and Uſes thereof, to the ſeveral Deeds, Wills, and Declarations concerning the ſame. That the Donors of the Moneys, being many, gave the ſame towards the buying of Impropriations, Maintenance of Preachers, and ſuch other good Uſes, as the Defendents ſhould think meet; and not for the Endowment of Perpetual Vicars. That they had not converted to their own uſes any of the Moneys, or other things given or purchaſed. That they had not enacted, or made themſelves a Body Corporate, otherwiſe than they have here ſet forth. That to their knowledg they never preſented any to any Church, or Place in their diſpoſition, who was not Conformable to the Doctrine and Diſcipline of the Church of England, and Approved by the Ordinary of the Place.

And Sir Thomas Crew anſwered for himſelf, ‘That ſince Hillary-Term laſt, before the exhibiting of the Information, upon the Death of Chriſtopher Sherland, one of the Readers of Grays-Inn, he was moved by ſome of the Perſons above-named, to aſſiſt them in the Buſineſs; to which he willingly condeſcended, and was ready to join in ſo good a Work, the ſame tending to the maintenance of the Clergy that had not ſufficient Means, and were Conformable to the Orders of the Church, and painful and faithful in their Places.

Hereupon it was ordered, that the Books and Evidences ſhould be brought into the Court, which was done accordingly; Upon the reading whereof, together with the Defendents Anſwer, and upon hearing of the Cauſe debated by the Learned Counſel on both Sides, the Court declared, Judgment of the Court.

That the Defendents uſurped upon the King's Regality, and of their own Authority aſſume themſelves into a Body and Society, as if they had been Incorporated to a perpetual ſucceſſion, and made Ordinances and Conſtitutions to eſtabliſh themſelves in perpetuity, as appeareth by this their Ordinance.

‘That whereas four of them were in the Order of Prieſthood, four were Profeſſors of the Common-Law, and the reſt Citizens of London; if any of them ſhould die, or be removed, they ſhould elect one into his Place of the ſame Condition. And that all thoſe that ſhould have the profit of Impropriations, or obtain any Eccleſiaſtical Preſentation, ſhould be bound by certain Conditions which they had framed. Alſo they choſe among them a Treaſurer, Secretary, Auditor, and a Common Servant of their Livery, and inflicted Mulcts upon ſuch of them as met not at their Aſſemblies.

That they purchaſed diverſe Impropriations, but never reſtored one of them to the Church, by conferring it in Perpetuity upon any Incumbent, but kept them in their own hands, and diſpoſed of the Profits to ſuch Lecturers and Miniſters, and in ſuch Proportion, and for ſo long time as pleaſed them; and with other part thereof they bought Advowſons of Churches, Nominations tions of Lecturers and Schoolmaſters, which the Court conceived was not in the intention of thoſe that gave the Mony for buying in of Impropriations.

The Judgment of the Court.

Wherefore the Court was of Opinion, That the Proceedings of the Defendents was againſt the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm, and that they tended to the drawing to themſelves in time the principal Dependency of the whole Clergie, that ſhould have rewards from them, in ſuch meaſure, and on ſuch conditions as they ſhould fancy, thereby introducing many Novelties of dangerous Conſequence, both in Church and Common-Wealth, and making Uſurpation upon his Majeſty's Right.——That in not annexing Impropriations to perpetual Incumbents in purchaſing Advowſons, Nomination of Incumbents, Lecturers, and Schoolmaſters, and buying and keeping of Leaſes, they had not behaved themſelves as they ought to have done, nor according to the Truſt repoſed in them. And his Majeſty having referred the further examination of theſe Deſigns, intending to queſtion this Matter in the Star-Chamber, the Court did forbear to proceed to the inflicting of Puniſhments. Nevertheleſs it was Ordered and Decreed, That the Defendents ſhould not from thenceforth hold any more Aſſemblies, or make Orders touching the Premiſes: Nor make any Alienations or Alterations of the Eſtates of the afore-mentioned Impropriations, Advowſons, Manors, Lands, Tenements, and Leaſes, which ſhall remain in the Perſons in whom they now are, till the Court take further order. And as touching the buying of theſe Impropriations, the Court thought it a pious Work; but the diſtribution of the Profits, as is before declared, would have grown to a great inconvenience, and prejudicial to the Government of the Church. And his Majeſty's Pleaſure was made known, That whatſoever had bin thus beſtowed, ſhould be imploied wholly to the Good of the Church, and the Maintenance of Conformable Preachers in the right and beſt way. And it was further decreed, That Commiſſions ſhould be made to ſuch as the Court ſhall nominate, to enquire of all Rectories, Tythes, Impropriations, and of all Leaſes appointed to be ſold, and of all Sums of Mony appointed to be given for the purchaſing of Impropriations; and upon the Returns made by thoſe Commiſſioners, the whole Profits thereof ſhall be conferred upon perpetual Incumbents and their Succeſſors, as his Majeſty ſhall think fit. And as touching the Advowſons, when any Church becomes void, the King's Majeſty ſhall preſent, and School-maſters ſhall be placed by his Nomination. And the Defendents ſhall make Accompt of all Receipts, before ſuch Auditors as the Court ſhall appoint. And his Majeſty's Attorney General may give them a diſcharge, or except againſt the Allowances demanded by them.

Moreover, the King gave direction, That the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, the Lord Keeper, and other Lords and Biſhops, ſhould conſider whether a Criminal Proceſs ſhould be made againſt the Feoffees? and if ſo, then whether in the Court of Exchequer, or Star-chamber?

Not many days after, ſaith the Biſhop, Mr. Chancellor of London, Dr. Duck, brought me word how miſerably I was ſlandered by ſome Separatiſts; I pray God give me patience, and forgive them.

Alſo in February this Year Henry Sherfield Eſq; a Bencher of Lincolns-Inn, and Recorder of Sarum, was cenſur'd in the Star-Chamber, for taking certain Pictures of God the Father out of a Glaſs-Window in St. Edmond's Church in Saliſbury.

The Information in Star-Chamber againſt Henry Sherfield Eſq; a Bencher of Lincolns-Inn.

THe Information was exhibited againſt him, and divers other Perſons, by the King's Attorney General; ſhewing, That in the Churches, Chappels, and Sacred Places within this Realm, no private Perſon ought to alter or innovate any thing in the Fabrick or Ornament thereof, without ſpecial Licence from his Majeſty, or the Biſhops in their ſeveral Dioceſſes, much leſs deface or diminiſh any part thereof againſt their Direction: but the Defendent, Sherfield, Recorder of New Sarum, and dwelling in the Pariſh of St. Edmonds, being evil affected to the Diſcipline of the Church of England, and encouraging ſuch as oppoſe the Government thereof under the Reverend Biſhops; and the other Defendents, being of the ſame Opinion and Practice, and of the ſame Pariſh, did, by Combination, about January, Anno 1629, irreligiouſly conclude to deface and pull down a fair and coſtly Glaſs-Window in the Church aforeſaid, containing the Hiſtory of the Creation of the World; which had ſtood there for Hundreds of Years, and was a great Ornament to the Church. And the Reverend Father in God, John Lord Biſhop of Sarum, having heard the Report of this Purpoſe, ſent a Meſſenger to Mr. Sherfield, and the other Confederates, to admoniſh them to forbear to put it in execution; and to that end he wrote a Letter to Sherfield, which came to his hand. Nevertheleſs Sherfield, with the Confederates, and other riotous Perſons, did, unlawfully, riotouſly, and prophanely break down that Glaſs-Window in ſcorn of his Majeſty's Government and Authority: And when that Prophane Act was done, they wickedly boaſted thereof, ſaying, He that had done it, would ſhortly take down all the reſt. That by this evil Example, other Wicked and Schiſmatical Perſons, ill-affected to the Government of the Church of England under his Majeſty, are animated to uſe the like violent and outragious Courſes; and the paſſing by of ſuch an Offence, committed by a Perſon of ſuch Place and Quality in that City, and by a Combination of other Confederates, being alſo Perſons of Note, would be of perilous Example.

Mr. Sherfield put in his Anſwer on May 20 following.

Mr. Sherfield's Defence.

THat the Church of St. Edmonds in Salisbury, about the Reign of King Henry the Third, was ordained to be a Collegiate Church, to conſiſt of a Provoſt and thirteen Prieſts, who were to dwell in a College-Houſe adjoining to the Church-yard, having a certain Revenue appointed to the maintenance thereof; which continued in Succeſſion, and the Prieſts attended the Service, and celebrated Maſſes, and Divine Offices and Rites to the Pariſhioners of St. Edmonds Pariſh. This College and Collegiate-Church, with the Poſſeſſions and Revenue thereof came, by Act of Parliament, into the Hands of King Henry the 8*th*, and remain'd in the Crown till the 7*th* of King James. About which time the King by Letters Patents under the Great Seal, did grant that Church by the Name of the Rectory of St. Edmonds Appropriate, as Parcel of the Poſſeſſion of the late College of St. Edmonds, unto Anthony Gooch, and William Lloyd, and their Heirs; who within, or about the ſame Year, conveyed the Church unto John Baily and his Heirs; who, together with John Beckingham, in the Year following, did convey it unto Bartholomew Tooky, one of the Defendents, and to his Heirs, except the Church-Yard, Ditch, and Walks about the ſame, and Trees growing thereupon: Which excepted Premiſes, Giles Tooker Eſq; and Edward his Son, have ever ſince enjoyed under Baily's Title. And that in the 13th of King James, the Defendent Tooky did agree for a competent Sum of Mony, to inſtate and convey the Church, for the behoof of the Pariſhioners of St. Edmonds, for ever; and made them an Inſtrument of Conveyance, by virtue whereof the Perſons intruſted were ſeized of the Church, as of a Lay-Fee upon Truſt.

That the Church is a Lay-Fee, and hath ſo continued ever ſince it fell to the Crown; and that from the ſame time it hath bin legally exempted from the Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of the Dioceſs; and the Defendents, with the reſt of the Pariſhioners, had lawful Power, without ſpecial Licence from the Biſhop, to take down the Glaſs of the Window, and to make up the ſame with white Glaſs.

That according to the Orders and Agreement of the Pariſhioners made in the Veſtry, the Steeple of the Church hath bin taken down and turn'd into a Tower; and alſo a part of the Wall hath bin taken down, to ſet a Glaſs Window in the room; and the Glaſs of other Windows hath bin taken down to ſet up new. The Reading Place hath bin removed from the Quire into the Body of the Church, and the Pulpit from one place pul'd down, and a new one ſet up; which Alterations were done, from time to time, by the Pariſhioners Agreement and Order, without ſpecial Licence from the King, or his Royal Predeceſſors, or the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, and that ſundry of them were made in the time of the Biſhop that now is.

That it was agreed, by an Aſſembly of the Pariſhioners in the Veſtry, January the 16th, 1629, That the Defendent might take down the Glaſs mentioned in the Information; and about the time therein mention'd, he took down ſome ſmall Quarries of the Glaſs, that the Glaſier might know, that that was the Window to be made new, and not any other.

But the Window yet remaineth, with a few Holes therein, ſo that the deſcribed Story may be plainly diſcovered: That it was not fair, nor coſtly, but of very rude Work; that it was but of four Lights only, and not any of the fair Windows of the Church; that the painting thereof, when it was made, did not coſt above forty ſhillings; and that he ſhall be ready to new make it, according to the Order of the Veſtry. He denieth all Confederacy with the other Defendents, and the riotous breaking of the Window: for that he took down a few ſmall Quarries in a quiet and peaceable manner.

And whereas his Religion and Fidelity to Almighty God, and his Duty and Allegiance to his Sovereign Lord the King's Majeſty, are brought in Queſtion; he ſaith, The true Hiſtory of the Creation of the World was not contained in that Window, but a falſe and impious Deſcription of the ſame.

The Painter, to expreſs God the Father, had painted the Forms and Pictures of divers little old Men ſeeming bare-footed, and cloathed in long blew Coats; and ſo ſetting forth every of the ſix days Work of God in the Creation, he had diſtinctly placed one ſuch Picture of an Old Man, made to repreſent the Creator of Heaven and Earth, in ſix ſeveral places; with the joining near to them the likeneſs of ſome created Thing, to denote thereby what was made on each of the ſix days:

days: And to ſhew the third days Work, he had painted the Sun and the Moon, which were created the fourth day, and had placed in the Hand of one of thoſe Pictures, repreſenting God the Father, the ſimilitude of a Carpenter's Compaſs, as if he had bin compaſſing the Sun, to give the true proportion thereof. To expreſs the fourth days Work, he made the likeneſs of Fowls of the Air flying up from God their Maker, whereas God created them on the fifth day. To expreſs the fifth days Work, he painted the ſimilitude of a Naked Man lying on the Earth, as it were aſleep, and ſo much of the ſimilitude of a Naked Woman, as from the Knees upward, ſeeming to grow out of the ſide of a Man, whereas God did create Man on the ſixth day; neither did the Woman grow out of the Man's ſide, but God took a Rib from the Man and made it a Woman. To repreſent the ſeventh days Story, he painted the ſeventh Picture of a little old Man, to reſemble God in the habit of the other ſix, but had formed it ſitting, to repreſent God's Reſt.

That this was an impious Falſification, and prophane abuſe of the Hiſtory: and he holdeth it ungodly, and altogether unlawful to frame any Image or Similitude of God the Father, Creator of Heaven and Earth, and the firſt Perſon of the Holy Trinity; and that it is more ungodly and prophane to ſet up any ſuch Image or Picture of God the Father in the Windows, Walls, or other parts of any Church dedicated to the Service of Almighty God, which he hopeth he ſhall be able in moſt humble manner to make appear to the Court, by the Holy and Pure Word of God, ſet down to us in the Books of the Old and New Teſtament; by the Canons of ſundry Ancient Councils of the Church of Chriſt; by the Decrees and Mandates of ſundry of the Chriſtian Emperors; by the Opinions and Writings of many of the Ancient Doctors and Fathers of the Church; by many Godly Writers of our Church, ſince the time of Reformation of Religion within this Kingdom; ſundry of whom did Seal their Belief with their Blood; by the Works of ſundry Godly Writers of our Church, yet living, whereof ſome are now Reverend Biſhops; among whom the Defendent hath cauſe to rely, in a ſpecial manner, upon the Doctrine of his Learned Dioceſan, the now Lord Biſhop of Sarum, in his Expoſition on the Epiſtle to the Coloſſians, pag. 97, and 98. Alſo by the Royal Determination of King James, in his Præmonition to all Mighty Monarchs, Kings, Princes, and Free-States of Chriſtendom.

That the ſame his Belief, is according to the Doctrine of the Church of England, eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament, 13. Elizabethæ, expreſſed in the Book of Homilies, ſet forth by Authority; That the Pictures of God were Monuments of Superſtition, and ought to have bin deſtroyed by the Statute made 3, and 4, Ed. 6th. That Queen Elizabeth, Anno 1. according to an Act of Parliament then made, for the ſuppreſſing of Superſtition in all her Dominions, did publiſh her Injunctions, whereby all that had Cure of Souls, were commanded to inſtruct their Pariſhioners to deſtroy all the Pictures and Monuments of Idolatry and Superſtition; that no memory thereof might remain in Walls, Glaſs-Windows, or elſe-where. And that it was to be enquired of in the Viſitations, Whether all Images, Pictures, Paintings, and all other Monuments of Idolatry were removed? And that the ſame Injunctions being grounded on the Statute 1. Eliz. are yet in force. Alſo that the ſame was lawful by the Canons of this Church, ſet forth 13.

An. 1632.

Eliz. and agreed upon by the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and all the other Biſhops of that Province.

And beſides the Indignity and Contempt offer'd to Almighty God by ſuch unworthy Reſemblances of his Majeſty, and Deity, in the foreſaid Window, there was a Speech, That ſome ignorant Perſons had committed Idolatry, by bowing before the ſame Reſemblances of God.

Laſtly; He denied that he was ill-affected to the Diſcipline of the Church of England, or had encouraged any, to his knowledg, to oppoſe the Government thereof under the Reverend Biſhops; or that the Biſhop of Sarum did ſend any Meſſenger, or write any Letter to him, to admoniſh him to forbear to put the Agreement of the Veſtry in Execution; or that any ſuch Meſſenger, or Letter, came to him; or that his Lorſhip, though he had frequent Conference with him, uſed any Speech touching his Pleaſure to have that Window ſtand as it was, or not to be taken down.

Upon the hearing of the Cauſe, the Court pronounced Sentence againſt Mr. Sherfield; ſome Lords were to fine him 1000 l. to the King, but the greater part only 500 l.

That Mr. Sherfield ſhould be fined 500 l. and be removed from the Recordership of that City; make a publick Acknowledgment of his Fault, and be bound to his Good Behaviour.

And for further ſatisfaction, take the Words of the Decree, as it was entered in the Regiſter's Book of that Court.

Noy, Attor. Regis v. Sherfield, Armig.

'THe Defendent being troubled in Conſcience, and grieved 'with the ſight of the Pictures which were in a Glaſs Window 'in the Church of St. Edmonds in New Sarum, one of the ſaid Pictures, to his Underſtanding, being made to repreſent God the Father, did procure an Order to be made by the Veſtry, (whereof himſelf was a Member,) That that Window ſhould be taken down, ſo as 'the Defendent did at his own Charge glaſe it again with White Glaſs. 'And by colour of this Order, the Defendent, without acquainting 'the Biſhop or his Chancellor therewith, got himſelf into the Church, 'made the Doors faſt to him, and then with his Staff brake divers 'Holes in the ſaid Painted Window, wherein was deſcribed the Creation of the World; and for this Offence committed, with neglect 'of Epiſcopal Authority, from whom the Veſtry derives their Authority, and by colour of an Order of the Veſtry, who have no power 'to alter or reform any of the Ornaments of the Church, the Defendent was committed to the Fleet, fined 500 l. and ordered to repair 'to the Lord Biſhop of his Dioceſs, and there make an acknowledgment of his Offence and Contempt, before ſuch Perſons as the Biſhop would call unto him.

Defacing a Church Window, by colour of a Veſtry Order.

At the giving of the Cenſure of the Court, the Biſhop of London ſpeaking in favour of the Painter, mentioned a place in Scripture, where, ſaid he, God is called the Ancient of Days, which might make the Painter of the Glaſs miſtake. To which Edward Earl of Dorſet replied, That by that Text was meant, God from Eternity, and not God to be pictured as an Old Man, creating the World with a pair of Compaſſes.

Conſidering

8 Caroli.

Prizing of Wines.

Conſidering the difference of the Rates at which Wines are ſold at this preſent, from what they were in this Year 1632, and formerly; it may not be uſeleſs or ungrateful to the Reader, to ſet down at large the Contents of a Proclamation, bearing date the 18*th* of February 1632, by which will appear the Reſpective Prices at which Wines were to be ſold either in Groſs, or by Retale, throughout this Kingdom.

‘Whereas by the Statute made in the 28th Year of the Reign of King Henry the Eighth for Pricing of Wines, it is provided, that the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treaſurer, Lord Preſident of the King's moſt Honourable Privy-Council, Lord Privy-Seal, and Lord Chief-Juſtices of either Bench, or any five, four, or three of them, ſhall have Power and Authority by their Diſcretions, to ſet the Prices of all ſorts of Wines, as in the ſaid Statute is expreſſed. In purſuance whereof the Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of England, the Keeper of the Privy-Seal, the Lord Chief-Juſtice of his Majeſty's Bench, and the Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, the 28*th* day of December laſt paſt, did order, That Canary Wines, Muſcadal and Alicant, ſhould be ſold in Groſs for Sixteen pounds the Pipe, and at Twelve-pence the Quart by Retale; Sacks and Mallego's at Thirteen pounds the Butt in Groſs, and Nine-pence the Quart by Retale. The beſt Gaſcoign and French-Wines at Eighteen pounds the Tun; and the Rochel Wines, and the other ſmall and thin Wines, at Fifteen pounds the Tun in Groſs, and Six-pence the Quart by Retale; and according to thoſe proportions for greater or leſſer quantities, either in Groſs or by Retale. And that none preſume to ſell at higher Prices, during the next Year then enſuing, whereof the Clerk of the Crown was to take notice, and to ſee the ſame proclaimed the then next Term in the Chancery, according to the Statute. And accordingly there hath been Proclamation made the firſt day of Hillary Term, being the 23*d* day of January laſt.

‘Now that all cauſe of Excuſe may be removed from ſuch as inhabit in remote parts of this Realm; and that ſuch as ſhall be found Delinquents herein may acknowledge their own wilfulneſs, the cauſe of the Danger and Penalty they fall into after double Advertiſment; His Highneſs's Will and Pleaſure is, and by the Advice of the Lords and the reſt of the Privy-Council, according to one other Statute made in that behalf in the Fourth Year of the Reign of his moſt noble Progenitor, King Edward the Third, by his Royal Proclamation doth publiſh and declare, That for one Year next following, Canary Wines, Muſcadals, and Alicants be ſold in Groſs at Sixteen pounds the Pipe, and at Twelve-pence the Quart by Retale; Sacks and Mallagoes at Thirteen pounds the Butt in Groſs, and Nine-pence the Quart by Retale. The beſt Gaſcoign and French-Wines at Eighteen pounds the Tun in Groſs, and Six-pence the Quart by Retale; and the Rochel-Wines, and other ſmall thin Wines, at Fifteen pounds the Tun in Groſs, and at Five-pence the Quart by Retale; and according to theſe Proportions for greater or leſſer quantities, either in Groſs or by Retale. Which Rates and Prices his Highneſs's Pleaſure is, ſhall be duly obſerved in all his Ports, and other places within this Realm where Wines are landed, and within Ten miles of thoſe Ports and Places.

‘And it is His Majeſty's Pleaſure, That in all Places where Wine by Land-Carriage ſhall be conveyed more than Ten miles from the next Port, the ſeveral ſorts of Wines aforeſaid ſhall and may be ſold according to the Rates aforeſaid, allowing Four-pounds the Tun, and one penny for the Quart for the Carriage thereof upon Land every Thirty miles, and according to that proportion, and not at greater Rates; ſtrictly charging and commanding ſuch of his Subjects, and others whom it may concern, That none of them, during the time aforeſaid, preſume to ſell any of the ſaid Wines in Groſs, or by Retale, at higher Rates than by his Highneſs's Proclamation are appointed, under the Forfeitures and Penalties mentioned in the ſaid Statute, and other Laws and Statutes of this Realm ordained in that behalf, and ſuch further Pains and Penalties as by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm can or may be inflicted upon the wilful Contemners of his Majeſty's Royal Command and Proclamation; Requiring and commanding all Mayors, Juſtices of the Peace, Bayliffs, Cuſtomers, Comptrollers, and other Officers of Our Ports, and all others whom it may concern, diligently to attend the execution of this Our Pleaſure, and to give Information to the Lords and others of the Privy-Council, of the Delinquents, that they may be proceeded againſt, and receive Puniſhment according to their Demerits.

March 21. Commiſſion to the Lord Preſident & Council in the North.

A Commiſſion iſſued forth under the Great Seal of England, with certain Schedules of Inſtructions thereunto annexed, and directed to Thomas Lord Vicount Wentworth, and other the Commiſſioners therein named; whereby, among other things, Power and Authority is committed to them to hear and determine all Offences and Miſdemeanors, Suits, Debates, Controverſies and Demands, Cauſes, Things and Matters whatſoever therein contained, and within certain Precincts in thoſe Northern parts therein ſpecified.

Among other Matters in the ſaid Inſtructions, it is directed, That the ſaid Preſident, and others therein appointed, ſhall hear and determine, according to the Courſe of Proceedings in the Star-Chamber, divers Offences, Deceits and Falſities, whether the ſame be provided for by Act of Parliament, or not; ſo that the Fines impoſed be not leſs than by Act or Acts of Parliament are appointed.

The ſaid Preſident, and others therein appointed, have Power to Examine, Hear, and Determine, according to the Courſe of Proceedings in the Court of Chancery, all manner of Complaints for any Matter within the ſaid Precincts; as well concerning Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, either Free-hold, Cuſtomary, or Coppyhold, as Leaſes and other things therein mentioned; and to ſtay Proceedings in the Courts of Common-Law by Injunction, or otherwiſe, by all ways and means, as is uſed in the Courts of Chancery.

And that no Prohibition be granted at all, but in Caſes where the Preſident and Council ſhall exceed the Limits of the ſaid Inſtructions: And that if any Writ of Habeas Corpus be granted, the Party be not diſcharged till the Party perform the Decree and Order of the ſaid Council.

Afterwards, upon the 24*th* of March 1640, the ſaid Lord Vicount Wentworth, then Earl of Strafford, and Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland, being Impeached in Parliament, one Article was, his procuring the ſaid Commiſſion to enlarge his Power, &c. And the firſt thing given in Evidence of this Charge was the Commiſſion granted to the ſaid Earl, dated 21 Martii 8 Car. and the 19th Inſtruction authorizing him to hear and determine accordiug to the courſe of Proceedings in the Star-Chamber, and to impoſe Fines, &c. ſo as they be not leſs than by the Act of Parliament is provided. The 23*d Inſtruction* was alſo read, whereby Power is given by Injunction to ſtay Proceedings in any Court of Common Law: and the 28*th Inſtruction*, whereby Power is given to ſend the Serjeant at Arms, and attach in any part of the Realm: and the 29*th Inſtruction*, wherein it is expreſſed, That no Prohibition be granted in the Courts of Weſtminſter to ſtay Proceedings in the Court at York, but in Caſes where the Court of the Preſident ſhall exceed the King's Inſtructions; and if any Habeas Corpus ſhall be ſued forth for not performing the Order of that Court, the Party committed not to be diſcharged ſo long as ſuch Orders ſhall ſtand in force: and if any Fine be thereupon eſtreated, the Treaſurer and Barons of the Exchequer to diſcharge it. Then they deſcended to produce Teſtimony concerning the Earl ſending a Proceſs actually before thoſe Clauſes were granted, and procuring the Clauſes to be ſupplied when he found the Defect.

The firſt Witneſs did teſtify, That his Father was arreſted in London by a Serjeant at Arms in Novemb. 1632, and was kept eighteen weeks, and conceiving it to be out of the Inſtructions, did appeal to the Council-Table; That the Earl of Strafford being preſent, fell on his Knees, and beſought the King, That if his Inſtructions might not be ſo good as to bring in a Delinquent that had affronted the Court, if by ſtepping over the Water he ſhould go beyond the Precinct of it, he might leave that Service, and lay his Bones in his own Cottage.

Another Witneſs did alſo teſtify the ſaid Arreſt and Impriſonment.

As to the matter of Prohibition,

A Witneſs was produced in the Caſe between Muſgrave and Vaux, who ſaid, That notice being given that a Prohibition was procured by Vaux, and an Affidavit made that the ſame was ſerved; a Warrant was directed to the Purſevant to arreſt the Party that procured it; who being arreſted, and reſcued, another Warrant was directed for the bringing of the Reſcuers from London; and they were accordingly brought to York, and there impriſoned, and an Information was exhibited againſt them by Sir George Ratcliff, then the King's Attorney at York. This matter of Prohibition was referred to Mr. Juſtice Hutton and Sir Robert Heath, by the conſent of the Parties that were in Suit at York: but the Lord Preſident being acquainted with it, the Reference went not on that Term, but ſtayed till the Preſident's pleaſure was known. The ſaid Witneſs depoſeth, That the Lord Preſident did further ſay, That whoſoever brought a Prohibition there, he would lay him by the heels. And that as touching the Reference, his Lordſhip ſaid, It was a Cauſe that concerned the Juriſdiction of the Court of York, and no privat Man ſhall end it; he would try the Juriſdiction, and would go to London and acquaint the Judges with it, and if they remanded the Cauſe back again, ſo; if not, he would appeal to the King in it. That the Lord Preſident and Judges had ſeveral Meetings, but could not agree. And the Judges ſpeaking ſome things concerning the Prohibition granted to Vaux: the Lord Preſident replied, he ſhould not be in England, but he would have his body, or words to that purpoſe. Then a Counſellor at Law was produced, who teſtified that Judg Hutton acquainted him, that the Lord Preſident was angry with with him for granting Prohibitions; which the Judg ſpake with a great deal of Paſſion, to ſee things carried in that manner; and did further teſtify, That underſtanding the Lord Preſident was angry with him the Deponent for moving for Prohibitions, he went to wait upon his Lordſhip, who ſaid unto him, I have nothing to ſay to you, you are one that oppoſe me, but for the preſent I have eaſed you of the Office of Juſtice of the Peace, ſo you need not trouble your ſelf with that.

That afterwards his Lordſhip met the Deponent in London, who ſaid unto him, I command you not to depart the Town; and applying him ſelf afterwards to his Lordſhip to know his Pleaſure, and withal making great Friends, all that he could underſtand by others was, That he was one that did oppoſe his Lordſhip; and the Witneſs did conceive that the Fault that he had committed, was, for not paying the Knighthood-mony in Yorkſhire, or for moving for Prohibitions, which later did oppoſe the Authority and Power of the Court of York. And that after 12 or 14 days ſtay in Town, by mediation of a Friend, he got leave to go into the Country, and then he paied the Knighthood-Mony. And that after this, the Deponent durſt not adventure to move for a Prohibition, nor any that had to do with him in thoſe parts durſt retain him till of very late, for he knew very well the price of my Lord of Strafford's Diſpleaſure: And he further depoſed, that he was ſent for by a Purſevant to attend his Lorſhip at York, who told him, There was an Accuſation againſt him, but they that laid it were not come to Town, and therefore he muſt attend, and that they were his Betters. That after eight days cuſtody in the Purſevant's hands, he was brought to the Council-Table, and his Lordſhip ſitting at the upper end, commanded him to kneel as a Delinquent; and in his kneeling, his Lordſhip was offended, in that he ſtaied no longer in that poſture; and then he underſtood the Matter to be for ſpeaking ſome words at the Seſſions in Defence of his Client, about the Traverſing of an Indictment; the Queſtion being, Whether a bare Indictment were Evidence to the Petty Jury? He, the Deponent ſaid, It was no Evidence, and he deſired to appeal to the Judges. Whereupon his Lordſhip was pleaſed to ſay, That he would teach him to know, there were other Men for him to appeal unto, (viz.) the Preſident and the Council. Whereupon he was put out, and Directions ſent that he muſt find Sureties, and make publick Submiſſion at the Seſſions for ſaying theſe words; which he did accordingly. And all this he conceived originally grew, for that he did oppoſe the Juriſdiction of the Court of York, and not for any the Cauſes pretended.

The other Branches of this Article were waved.

To this he anſwereth.

Firſt; The Inſtructions granted 21 Mar. 8. Car. were not procured by him.

Secondly; The Commiſſion and Inſtructions to the Preſident, and Council of York, are of courſe renewed upon the death of any of the Council of the Fee in Ordinary. And Sir Arthur Ingram going out, and Sir John Melton ſucceeding, thoſe Inſtructions were thereupon renewed. And as to the execution of the ſaid Commiſſion, from the date thereof to this hour, the Defendent did never one Act, or ſtaied one minute as Preſident of the Council of York, the Commiſſion was granted 21 Mar. 8. Car. and he went towards Ireland in July following.

At the firſt Inſtitution of that Court, it had both a Star-Chamber and Chancery Power, as will appear by all the Inſtructions before that time; and if there be one Error in a Judg giving a Sentence, otherwiſe than a Man of better Underſtanding conceives reaſon for, there is no cauſe it ſhould be heightned to a Treaſon to take from him his Life, and Honour, and all he hath, meerly becauſe he was not ſo wiſe a Man as he might have bin, nor ſo underſtanding as another. If this be preſſed in Judges, he thinks few Judges would ſerve; and for his part, he confeſſeth, he had rather go to his Cottage, than be upon theſe Terms. The Sentence againſt Sir Conyers Darcy was juſt, and he complained not of it; and for the Sentence againſt Sir John Bouchier, the Defendent was not at all acquainted with it, being then in Ireland. But theſe two Matters are not inſiſted upon, yet it may be from hence obſerved, with what uncertainty Men may ſpeak, who do inform in ſuch Caſes. As to the firſt Witneſs, teſtifying his Father's Commitment at London, and Appeal to the Council, he ſaith, That was not in his Charge; and as to the Prohibition granted in the Caſe of Vaux againſt Muſgrave, he ſays, That alſo was out of his Charge, and he cannot ſay any thing to it but by way of Divination; and therefore he conceives that it cannot be able to convince any Man of High Treaſon, hardly of a Treſpaſs; and why the enlarging of a Juriſdiction ſhould be heightned to a Treaſon, he doth appeal to their Lordſhips Nobleneſs, Juſtice, and Honour, to conſider; for he thinks none are in that place of Judicature, but they will deſire to enlarge their Juriſdiction as far as in Reaſon and Juſtice they may; and it is a chaſt Ambition, if rightly placed, to have as much power as may be, that there may be power to do the more good in the place where a Man ſerves.

As to the Witneſs, who ſaid, He the Deponent commanded his ſtay in London, he hath nothing to ſay to him of exception, but that he ſpeaks to nothing in the Charge; the Defendent being charged with the Execution of the Commiſſion, 8, and 13, Car. and what the Deponent ſpeaks of, is precedent in time; beſides, his Depoſition is by hereſay from Mr. Juſtice Hutton.

Then he produced a Witneſs, who proved that he began his Journey into Ireland the 8*th* of July, 1633. and another Witneſs, That ſince the date of the new Commiſſion, he never ſat as Preſident of the North in any Cauſe whatſoever; and that he was in Ireland when the Commiſſion 13. Car. was renewed.

And ſo he concluded his Defence, ſaying, That he was charged only with procuring and executing that Commiſſion, both which he denies.

For Reply, the Committee deſired it might be obſerved, That one of the Witneſſes did ſpeak particularly of the occaſion of enlarging the Commiſſion upon the Arreſt of his Father; the Preſident falling upon his Knees, and deſiring his Majeſty to enlarge his Power, or that he might have leave to go home and lay his Bones in his own Cottage. And he grew ſo high a little before the renewing of the Commiſſion, that he ſaid, He would lay them by the Heels who brought the King's Writ. Whereupon the Council were ſo awed, that they durſt not demand Juſtice: So that the procuring a Renovation of this Commiſſion, ſuited moſt to his Deſign.

Seeing the Reader is now upon the Commiſſion and Inſtructions of the Lord Preſident and Council in the North, take the Opinion and Judgment of Mr. Edward Hide, a Member of the Houſe of Commons, in a Speech made by him to the Houſe of Lords concerning this Court, Anno 1640. which we the rather mention, becauſe he was one that ſhewed his Loyalty to the King, by being with him at Oxford, and other places in time of War; whoſe Expreſſions may make deep Impreſſions upon many, he being afterwards made by the King, Lord Chancellor of England.

My Lords,

'I Am commanded (ſaid he) by the Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons, to preſent to your Lordſhips a great crying Grievance; which though it be complained of in the preſent Preſſures but by the Northern Parts, yet by the Logick and Conſequence of it, it is the Grievance of the whole Kingdom. The Court of the Preſidents, and Council of the North, or as it is more uſually called, the Court of York, which by the Spirit and Ambition of the Miniſters, truſted there, or by the natural Inclination of Courts to enlarge their own Power and Juriſdiction, hath ſo prodigiouſly broken down the Banks of the firſt Channel in which it ran, as hath almoſt overwhelmed the Country, under the Sea of Arbitrary Power, and involved the People in a Labyrinth of Diſtemper, Oppreſſion, and Poverty.

'To remember your Lordſhips of the Foundation and Erecting this Court, and of the Progreſs and Growth of it, will not be unacceptable.

'Your Lordſhips well know, That upon the ſuppreſſion of all Religious Houſes to ſuch a value, in the 27*th* Year of Hen. 8. from that time to the 30*th* Year of that King's Reign, many (not fewer than ſix Inſurrections and Rebellions were made in the Northern Parts, under pretence of that Quarrel, moſt of them under the command of ſome eminent Perſon of that Country; the which being quieted before the end of the 30*th* Year, that Great King well knowing his own Mind, and what he meant to do with the great Houſes of Religion; in the Year following, for prevention of any Inconvenience that might enſue to him upon ſuch Diſtemper, in the 31*th* Year of his Reign, granted a Commiſſion to the Biſhop of Landaff, the firſt Preſident, and others, for the quiet Government of the County of York, Northumberland, Cumberland, and Weſtmorland, the Biſhoprick of Durham, the County of the Cities of York, Kingſton upon Hull, and Newcaſtle upon Tine. But, my Lords, this Commiſſion was no other than a Commiſſion of Oyer and Terminer, only it had a Clauſe at the end of it for the hearing of all Cauſes, Real and Perſonal. Quando ambæ partes, vel altera pars, gravata paupertate fuerit. Quod ita ut quomodo jus ſuum ſecundum Legem Regni noſtri aliter perſequi non poſſit. Which Clauſe, how illegal ſoever, (for that it is illegal and void in Law, little doubt can be made) yet whether they exerciſed 'that part of the Commiſſion at all, or ſo ſparingly exerciſed it, that poor People found eaſe and benefit by it, I know not, for at that time I find no complaint againſt that Court. And in the firſt Year of King James, a Commiſſion was granted to the Lord Sheffield, which varied not from the former, only it had reference to Inſtructions which ſhould be ſent, but we find none ſent. In June, in the ſeventh Year of the Reign of King James, a new Commiſſion was granted to the ſaid Lord Sheffield, very differing from all that went before; it being left out, That they ſhould enquire, Per Sacramentum bonorum & legalium hominum, and to hear and determine, ſecundum Leges Angliæ, relation being had only to the Inſtructions, which were the firſt Inſtructions which we can find were ſent thither.

'I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with theſe, or any other Inſtructions, but deſcend to the preſent Inſtructions and Commiſſions under which that part of the Kingdom groans and languiſheth, ſince the Lord Strafford came to that Government, which was in December, 4. Car. And ſince the Commiſſion hath bin three ſeveral times renewed, in the 5*th* Year in March, in the 8*th* in November, in the 13*th* Year of his Majeſty's Reign. Into that Commiſſion of the 8*th* and 13*th*, a new Clauſe was inſerted for the granting, ſequeſtring, and eſtabliſhing Poſſeſſions, according to Inſtructions crowded in a maſs of new exorbitant and intolerable Power.

'Though our Complaint be againſt this Commiſſion it ſelf, and againſt the whole Body of thoſe Inſtructions, I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips with the 9*th* Inſtruction, though it be but ſhort; which introduceth that Miſeram ſervitutem, ubi jus eſt vagum & incognitum, by requiring an Obedience to ſuch Ordinances and Determinations, as be or ſhall be made by the Council-Table, or High-Commiſſion Court. A Grievance, my Lords, howſoever, Conſuetudo & peccantum claritas nobilitaverit hanc culpam, of ſo trancendent a Nature, that your Lordſhips noble Juſtice will provide a Remedy for it, with no leſs care, than you would reſcue the Life and Blood of the Common-Wealth.

'Read the 19, 22, 23, 24, 29, and 30, I will not trouble your Lordſhips with reading more, there being among them in the whole fifty eight Inſtructions, ſcarce one that is not againſt or beſides the Law.

'Whether his Majeſty may cantonize out a part of his Kingdom to be tried by Commiſſion, though according to the Rules of Law, ſince the whole Kingdom is under the Laws and Government of the Courts eſtabliſhed at Weſtminſter; And by this reaſon the ſeveral parts of the Kingdom may be deprived of that Priviledg, will not be now the Queſtion.

'His Majeſty cannot by Commiſſion erect a new Court of Chancery, or a Proceeding according to the Rules of the Star-Chamber, is moſt clear to all who have read Magna Charta; which allowed no Proceedings, Niſi per legale Judicium Parium & per Legem Terræ; for our Court of Chancery here, by long uſage and preſcription, is grown to be, as it were, Lex Terræ. But, my Lords, the 30*th* Inſtruction goes further, and erects ſuch an Empire, ſuch a Dominion, as ſhall be liable to no Controul.

'The Courts of Weſtminſter, my Lords, have ſuperintendences over all Inferior Courts, to regulate their Juriſdictions if they ‘exceed their Limits, as to hold Plea of greater value, or the like.

‘In the Exerciſe of Juriſdiction, the Judges are ſworn to grant and ſend Prohibitions: But to ſtop the granting of theſe Prohibitions, or to neglect them when they are granted, is the greateſt and boldeſt ſcorn of the Law, and the Law-Makers, that can be imagined.

‘And whoſoever gave directions for theſe ſtout Inſtructions, might have remembred, that no longer ſince then Michaelmaſs, in the ſeventh Year of Eliz. Rot. 31. an Attachment was granted againſt the Arch-Biſhop of York, then Preſident of that Council, for forbidding the Goaler of York to deliver one Lambert his Priſoner, who was ſent for by a Habeas Corpus from the King's Bench.

‘And can ſuch a Court as this, my Lords, deſerve to live? What a compendious abridgment hath York gotten of all the Courts in Weſtminſter-Hall? Whatſoever falls within the Cognizance or Juriſdiction of either Courts here, is compleatly determinable within that one Court at York, beſides the Power it hath with the Eccleſiaſtical and High-Commiſſion Courts.

‘What have the good Northern People done, that they only muſt be disfranchiſed of all their Priviledges by Magna Charta, and the Petition of Right? For to what purpoſe ſerve theſe Statutes, if they may be Fined and Impriſoned without Law, according to the Diſcretion of the Commiſſioners? What have they done that they (that they alone) of all the People of this happy Iſland muſt be diſinherited of their Birth-Right, of their Inheritance? For Prohibitions, Writs of Habeas Corpus, Writs of Error, are the Birth-right, the Inheritance of the Subjects.

‘Your Lordſhips remember the Directions I mention, that by Magna Charta all Proceedings ſhall be per legale Judicium Parium, & per Legem Terræ.

‘Now theſe Juriſdictions tell you, you ſhall proceed according to your diſcretion, ſecundum ſanas Diſcretiones, that is, you ſhall do what you pleaſe; only that we may not ſuſpect this Diſcretion will be gentler and kinder to us than the Law; ſpecial proviſion is made in the Inſtructions, That no Fine, no Puniſhment ſhall be leſs than by the Law is appointed, by no means, but as much greater as your Diſcretion ſhall think fit. And indeed in this Improvement, we find Arbitrary Courts are very pregnant; if the Law require my good Behaviour, this Diſcretion makes me cloſe Priſoner; if the Law ſets me upon the Pillory, this Diſcretion appoints me to leave my Ears there. To proceed according to Diſcretion, is to proceed according to Law, which is ſumma Diſcretio, but not according to their private Conceit or Affection: For Talis Diſcretio (ſaith the Law) Diſcretionem Confundit: And ſuch a Confuſion hath this Diſcretion in theſe Inſtructions produced, as if Diſcretion were only to act with Rage and Fury. No Inconvenience, no Miſchief, no Diſgrace, that the malice, or inſolence, or curioſity of theſe Commiſſioners had a mind to bring upon that People; but through the Latitude and Power of this Diſcretion the poor People hath felt this Diſcretion hath bin the Quickſand which hath ſwallowed up their Property, their Liberty: I beſeech your Lordſhips reſcue them from this Diſcretion.

‘Truly, my Lords, theſe vexed worn-People of the North, are not Suitors to your Lordſhips to regulate this Court, or to reform 'the Judges of it, but for extirpating theſe Judges, and the utter 'aboliſhing this Court; they are of Cato's mind, who would not ſubmit to Cæſar for his life, ſaying, He would not be beholden to a Tyrant for injuſtice; for it was injuſtice in him to take upon him to ſave 'a Mans life, over whom he had no power.

And afterwards the King gave his conſent, that this Court be abſolutely taken away by Act of Parliament.

A Plea and Demurrer over-ruled, and an Anſwer expunged in Star-Chamber all but four words and ten laſt lines.

At the latter end of the month of March this Year, an Information was prefered in the Court of Star-Chamber by William Noy, his Majeſty's then Attorny General, againſt John Overman and fifteen other Soap-makers Defendents, charging them with ſeveral Offences, contrary to diverſe Letters Patents and Proclamations, touching the making and uttering Soap, and uſing the Trade of Soap-makers, and other Offences in the ſaid Information mentioned. Whereunto the Defendents did Plead and Demur as to part, and anſwer to the other part of the ſaid Information: And the ſaid Plea and Demurrer being over-ruled, for that the Particulars therein inſiſted upon, would appear more fully after Anſwer and Proof: Therefore the Defendents were ordered to anſwer without prejudice, and were to be admitted to ſuch Exceptions to the ſaid Information, and advantages of the matter of the Plea and Demurrer upon the Hearing, as ſhall be material; and accordingly the Defendents did put in their Anſwer, and did ſet forth ſeveral Acts of Parliament, Letters-Patents, Charters, Cuſtoms, and Acts of Common Council of the City of London, and other Matters material conducing to their Defence, and in concluſion pleaded not guilty.

That Sir Robert Berkley, then being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings Bench, the 30*th* of March, in the eight Year of his Majeſty's then Reign, 1632, upon an Order of Reference to him and others, by the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber, to conſider of the impertinency of the ſaid Anſwers, did certifie the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber, That the whole Anſwers, excepting four words, and ten laſt lines, ſhould be expunged, leaving thereby no more ſubſtance of the ſaid Anſwers than the Plea of, Not Guilty.

And after upon a Reference to him and others, by Order of the ſaid Court of the impertinency of the Interrogatories and Depoſitions of Witneſſes taken on the Defendents part; in the ſame Cauſe the ſaid Sir R.B. the 2*d* of May, in the 8*th* Year of his then Majeſty's Reign, certified that 39 of the ſaid Interrogatories, and the Depoſitions upon them taken, ſhould be ſuppreſſed, and were expunged and ſuppreſſed according to the ſaid Certificate.

Both which ſaid Certificates were ſaid to be contrary to Law and Juſtice, and contrary to his the ſaid R. B's own knowledg, and contrary to the ſaid former Order, whereby the advantages were ſaved to the Defendents as aforeſaid; and by reaſon thereof the ſaid John Overman, and the ſaid other fifteen Defendents, were Sentenced in the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber, to be committed to the Fleet, and diſabled from uſing their Trade of Soap-makers, and one of them Fined in the ſum of 1500 l. two of them in 1000 l. apiece, four of them in a thouſand Marks apiece; which Fines were eſtreated into the Exchequer without any mitigation.

And the ſaid Defendents, according to the ſaid Sentence, were Impriſoned, and deprived of their Trade and Livelihood, tending to the the utter ruin of the ſaid Defendents, and to the overthrow of Free Trade, and contrary to the Liberty of Subjects.

The ſaid Judge being afterwards Impeached by the Houſe of Commons, in the Lords Houſe, for this, and for his Opinion in the caſe of Shipmony, and other matters laid to his charge; ſubmitted to a Fine of 10000 l. ſo not ſtanding to a Tryal upon the Impeachment, he made no defence, which if he had done, we ſhould here have done him right in mentioning the ſame.

Let us return to the Affairs in Germany, to be informed what Progreſs hath been made in the Embaſsy to the King of Sweden, for the advantage of the Prince Elector Palatine.

In July the Ambaſſador had his laſt Audience.

Towards the middle of July the Ambaſſador had his laſt Audience of the King of Sweden, about the reſtauration of the Palſgrave to his Dominions in the Palatinate, at which time the King of Sweden diſcourſed of Propoſals to this effect, (if the Copy I go by be right.)

1. That the Palſgrave ſhould hold his Country as a Donative of the King of Sweden.

2. That he ſhould make no Martial Levies without the Swedes conſent.

3. That during this War he ſhould furniſh the Swedes with ſo many thouſand Men upon his own Pay.

4. That two of his chiefeſt Towns ſhould ſtand Cautionaries for the performing of Covenants.

5. That he ſhould make no League nor Article with any other Prince without the Swedes conſent.

The Ambaſſador's Anſwer to the King of Sweden concerning his unreaſonable Demands as to the Prince Elector Palatin

The Ambaſſador being moved at theſe Propoſals, as too hard and diſhonourable for the Prince Elector Palatine to accept of, uttered ſome words to the King of Sweden to this purpoſe.

That he hoped the great Succeſs which that King had in Germany*: and lately at the Battle at* Lipſwick, did not heighten him in making theſe Demands, ſo as to forget the grounds of his Declaration, to reſtore the Liberty of Germany, or to forget his Maſter the King of Great Britain, who had ſent him the Aſſiſtance of ſix thouſand Men under the conduct of the Marqueſs of Hamilton, and the great Charge the King his Maſter was at in the raiſing, arming, tranſporting, and maintaining of thoſe Men, without any Conditions of Retribution from that King, and wherein his Maſter had expended above an hundred thouſand pounds.

The King of Sweden huff'd at this Diſcourſe, yet at this time conquered the greatneſs of his Paſſion, but fell a quarrelling with the Ambaſſador, as if he had prevaricated from his Inſtructions, and that by his diſcourſe on ſome Points he ſeem'd to be Hiſpanized, as if his Deſign tended more in favour of Spain than Germany. This occaſioned a ſmart Reply from the Ambaſſador to that King, who when he heard it, fell into a great Fury, ſtamping up and down in a Rage and Diſcompoſure of Mind, and ſo they parted.

But afterwards, on July 19, that King ſent his Secretary to the Ambaſſador, baſſador, who told him the King his Maſter could not agree to the Conditions propounded by him. The King of Sweden urging a Defenſive League, and for a limited time: But the Ambaſſador propounded a League only of Aſſiſtance, and the time indefinite and arbitrary.

Of theſe Proceedings the Ambaſſador gave an Account to Secretary Cook, to communicate to the King his Maſter, the King of Sweden's abrupt breaking off this Treaty in this manner, as is expreſſed in the Letter to Mr. Secretary Cook.

Sent by Mounſieur Curtius, together with a Diſpatch bearing date the 9th of Auguſt.

'That this King was not ſo prompt in breaking off the Treaty, and 'offering me his Recreditive, as he is now ſlow in performing the 'ſame, and giving me no Anſwer in writing to my Memorial. I have 'often preſſed my Departure, but am ſtill held up with good words and 'Excuſes; and finding he is not willing I ſhould yet go from his Camp, 'in that he conceives it may be prejudicial to his Affairs, having often 'prayed me to ſtay. I have ſollicited for a Paſs for my Secretary to go for 'England, which he promiſed me at firſt, but delayeth it from day to 'day, and ſo hath kept him up there ten days. By what I hear, it ſhould 'ſeem he hath bin too raſh in breaking off the Treaty, and would fain ſet 'it on foot again; for afar off (not directly) ſo much hath been intimated unto me; and ſome of this King's Miniſters have been ſpeaking 'of new Articles, but I not hearkning thereunto, hear no more of it, 'being reſolved whatſoever future Overture ſhall be made unto me, 'not to entertain any, but civilly to excuſe the ſame, until I receive 'his Majeſty's Pleaſure unto this Diſpatch; and I do intend to tranſport my ſelf from this King's Camp towards Strasburg as ſoon as I can 'poſſibly diſingage my ſelf from him, and there to make my Reſidence, 'judging it to be the fitteſt place; for the Armies cannot long ſtay in 'theſe parts, and I know not where they can live, but in the Land of 'Wirtenburgh and Alſace, all other Countries being already ſpoiled, ſo 'as I ſhall be near this King; if there ſhould be any occaſion for my 'return towards him if recalled. I am upon the Rhine, and may return 'either through France or the Low Countries as his Majeſty ſhall direct.

'Both Armies being faſt in their Works, keep themſelves within their 'Retrenchments, without attempting any thing one upon the other, 'but in little Skirmiſhes, ſometimes upon the Forragers, ſometimes 'upon the Guards. But in the end he ordered Col. Dubartle to go and 'Petard the Town of FredStare, where there was a Gariſon, and burn 'the ſame, it being a Magazine of Corn for the Enemy, and the Poſt 'between Regenberg and their Camp. At break of day, being arrived, 'he put two Petars to the Ports, but they failing, he put Ladders to 'the Walls, ſcaled them, and ſo entred the Town. He found few Souldiers there, thoſe that were, were in their Beds; ſo as finding no reſiſtance, he ſet fire on the Town in ſeven or eight ſeveral places, burnt 'their Magazines, wherein were great quantities of Corn and Meal, 'and ſo retired.

'The ſame morning, being the 30*th* inſtant, this King had Advertiſement that certain Troops were marched out of the Enemies Camp; 'he apprehending their intent was to cut off Dubartle's Retreat, marches 'with a Party of 300 Muſquetiers, and 4000 Horſe, to ſecure the ſame; 'upon the way he underſtood that Serjeant Major General Sparre was 'near thereabouts with thirteen Companies of Croats, and 500 Foot; 'the King thereupon advances with ſome Troops, Sparre retires with the

'the Infantry and ſome Troops of his Horſe, and under ſavour thereof gives a brave Salvo with his Muſquetiers upon four Troops of Horſe led on by Col. Strife, and upon the King's Foot, where was killed on the King's ſide Col. Riſe who commanded the Foot, a Gentleman of the King's Chamber, one of his Pages, and divers of his Muſquetiers. On the Enemies ſide, it is eſteemed that there were two hundered left dead upon the place, and as many taken Priſoners, among which there was Serjeant Major General Sparre, Leiut. Col. Gorden, & Capt. Leſlie Scotſmen, two Leiutenants and one Enſign, all which were that night brought to the King's Camp, with one Cornet and two Colonels. The King hath of late propoſed to the Deputies of Francfort, this Town, Ulme, Strasburg, to which he would alſo have joined the Country of Wirtenberg, to take into conſideration the preſent ſtate of the War, that amongſt themſelves they would think of raiſing Contributions, the ways and means how to pay his Armies which he hath declared unto them (conſidering the preſent ſtrength of the Enemy) muſt not be leſs than three Armies, each one conſiſting of 27000 Foot and 4000 Horſe. How welcom this Propoſition is to them, your Honour may well judg, for the Deputy of Straſburgh, excuſing that Town, in regard of their Neutrality with other Princes, and Situation, which ſhould they not keep, their Country would be burnt and ſpoiled. This King replied publickly in the face of the whole Court, that they had proceeded ſo coldly in the Cauſe of their Religion and Liberty, that they deſerved not only their Country, but their Town to be burnt and ſpoiled.

'This King expects within a few days an Ambaſſador from the French King, it is thought it is upon the old ground of Neutrality for Bavaria, and the Catholic League, but my Opinion is, Bavaria will not upon any Terms fall off from his new Alliances with the Houſe of Auſtria, though I underſtand he is tampering and treating underhand with the Evangelics, giving them aſſurance of his Affection towards them, and his Reſolution to ſtand for the Preſervation of the Liberty of Germany, which is the only Reaſon that induceth me to apprehend, that this Embaſſie from France may be to draw the Evangelics and that Duke to a better underſtanding, and upon the old ground of removing the Empire from the Houſe of Auſtria, which if it be, your Honour may be aſſured the States have their parts therein alſo.

'The Elector of Saxe hath ſent, or permitted four Regiments of Horſe and Foot, to join themſelves to the Army of William Duke of Saxe-Wiſmar, they are joined to him, and are at Sweinfurt. The Chancellor with his Army at Wortzberg, and the Landgrave of Heſſe joined to him. This King preſſes me much to ſtay with him until his Armies be joined; which I cannot well refuſe, though I deſire much to be gone from hence; for Men die faſt both in the Town and Camp: I cannot tell what to make of the Buſineſs between this King and the Elector of Saxe; for notwithſtanding he is marched into Sileſia, as the Letters from Lipſick ſay this day, and the laſt Troops are joined, &c. This King told Sparre upon the taking of him Priſoner, that he had been much imploied between Fridland and Sax; that he knew that which imported him both in his Honour and Safety, that if he would not diſcover unto him truly all things, he would piſtol him upon the place. Unto which he made him this Anſwer, That he 'would diſcover as much as he could do with his Honour.

'The third Inſtant Camerarius brought me the Recreditive from this King, the which I have herewith ſent your Honour. It is not abſolutely in the manner he told me it would be, when he brought me this King's Verbal Reſolutions concerning the Treaty, in Anſwer to my laſt Memorial. It is uſual with this King to repent himſelf when the Blow is given; for he hath often told me, ſince the Occaſion at Munchen, ſpeaking with regret of that Proceeding, That he would give all he had to be Maſter of his Paſſions; but that when he begins but to be moved, he hath ſomething riſes in his Brain, that makes him forget what he ſaith or doth; that this he finds in himſelf, and the Inconveniencies that grow thereof, as ſoon as he is poſed again; but yet he cannot get it maſtered, though he hath often deſigned the ſame; and therefore he hopes God and all the World will forgive him.

'Camerarius told me farther in this King's Name, That he deſired me to reſide with him, for that if any overture of Peace ſhould be ſet on foot between him and his Enemies, he had rather employ his Majeſty's Ambaſſador than any, and me in particular. This King hath that imperfection, that for the preſent end he can put himſelf into any ſhape. This Propoſition I knew not well how to refuſe, ſince his Recreditive is not abſolute, but mixt; and that I know not upon what terms ſtands his Majeſty's other Treaties of Reſtitution, my ſelf judging it neceſſary for his Majeſty's Service, to keep this King in Appetite, and not to be looſe of him, until I receive anſwer by this Bearer to this Diſpatch; and therefore I accepted thereof with all civility and reſpect, having regard to your Honours Orders, which I received by the Diſpatch which Sir Jacob Aſhley brought; though I am ſtill of Opinion, That this King intends not Peace but in caſe of neceſſity; but that he ſeeing that the reſiding of his Majeſty's Ambaſſador by him in this Conjuncture, is a countenancing of his Affairs; ſo his going from him conſequently will be a diſcountenancing of them; and that this King will never part with what he holds in the Palatinate, though it may be counſellable, if a General Treaty ſhould enſue, to keep fair with him that he do no hurt; and ſo from them that have had their hands in oppreſſing of that unfortunate Prince, to endeavour a Reſtitution, whilſt there any hope from him or his.

'There was two days ſince taken Priſoner one Capt. Leſlie, who ſerves the Emperor in Fridland's Army; he tells me, That Saxe is fallen off from the Agreement made between him and Fridland; that there hath bin ſent by Fridland divers Regiments out of his Army to join with Don Baltazar, who commands the Army in Bohemia, with order to fall into the Hereditary Countries of the Elector of Saxe: He ſaith boaſtingly, That Fridland and Bavaria's Armies lying about us here, are 80000 Men; that they expect out of Bohemia, Auſtria, and the other Hereditary Countries of the Emperor 30000 more that are now leavying; but withal privately confeſſeth, That in their Army there is great want of Bread, and that if a Blow ſhould be given to the Imperialiſts, this King having poſſeſſed himſelf of the Rivers and Paſſes, Vienna will run a hazard, for that they have upon this occaſion of Fridland's Expedition, put up their late Effort; ſo as it is probable, whoſoever God will give the maſtery unto in 'this preſent Occaſion (if it comes to Blows) will have the Affairs of Germany in his power; and ſhould this King prevail, it will cauſe great Revolutions, which before this Bearer can return unto me, apparently may be more clearly ſeen into.

'Since Leſlie was with me, one brought me a Letter written by the Elector of Saxe to the Marqueſs of Cullinback, wherein he adviſeth him to a Peace, for that the Empire cannot longer ſuffer War without total ſubverſion: So as of that Duke's Proceeding, I know not what to judg: This Cullinback is of the Houſe of Brandenburgh, and at preſent with this King. I have long ſince written for Blanks, to which you have hitherto made no Anſwer; I conceive them to be of uſe, eſpecially if the Affairs tend to Accommodation. Fridland ſpoke with much affection of his Majeſty, and caſt out words as if he would be a Friend (if he were ſought unto in the reſtitution of the Palatinate) as Affairs may be. His Majeſty may have cauſe to make uſe of him. I purpoſe to ſee him; if the Blanks I have ſo long ſince written for, were by me, I could the better introduce my ſelf by one of them. The Jealouſies remain ſtill between Fridland and Bavaria; And if the French ſhall again engage themſelves with that Duke of Fridland, it may be of uſe.

Norremburgh, 19 Aug. 1632.

Your Honours, &c.

The beginning of this Month of Auguſt, his Majeſty of England writ this Letter to the Marqueſs of Hamilton.

The King's Letter to M. Hamilton to make an excuſe and to come for England.

JAMES,

I Have received three Letters from you by James Leſley, about the 25th of July, all which I aſſure you have given me very good ſatisfaction, as well for your right underſtanding of Affairs in general, as to give me a light how to direct you in particular, which at this time is the only ſubject of mine. One of two you muſt chuſe, either to ſtay, or come away: For the firſt, it were very honourable to do (in the times of Action) if you had an Emploiment; but neither having, or likely to have any hereafter, it were dulneſs, not patience, to ſtay any longer; yet it is fit to come off handſomly, neither ſhewing impatience nor diſcontentment (if may be); although I think you have cauſe for both: therefore I have commanded Henry Vane to propoſe a new Emploiment for you; which though I think it will not take effect, yet it will ſhew there is no way unſought for to find you out an Emploiment with the King of Sweden; it is, that you may be ſent into the Palatinate, to aſſiſt the French with ſo many Men as my Contribution will maintain; which if it may be done, they promiſe me to put the Lower Palatinate in my hands. This, though I do not hold as Goſpel, yet if this Deſign might be put in practice, it might certainly prove uſeful to my Affairs: This being denied, (as I think it will) you have no more to do, but to ſeek a fair Excuſe to come hence, which will be beſt in my Opinion, upon the Concluſion of the Treaty between Sweden and Me: Or if any Rubs ariſe, that you might be ſent to clear it with me.

So that upon the whole Matter my Judgment is, That if you cannot ſerve ſerve me in the Palatinate, (as I have already ſaid) the beſt way is, That you take the firſt civil excuſe to come home to

POSTSCRIPT.

David Ramſey will (as I imagin) meet with you before you come hither, which if he do, I hope you will remember what I have ſaid concerning him already.

The 24*th* of this Month, the Ambaſſador writ another Letter to Mr. Secretary Cook.

Norrenburgh, Auguſt 24.

A further Account by Sir Henry Vane of his Embaſſy.

'THe 12*th* of this preſent, I diſpatched my Secretary Curtius unto 'your Honour, by the way of Hamburgh, the only Paſs was 'then open; God grant he arrive ſafe; for two days after his departure, the Imperialiſts inveſted the ſame; He brings you the knowledg of the Affairs, and particularly how this King hath broken the 'Treaty. The 18*th* of this preſent, the King's Forces, under the 'Command of the Dukes of Saxe, Wimar, his Chancellor Baneire, 'and all his other Generals, joined themſelves to the King, a Dutch 'mile and a half from this Town, the Imperialiſts not ſo much as making an offer to hinder the ſame.

'Thoſe Armies make in all 13000 Foot & 8000 Horſe; this day they 'advanced within a Dutch mile and leſs of this Town, and are encamped between it and Furth, where I ſaw them in Battale; to the 'Eye they ſeem to be good Men: This King ſpeaks, that to morrow 'he will encamp them near, approach the Imperialiſts Camp, and cannonade them out of their Trenches; but that is ſooner ſaid than 'done, and will be difficult to effect, though ſomething will be done 'within theſe few days, the iſſue whereof I purpoſe to attend; and 'yet I am of Opinion, that neither Party will come to a formal Battel, but in caſe of a remarkable advantage.

'The King of Bohemia, notwithſtanding the breaking off the Treaty, ſeems to me to have more hope than ever, and to believe, that 'the King of Sweden will reſtore him his Country, (God grant he be 'not deceived) unleſs it be in ſuch a manner, that it may not be peradventure worthy of his acceptation; but he believing the ſame, I 'conceive it not to be my Part to undeceive him; and upon this occaſion, I ſhall propoſe unto your Honour, what way in my Opinion 'will be beſt for his Majeſty to take in the Negotiation of the Palatine's Intereſt, making judgment of the Affairs as now they are; for his 'Majeſty to continue an Ambaſſador longer here, I aſſure my ſelf his 'Majeſty ſhill not think fit. To deſert him or his Affairs abſolutely, 'I know his Majeſty will never do it: Neceſſary and requiſite it is to 'have an Agent reſident with this King, to have an eye upon the ‘Affairs, and leave the King of Bohemia to treat for himſelf, ſince he hath ſo confident a Faith, that by him he ſhall have his Countries reſtored; for he hath told Marqueſs Hamilton and my ſelf, within theſe few days, That he doubts not but to keep his Winter Quarters in Heydelburgh. And in this way his Majeſty may contribute to him of his Bounty towards ſuch an Accord, (if he ſhall approve thereof).

The King of Great Britain being by this time fully informed by his Ambaſſadors, and by the Marqueſs, of the Tranſaction of Affairs with the King of Sweden, and the little hopes of ſucceſs, wrote this enſuing Letter to the King of Sweden.

CHARLES, &c. To the moſt Serene and Puiſſant Prince, our Brother, Couſin, and moſt dear Friend, Guſtavus Adolphus, &c. Health and proſperous Succeſs.

The King of Great Britain his Letter to the King of Sweden, recalling his Ambaſſador.

Most Serene Prince, Brother, Couſin, and moſt dear Kinſman; We have very ſatisfactorily underſtood by our Letters, that you embrace Our Friendſhip with ſingular fervency; and We alſo in like manner have not only, with the moſt imaginable Candor and Conſtancy made uſe of, but earneſtly catch'd at all Opportunities; not ſolely for the promoting of the Common Cauſe, but principally to maintain and adorn your Dignity and Welfare by all poſſible means: Nor do We queſtion but that your Serenity is ſufficiently convinced of this Matter, and that not ſo much by the frequency of Our Letters, as by the good Offices which we have decreed, rather to accumulate upon, than repeat. Yet this upon your Account is not to be paſſed over in ſilence, That We have ſent, as it were, out of our Boſom, the Marqueſs of Hamilton, Our intimate Kinſman, a famous Pledg of Our Love, with an intire Regiment, at Our own Charges, to the remote Parts of Germany, that he might devote himſelf to your Service; by the Report of which Supplies, not only your Enemies, who are variouſly diſtracted one among another, but the Princes alſo of your Aſſociates, and Burgers, or Freemen, are kept and confirm'd in their Fidelity.

At length this laſt Embaſſy of Ratifying a League with you, which is thus ordered; that firſt of all, We ſhould Act and Convene about an Auxiliary League for the recovery of Our Brother's Paternal Inheritance; and afterward, if need requires, of a Social One for the common Good and Safety; and this Method is moſt exactly preſcribed in Our Letters of Credence, and Inſtructions to Our Ambaſſador Henry Vane Knight, one of Our Privy-Counſellors, and Chief Officer in Our Court, which he hath faithfully obſerved; nor did that Form which he received from Us ſignify any more, than that he ſhould more fully explain this Our Opinion, That what ſeemed convenient in your Judgment, might be at laſt communicated, without expence of Time, Wherein your Serenity, as well as all good Men, have had ſufficient experience beyond all Controverſy: That We never made any Alteration, either as to the Nature of the League, nor concerning the Power of Our Ambaſſador; nor ever revoked any thing about which he once Convened; nor that We ever proceeded at any time dubiouſly or ſcrupulouſly, but ever conſtantly maintained and fulfilled thoſe things which became a moſt Juſt Prince, moſt ſtudious of your Welfare, a great lover of our Brother, and finally the moſt Religious Propugnator of the Publick Good. But becauſe it does not ſeems convenient in your Opinion to obſerve the way We have laid down, We leave it to your Prudence, and ſo at this preſent recalling Our Ambaſſador to other Offices, We wiſh you Health, and pray for your Felicity.

Your Serenities Good Brother and Couſin,

CHARLES R.

Upon the Ambaſſador's receit of this Letter from his Maſter to the King of Sweden, requiring his Ambaſſador's Return, the Ambaſſador thought fit to write this enſuing Letter to the King, to excuſe his not coming in Perſon to take his Leave.

Sir Hen. Vane, Ambaſſador, writes to the K. of Sweden.

SIR,

THe King having thought fit to call me home, and withal commanded me to convey this Letter to your Majeſty, which is in anſwer to that you were pleas'd to write by my Secretary Curtius. It is not without a moſt ſenſible regret, that I am neceſſitated by expreſs Order to undertake my Voiage forthwith, and hereby be depriv'd of the opportunity to kiſs your Majeſty's hands again, and deliver you the ſaid Letter in perſon; your Majeſty ſhall receive it, if you pleaſe, from the hands of the ſaid Curtius, who being appointed by the King my Maſter to reſide near your Majeſty, to manage his Affairs; I beſeech your Majeſty to believe, that tho the Commands of my King force me far from your Perſon, yet I ſhall ever be ready in the Deſign I have, to render you my moſt humble Service upon all occaſions, and to preſerve the Quality of,

Your Majeſty's moſt humble and moſt obedient Servant

Strasburg the 31 of Octob.
1632.

H. Vane.

The Ambaſſador wrote a Letter alſo to the King of Bohemia, giving him notice, that his Maſter had recalled him home.

SIR,

BY the return of my Secretary Curtius, I have received Order from the King to return to him with all diligence, and for the preſent to leave Germany. If this Revocation obſtruct my continuance in your Majeſty's Service in theſe Parts; yet I am confident that I ſhall ſtill be Maſter of greater opportunities to employ my ſelf at Court; where probably, I may be more capable of procuring your Majeſty's deſires, then I have bin hitherto; being near a Maſter who has a greater deſire then ever not to abandon his former Reſolutions to your advantage. Your Majeſty may give an infallible conjecture thereof; that notwithſtanding my being called home, he hath thought good to eſtabliſh my ſaid Secretary for the continuation of his Affairs with the King of Sweden; and to the end that your Majeſty might have a more ample Information; I have ordered him to go directly to Mentz, to give you an account of the Tranſactions, that have paſſed here in England, and to preſent my moſt humble excuſe to you, that upon my poſitive directions which oblige me with all diligence to accelerate my return, I have diſpenſed with the going ſo far out of my way, reſolving to take a ſhorter Cut through France, and to ſail to England from Calais. In the interim, if your Majeſty imagin, that it may conduce to your Service, to lay any Commands upon me before I arrive in England, I have ſent with the ſaid Curtius a Courier, who will overtake me in the way, and will bring me your Majeſty's abſolute Reſolutions. I do daily reſolve with all the power I have to put them in execution, it being my deſign of perſiſting in the real reſolution, of remaining,

Sir,

Your Majeſty's moſt humble and moſt obedient Servant,

Starſburgh 31 Octob.
1632.

H. Vane.

The Ambaſſador at his departure left theſe Inſtructions for Mr. Curtius his Majeſty's Agent with the King of Sweden, according unto which he was to govern himſelf with that King and the King of Bohemia.

The Ambaſſadors Inſtructions to Mr. Curtius.

1. The King of Sweden being now by the event of War in the Elector of Saxes Countries, or thereabouts, you are from hence to go to Mentz (it not being out of your way to the ſaid King) there to attend his Majeſty of Bohemia, and to give him all aſſurance of the continuation of his Majeſty's love and affection towards him and his, howſoever the Treaty ſo long agitated betwixt the two Kings hath bin thought fit by the King of Sweden to be remitted till a more convenient time.

2. If you ſhall find that the King of Bohemia ſhall further preſs you upon particulars concerning the Treaty, you are to let him know, that the Collonels Pebely and Kelbe having been deputed from his Majeſty to my Lord Ambaſſador the day before his coming from Nuremberg to confer with his Lordſhip upon that King's Affairs, which Conference, it was thought fit and neceſſary by them, that a motion ſhould be made by his Lordſhip to the King of Great Britain, not to begin any further Treaty with the King of Sweden, or permit him to make any more Levies in his Dominions, until he ſhould firſt conſent and reſtore to him what he poſſeſſed of his in the Palatinate. His Lordſhip after ſome Conference with the ſaid Deputies upon that Affair condeſcended to that motion, ſo he might be aſſured before his departure, that it was their Maſter's pleaſure to ſend unto his Reſident in England to ſecond the ſame. Hereupon the ſaid Deputies returned accordingly and declared unto his Lordſhip, that as ſoon as his Majeſty ſhould arrive at Francfort, he would diſpatch an expreſs into England with Orders to Sir Francis Netherſole to move it alſo; you are to ſignifie unto that King that upon your departure from thence, the ſaid Expreſs was not yet arrived.

3. And becauſe new overtures of Treaty are made unto that King by the King of Swedens Miniſters, you are to enquire particularly what thoſe are, and how they are entertained by his Majeſty.

4. You are likewiſe to inform your ſelf how far the French King hath an eye upon the Proceedings of the King of Sweden with the Town of Strasburg what they do now in the Palatinate, and what the French may contribute thereunto, and in particular concerning Frankendal what deſigns, or aims either of the ſaid Princes have upon that Town, and whether the Spaniards might not be induced to conſign the ſame into his Majeſty of Great Britain's or the King of Bohemia's hand.

5. Laſtly, That you uſe all poſſible induſtry to diſcover thoſe who for the time paſt have endeavoured, or for the future ſhall endeavour either by Letters or otherwiſe to do ill Offices, or work miſunderſtandings between the two Kings of Great Britain and Sweden, with whom it is moſt neceſſary for the good of the Publick, there ſhould be a ſtrict and perfect Intelligence.

The King of Bohemia having great confidence in the King of Sweden's Aſſiſtance, for his Reſtauration, writes his mind frankly to the Ambaſſador from Lec Hauſen near Auſpurg to this effect.

The King of Bohemia his Letter to the Ambaſſador.

I Received your Letter after I had paſſed the River Lech. I do not queſtion but you have already underſtood the Paſſages here, that Tilly and Altrin have been wounded; The Duke of Bavaria has abandoned Newburgh, and retired to Ingoldſtadt. I will now give you an Account of the Surrender of Auſpurgh; The Gariſon quitted the place this Afternoon, being 3500 ſtrong, and the King's Forces are entred; himſelf hath taken a Survey of the Town without the Walls, and to morrow will make his Entrance. So all things ſucceed according to deſire. I am very glad of the hopes you give me that I ſhall be ſo happy as to ſee you. I preſume the ſeaſon will keep you here at Frankfurt a long time. For my own part I have no cauſe to complain; for the King is ſtill of a very good humour, and continues the teſtimony of his great affection for me and my Concerns. I do not preſs him to any thing as yet, I hope all will go well; I ſhall not ſwell this Letter to any greater bulk, but only to aſſure you that I ſhall ever remain

From Lec-Hauſen

Your moſt affectionate Friend,

Frederic.

Marqueſs Hamilton's Army reduced to two Regiments,

Duke William of Saxon Weymour, Leivtenant General to the King of Sweden, was ſent to by that King to take the Engliſh and Scotiſh Forces of the Marqueſs of Hamilton's Army under his Conduct, who were by that Duke reduced to two Regiments; the firſt was that of the Engliſh, over whom was William Balladine, a Scotiſh Gentleman, made Colonel, and Terwhit Lieut. Colonel.

Who are ordered to march to relieve the King before Noremberg.

Of the Scotiſh Regiment Alex. Hamilton was made Colonel. Here lay both the Regiments until they were drawn out by order from Duke William to go with him to diſingage the King before Norembergh, where they peiced in with two Regiments of Foot more, the blew Regiment whereof Roſs was Colonel, and the Green Regiment was led by Col. Warder, to whom were joined a Regiment of Horſe and four Companies of Foot, thence they go to Lutzen in Miſnia (where a Battle was afterwards fought) of which more in its proper time.

The King of England had kind thoughts for Sir Jacob Aſhley.

The King of England having notice of this Reducement of his Army, intimated to the Marqueſs the high Eſteem he had of the worth of Sir Jacob Aſhly. And writ to him, that he could have wiſhed that the Engliſh Regiment that was reduced had been conferred on Sir Jacob Aſhley, but the King of Sweden was otherwiſe inclined.

If it were not troubleſom to the Reader, we would willingly give him (before we totally leave Germany, and though the Ambaſſador is come away) a brief Account of ſome Military Engagement by the Swedes

Swede's Army, wherein the Engliſh and Scots were concerned in the Action.

The taking of Crutzenack by Aſſault, the Kings of Sweden and Bohemia preſent.

The King of Sweden, upon his March out of Bavaria, in the beginning of February (Old Stile) 1632, had a deſign to reduce the Strong Caſtle of Crutzenack, and came in Perſon, and the King of Bohemia with him, to ſee the ſame performed, and gave particular Directions for the Approaches, it being a place of conſiderable Strength, and where he met with conſiderable Reſiſtance from the Gariſon of the Spaniards there; however after having ſprung a Mine, and given three Aſſaults, which were performed by the Engliſh and French Voluntiers in his Army, the Place was carried by them, though not without ſundry being killed, and almoſt all of them wounded in the Aſſaults: At laſt they obliged the Governor of the Caſtle to demand Quarter, and the Capitulation was made by the then William Lord Craven, and Col. Boulin Quarter-maſter General of the King of Sweden's Army. The Conditions were to march away with their Arms within three hours, under a Swediſh Convoy. A French Marqueſs, Col. Talbot, of the Houſe of Shrewsbury, and Capt. Douglaſs, ſlain; The Lord Craven, Leiut.Col.Winde, Sir Francis Fane, of the Houſe of Weſtmerland, Mr. Robert Marſham, were all wounded.

The King of Sweden and Bohemia were preſent when the Aſſaults were made; and though this place was ſo taken by Aſſault, yet it is remarkable that none were put to the Sword after they were Maſters of it; the which was acknowledged by the Governor of the Caſtle, as a great clemency in the King of Sweden, and of thoſe Engliſh and French Voluntiers who gave them ſo frankly their Lives. When the Lord Craven came afterwards into the King of Sweden's Preſence, the King told him, He adventured ſo deſperately, he bid his younger Brother fair play for his Eſtate.

After the taking of the Caſtle, the King of Sweden deſigned for Frankendale; but Tilly, Lieutenant General to the Duke of Bavaria, having contrary to the Truce agreed upon (through the Interceſſion of the French King's Miniſters) between the King of Sweden and the Elector of Bavaria, appointed to beat up the Quarters of Guſtavus Horn (the King of Sweden's Field Marſhal) at Bambourgh in Franconia, the King changed that Reſolution, being highly diſpleaſed with Tilly for breach of Faith, and cauſed his Army to march directly towards Bavaria, where in his way he met with great Difficulties, both to gain the Paſſage over the Danube, more eſpecially over the Lech; yet was performed by him with extraordinary Prudence, Expedition, and Succeſs: for having viewed the latter, and finding an advantage of the Ground, whereby to facilitate his making a Bridg over the River, under the favour of his Cannon, he mounted in one Nights time near 120 Pieces of Battery, with which he did cruelly annoy Tilly's Army, which was incamped and intrenched under a Wood on the other ſide of the River, where General Tilly received a ſhot in his Knee by a Cannon Bullet, and General Altringer was hurt in the Head; ſo the Army quitted the Poſt, and the King, without any loſs, gained that important Paſſage into Bavaria; and Tilly was carried in a Horſe-Litter to Ingoldſtadt, where he languiſhed, and died ſhortly after; for whoſe Death there was great ſorrow among the Catholick Confederate Germans and Spaniards.

Which advantage of the Paſſage was purſued by the King after his Army was refreſhed, till by the News of the Enemies approaching to Ulm to beſiege it, he broke up towards the Relief of that Place, but the Siege not going forward, he ſetled his Quarters near Noremburgh, where Walleſtein with the Imperial Army poſted himſelf likewiſe to bar the King's Paſſage forwards into Bohemia.

The King of Sweden paſſeth the River Lech, playing hard upon Tilly with his Cannon.

The Enterprize was dangerous, and altogether impoſſible, as ſome conjectur'd, fearing the deſtruction of the Army might enſue thereupon. But the King's Courage and Reſolution ſurmounted all things, and made that Paſſage as acceſſible to him as others. The King of Sweden underſtanding the Serpentine Windings of the Lech, which form'd it ſelf at every turning into the figure of a half Moon, immediately he took up a Reſolution to prevail, for he intrenched himſelf, and raiſed three Batteries, which was contrived and executed without delay, in one Nights time.

As ſoon as the Batteries were made upon the Banks of the River, they went to work with 72 Cannon-pieces, which plaid upon ſix Regiments of Tilly's Army, lodged in the Forreſt oppoſite to them. The Swedes plaied with the Cannon very ſeverely, without intermiſſion; the Bullets flying into the Wood, made a moſt dreadful noiſe among the Trees and Men: Theſe Cannon-ſhot did not only blind the Bavarians, but promoted the making a Bridg of Boats on the River near Oberndorf, by reaſon of the Smoke. As ſoon as it was raiſed, the King of Sweden commands ſome of his Companies to paſs and intrench on the other ſide of the River; which was done before the Enemy could well perceive it. Col. Vangler had the Honour, and Lieut. Col. Ferbaſe to paſs firſt, at the head of 300 commanded Men; the King being extreamly ſatisfied with the Action, in making a Paſs over the River.

The Imperialiſts vainly attempt to hinder the Swede's Paſſage.

As ſoon as Tilly had notice of it, he ordered four Pieces of Cannon to beat down the Bridg, and the Defences of the Terrace-Work. Before it could be made uſe of, He commanded ſeveral Regiments to attaque them, but the Swedes did incredible things till they were reinforced; which coming very ſeaſonably, after three obſtinate Aſſaults on both ſides, the Bavarians were forced to leave them in poſſeſſion, both of the Bridg and Half-moon.

The King of Sweden advanced his Troops with all poſſible diligence to paſs the River in Perſon, but the Bavarians did not ſtay till his arrival, for they diſlodged in the Night with great confuſion, and withdrew themſelves, part to Newburgh, and part of them to Ingoldſtadt.

Tilly wounded in the Knee with a Cannon Bullet.

Carried wounded to Ingoldſtadt.

Tilly was wounded in this Combat, and the Bavarians hereupon began to loſe their Courage; he was ſtruck with a Bullet of three pounds weight above the Knee, after it had made ſeveral rebounds; they had much ado to carry him off, for they were conſtrained to halt ſeveral times in the Retreat, and look after his Horſe-Litter; and whether it was the jogging thereof that incommoded him, the loſs of Blood, and the pain that he endured, the one and the other, made him fall into ſuch Syncopes and ſwooning Fits, that they often took him for dead, before they could carry him to Ingoldſtadt, where they thought to ſet his Knee, but all in vain; for after they had taken out of his Thigh four broken Bones, with unutterable torment to him, his Weakneſs, Age, and Grief, together with his Vexation and Melancholy brought him to his Grave.

His loſs was very much regretted by his own Party, and had bin more, but for his misfortune at the Battel of Lipſick, and ſince that which beſel him after his Conqueſts. Many then remember the words of the Adminiſtrator ſpoken after the ſlaughter of Magdenburgh; That Blood could not be expiated but by Blood; and that the Actions of Murderers were very ominous to the Souldery, ſooner or later. In fine; except ſome of thoſe Miſadventures mentioned, Tilly's Reputation was unſpotted, and his Courage, Valour, Experience, his Credit with Men of War, his Conduct, and his ſignaliz'd Services to his own Party for many Years, might juſtly challenge, on his behalf, the Title of one of the Greateſt Commanders of the Age. He obliged the Souldiers to cheriſh his Memory by a Legacy of 60000 Rixdollers, which he bequeathed to the Veteran Regiments that had ſerv'd under him.

His Legacy to the Souldiers.

The King of Sweden in great danger at Ingoldſtadt:

The King of Sweden having gained the Paſs over the Lech, marches into Bavaria, deſtroyed eighty great Towns, Caſtles, and Villages, Ingoldſtadt only excepted.

The King of Sweden advanced ſomewhat too near, to ſatiſfy himſelf of the ſcituation of Ingoldſtadt, according to his uſual cuſtom, mounted upon a Gray Horſe: The Engineers of Ingoldſtadt conceiving ſome Perſon extraordinary in that Equipage, ſo level'd the Shot, that a Bullet took his Horſe in the Crupper, and covered him with Blood and Duſt. All his Retinue were in an unexpreſſible Terror, but they were ſoon changed into matchleſs Joys, when they underſtood their Head was ſafe, and their King ready to mount another Horſe, without any other Tranſport, and returned God thanks for his Preſervation.

All the Camp bore a part in this Aſtoniſhment and Joy, and ſupplicated the King carefully to manage the Lives of ſo many Millions of Souls as depended (under God) on his Conduct, ſince his Courage would not permit him to manage his own.

The King of Sweden's Anſwer to the Recommendation of his Army to manage his Life more warily.

The King replied; That the Bullet that ſaluted him ſo near that day, did put him in mind that he was Mortal, and ſubject to the ſame Accident as the meaneſt of his Souldiers, and to that general Law, which no Crowns, Victories, nor Armies can avoid. That it remained only for him to reſign himſelf to God's Providence, and that his Comrades who had their Arms in hand with him, ſhould firmly believe, that the Juſtice of the Cauſe, for which they expoſed themſelves to the hazard of Arms, had other dependency than his Life only. That the German Liberty would not want Maintainers, nor theſe Perſons here Succeſs, as long as they kept themſelves in God's Way.

After the Death of Tilly, the Emperor was in great diſtraction how to preſerve the Empire, half of it being already ſubdued by the Swede; and the Duke of Saxony in a manner Maſter of Bohemia. The Landgrave of Heſs caſt himſelf on the Swede's ſide; and the danger to the Empire ſeemed ſo great, as it ſtagger'd the Duke of Bavaria, his Country being now almoſt ruined, whether to ſtand any longer to the Houſe of Auſtria.

The Emperor after many Conſultations, and the extremity of the Affairs of Germany requiring it, obliged him to have recourſe to Walleſtein, whom he had formerly caſheer'd at the Diet at Ratisbon, as the only Perſon that ſeemed capable to ſave the Empire from Ruin; And the Duke of Bavaria, who had contributed much to the laying of Wallenſtein aſide from his Command, (and whom he perfectly hated) yet, ſeeing the Danger of his own Country, wherein the Swede had made great devaſtation, he ſeemingly complied with the Emperor to make Wallenſtein Generaliſſimo. And now was the Emperor put to great Difficulties how to gain Wallenſtein to accept of that Command; whereupon he privately permitted his Relations and Kindred to go unto him to ſound his Inclinations, and to tell him what an Honour it would be to him once more to be Generaliſſimo of the Empire, and ſo to ſpread his Fame throughout the World: But Wallenſtein well perceived the Artifice. He now ſaw the Buſineſs brought under his hands to effect the ſecret Deſign which he had in his Thoughts; ſo he anſwered his near Relations very ſparingly and modeſtly, that he was grown old, and deſired to remain Quiet, and not to be robbed of his Repoſe; and did much deplore the Misfortune of his Soveraign, the Emperor, as if he had bin deeply affected for him, having at that time Revenge in his Heart againſt the Emperor, for the ſaid Affront put upon him.

But at laſt ſeeing himſelf inceſſantly preſſed, he gave fained words, promiſing his Service but for four Months only, in which time he would undertake to raiſe an Army of 30000 Men; but declared, He would be Sole and Abſolute during that time, meaning not to be commanded by the King of Hungary, Ferdinando the Emperor's Son. For Wallenſtein retained privately in his Thoughts to uſurp the Kingdom of Bohemia, and to Act ſo for future, as to make himſelf King thereof.

His Acceptance of this Command gave Reputation to the Affairs of the Emperor; he gave out Commiſſions to levy 60 Regiments, and in two Months time raiſed an Army of 30000 Men, having ſome ſupply of Monies from the Emperor, and the Princes, and great Courtiers about the Emperor, who did contribute much towards that Service. His Army was no ſooner ready, but he ſent to Vienna, that the Emperor would ſend a General to command them; in the mean time he put in Emploiment the divers Colonels and Captains, and other Officers, whom he had retained ſince the time that he was diſmiſſed his Command; and his Kinſmen and Confidents had the greateſt command under him. At which the Miniſters of Spain and Bavaria were ſtartled, and feared he ſhould continue in Command, apprehending he had a Deſign of his own to revenge Injuries, and therefore would have had the Emperor to make Ferdinando King of Hungary, his Son to be Generaliſſimo; but the Conditions of Affairs was ſuch in the Empire, as they muſt caſt themſelves upon Wallenſtein, and upon his own Terms.

And by the beginning of April, he marched with his Army towards Bohemia to recover the City of Prague from the Duke of Saxony, wherein the Duke had 7000 Soldiers; and Summons being given, the Duke refuſed; Wallenſtein makes a Breach with his Cannon, and

An.1632. Commands the leſſer City to be Stormed, but the Saxons beat them off many times; but Walleſtein reſolving not to ſpare Mans Fleſh, makes his Horſe drive the Foot on again, and ſo overlays the Saxons with numbers and frequent attempts by Arms, that he by force enters this leſſer City, which preſently brought the other City to Compoſition, to go out with their Lives and Baggage, only with Swords by their ſides, and leaving their Colours, and other Arms behind them. Hereupon Walleſtein ſends the Colours he had taken to Vienna, and the Emperor creates him Duke of great Glogau in Sileſia.

And Walleſtein acted very ſucceſsfully in Bohemia, ſo that in the month of June he took Egra a ſtrong Gariſon Town, and other places. About the 17*th* of June, Walleſtein and Bavaria join all their Forces againſt the King of Sweden, reſolving to viſit him at Noremburgh, where the King had intrenched himſelf, being too weak at that time to Encounter Walleſtein and Bavaria, and Walleſtein makes his Head-Quarters betwixt Noremburgh and Furt, where July the 4*th* he ſate down and intrenches himſelf, having the faſtneſs of the Woods, and the tops of the Hills, and the advantage of being between the two Rivers Rednitz and Pegnitz. Thus did Walleſtein put his Army betwixt the King's Camp, and the Country of Franconia, whence his Forces and Victuals were to come, yet the King alſo had the help of the Town of Noremburgh to ſupply the Army with Proviſions.

On the 18*th* of Auguſt the King had drawn together thoſe Forces, which he had ſent abroad under the Commands of Oxenſtern, the two Dukes of Weymar, the Landgrave of Heſſein and Bannier, and on the 21*ſt* of Auguſt the King took a veiw of the whole Army drawn up into Battalia before Walleſtein's Trenches, and ſtood in that poſture all day to make a Brave upon him, the King's Army conſiſting of 26000 Marching Men in Field & Battalia,and at this time in good health and luſty: but notwithſtanding this Bravado, Walleſtein would not budg a foot out of his Quarters, thereupon the King caſt up three great Batteries, and from thence played inceſſently into Wallenſteins Quarters, he thundring the like into the Swedes Quarters. But the next day, (Auguſt 22.) the King perceiving the Walleſteiners wiſely withdrawing themſelves out of the Beat and Raking of the Swediſh Ordnance, the King diſmounted his Cannon, and removed to poſſeſs himſelf of a certain Hill, which commanded Walleſtein's Leaguer, hoping to beat him out of his Quarters, and to force him to fight. Which Walleſtein perceiving, retired himſelf into the Foreſt called Altemburgh, where he made uſe of an old Fortreſs, and ſtrongly intrenches himſelf, and barracado'd up all the ways, by cutting down round him the Trees. The Hill was very high and ſteep, craggy and buſhy.

But, notwithſtanding all Diſcouragements, the King having got all his Army together, reſolved to force Walleſtein out of his Trenches by Aſſault, which many of his own Commanders, as well as Scotiſh Officers, would have perſuaded the King againſt making an Attempt upon him on ſo great Diſadvantage. But the King underſtanding the Emperor had ſent to Walleſtein to avoid fighting, to weary out the Swede by delays, was the rather reſolved to attaque him in his Trenches, the King of Bohemia and Marqueſs Hamilton being at this time with the King of Sweden, were Eye-witneſſes of what followed preſently after in a ſharp Encounter.

On the Noremburg ſide of his Trenches the King caſt up three great Batteries, and from thence played inceſſantly into Walleſtein's Quarters, he thundering as furiouſly upon the Swede again. General Bannier at that time was ſhot in the left Arm above the Elbow.

The King cauſed ſome greater pieces of Ordnance to be mounted upon his Batteries, and ſeeing then they did no hurt to the Enemy, for Walleſtein's Men drew out of the reach of the Swediſh Ordnance; Hereupon the King cauſed his Ordnance to be diſmounted, and drew the Noremburgers out of their Trenches, and that day paſſed moſt part of his Army over the River Rednitz, a little above Furts, where the Engliſh and Scots were placed to ſecure the Paſs.

Auguſt 24.

Walleſtein perceiving the King's intention to poſſeſs himſelf of a certain Hill which would greatly advantage the King to beat up his Quarters, thereupon retired into the Foreſt called Altemburgh, and ſtrongly intrencht himſelf, and barracaded up all the Ways, cutting down all the Trees round about, having a high Hill, and very ſteep for his advantage; nevertheleſs the King reſolved to fall upon him in his Trenches.

Walleſtein intrenches at Altembergh.

The Aſſault.

The King himſelf led the Van-Guard of the left Wing, Duke William of Saxon Weymer had the honour of the Battel to cloſe up the King's right hand, and Duke Barnard with the Landgrave of Heſſen, brought up the Rear; ſome of theſe Troops were ſent to fall upon the ruinous old Caſtle of Altembergh on the Hill, the winning and defending of which old Caſtle ſpent ten hours time; on both ſides many a brave Gentleman there loſt his life, many wounded, and many taken Priſoners. Then the King himſelf led on his Men cloſe to the Enemies Works and Batteries, but Wallenſtein made a ſtout reſiſtance, having the advantage of the higher Ground, Trenches and Batteries, maintained the Fight with extremity of confidence; the Cannons and Muſquets firing all day long, both ſides were deſperate in maintaining the Fight with Terror, Fury and Obſtinancy, Regiment attaquing Regiment, until the greater part of the Foot on both ſides were throughly ingaged in the Medly. Moſt of the Swedes being come down from the Caſtle to the Plain, there began another Encounter, the Enemies Curiaſſiers iſſuing out upon the Swedes Muſquetiers, did ſo much overlay them, that they forced them to give ground, and many brave Commanders of the Swedes there taken and ſlain.

The King leads on his Men.

A deſperate Fight.

The night beginning now to approach, put an end to the Skirmiſh, and both ſides began to fall off from one another, having loſt their Sight rather than their Courage. Thus was there a drawn Battel. The Swedes indeed loſt their Hopes, and the Imperialiſts kept their Ground; the King did now (when too late) call to mind that many of his own, as well as Scots Officers, perſuaded him againſt this ſo raſh Attempt.

The night parts them.

A drawn Battel.

Now it was high time for the King of Sweden to ſound a Retreat; and much better had it been (ſaith one Hiſtorian) that a Charge had never bin ſounded: it was almoſt an impoſſible thing to get up the Mountain and attaque that old Caſtle without huge Diſadvantages.

Better never begun.

In this late Action on the King's ſide were ſlain the Count Erſpac, Maj. Gen. Boetius, and divers of the Engliſh and Scots; And now the King perceiving that Walleſtein was reſolved to tire him out with expectation of a Battel, and that he would upon no other Terms accept of the Encounter, judged it his beſt courſe to leave the ſullen General in the faſtneſs of his Trenches, ſeeing he would not be drawn to a Commanders ſlain.

Feild Fight. So the King reſolved to enter into Action by way of diverſion, having ſecured Noremberg, a place which had been good to, and tender of his Army, by leaving Kniphauſen with ſufficient Forces to defend the place againſt Wallenſtein; ſo the King reſolves to fall into Bavaria amongſt ſome of the Catholick Leaguers Lands, and to force out Walleſtein by that diverſion: And on the 8*th* of September the King diſlodges, and Walleſtein diſlodges likewiſe.

Afterwards there happened many Encounters between Parties of both Armies, which we forbear to mention, leſt it weary the Reader, therefore accept a breif account of the King's return to Noremburg, and of the Battel at Lutzen, Novem.6. 1632. where the King of Sweden was Slain, referring to a more large account in the Appendix.

The King at Naumburgh.

On Thurſday November the 1*ſt* the King of Sweden arrived at Naumburgh, and the ſame day went out upon a Party for diſcovering the Enemy; after him, that afternoon went out theſe three Engliſh Gentlemen, L. Col. Francis Terwhit, Serj. Maj. John Paulet, and Capt. Edward Fielding. Theſe three taking the right hand way, the King being gone on the left, fell into an Ambuſh of the Crabats. The firſt and the laſt were taken Priſoners, and were carried into the Imperial Leguer, and kept under a Gaurd in the rear of the Army all the day of the great Battle at Lutzen. Walleſtein marched to Lutzen, where, and in the Towns thereabouts, his whole Army Quartered.

Two Engliſh Commanders taken priſoners, Detained till the Battel was over.

The King thereupon parted out of Naumburgh, and doubled his March, yet it was night before the Army could get within two Engliſh miles of Lutzen. The King had an ill Paſs to get over within two miles of Lutzen, and the King had another Paſs right againſt that which the Imperialiſts had poſſeſſed: he from thence let fly ſome Pieces of Ordnance among them, to let them know he challenges them to Fight, but they not liking the place, marched off in the night.

The King challenges the Imperialiſts to fight.

The Imperial Army was in a terrible Hubbub at the King's ſudden coming and getting over the Paſs, and Walleſtein began to think of places more advantagious to engage in Battel. He mounted his Ordnance upon the Windmill Hills, and then began to caſt up a Trench of Earth about them, working all night, and to make the Hedges and Ditches to ſerve for Breaſtworks to lodge his Muſquetiers in.

The Day of Battel.

A great Miſt.

The Word.

Tueſday, the fatal ſixth of November began to draw near, the Drums beat a March towards the Enemy, but the morning proved ſo miſty, that it was impoſſible to ſee which way to march; but about eight of the clock the Miſt brake up; the King having made a Speech at the Head of his own Forces, and to the German Troops, gave the Word to the Souldiers, which was God with Us; Walleſtein's Word was the ſame which Tilly had, Jeſu Maria; the King advanced about nine of the clock and ſhot off his warning Peice. The King's Army having all the way a full view of the Imperial Army, by which they perceived Walleſtein had much overpowered them in numbers, having a mighty long Front much above an Engliſh mile, from one Wing-end to another, which might well be, for Walleſtein's Diſcipline was to march ten deep in File, and not many in Reſerves. The Armies being come within Cannon-ſhot, the great Ordnance began to play terribly on both ſides, till they joined Battel, and came to a cloſe Fight, wherein the King of Sweden was ſlain; or rather in a Party of Horſe with which he went before the Fight to diſcover the Poſture of the Enemy before the Miſt brake up, and was ſurpriſed by the Curiaſiers, and the King and the King and his Party cut off; yet the Victory was obtained over Wallenſtein and his whole Army. As for the Particulars and Circumſtances attending this Battel, ſee more at large in the Appendix.

The Death of three Kings.

This Year was remarkable for the Death of three Kings; Sigiſmond King of Poland, who died the 29th of April; Guſtavus Adolphus King of Sweden, who was ſlain on the Bed of Honour, November the 6th; and Frederick King of Bohemia, who died of the Infection the 19th of November.

Wallenſtein's Ambition and Revenge.

Wallenſtein Duke of Fridland, and the Emperor's Generaliſſimo, and a Prince of the Empire, was near his End; which gives us occaſion to ſpeak ſomething of that great Commander, by former Succeſſes over the Danes and Saxons; who having collected his Forces at Egra in Bohemia, and paid them three Months Pay in Mony, took the Oaths of Officers and Souldiers to himſelf, without naming the Emperor at all. And now his Revenge for being caſhiered at the Diet at Ratiſbon, breaks out, and the Diſcovery is made, That he was to join with the Swede, and ſhare all between them, and Wallenſtein to be made King of Bohemia.

The Emperor ſeeing the Danger he was in, makes ſure of the Garriſon of Prague, the Capital City of Bohemia, by a round Sum of Money.

Wallenſtein murdered.

Two of the Emperor's Colonels, Gordon and Leſlie, Scots, and Butler an Iriſh Officer, being faithful to the Emperor, and abhorring the Deſign of Wallenſtein to betray his Maſter, conſpire Wallenſtein's Death: and Butler comes firſt to him in his Bed-Chamber at Egra, as he was dreſſed for his Bed, cried out unto him, Thou Traitor to the Emperor and Empire, and ran him through the Body with his Partiſan ſtark dead, and threw him out of the Window (as ſome write) and thus ended that Ambitious and Revengeful Man.

Wallenſtine's Character.

This Character is given of him, That he was the Son of a Baron in Bohemia, and not raiſed from the Plough, as ſome would have it; for a Baron in Bohemia is one of the greateſt Lords in that Kingdom, in which there are neither Dukes nor Marqueſſes. The Barons being ſo jealous of their Dignity, that if a Stranger Duke would be naturalized Bohemian, they would oblige him to quit his Title, and to content himſelf with theirs.

His Father brought him up in the Proteſtant Religion, and would have had him apply himſelf to Letters; but his turbulent Spirit inclined not that way, which induced his Parents to ſend him to Court ſooner than they intended. So they preſented him Page to the Marqueſs of Burgh, Son to the Arch-Duke Ferdinand of Inſpurg; whilſt he remained there, falling from a high Window, without hurting himſelf, he turned Roman Catholick; fancying, that after this happy Eſcape, he was reſerved for ſomething extraordinary; ſo he quit his Maſter, and travelled through Germany, into England, France, Italy, and other parts; and having much improved himſelf, returned into Germany.

The Troubles of Bohemia following, and the Nobility of that Kingdom confederating againſt the Emperor, Wallenſtine was employed by the Emperor, he defeated 6000 Hungarians with fifteen Troops of of Horſe, which purchaſed him very extream Fame, and very extream Envy.

In this high Emploiment he added much to his Reputation, in taking the Town and Dioceſs of Halberſtadt; conquered Hall and its Biſhoprick; waſted the Territories of Magdenburgh, entred into thoſe of Anhalt, fortified Deſſan, defeated Mansfield, and with him 4000 Flemmings, the chief Force of the Daniſh Army. After that, perceiving that Mansfield and Weymour, with their Forces, bent towards Hungary by way of Sileſia, to give Life to the Rebellion, and join with Bethlem Gabor; he purſued Bethlem and Mansfield, and finding them at the Siege of Novegrade, vanquiſhed them, cut in pieces the Janiſaries that were come to the Succour of Tranſilvania, and drove Mansfield out of Germany, who had bin its Terror for ſo many Years; returning into Sileſia, where he found Weimour dead, he obliging half his Troops to ſurrender themſelves, and overcame the reſt; took in all the Revolted Towns, and after he had pacified the Hereditary Provinces, led his Victorious Army, ſtrengthened by that of Tilly, againſt the King of Denmark.

With theſe great Forces, he defies the Marqueſs of Urluch, conquers the Archbiſhoprick of Bream and Holſace; filled his Troops out of the new Levies that Charles of Lawenburgh had raiſed for the Enemy; rendred himſelf Maſter of all that lies between the Ocean and the Baltick-Sea, leaving the King of Denmark nothing but Glucſtadt, and that little corner of Land which is ſeparated from the reſt of his Dominions. Wallenſtein drove the King of Denmark out of Pomerania, into which Province he had made a Deſcent and Progreſs, forcing him to remount his Ships, where yet perhaps he had not found his ſafety, if Wallenſtein had had Sea-Forces; inſomuch as from that time to the Peace of Lubeck, the Dane never enterprized any thing, contenting himſelf to ſuccour thoſe of the Sound, who were only able to ſtop the torrent of the Imperial Arms, which ſo many Nations had in vain oppoſed.

In this flouriſhing Eſtate of the Empire, leaves Tilly Lieutenant General to the Duke of Bavaria in Frize, to take up his Winter-Quarters; but in effect it was, that the Emperor might not have any longer the Duke of Bavaria for Companion, and that himſelf might remain without Competitor, ſole Director of all things.

Ferdinando the Emperor conferred on Wallenſtein the Dukedome of Mecklenburgh, who became Maſter of that Eſtate and Title. He ſecures himſelf of all the Ports in the Baltick-Sea except the Sound, to which he lays violent Siege.

And now he might quietly have enjoyed the Glory of his great and faithful Services, if his Ambition (that was always above his Fortune) had not tranſported him; he was ſtiled Highneſs, Eating alone, ſtamping Mony, ſoliciting Audiences, affecting to reſemble Kings; which corrupted the ſolidity of Vertue, and he was brought to an untimely end.

2000 Engliſh ſent to the aſſiſtance of the Muſcovites.

The Emperor of Muſcovia having a deſign to regain a great Town out of the King of Poland's Poſſeſſion, called Smolenskoe, being a ſtrong Place, lying in the Borders of Poland, formerly taken by Sigiſmond King of Poland from the Muſcovite; he applied himſelf to the King of Great Britain for leave to raiſe 2000 Engliſh Men; to which the King gave conſent, and recommended Colonel Thomas Sanderſon to command the Men that ſhould be raiſed. And having got a double Regiment together, he tranſported them by the North Cape, and landed them at Arch-Angel, being the North Part and Port to Muſco.

After they landed there, the 6th of Auguſt this Year, they were nobly received and treated, and had large pay allowed unto them.

Well received and treated.

The Muſcovites preſently march with a great Hoſte, and lay in Siege to Smolenskoe.

The Pole marches alſo with a Potent Army to raiſe the Siege, and entrenching himſelf with all the Advantages that might be, to ſecure his Army againſt the Aſſault of the Muſcovite, and yet ſo ordered his Trenches, that he might by degrees ſend out ſtrong Parties to cut off Proviſions from going to the Camp of the Muſcovite.

The General for the Muſcovites, had a Deſign with 3000 Foot and Horſe, to fall upon the Pole in their Trenches, being weakned at that time by drawing off their Horſe to prevent the Muſcovite from being relieved by Proviſions. And having deſigned Colonel Sanderſon to command the Men, appointed him to attaque the Enemy in one Poſt: The General and he took a ſerious view of the Enemy's Camp, where to fall on. At which Colonel Leſly, a Scot, was offended that the General had not honoured him with that Service; and an Alarm being beaten, when they were taking the view, the General commanded Sanderſon to haſten to his Quarter; and in his paſſage Leiſly ſhot him dead with a brace of Bullets, without giving him the leaſt warning to defend himſelf.

Col. Sanderſon ſlain by Col. Leſly.

Upon which Murder, the Engliſh (in a rage) drew into a Body to be revenged upon Leſly; the Scots likewiſe drew into a Body, but the General prevailed with both Parties to mind their Duty againſt the Enemy, and promiſed the Murderer ſhould be ſecured, and accordingly he was put under a Guard. But the Enemy, the Pole, underſtanding this Diſtraction between the Engliſh and Scots in the Muſcovite Army, falls upon the Muſcovites in their Leaguer, greatly diſorders them, and kills five or ſix thouſand Men, and conſtrained the Muſcovite to accept of diſhonourable Terms; for a Peace was then concluded of all Matters in difference between thoſe two Princes concerning their reſpective Claims to that and other Places.

The Pole takes advantage of the difference between the Engliſh and Scots.

A Peace concluded.

After the General of the Muſcovite returned home, he had his Head cut off, and his Son the Lieutenant General, was whipt to Death about the Streets, and his Family baniſh'd for ever into the Country of Ibera, there to catch Sables for the Emperor's Profit.

The Muſcovite's General put to Death.

The Murderer Leſly, after ſome time of durance in Muſcovia, was ſent into England a Priſoner; and here he was committed in Order to a Trial before the Court of Chivalry, where he was proſecuted by the Friends of Sanderſon; but that Court found they could not here puniſh Murder with Death, which was committed in a Foreign Nation. Leſly afterwards obtained his Pardon, and then returned again into Muſcovia, where he was, upon ſuſpicion of Treachery, impriſoned and condemned to Die; and from the top of a High Tower was flung down upon ſharp Stakes, and Spikes fixed in the Ground; and in that torture, endured for ſome time a lingering Death.

Leſly ſent Priſoner into England.

An. 1632.

At this time a Proclamation came forth for the well ordering of the Silk-Trade to this effect following.

‘WHereas upon diſcovery of ſome notable Abuſes in the falſe Dying of Silk, which had crept in upon the Trade, by the Fraud and Covetize of ſome ill-diſpoſed Perſons; whereby beſides the unjuſt increaſe of the Weights, the Silk was weakned and corrupted, and the Colour made worſe, to the great abuſe of Us and Our Subjects, and to the apparent overthrow of the whole Trade, if the ſame ſhould not have bin prevented: We taking into Our Princely conſideration the many Benefits that do redound to Our loving Subjects, by the Importation of Raw Silk from Foreign Parts, and working the ſame into Manufactures here at home, whereby multitudes of Our poor People are daily ſet on Work and maintained, though to Our own loſs; did heretofore, by our Publick Proclamation, given at Our Court at Farnham, the ninth day of Auguſt, in the ſixth Year of Our Raign, utterly forbid the uſe of all ſuch Deceit and Falſity in the Dying of Silks, and for the preſent did thereby preſcribe ſome Rules to be obſerved for the preventing of the like Abuſes thereafter, until upon ſerious and mature deliberation, by the Advice of Our Council, We ſhould be able to make a more abſolute Reformation.

‘And whereas We finding by experience upon other Trades, That this ſo great and good a Work was not throughly and perfectly to be done and performed by any other way, than by a Corporation to conſiſt of thoſe Perſons and Members thereof, who having knowledg in the ſeveral Trades or Myſteries of Working and Dying of Silk, could beſt take timely notice of, and diſcover the ſeveral Deceits and Abuſes, which otherwiſe would from time to time be attempted and uſed therein; upon mature conſideration, did thereunto incline Us unto the way tending to the encreaſe of the ſaid Trade, and maintaining the eſtimation thereof, (which we much deſire); and thereupon by Our Letters Patents, bearing date at Weſtminſter the twentieth day of May laſt, did Conſtitute, Ordain, and Declare, That the Perſons therein named, being Perſons uſing the Trade of Buying, Selling, or Working of Silk, Gold, and Silver Thread, and the ſeveral Manufactures thereof, and their Succeſſors, ſhould for ever hereafter be one Body Politick and Corporate, by the Name of the Governour and Company of Silkmen of London, for the well ordering of the Silk Trade throughout the Kingdom of England; thereby giving them full Power and Authority, to Make, Ordain, and Eſtabliſh all, or any ſuch Laws, Statutes, Acts, Orders, Conſtitutions, and Ordinances, for the good Government, Order and Rule of the ſaid Governour and Company, and every or any of them: As alſo all and ſingular other Subjects of Us, Our Heirs and Succeſſors, reſiding within Our Kingdoms of England, Ireland, and Dominion of Wales; and intermedling with, or in any wiſe uſing or exerciſing the Art, Trade, or Myſtery of a Silk-Man, Selling or Working of Silk, Gold or Silver Thread, or Manufactures made of them, every or any of them, as to them ſhould ſeem meet and convenient, for the taking away, puniſhing and pre-

'venting all preſent and future Abuſes, that then had, or at any time 'then after ſhould or might ariſe, or grow upon the ſame Trade, 'in the Throwing, Twiſting, Dying, Mixing, Weaving, Working, 'or Selling of Silk, or Silk-Wares, or Gold or Silver-Thread; or in 'the ſeveral Manufactures made of them, every or any of them, and 'alſo all other Abuſes whatſoever, from time to time, growing or ariſing upon the Silk Trade.

'And the ſame Statutes, Laws, Acts, Orders, Conſtitutions and 'Ordinances ſo had and made, to put in uſe and execution accordingly; and at their pleaſure to Revoke, Repeal, and Diſſolve the 'ſame, or any or them.

'Which Letters Patents we were the rather inclined to grant, for 'that We repoſed ſpecial Truſt and Confidence in thoſe of the ſaid 'Company, for the well-ordering of the ſaid Trade, and taking away 'the Abuſes uſed therein. That whatſoever Silk ſhould be found to 'be thereafter heavy dyed, ſhall be burnt and deſtroyed.

'And in regard of the certain Weights ſet by a former Proclamation, We have repoſed ſpecial Confidence in the Care and Induſtry of 'the ſaid Governor and Company, to command Obedience thereunto.

The Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Diary for the Year, 1633.

ON the 13*th* of May, being Munday, I ſet out of London to attend King Charles into Scotland. Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury's Diary.

May the 24*th* the King was to enter into York in State.

June 6. I came to Barwick; that Night I Dreamed, that K. B. ſent to me in Weſtminſter-Church, that he was now as deſirous to ſee me as I him; and that he was then entring into the Church: I went with hope, but met another in the middle of the Church, who ſeemed to know the buſineſs, and laughed, but K. B. was not there.

June 8. Whitſon-Eve I received Letters from K. B. unalterable, &c. by this if I return, I ſhall ſee how true or falſe my Dream is, &c.

Saturday, June 15. I was ſworn Councellor of Scotland.

June 18. Tueſday after Trinity Sunday K. Charles Crowned at Holy-rood Church in Edenburgh. I never ſaw more expreſſions of Joy than were after it, &c.

June 19. Wedneſday, I received two Letters from K.B. No Changling, &c. within three hours after, other Letters from K. B. believe all that I ſay, &c.

June 29. Friday, Letters from K. B. no D. true, if not to my contentment, &c. June 30. I Preached to his Majeſty in the Chappel in Haly-rood-Houſe at Edenburgh.

July 1. Monday I went over Forth, to Brunt Iſland.

July 2. Tueſday to St. Andrews.

An. 1633.

July 20. Saturday the King came from Scotland to Greenwich, having come Poſt from Barwick in four days, (being 260 Miles).

Friday, July 26. I came to my Houſe at Fulham, from Scotland.

July 28. Sunday, K. B. and I met, all the ſtrange diſcourſes miſtaken, I went away much troubled, but all ſetled again well, Auguſt 3. Saturday following.

Sunday, Auguſt 4. news came to Court of the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies death, and the King reſolved preſently to give it me, which he did Auguſt 6.

Auguſt 4. That very Morning at Greenwich, there came one to me ſeriouſly that vowed ability to perform it, and offered me to be a Cardinal: I went preſently to the King, and acquainted him both with the thing and Perſon.

Auguſt 7. Wedneſday, abſolute ſettlement between me and K. B. after I had made my caſe known at large. God bleſs me in it.

Auguſt. 14. Wedneſday, a report brought me that I was poyſoned.

Auguſt 17. Saturday I had a ſerious offer made me again to be a Cardinal; I was then from Court, but ſo ſoon as I came thither (which was Wedneſday, Auguſt 21.) I acquainted his Majeſty with it: but my Anſwer again was, that ſomewhat dwelt within me, which would not ſuffer that till Rome were other than it is.

Auguſt 25. Sunday, my Election to the Arch-biſhoprick was returned to the King, then being at Woodſtock.

Septemter 19. I was tranſlated to the Arch-biſhoprick of Canterbury, The Lord make me able, &c.

The day before, when I firſt went to Lambeth, my Coach, Horſes and Men ſunk to the bottom of the Thames in the Ferry-Boat, which was overladen, but I praiſe God for it, I loſt neither Man nor Horſe.

November 13. Wedneſday, Richard Boyer, who had formerly named himſelf Lodowick, was brought into the Starr-Chamber, for moſt groſly miſuſing me, and accuſing me of no leſs than Treaſon, &c. He had broke Priſon for Felony when he did this. His Cenſure is upon Record, and God forgive him. About the beginning of this Month the Lady Davis Propheſied againſt me, that I ſhould very few days outlive the fifth of November. And a little after that one Green came into the Court at St. James's, with a great Sword by his ſide, ſwearing the King ſhould do him juſtice againſt me, or he would take another courſe with me. All the wrong I ever did this man was, that being a poor Printer, I procured him of the Company of the Stationers five pounds a Year during his Life. God preſerve me, and forgive him: he was committed to Newgate.

Sunday, November 24. in the afternoon I Chriſtned King Charles his ſecond Son, James Duke of York, at St. James's.

A thankſgiving for the ſafe Delivery of the Queen's Majeſty, and happy Birth of the Duke of York.

MOST Gracious God, and Loving Father, we give thee all humble and hearty Thanks, for thy great Mercy, in bleſſing the Queens Majeſty with a happy Deliverance, in, and from the great Pains and Peril of Child-birth. We humbly beſeech thee to continue and increaſe this Bleſſing, that She may happily overcome this, and all other Dangers. That His Moſt Gracious Majeſty may long have joy in Her moſt happy Life; and both of them Comfort in the Royal Prince Charles, and the reſt of their Princely iſſue, particularly in the Newborn Prince the Duke of York. That they may all prove a Healthful, Hopeful and a Succeſſful Poſterity; that both Church and Kingdom may have fulneſs of Joy in them. That ſo their Majeſties Royal Perſons may be filled with Honours in this Life, and with Eternal Happineſs in the Life to come. And this even for Jeſus Chriſt his ſake, our only Saviour and Redeemer. Amen.

This Year His Majeſty being reſolved on a Progreſs into Scotland, on the 4*th* of May iſſued out a Proclamation to this Effect.

Concerning the Prizes of Victuals within the Verge of His Majeſties Houſhold.

'THat whereas in His Majeſties Progreſs through divers parts of the Realm, neceſſity requires, That a great number of His Majeſties Subjects, not only Noblemen, but others, attending his Service, and others for their neceſſary Occaſions, ſhould frequent thoſe places, where the King in His Royal Perſon ſhall reſort; and it is therefore requiſite that Competent Proviſions be made, that they be not expoſed to the intolerable Avarice of Bakers, Brewers, Inholders, Butchers, and Sellers of Victuals, who do ordinarily unlawfully exact and demand unreaſonable and extream Prizes for Victuals, Horſe-meat, Lodging, &c. above the Prizes they were ſold at before the Kings coming into thoſe Parts: Therefore His Majeſty doth Publiſh and Command, that all Perſons do keep ſuch Prizes as are and ſhall be Aſſeſſed and Rated by the Clerk of the Market of the Kings Houſhold, or his Lawful Deputy, within and without their Liberties, upon the preſentment of Jurors, by vertue of his Office Sworn and Charged from time to time.

May* the 5th. A Proclamation for well ordering His Majeſties Court and Train in His Journey to Scotland, and return thence.

'THe Kings Majeſty having taken into his Princely Conſideration ſome Incoveniences, which may fall out and happen in His intended Journey towards His Kingdom of Scotland, if preſent care be not had to prevent the ſame, hath thought fit, by Advice of His Privy Council to publiſh and declare, That his Royal Pleaſure and Command is, that none of his Subjects of what Degree or Quality ſoever they be, during the time of His Majeſties going and returning in the ſaid Journey, ſhall preſume within the Verge of His Majeſties Court, to take up or poſſeſs themſelves of any Lodging, of their own private Authority, but ſhall firſt receive a Billet from his Majeſties Harbingers, or ſome of them. And his Majeſty being graciouſly Pleaſed and providently Careful, to prevent ſuch Grievances, which may in this Journey happen

‘to his loving Subjects, doth likewiſe hereby ſtraightly charge and ‘command, that none of his Majeſties Servants, nor the Servants of ‘any Noblemen, or others whatſoever ſhall in the ſaid Journey
‘preſume to take any Cart or Carts, but ſuch as ſhall be delivered ‘unto him, or them by ſome of His Majeſties Cart-takers, or their ‘Deputies: And laſtly, His Majeſty's further Will and Pleaſure is,
‘that this His Royal Proclamation and the Directions hereby given
‘and Commanded, ſhall likewiſe continue and remain in force
‘for His Majeſties Service and the good of his Subjects, in all other
‘his Majeſties future Journeys and Progreſſes whatſoever, the due
‘obſerving whereof his Majeſty expects from all his Loving Subjects,
‘as they tender His Pleaſure, and will avoid the Contrary at ‘their Perils.

Proteſtant Nunnery.

May the 13*th*. His Majeſty having appointed the Lord Cottington, to Sign all Pacquets, ſet forward from London, attended by the Earls of Northumberland, Arundel, Pembrook, Southampton, Holland, Marqueſs Hamilton, and other Nobles and Perſons of Quality. In his Progreſs he ſtept a little out of the way to view a place at Giddon near Stilton in Northamptonſhire, which by the vulgar ſort of People was called a Proteſtant Nunnery. When His Majeſty came to that place, he underſtood that it was by the Inſtitution and Appointment of one Mrs. Mary Farrar Widow, aged about eighty years (who ſaid ſhe bid adiew to all fears and hopes of this World, and only deſired to love God) and none were permitted to reſide in her Houſe and Family, but ſuch as would devote themſelves to that Courſe of Life, which ſhe by her Order had appointed, to frequent Prayers at certain Hours, Morning, Noon, Evening and Night-time; they were to Eat by Meaſure and Drink by Quantity. Within the Chappel was a Rich Altar, Crucifix, Candles of White and Green Wax, and before they went to read Prayers they bowed three times before the Altar, as they went up and came down. Thoſe that entred into that courſe of Life with them, were at liberty to uſe any Vocation within the Houſe, as binding of Books, teaching of Scholars, others ſtudying their Books. Laſtly, the Foundreſs was pleaſed to add this Liberty and Priviledge unto any that entred into that Society, that if they had a mind to Marry, they ſhould with freedom have liberty to depart.

His Majeſties Geſts were ſetled to certain time and places before he ſet out from London, and Welbeck in Nottinghamſhire being appointed as one Geſt, the King in His Progreſs was Treated there at a Sumptuous Feaſt, by the Earl (ſince Duke of Newcaſtle) eſtimated to ſtand the Earl in ſome thouſands of pounds.

After the time that His Majeſty parted from that Noble Earls Treatment, He met with great Reception by the way, and Sumptuous Feaſtings at York, where he made ſome ſtay, and at Raby Caſtle where Sir Henry Vane, His Majeſties late Ambaſſador to the King of Denmark and Swedland nobly entertained His Majeſty. And at Durham ſeveral days that Biſhop (Dr. Morton) moſt ſumptuouſly entertained his Majeſty; and the King going from thence, to the Town of Newcaſtle, that Place abundantly ſhewed their Duty and Affection in a Generous Entertainment of His Majeſty.

After His Majeſty parted from Newcaſtle, he haſtened to Barwick, where Mr. Widdrington of Grayes-Inne, Recorder of that Town, on the Second day of June entertained His Majeſty in His Paſſage through that Place towards Edenburgh with this enſuing Speech.

June the 2. Mr. Widdringtons Speech to the King at Barwick, in His Progreſs to Scotland, being Recorder of that Town.

Moſt Gracious and Dread Sovereign.

‘WHat the Noiſe of uſeleſs aud obſolete Canons, what theſe ſtrong yet deſolate Walls, what the Reliques of ſometimes warlike Souldiers, what the Ruines of a poor, yet ancient Burrough, what all thoſe would ſay, (if they could ſay any thing) and what all we your Majeſties humbleſt and meaneſt Subjects deſire to expreſs with an unanimous and chearful Acclamation, is no more but this, That your Majeſties Preſence doth now bring as much Joy and Comfort to us all, as ever the loſs of this Town of Barwick brought ſorrow to the Engliſh or Scottiſh Nation.

‘It were unſeaſonable for us to repreſent to Your Majeſties view, the Gloomy Cloud of our Preſſures and wants: No I need not do it; The Mite we are to caſt into Your Majeſties Treaſury will quickly tell you them; We cannot do it, for that Cloud is ſuddenly vaniſhed by the Radiant Beams of Your Sun-like Appearance. By whoſe approach theſe Ruſty Ordnances, theſe Solitary Walls, theſe Souldiers, this now deſpicable Town, have all inſtantly received their former Life, Luſter, and Vigour; and hence we are induced to think, that this Year (being the Year of Your Majeſties moſt Royal Progreſs) is likewiſe the Year dreamed on by Plato, wherein all things were to return to their former Life, Splendor and Excellency.

‘You have in Your Majeſties Eye the Repreſentative Body of the poor Town of Barwick, yet a Town (for fuimus Troes) that hath been the Delight, nay the Ranſome of Kings, a true Helena, for which many Bloody Battels have been fought, loſt, and regained ſeveral times, within the compaſs of one Century of Years. A Town the ſtrongeſt Fortreſs of both Your Majeſties moſt flouriſhing Kingdoms, yet upon each diſcord and diſſention, banded as a Ball between them; if held in the Hands of one, then toſſed by the other Kingdom, a Ball that never found reſt until the happy Union.

‘A Town at this day as uſeleſs, as Armes in time of Peace, yet may ſerve for Your Majeſty to caſt your Eye upon, as a little Map of both Your great Kingdoms, as a participating of the nature of both, yet doubtful whether moſt beyond the ordinary Limits of the one, and without the Juriſdiction of the other Kingdom, but conſpicuous in the Eye of both.

‘A Town neither wholly regulated by Engliſh or Scottiſh Laws, but by Cuſtoms and Uſages in ſome things different from both; yet rather inclined to Engliſh Laws, and more affecting Scottiſh Faſhions and Language, as being oftner ſaluted by the Reſcripts of the one, and ſeeing and hearing oftner the other.

‘Although now Engliſh, and ſo hath continued ſince the time of King Edw. 4., yet ſuch is our diſtance from the Center of the Kingdom, that the Lines of thoſe Felicities now enjoyed by that Kingdom, by Your Majeſties happy Government and Reſidence there, do not ſo happily Concenter in us.

An. 1633.

'We will know (as indeed who knoweth not) that Royal Blood running in Your Majeſties Veins, to be Extracted from the moſt Renowned Kings of both theſe Kingdoms, and by thoſe Kings, (Moſt Dread Sovereign) eſpecially by Your Royal Father of ever Bleſſed and Happy Memory, hath this Town, though in the Skirts of either Kingdom, been richly Imbroidered, with many Priviledges, Franchiſes, and Immunities: And therefore we doubt not but Your Majeſty, in whom each Man may behold the Worth of all Your Anceſtors, You being no leſs Rightful Inheritor of their Vertues, than of their Crowns, will gratiouſly maintain what they have moſt benignly granted.

'But few words are beſt to be uſed to Kings, eſpecially when they are ſpoken by an unskilful Orator. We dare boldly ſay, (Moſt Gracious and Mighty King) that our Hearts are better than our Tongues, being moſt of all unhappy in this, that they are linked with ſo bad Expreſſions.

'Yet we hope that Your Majeſty may ſee in our Countenances, what you hear not ſo fully expreſſed by our Tongues; We humbly crave Your free Pardon of the one, and Your Gracious Interpretation of the other.

'Your Majeſty is now going to place a Diadem upon Your moſt Sacred Head, which God and Your own Right have long ſince given into Your Hands.

'Our humble Prayers are, That not only that, but all Your other Crowns, may be unto Your Majeſty Crowns of Roſes, without the mixture of any Thorns.

'And we moſt affectionately wiſh, That the Throne of King Charles the Great, and wiſe Son of our Brittiſh Solomon, may be like that of King David, the Father of Solomon, eſtabliſhed before the Lord for ever.

The King took his Journey from Barwick, upon the 12 day of June in the ſaid Year, attended with his Retinue the Engliſh Nobility and others, and was met at the bound Road, near Barwick, by the moſt part of the Nobility of Scotland, and by the Gentry of the Sheriffdomes of Barwick, Tiveodale, and the 3 Lothians, and many more of the Gentry of Scotland in very Noble Equipage, and well Mounted, amongſt whom were a Troop of 600 of the Mers or Barwick-ſhire Gentlemen relating to, or dependants upon, the Earls of Homes in Green Satten Dublets, and White Tafity Scarves. That night he lay at Dunglas (an Houſe belonging to the Earls of Home) ſerved by his own Furniture and Proviſions, in reſpect there was none at that time to repreſent the Earl of Home, there being pretentions for the ſaid Eſtate depending betwixt the Heir-male of the ſaid Family, and the Heirs of the Line.

Upon Thurſday the 13. of June after Breakfaſt, he came from Dunglas to Seaton, an Houſe of the Earl of Wintons, where he was nobly entertained by the Earl, and ſtay'd there till Friday the 14. of June after Dinner.

From thence he went to Dalkeith, a Houſe then belonging to the Earl of Morton, Lord High Treaſurer of Scotland, where he was alſo ſumptuouſly entertained by his Lordſhip that night, and the next day at Dinner.

June the 15. on Saturday in the afternoon His Majeſty came from Dalkeith, towards Edenburgh, (five Miles diſtant) and entred at the Weſt Port, where he was Honourably received, the Keys delivered, and His Majeſty attended by the Lord Provoſt, Bailiffs and Aldermen in their Scarlet Robes, others of the Council and Grave Men of the City in Black Gowns lined with Velvet, and Young Men ſaid to be the number of 13 Score, cloathed in White Satten Dublets, Black Velvet Breeches, and White Silk Stockins, bearing rich Partizans and other Arms, the Train-bands of the City being ranged on each ſide the Streets through which His Majeſty paſſed. There were great Acclamations of the People, being entertained with elegant Speeches at 5 ſeveral Pageants, viz. 1*ſt.* At the ſaid Weſt Port, 2 at the Weſt-bow, 3 at the Old Tolbooth, the 4 at the Trone, and the 5 at the nether Bow. The Ceremony of that Pageant at the Tolbooth, there was repreſented in Effigie the whole Kings in order that had Reigned in Scotland ſince the Monarchy of that Kingdom, even from Fergus the firſt, who himſelf was repreſented therein, making a Prophetical Oration of all his Succeſſors till Charles the firſt the 108 King, and added, That as Heaven had propitiouſly maintained the Succeſſive Sovereignty from him to Charles, ſo he predicted, That as many ſhould ſucceed his Succeſſors, as he had preceding Monarchs of this Kingdom; beſides, there were ſeveral witty Speeches in Verſe. 1*ſt.* Called the Speech of Caledonia, repreſenting the Kingdom. 2*d.* The Song of the Muſes at Parnaſſus. 3*d.* The Speeches at the Horoſcopal Pageant, by the Planets, where firſt Endymion ſpeaks, then Saturn, Jove, Mars, Sun, Venus, Mercury, Moon, and laſt again Endymion cloſes the Ceremony, all printed amongſt the Poems of Mr. William Drumond of Haythernden.

It's here obſerved, That the whole Scotch Nobility did ride down the Streets according to their Degrees in Order of Parliament, next to them the Houds, the Sword, Scepter, and Crown; and immediately after the Kings Perſon; And the Engliſh Nobility according to their ſeveral Ranks and Degrees, and His Majeſty lighting at the Abbey Church-door, where Mr. Andrew Ramſey, a Miniſter of the City, made a very learned Oration to him in Latin. And from thence he went to his Pallace of Hallyrood-houſe,

June 17 it being Monday, after Dinner His Majeſty publickly created the Earl of Angus Marqueſs of Douglas, and Chancellor Hay Earl of Kinnoul, and preſently after went in his Coach to the Caſtle of Edenburgh, and there was worthily entertained that night by the Earl of Marr Governour of the Caſtle.

The 18 of June, being Tueſday, was the Kings Coronation day, where all his Noble Officers of State attended the Kings Majeſty in their Robes from the Caſtle to the Abbey Church, according to their Degrees, and the Honours Veſt, Sword, Scepter, and Crown carried after the accuſtomed manner, lighting at the Church-door, and aſſuming their reſpective Places, a Sermon was Preached by David Lindſey then Biſhop of Brechin upon theſe words, 1 Kings 1. 39. And all the People ſaid, God ſave King Solomon.

After

An. 1633. After Sermon they proceeded to the Coronation, attended with all the uſual Ceremonies thereof. It was obſerved, that Dr. Lawd, then Biſhop of London, who attended the King, (being a ſtranger) was high in his carriage, taking upon him the order and managing of the Ceremonies and Coronation, and for an Inſtance, Spotſwood Archbiſhop of St. Andrews being placed at the Kings Right Hand, and Lindſey then Archbiſhop of Glaſtow at his Left, Biſhop Lawd took Glaſcow, and thruſt him from the King with theſe words; Are you a Church-man and wants the Coat of your Order, (which was an Imbroidered Coat, and that he ſcrupled to wear being a moderate Church-man) and in place of him put in the Biſhop of Roſſe at the Kings Left Hand.

At this time the Lords and Nobles of Scotland, ſeemed to ſtand well and equally in the Kings Favour, till after the Parliament (eſpecially the Duke of Lenox, and the Marqueſs of Hamilton.)

June the 19 Wedneſday was a day of Reſt, the Bands of the City diſciplined in the Palace-yard before the King and His Nobles.

June the 20 Thurſday the Parliament rode in order from the Kings Pallace to the Parliament-houſe, the Honours carried, and all Ceremonies obſerved, as was accuſtomed. Spotſwood Archbiſhop of St. Andrews Preached; the King made his Speech, and the Parliament proceeded to chooſe the Lords and Members of the Articles, according to their uſual manner; the Biſhops being to Nominate the Temporal Lords, there were elected 3 Lords ſuſpected to be Popiſh. Theſe Lords and Members of the Articles conſiſting of 8 of the Clergy, 8 of the Nobility, and 8 Barons, and 8 Burgeſſes. The manner of Election was thus:

1. The Noblemen elect the Clergy.
2. The Clergy elect and choſe the Noblemen.
3. The Elect Clergy and Noblemen choſe the Barons.
4. The Elect Clergy, Nobility and Barons, choſe the Burgeſſes.

Beſides the Officers of State make up that Body which deviſe, contrive, and form all Acts that are to paſs in Parliament; and being ſo preſented, are paſſed without difficulty. Theſe Members of the Articles convened daily, till the 28 day of June, and in the general, what the King propoſed was granted: And on Friday the 28 of June the whole Parliament met, and paſſed the ſeveral Acts, which the Articles had ſo prepared, being 31 publick printed Acts, beſides 176 private Acts not printed, ſuch as reſpect particular Perſons and Things are promiſcuouſly titled Acts, Proteſtations, Ratifications, Commiſſions, &c.

Vide a Liſt of Printed Acts.

The 1 and 21 Acts gave the King very great Sums of Money, viz. The one a Subſidy or Taxation of Thirty Shillings of every Pound Land of old Extent for 6 years to be paid at every Term of Martinmas, and alſo the 16 Penny of all Annual Rents, or Intereſt of Money, (the ſame being then at 10 l. per Cent.) and that for the like ſpace of 6 years to be paid Termly at Whitſontide and Martinmas equally during that time.

The other Act reduced the Intereſt of 10 l. per Cent. to 8 l. to be obſerved as a Law amongſt the Lieges, but in conſideration thereof the King was to have 2 l. out of the 10 l. formerly paid, and that for the ſpace of three years; all theſe made a very great Taxation.

9 Caroli.

In this Parliament there was little or no difference, except in what related to two Acts, viz. 3d and 4th, the one entituled an Act anent His Majeſties Royal Prerogative, and Apparrel of Kirkemen. The other an Act of Ratification of the Acts touching Religion.

Vide the Acts.

As to the former of theſe Acts, ſeveral Noblemen and others were not pleaſed to have the Apparel of Kirkemen joyned with the Prerogative, ſuſpecting the Surplice to be intended; and the King being asked that Queſtion, made no anſwer. But this Circumſtance was obſerved of him, that he took a Liſt of the whole Members out of his Pocket, and ſaid, Gentlemen, I have all your Names here, and I'le know who will do me ſervice, and who will not, this day. However about 13 Noblemen, and as many Barons and Burgeſſes declared, That they agreed to the Act for His Majeſties Prerogative, but diſſented from that part of it, as to the Apparel of Kirkemen.

The King ſaid he would have no diſtinction, but commanded them to ſay I, or no. Upon which thoſe Lords and others before mentioned declared themſelves particularly, that they did diſſent from that Act as it was conceived; as to the other Act annent Religion, the ſame diſſenting Lords and Gentlemen declared, That they agreed to the Ratification of the Laws annent the true Proteſtant Religion, as it was eſtabliſhed in Doctrine, and an Act of this nature paſſed in King James the 6th of his Reign, His Majeſties Royal Father, when Archbiſhops, Biſhops, &c. were oppoſed, but now they were governing and included, therefore they diſſented from that part; and being again commanded to ſay I, or no, the ſaid Nobles and others diſſented as formerly.

Amongſt the Peers that diſſented were John Earl of Rothes, John Earl of Caſſills, William Earl of Lothian, and the Lords Lindſey, Porplichin, Sinclar, Balmerino, Cooper, Teſter, and 4 more. The Paſſing of the Act concerning Eccleſiaſtical Habits, did much perplex the Diſſenting Lords and others, which occaſioned ſome of them to Devulge in Writing a Paper reflecting upon His Majeſty, (adjudged afterwards to be a Libel) wherein was contained this Reflection, how grievous a thing it was for a King in that place, by making of the Subjects Votes, to Over-awe his Parliament: And that the ſame was a breach of Priviledge, &c. This Writing, as afterwards appeared, was Drawn by one William Hagg, who fled for it, but being found in the Cuſtody of the Lord Balmerino, that Lord, by the inſtigation of Archbiſhop Spotſwood, and others of the Privy Council, was in a Court of his Peers found guilty of concealing Treaſon, and therefore condemned to loſe his Head, but afterwards pardoned by His Majeſty.

The Parliament being Diſſolved upon Friday the ſaid 28. day of June, the King ſtayed Saturday and Sunday, and obſerved the Diſſenters with an unfavourable Aſpect.

Upon Monday the 1. of July, the King takes his Progreſs to his Pallace at Linlithgowe. Tueſday the 2. to Strivling, being preſented with Plate by each Provoſt, one of whom being a Diſſenter, was not admitted to Kiſs his Hand.

An. 1633. Upon Wedneſday the 3*d* he went to Dumfermlin, and Thurſday the 4*th* to Falkland. Note, that the Nobility and Gentry of Fiffe had prepared to give a Noble Reception to His Majeſty, but many of them being Diſſenters, His Majeſty was pleaſed to take another way, and avoided them.

Friday and Saturday the 6. and 7. of July, the King hunted in his Park of Falkland, and there every Sunday, Maxwell Biſhop of Roſſe Preached before His Majeſty.

Munday the 8. the King went to St. Johnſton, and was nobly entertained by the Earl of Kinoul (then Lord High-Chancellor) that night at Supper, and the next day at Dinner, and returned from Scoon to Falkland.

Wedneſday the 10, the King with his Nobles and Retinue, took Boat at Brunt-Iſland to come to Leith (being 7 Miles over) in a calm Seaſon about the mid day. But preſently after the Boats put to Sea, aroſe a violent Storm and Tempeſt, (though none at Land) to the great hazard of His Majeſty, and many others; the King paſſing to a Ship, a Man of War of his in the Road, with much difficulty, weathered it, quit his former Boat, and took the Ship and Boat to Leith, and there Landed after great danger; one of the Boats in the Kings Preſence being over-ſet, or turned over, periſhed with the Kings Plate, and near 20 Perſons, of which number were one Lewis Somervell and Alexander Naper, who had the charge of the Silver Plate and Veſſels, and 3 Perſons were ſaved ſitting upon the Keile coming in to Shoar upmoſt.

11. Thurſday the 11 the King ſtaid at his Pallace of Hallyroodhouſe.

12. Upon Friday the 12 he went to Dalkeith, where he ſtayed that night.

13. Upon Saturday after Dinner, he went to Seaton-houſe, ſtayed that night and Sabbath-day.

15. Munday after Dinner he went from Seaton to Innerwicke, an Houſe of James Maxwell, after Earl of Dirlington, and was richly entertained.

16. Tueſday His Majeſty and Train went from Innerwicke to Barwick, &c.

Articles of Inquiry in the Viſitation of the Biſhop of Wincheſter.

IN the Month of June came forth in Print, Articles to be inquired of, by the Church-wardens and Sworn Men within the Dioceſs of Wincheſter, in the Primary Viſitation of the Right Reverend Father in God * Walter Lord Biſhop of Wincheſter, holden in the Year of Our Lord God 1633.

* Dr. Neal.

The Oath to be Adminiſtred to the Church-wardens and Sworn Men.

YOu ſhall Swear, That you and every of you, without all Affection, Favour, Hatred, hope of Reward and Gain, or fear of Diſpleaſure or Malice of any Perſon, ſhall Preſent all and every ſuch Perſon and Perſons of or within your Pariſh, who hath committed any Offence, Fault or Crime, or omitted any part of Duty, which be enjoyned to perform: Wherein you ſhall deal uprightly, and according to Truth; neither of Malice Preſenting any contrary to Truth, nor of Corrupt Affection ſparing to Preſent any, and to Conceal the Truth; having in this Action God before your Eyes, with an earneſt Zeal to maintain Truth. and ſuppreſs Vice. So Help you God, and the Contents of this Book.

Firſt, As to the Articles concerning the Church, they are to enquire, Whether they have the Book of Conſtitutions or Canons Eccleſiaſtical, and a Parchment Regiſter-Book, Book of Common-Prayer, and Book of Homilies, &c. And whether the Communion-Table be placed in ſuch convenient ſort within the ſaid Chancel or Church, as that the Miniſter may be beſt heard in his Prayer and Adminiſtration.

As to the Articles concerning the Clergy, Whether doth the Miniſter read the Conſtitutions ſet forth by His Majeſty, once every Year?

Whether the Miniſter or Preacher uſe to pray for the Kings Majeſty with his whole Title, as King of Great Brittain? And doth he in like manner pray for the Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops? And doth he obſerve all the Orders, Rites, and Ceremonies preſcribed in the Common-Prayer, and Adminiſtring the Sacrament? And whether doth the Miniſter receive the Sacrament, kneeling at the ſame, and Adminiſtreth to none but ſuch as do kneel? as by the 12*th* Canon is directed.

Whether hath the Miniſter admitted to the Communion any notorious Offenders or Schiſmaticks? contrary to the 26*th* and 27*th* Conſtitution. And whether Strangers of any other Pariſh do come often and commonly to your Church, from their own Pariſh Church? contrary to the 28*th* Canon. And whether doth the Miniſter uſe to Sign the Children with the Sign of the Croſs when they are Baptized? And whether is your Miniſter a Licenced Miniſter? if yea, then by whom. And whether doth the Miniſter wear the Surplus whilſt he is ſaying the Publick Prayers, and Adminiſtring the Sacraments? Whether doth the Miniſter Catechize and Inſtruct the Youth of Ignorant Perſons of your Pariſh in the Ten Commandments, &c. And whether he doth Solemnize Marriage, the Banes not being 3 ſeveral Sundays and Holidays firſt Publiſhed in time of Divine Service? And whether doth your Miniſter in the Rogation days uſe the Perambulation of the Circuit of the Pariſh? Whether doth the Miniſter every 6 Months Denounce in the Pariſh all ſuch as do perſevere in the Sentence of Excommunication, not ſeeking to be abſolved? or hath he admitted any Excommunicated Perſon into the Church without Certificate of Abſolution? Whether is your Miniſter a favourer of Recuſants, whereby he may be ſuſpected not to be ſincere in Religion? Whether is your Miniſter noted to be an incontinent Perſon, a Frequenter of Taverns, Alehouſes, a Common Gameſter, or a player of Dice, &c. With divers other Articles of Enquiry.

The reſt of the Articles are concerning School-maſters, Eccleſiaſtical Officers, Pariſhioners, and others of the Laity. But ſee them more at large in the Appendix; as alſo thoſe other Articles which other Biſhops in their ſeveral Dioceſſes did put forth after the firſt Metropolitical Viſitation in the Year 1634. and 1635. which were obſerved to be of a far higher Strain and Enquiry, than theſe of Wincheſter.

Star-Chamber. Blackball vers' Bullock & al'.

‘THe Defendant, Sir Edward Bullock, having a covetous deſire to encloſe a certain Common or Waſt-ground in Weſtbilne Com' Norfolke, containing about 1000 Acres, wherein the Plaintiff had Common of Paſture, gave out Speeches, That he would make the Plaintiff run the Country, if he would not ſell his Lands to the ſaid Defendant, for that then he could incloſe the ſaid Common, and would make him weary of his Leaſes if he would not yield them up, and would make him weary of Suits: And in purſuance thereof, one of the Defendants, who is fled, did ſet open a Gate of the Plaintiff, which before was ſtaked up, and broke divers Coppies in the Plaintiffs Hedges, ſo that his Cattle went into the ſaid Common, and then Sir Edward Sued the Plaintiff for that Treſpaſs, and forced him to 3 Tryals at Law for 3 Roods of Land before he would ſuffer him to enjoy them. And the Plaintiff having brought an Action to Tryal againſt Sir Edward, wherein he uſed the Teſtimony of 4 Witneſſes, the Defendant being diſcontented that the Verdict paſſed againſt him; ſwore he would be revenged on all the Rogues, the Plaintiffs Witneſſes, who teſtified againſt him. And in purſuance thereof, he afterwards ſent for one of them to his Houſe, and kept him in talk, and in the mean time cauſed the Defendant Boydon, and two other of his Servants, to hew and pull down his Houſe, there being no body left therein but a Child, who ran out naked, and the Plaintiff his Wife great with Child, and their Children were forced to lye in the Streets a night or two, none daring to take them into their houſes for fear of Sir Edward. And they being after received into a Houſe by the direction of a Juſtice, the ſaid Sir Edward did ſo threaten them in whoſe Houſe they were, that they for fear turned them out of doors, and all the Winter after they lay in an Out-houſe, where no fire could be kept, inſomuch that he, his Wife, and one Child periſhed and dyed. And the Defendant meeting another of the ſaid Witneſſes, beat her with a ſtick until ſhe was black and blew from the Waſt upwards, and not able to put on her Cloaths a month after: And threatned another of the Witneſſes to fire his Houſe over his head, or pull it down if he would not leave it. And the Defendant Taſſel, by colour of a ſuppoſed Warrant to Arreſt one Wales the Plaintiff, being accompanied with two others, did break open his doors, and pull him out of his Houſe, and kept him Priſoner 3 hours; and for theſe Offences they were all committed to the Fleet, Sir Edward Bullock fined 1000 l. Boydon 50 l. and Taſſel 50 l. Bullock to pay the Plaintiff 100 l. Damage, and out of that he to make ſome reparation to his Children whoſe Houſe was pulled down.

Oppreſſions by Suits.

Pulled down a Witneſſes Houſe in revenge.

23 Auguſt. 9 Car. 1633.

A Sentence in Star-Chamber, concerning the Soap-Patent.

‘WHereas His Majeſties Attorney General hath informed this Court, That the Kings moſt Excellent Majeſty, by his Highneſs's Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date at Weſtminſter the 17 day of December in the 7 Year of His Majeſties Reign for the Reaſons, Cauſes, and Conſiderations in the ſaid Letters Patents expreſſed, did give and grant to Roger Jones ſince deceaſed, and to Andrew Palmer Eſq; and alſo to Sir William Ruſſel Baronet, Sir Baſile Brooke, Sir Richard Weſton, Sir Edward Stradling, Sir Richard Bettiſon Knight, George Gage, Thomas Jones, Beverly Bretton, Thomas Ruſſel, Thomas Jennings, Thomas Hicks, and Albertus Belton Eſq; and to Robert Carver Gent. a Patent of Priviledge for the terme of 14 Years, for the ſole making of hard Sope and ſoft Sope, with ſuch Materials as by them have been newly Invented, and in ſuch manner as in the ſaid Letters Patents, and other Letters Patents, therein recited appeareth, and for the buying and repairing of Pot-Aſhes, and other Aſhes of Bean-ſtraw, Peaſe-ſtraw, Ferne, Kelpe, and other Vegitables to be found in His Majeſties other Dominions for the making of Soap, not formerly or ordinarily uſed or practiſed by others within the ſaid Realm, Dominions, and Town of Barwick, but by them newly invented and deviſed; and alſo of the uſing of the Aſſay-Glaſs for trying of their Lee: In and by which Letters Patents there was careful Proviſion made for the true making of the ſaid Soaps for the uſe of the Kings People, and for the ſearching and making thereof to diſtinguiſh the ſame from other Soaps, and for the ſelling of the ſame at and for reaſonable Prizes, as by the ſaid Letters Patents do at large appear. And His Majeſties ſaid Attorneys further informed this Court, That becauſe His Majeſty in his great Wiſdom foreſaw that without Government of that Trade it would ſoon fall to diſorder; therefore for the better regulating and ordering of the ſaid Works, His Majeſty did by other Letters Patents under the Great Seal of England, bearing Date at Weſtminſter the 20 day of January, in the 17 Year of His Majeſties Reign, incorporate divers Perſons of Principal Worth and Quality, who had been Adventurers in the ſaid Work by the Name of the Governours Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the Society of Soap-makers within the City of Weſtminſter, in the County of Middleſex, to have perpetual Succeſſion, and to them had given and granted divers Powers and Authorities, for the preventing of Frauds and Deceits and other Abuſes in that Trade and Manufactures; and afterwards by His Majeſties ſpecial Commandment ſignified by his Writ in that behalf, the ſaid Grant of Priviledge for making of Soap and Pot-Aſhes, with the Powers and Authorities of the ſaid Patentees named in the ſame Patent of the 17 of December, granted as aforeſaid, were by them aſſigned unto the ſaid Governours-Aſſiſtants, and Fellows, and their Succeſſors; and in reſpect thereof the ſaid Governours-Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the ſaid Society, by Indenture

An. 1633.

‘denture bearing Date the 3d day of May in the eighth Year of His Majeſties Reign, did covenant, promiſe and agree to and with Our ſaid Sovereign Lord the King, his Heirs and Succeſſors, to do and perform divers things in that Indenture particularly mentioned, for and concerning the perfecting of the ſaid Work, and the furniſhing of the ſaid Kingdom with ſufficient Quantities of ſweet and good Soap, and to ſell the ſame at and for reaſonable Prices, not exceeding the Price of three pence the Pound, which was a cheaper Rate than other ſweet and Merchantable Soap was uſually ſold for. And His Majeſties ſaid Attorney General further informed this Court, That when His Majeſty had provided for the ſufficient quantity and reaſonable Prices of the ſaid Soaps, out of his Princely care for the good of his People, foreſeeing that the goodneſs of the ſaid Soaps may ſoon decline and decay, unleſs by the continual care and pains of ſome Truſty and Diligent Officer, a watchful Eye were had to ſearch and try all the Soaps that ſhould be made and uttered, to ſee that the ſame were anſwerable in goodneſs to the firſt Pattern or Standard; His Majeſty, by other Letters Patents bearing Date the 8th day of June in the Eighth Year of His Majeſties Reign, did ordain, conſtitute and appoint, That for ever then after there ſhould be an Office. And did thereby, for him, his Heirs and Succeſſors, erect, create, and make an Office to be and to be called the Office for keeping the Patterns, and making of the Aſſay of Soaps to be made by the ſaid Governour, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows, who ſhall be called the Aſſay-Maſter for Soaps to be made by the ſaid Governour, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows, and thereby did appoint in what manner the ſaid Officer having firſt taken a Corporal Oath to that purpoſe, ſhould execute the ſaid Office without any trouble or charge to His Majeſties Subjects which ſhould buy the ſaid Soaps. And His Majeſties ſaid Attorney further informed this Court, That His Majeſty in his Royal Care for the Wealth and Proſperity of his loving Subjects, intending to advance the Native Commodities of this Realm, the ſetting of his own People on work, and the ſaving of the Expence of the Treaſure of this Kingdom, which unthriftily and unneceſſarily was ſpent in buying and importing of forrein Materials, for the making of Soap from other Kingdoms, to the inriching of them, and the impoveriſhing of His Majeſties own Kingdom, to a great yearly Sum, and purpoſing to prevent, or ſeverely to puniſh all Frauds or Deceits in the making of Soap with Forreign or Vnſweet Materials, and the Exceſſive Rates in the ſale of Soaps, as formerly it was practiſed by the Sope-boilers, being no Body-Politique, nor Governed by any good Orders or Conſtitutions regulating their Trade, but being a few ſingular Perſons, who took the advantage to inrich themſelves to the wrong and prejudice of His Majeſty, and his Loving Subjects in general, who had no ordinary means to right themſelves therein, to the end that all his Loving Subjects might take notice of this his Princely Care and Providence for them herein by his Highneſs's Proclamation, given at the Court at Greenwich, the 28th day of June in the ſaid Eighth Year of His Majeſties Reign, did ſtraitly charge and command as well the ſaid Governour, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the ſaid Society, who had formerly bound themſelves by Covenant with his Majeſty to a Regularity in that behalf, as all others not being of that Society which ſhould then after make any Soapes, that they ſhould uſe no other Oyl in making that Soap but Oyl-Olive and Rape-Oyl, as had been long ſince decreed by the

'Maior and Aldermen of London, that by that means the Soap might be 'Good, Sweet and Serviceable Soap, according to the Patterns delivered.

After the Kings arrival at London from Scotland, His Majeſty on the 13*th* of Auguſt thought fit to prevent abuſes growing by the unordered Retailing of Tobacco, taking notice to his Subjects, that the Plant or Drugg called Tobacco, ſcarce known to this Nation in former times, was in this age uſually brought into this Realm in ſmall quantities as Medicine, and ſo uſed, but in proceſs of time to ſatisfie the inordinate Appetite of a great number of Men and Women, it hath been brought in great quantities, and taken for Wantonneſs and Exceſs, and therefore His Majeſty thinks of ſome means for the preventing of the evil conſequence of this immoderate uſe thereof; is therefore reſolved to reduce the Vending, Selling and Uttering of Tobacco by Retail into ſome good Order, and to that purpoſe gives ſeveral Rules and Directions in this Proclamation, that none do ſell the ſame, but ſuch as ſhall receive Licence.

Oatlands Auguſt. 22.

Alſo at the ſame time His Majeſty took care for the Uſe of the Bow and the Pike together in Military Diſcipline, giving notice to the People, That in former times Bowes and Arrowes have been found ſerviceable Weapons for War, whereby great and victorious Conqueſts have been gotten. By ſundry Statutes, the uſe thereof hath been enjoyned, which Statutes are ſtill in Force; the King expecting that his Subjects conform themſelves thereunto, knowing the excerciſe of ſhooting to be a means to preſerve Health, Strength, and Agility of Body; the King hath therefore under the Great Seal, Authorized William Nead, an antient Archer, who hath preſented to the King and Council a War-like Invention with the Uſe of the Bow and Pike together, Requiring that the Trained Bands be Inſtructed by the ſaid Nead.

In the beginning of October there were complaints made to the Council concerning Ales and Revels upon the Lord's Day in Somerſetſhire, which gave occaſion to arraign an Order made by the Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon and Baron Denham in their Circuits in that County, which Order was to this purpoſe,

An Order to ſuppreſs Ales and Revels in Somerſetſhire.

'WHereas divers Orders have been made heretofore by the 'Judges of Aſſize, for the ſuppreſſing of all Ales and Revels, the ſame Order is now confirmed at the Aſſizes, and again ordered by the Court in regard of the Infinite Number of Inconveniences, daily ariſing by means of Revels, that ſuch Revels, Church-Ales, Clerk-Ales, and all other Publick Ales be henceforth utterly 'ſuppreſſed, and to the end this may be obſerved, it is further Ordered that the Clerk of the Aſſizes ſhall leave Copies hereof, with 'the Miniſter of every Pariſh, within his ſeveral Hundred, and ſhall 'give a Note under his Hand, that he ſhall Publiſh it yearly within 'the Pariſh the firſt Sunday in February, and likewiſe the two Sundays before Eaſter yearly.

The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury hearing of this Proceeding of the Judges in Church Affairs, and impoſing upon the Miniſters to Publiſh their Order in the Pariſh Church without the Conſent of the Biſhop of that Dioceſs, complained thereof to the King, and the Chief Juſtice was Commanded to attend the Board, where after the Arch-Biſhop had made his Complaint againſt the Lord Chief Juſtice, he was Commanded to Revoke the former Order made at the Aſſizes againſt Revels, &c.

The Chief Juſtice Replied, that the Order was made at the Requeſt of the Juſtices of the Peace in the County, with the General Conſent of the whole Bench, and upon view of divers antient Preſidents in that kind; but neverthelſs he was Commanded to Revoke his Order.

Upon which Occaſion the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, on the 4th of October writ a Letter to the Biſhop of Bathe and Wells concerning the ſaid Revels, to this Effect.

A Letter from the Biſhop of Canterbury to the Biſhop of Bath and Wells about Wakes and Revels.

That there hath been of late ſome Noiſe in Somerſetſhire about the Feaſts of the Dedications of Churches, commonly called the Wakes; and it ſeems the Judges of Aſſize formerly made an Order to prohibit them, and cauſed it to be Publiſhed in ſome, or moſt of the Churches; thereby the Miniſter, without my Lord the Biſhop's Conſent or Privity, the pretence of this hath been, that ſome diſorders derogatory from Gods Service, and the Government of the Commonwealth are committed at thoſe times: by which Argument, any thing that is abuſed may quite be taken away. It ſeems there hath been ſome heat ſtruck in the Country about this, by the carriage of the Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon, at the two laſt Aſſizes, eſpecially the laſt, with which His Majeſty is not well pleaſed. And for the preventing of Outrages, or Diſorders, at thoſe Feaſts, no man can be more careful than his Majeſty; but he conceives, and that very rightly, that all theſe may and ought to be prevented by the Care of the Juſtices of Peace, and leave the Feaſts themſelves to be kept, for the Neighbourly meeting, and Recreation of the People, of which he would not have them debarred under any frivolous pretences. And further, His Majeſty hath been lately informed by men of good Place in that County, that the Humouriſts increaſe much in thoſe Parts, and unites themſelves by banding againſt the Feaſts; which courſe, as His Majeſty no way likes, ſo he hath been informed alſo for this laſt Year, ſince warning was given, there have not been any noted Diſorders at any of thoſe Feaſts kept in thoſe Parts; yet for His better ſatisfaction, He hath Commanded me to require you to inform your ſelf, and give a ſpeedy account how theſe Feaſts have been ordered, &c.

The Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon revokes his Orders about Ales and Revels.

The Lord Chief Juſtice Richardſon after his Reproof at the Council Table, did at the next Aſſizes inform the Juſtices, Grand Jury, and Country, that thoſe Good Orders made by him and his Brother Denham for ſuppreſſing unruly Wakes and Revels, wherein he thought he had done God, the King, and the Country good Service, are to be revoked, and that ſome ill-affected Perſons had miſinformed His Majeſty concerning this Order, who had given him expreſs Command to reverſe it, being not made by himſelf alone, but with the joint conſent of the whole Bench; ſo he declared to the Bench, that in purſuance of Command he did as much as in him lay revoke the ſaid Order, and cauſed the Clerk of the Aſſizes to enter the Order verbatim, reciting former Orders made upon that occaſion, and declared them to be void and null, and that all perſons may freely uſe Recreations at ſuch meetings.

The Juſtices of Peace troubled at the Revocation.

The Juſtices of Peace being troubled at the Revocation of theſe Orders, drew up a Petition to the King ſhewing the great Inconveniences that would befall the County if theſe Meetings and Aſſemblies of Church-Ales, Bid-Ales and Clerk-Ales, condemned by the Laws ſhould now be ſet up again: which Petition was Subſcribed by John Lord Paulet, Sir William Portman, Sir John Stowell, Sir Ralph Hopton, Sir Francis Popham, Sir Edward Rodney, Sir Francis Doddington, Sir. Jo. Horner, Edward Paulet, William Baſſet, George Speke, John Windham, Thomas Lutterell, William Walrone, and divers others, but before this Petition was delivered to the King, it was prevented by the coming forth of the Kings Declaration concerning Lawful Sports, His Majeſty giving this enſuing Warrant for the ſame.

Charles Rex,

Canterbury, ſee that our Declaration concerning Recreations on the Lords Day after Evening Prayer, be Printed: And accordingly on the 18*th* of October this Year it came forth in Print, and was to this Effect.

The Kings Majeſties Declaration to his Subjects concerning Lawful Sports to be Uſed, iſſued forth the 18*th* of October 1633.

That King James of Bleſſed Memory, in his return from Scotland, coming through Lancaſhire, found that his Subjects were debarred from Lawful Recreations, upon Sundays after Evening Prayers ended, and upon Holy days. And he prudently conſidered, that if theſe times were taken from them, the meaner Sort, who labour hard all the Week, ſhould have no Recreations at all, to refreſh their Spirits. And after His return, He further ſaw, that His Loyal Subjects in all other parts of His Kingdom, did ſuffer in the ſame kind, though perhaps not in the ſame Degree: and did therefore in His Princely Wiſdom, publiſh a Declaration to all his Loving Subjects, concerning Lawful Sports to be Uſed at ſuch times, which was Printed and Publiſhed by His Royal Commandment in the Year 1618. in the Tenor which hereafter followeth.

‘WHereas, upon His Majeſties return the laſt Year out of Scotland, he did publiſh his Pleaſure, touching the Recreations of His People in thoſe Parts, under his Hand. For ſome Cauſes Him thereunto moving, hath thought good to Command theſe His Directions then given in Lancaſhire, with a few words thereunto added, and moſt appliable to theſe parts of the Realmes, to be publiſhed to all his Subjects.

‘Whereas he did juſtly in his Progreſs through Lanchaſhire, rebuke ſome Puritans and Preciſe People, and took order that the like unlawful carriage, ſhould not be uſed by any of them hereafter, in the prohibiting and unlawful puniſhing of his good People for uſing their Lawful Recreations, and Honeſt Exerciſes upon Sundays, and other Holy days, after the Afternoon Sermon or Service, His Majeſty hath now found that two ſorts of People wherewith that Country is much infected, viz. Papiſts and Puritans, hath maliciouſly traduced and calumniated thoſe his Juſt and Honourable

'Proceedings: And therefore leſt his Reputation might upon the one ſide (though innocently) have ſome Aſperſion laid upon it, and that upon the other Part, his good People in that Country be miſled by the miſtaking and miſinterpretation of his meaning, His Majeſty hath therefore thought good hereby to clear and make his Pleaſure to be manifeſted to all his good People in thoſe Parts.

'It is true, that at his firſt entry to this Crown, and Kingdom, he was informed, and that too truly, that his County of Lancaſhire abounded more in Popiſh Recuſants, than any Countie of England, and thus hath ſtill continued ſince, to his great regret, with little amendment, ſave that, now of late, in his laſt riding through his ſaid Country, hath found both by the Report of the Judges, and of the Biſhop of that Dioceſs, that there is ſome amendment now daily beginning, which is no ſmall contentment to His Majeſty.

'The report of this growing amendment amongſt them, made His Majeſty the more ſorry, when with his own Ears he heard the general Complaint of his People; that they were barred from all Lawful Recreations, and Exerciſe upon the Sundays after Noon, after the ending of all Divine Service, which cannot but produce two Evils: The one the hindring of the Converſion of many, whom their Prieſts will take occaſion hereby to vex, perſwading them that no honeſt Mirth or Recreation is Lawful or Tolerable in Religion, which the King profeſſeth, and which cannot but breed a great diſcontentment in his Peoples hearts, eſpecially of ſuch as are peradventure upon the point of turning: The other Inconvenience is, that this Prohibition barreth the Common and Meaner ſort of People from Uſing ſuch Exerciſes, as may make their Bodys more able for War, when His Majeſty or his Succeſſors, ſhall have occaſion to uſe them. And in place thereof ſets up Tipling and filthy Drunkenneſs, and breeds a number of idle and diſcontented Speeches in their Ale-houſes. For when ſhall the Common-people have leave to exerciſe, if not upon the Sundays and Holy-days, ſeeing they muſt apply their labour, and win their Living in all Working-days?

'The Kings expreſs pleaſure therefore is, that the Laws of this Kingdom, and Conons of the Church be as well obſerved in that County, as in all other places of this his Kingdom. And on the other Part, that no Lawful Recreation ſhall be barred to his Good People, which ſhall not tend to the Breach of the aforeſaid Laws, and Canons of his Church: which to expreſs more Particularly, His Majeſties Pleaſure is, That the Biſhops, and all other inferior Churchmen, and Church-wardens, ſhall for their Parts be Careful and Diligent, both to inſtruct the Ignorant, and convince and reform them that are miſled in Religion, preſenting them that will not Conform themſelves, but obſtinately ſtand out to the Judges and Juſtices: whom he likewiſe commands to put the Laws in due Execution againſt them.

'His Majeſties Pleaſure likewiſe is, That the Biſhop of that Dioceſs, take the like ſtrict Order with all the Puritanes and Preciſians within the ſame, either conſtrain them to Conform themſelves, or to leave the Country according to the Laws of this ‘Kingdom, and Canons of this Church, and ſo to ſtrike equally on both hands, againſt the Contemners of his Authority, and Adverſaries of the Church; and as for his good Peoples lawful Recreation, his Pleaſure likewiſe is, that after the end of Divine Service, his good People be not diſturbed, letted or diſcouraged from any Lawful Recreation, ſuch as Dauncing, either Men or Women; Archery for Men, Leaping, Vaulting, or any other ſuch harmleſs Recreation, nor from having of May-Games, Whitſon-Ales, and Morice-Dances, and the ſetting up of May-Poles, and other Sports therewith uſed: ſo as the ſame be had in due and convenient time, without impediment or neglect of Divine Service. And that Women ſhall have leave to carry Ruſhes to the Church for the decoring of it, according to their old Cuſtom; but withall His Majeſty doth here account ſtill as Prohibited all unlawful Games to be Uſed upon Sundays only, as Bear and Bull-baitings, Interludes and at all times in the meanner ſort of People by Law prohibited, Bowling.

‘And likewiſe barrs from this Benefit and Liberty, all ſuch known Recuſants, either men or women, as will abſtain from coming to Church or Divine Service, being therefore Unworthy of any Lawful Recreation after the ſaid Service, that will not firſt come to the Church, and ſerve God: Prohibiting in like ſort the ſaid Recreations to any that, though Conform in Religion, are not preſent in the Church at the Service of God, before their going to the ſaid Recreations. His Pleaſure likewiſe is, that they to whom it belongeth in Office, ſhall preſent and ſharply puniſh all ſuch, as in abuſe of this his Liberty, will Uſe theſe Exerciſes before the end of all Divine Services for that day. And he doth likewiſe ſtraightly Command, that every Perſon ſhall reſort to his own Pariſh Church to hear Divine Service, and each Pariſh by it ſelf to uſe the ſaid Recreation after Divine Service. Prohibiting likewiſe any offenſive Weapons to be Carried, or Uſed in the ſaid times of Recreation: And his pleaſure is, that this his Declaration ſhall be publiſhed by order from the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, through all the Pariſh Churches, and that both the Judges of the Circuits, and the Juſtices of the Peace be informed thereof.

Given at the Manner of Greenwich the 24*th* day of May, in the ſixteenth Year of His Majeſties Reign, of England, France and Ireland, and of Scotland the one and fiftieth.

N*ow out of a like Pious Care for the ſervice of* God, and for ſuppreſſing of any Humours, that oppoſe truth, and for the Eaſe, Comfort and Recreation of his Well-deſerving People, His Majeſty doth Ratifie and Publiſh this his Bleſſed Fathers Declaration: the rather, becauſe of late in ſome Counties of this Kingdom, His Majeſty finds that under pretence of taking away abuſes, there hath been a General forbidding, not only of ordinary Meetings, but of the Feaſts of the Dedication of the Churches, commonly called Wakes. Now His Majeſties expreſs Will and Pleaſure is, That theſe Feaſts, with others, ſhall be obſerved, and that his Juſtices of the Peace, in their ſeveral Diviſions, ſhall look to it, both that all Diſorders there, may be prevented or puniſhed, and that all Neighbourhood and Freedom, with Manlike and Lawful Exerciſes be uſed. And His Majeſty further Commands all Juſtices of Aſſize in their ſeveral Circuits to ſee, that no man do trouble or moleſt any of his Loyal and Dutiful People, in or for their Lawful Recreations, having firſt done their Duty to God, and continuing in Obedience to His Majeſties Laws. And for this His Majeſty Commands all his Judges, Juſtices of Peace, as well within Liberties as without, Majors, Bayliffs, Conſtables, and other Officers, to take notice of, and to ſee obſerved, as they tender his Diſpleaſure. And doth further Will, that publication of this his Command be made by Order from the Biſhops, through all the Pariſh Churches of their ſeveral Dioceſſes reſpectively.

Given at the Palace of Weſtminſter, the 18*th* day of October, in the Ninth Year of his Reign.

GOD ſave the KING.

As concerning the Effects of this Declaration, we ſhall have occaſion in its proper time and place, to make mention of many particulars wherein it proved a ſnare to many Miniſters very Conformable to the Church of England, becauſe they refuſed to read the ſame publickly in the Church as was required, for upon this many were Suſpended and others Silenced from Preaching.

Term. MICHAELIS.

Anno 1633.

About this time a Decree was made in the High Court of Star-Chamber, in Michaelmas Term, after Conſultation had among the Judges, and Certificate of their Opinions in divers things, &c.

And alſo a Confirmation of the Decree by His Sacred Majeſty, together with His Majeſties Command, that the ſame ſhould be Printed, Publiſhed and put in due Execution.

Here followeth the Decree and the Judges Opinions.

A Decree of Star-Chamber.

Charles, by the Grace of God King of England, Scotland, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and to whom theſe Our Letters Patents ſhall come, Greeting.

'Know ye, that we have ſeen a certain Decree made by Our 'Council, in Our Court of Star-Chamber the 13*th* day of No'vember, in the 9*th* Year of Our Reign, which remaineth of record 'among the Records and Remembrances of that Court, contain'ing divers Ordinances; which Decree followeth in theſe Words.

'His Majeſties Attorny General did this day Inform this Honou'rable Court, that it having been preſented to the Lords of His 'Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy Council, that as well the Prizes 'of all ſorts of Victuals, as alſo of Horſe-meat, were grown to ex'ceſſive Rates; and that Inſtance thereof was given in particular 'by his Majeſties Officers of the Green-Gloath, in ſeveral proviſions 'made for His Majeſties Houſe, whereby the Weekly Accounts of 'the Houſhould were much increaſed.

'It was thought fit and ordered, that His Majeſties Attorney Ge'neral, as well upon Conference with ſuch of the Judges, and ſuch 'of His Majeſties Learned Council as he ſhould think fit; as up'on peruſal of all ſuch Laws and Statutes, as are in force concern'ing the ſettling of Prizes of Victuals and Horſe-meat, ſhould make 'Report unto the Board of his Opinion concerning the ſame, as by 'their Lordſhips Order of the 9*th* of October laſt paſt appeareth: 'and declared that according to the ſaid Order, he had at ſeveral 'days attended His Majeſties Juſtices of the Kings Bench and Com'mon Pleas, and Barons of the Exchequer, who made Certificate of 'their Opinion in Writing ſubſcribed by them, which Certificate 'the ſaid Attorney preſented unto this Court, and followeth in 'theſe Words.

Mr. Attorney,

An. 1633.

'Mr. Attorney We ſend you here incloſed our Opinions of theſe 'things, which were propounded, and thought fit to be re'formed at our laſt General Meeting.

Thomas Richardſon.	George Crook.
Robert Heath.	Thomas Trevors.
Humphry Davenport.	George Vernon.
William Jones.

'Touching Victuals, we find Ingroſſing to be a great occaſion to 'raiſe the Prizes thereof, an offence utterly againſt the Common-'Law: and amongſt Ingroſſers we find the Chandlers to be great 'Offenders in Buying great quantities of all ſorts of Grain brought 'unto, or towards the Market.

'We alſo find that Taverns are of late exceedingly increaſed in 'their number, in and about London; and that they Dreſs Fleſh and 'Fiſh, and utter the ſame at exceſſive Prizes, to the increaſe of Ri'ot and other Abuſes; whereas by the Law, as Taverners they are 'to ſell nothing but Wine, unleſs it be Bread to eat therewith.

'We find that Bakers do ſell their Bread at 14, 15, and 16 to the 'Dozen, where they ſhould keep the Aſſize, and not ſell above 12, 'or 13 at the moſt to the Dozen; and this pincheth the Poor.

'We wiſh that Ordinaries in and about London may be regulated 'to a convenient ſum, and not to exceed two ſhillings for the Meal: 'and we wiſh that both Taverners and Ordinary-Keepers may be 'wholly reſtrained from ſuffering unlawful Games in their Houſes: 'for we find that this draws unthrifty Gueſts unto them, and is an 'apparent means to overthrow the Fortunes of many Gentlemen 'and Citizens.

'Touching Horſe-meat, upon hearing of divers Juſtices of Peace 'of Middleſex and Surrey, and of divers Inn-keepers of London, Weſt'minſter, Middleſex and Surrey; We are of Opinion that the pre'ſent Prizes of Hay and Oats conſidered, ſix Pence day and Night 'for Hay for a Horſe, and for Oats ſix Pence a Peck Wincheſter 'meaſure, is a Competent Rate to be given to Inn-holders, and to 'take nothing for Litter; and if they exceed theſe Rates, we hold 'them puniſhable by the Law, as for exacting Exceſſive and Un'meaſurable Prizes. For Horſes which come to Inns in the day'time, we conceive it to be a convenient Rate for the Inn-keeper to 'take a Penny for a Horſe, for his Stable-room only, the Horſe not 'being Unbridled; if he be Unbridled and have Hay, and go away 'the ſame day, to take two Pence the Horſe, and no more.

'We find that of late Years, there are many petty Oſtries ſet up in 'and about London, which entertain Horſes in by-corners, and receive 'Stable-Horſes, and the Horſes of ſuch who are perſons ſuſpected, 'and theſe have no Lodging for Travellers. By theſe Oſtries great 'Inconveniences happen to the Subject in general, and much preju'dice to the Inn-holders in particular, who by Law are bound to 'Lodge their Gueſts, and to be anſwerable for the Goods brought 'into their Charge.

9 Caroli.

'We find alſo that there are divers, who unlawfully ingroſs 'great quantity of Hay to ſell again: Theſe are Ingroſſers puniſhable by the Common-Law; and humbly moved this Honourable 'Court, that the ſame might be here recorded; and that the Court 'would be pleaſed for the good of His Majeſty's people, to Decree 'and Command that the particulars thereof be ſtrictly obſerved. 'Whereupon this Honourable Court taking the ſame into their ſerious Conſideration, hath ordered, that the Certificate be Recorded in this Honourable Court; and hath Decreed,

'Firſt, For that it is notoriouſly known, that Ingroſſing is a 'great occaſion to raiſe the prices of Victuals, and alſo of Hay; 'and Ingroſſing to inhance prices is puniſhable, not only by the 'Statutes, but alſo by the Common Laws of the Realm; His Majeſties Juſtices of the Benches at Weſtminſter, and Barons of the Exchequer, the Juſtices of Aſſize and Oyer and Terminer, and Juſtices 'of Peace in their ſeveral places, are required to cauſe diligent inquiry to be made of all Ingroſſers of all ſorts of Victuals and Hay, 'and ſee the Delinquents herein be ſeverely puniſhed.

'And His Majeſties Attorney General is likewiſe Commanded, 'to cauſe ſuch of them as ſhall be brought to his notice, to be informed againſt in this Honourable Court, that of them Example 'may be made to deter others from the like Offence.

'And it is Decreed, that after publication of this Decree in 'London, no Chandler preſume to buy Corn, Grain, Meal, or Flowre 'to ſell again, either in Market, or out of Market.

'And this Court concurring in Opinion with the ſaid Reverend 'Judges; and conſidering the great Exceſs and Riot, that is occaſioned by preparing and ſelling of Victuals in Taverns; and how 'the prices of ſundry ſorts of Viands are hereby increaſed; hath 'Decreed, that no Taverner or Vintner, ſelling Wine by Retail, 'do hereafter ſell, or make ready for ſale, any ſort of Fleſh or Fiſh, 'or other Victuals ſave Bread; nor to defraud this Ordinance, do 'by himſelf, or any other ſet up, or cauſe, or procure to be ſet up 'the Trade of a Cook within the ſame Houſe, or in any Shop or 'Room thereunto belonging, or in any Houſe thereto near adjacent; 'nor permit or ſuffer any Fleſh, Fiſh, or other Victual, except Bread, 'as aforeſaid, to be brought into his Houſe to be there eaten by 'any of his Gueſts.

'And the Court taking into Conſideration, how the Poor are 'oppreſſed and pinched, when Bakers do ſell their Bread to thoſe 'that vend the ſame by Retail, at the rates of more than twelve to 'the Dozen, in that the weight is abated in every Loaf; and the 'Buyer being ſometimes but a Paſſenger, is not able to make Complaint of the Baker, whom he knoweth not: It is therefore likewiſe 'Ordered and Decreed, that no Baker ſhall ſell any Bread at other 'rate than 12, or 13 at the moſt to the Dozen.

'And further it is Decreed, that none that ſhall keep Ordinary-Tables, or other Victualing-Tables, ſhall take more of the Gueſts 'than after the rate of two ſhillings the man for the Meal, nor more 'than eight Pence for each Servant attending his Maſter; and 'that nothing be taken above that rate for Wine, or other 'thing, or under colour thereof, whereby the true intent of 'this Decree may be deluded, or defrauded. And that none of ‘them, or Taverners, or other Victualers, keep or ſuffer to be uſed Games of Dice, Cards, Tables, or other unlawful Games in their Houſes, wherein this Court declareth the Licenſes given by the Groom-Porter of His Majeſties Houſe, or others, for Licenſing or Permitting any of the ſaid Games, are not of validity to excuſe the Offenders.

‘Concerning Horſe-meat, For that upon hearing of the ſaid Juſtices of the Peace, and Inn-keepers, the preſent Prices conſidered, the Rates before ſpecified are Competent;

‘It is for the preſent Ordered and Decreed, that no Inn-keeper, or Oſtler within the Cities of London or Weſtminſter, or in any place within the diſtance of ten miles from either of thoſe Cities, the Suburbs, or Liberties of either of them, ſhall take above ſix Pence for a Horſe ſtanding in his Stable at Hay, a day and a night; nor more than ſix Pence for a Peck of Oats, of the Meaſure commonly called Wincheſter-Meaſure, without taking any thing for Litter, nor more than a Penny for ſtanding of a Horſe in his Stable a day without Meat, nor above two Pence for a Horſe ſtanding at Hay in the Day, and going away before Night.

‘And that no Inn-keeper ſhall exceed thoſe Rates in any part of this Realm; and where Grain and Hay are ſold at leſſer Prices, there the Rates and Prices ſhall be accordingly. And this Ordinance ſhall continue, until in the County of Middleſex it ſhall be made to appear to the Juſtices of the Kings Bench, and in other Counties and places, to the Juſtices of Peace there; that becauſe of the Increaſe of Prices in the parts adjoyning, greater Rates are neceſſarily to be permitted: and thereupon other Rates ſhall from time to time be ſet; which being ſet, are hereby Commanded and Injoyned to be ſtrictly and duly obſerved, until the ſame by like Authority ſhall be altered.

‘And to the end that there may be from time to time, moderate Rates and Prices for Hay, and Grain of all ſorts, taken by Inn-Keepers and Oſtlers, of Paſſengers and their Gueſts; His Majeſties Juſtices of the Kings Bench are deſired, and the Juſtices of the Peace of other Counties and Places are required yearly, and more often if there ſhall be occaſion, to make diligent inquiry of Hay and other Horſe-meat, and to make Declaration in Writing fixed in publick places, what Prices and Rates for Hay, and other Horſe-meat are allowed to be taken by Inn-keepers, which the ſaid Inn-Keepers and Oſtlers are Commanded to obſerve.

‘And if any of them ſhall preſume to offend therein, that diligent inquiry be made of them; that they being preſented, may without Connivance receive ſevere puniſhment as oppreſſors of His Majeſties people, by taking exceſſive Prices.

‘Moreover, the Court conſidering the great inconveniences that do ariſe by the number of petty Hoſtries and Oſtlers, that keep Stables for Horſes without Lodging for Gueſts; not liable, nor able to make ſatisfaction for Goods under their Cuſtody, that ſhall be ſtolen or imbezeled: yet taking conſideration of their Poverty, and that it would tend to their undoing, if they ſhould be ſuppreſſed, before ſuch time as the ſtore they have already provided, ſhall be ſpent; the Juſtices of the Peace of the City of London, Suburbs and Liberties thereof, the City of Weſtminſter and ‘Burrough of Southwark, and of the Counties of Middleſex and Surrey, are required with all convenient ſpeed, to make inquiry of all ſuch petty Oſtries within the ſaid Cities, Burroughs, Suburbs, Liberties, and all places not diſtant above two miles from ſome part thereof, and what Proviſion of Hay, Oats and Provender remaineth in their hands unſpent; and to Command them not to make any farther Proviſion.

‘And after that which is remaining in their hands ſhall be ſpent, no longer to uſe or keep ſuch Oſtries.

‘And it is Decreed by this Court, that none after that time ſhall keep, or uſe any ſuch Oſtries.

‘And to the end, that notice may be taken of this Decree by all thoſe whom it may concern; and that none may excuſe himſelf upon pretence of being ignorant of the Contents thereof;

‘It is Ordered, that the ſame be publiſhed in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and in the ſeveral Counties of this Realm, at Aſſizes, Seſſions, and other places of publick Aſſemblies.

‘And all they to whom the execution thereof pertaineth are required, that they ſee the ſame put in due execution.

‘Know ye, that we taking into Our Conſideration, that the ſaid Decree was made upon grave and ſad Advice, and upon the Certificate of Our Judges, and that the ſame is Juſt and Neceſſary to be obſerved, have Approved the ſame Decree, and do Ratifie and Confirm the ſame: and the Neceſſity of theſe Times requiring it,

‘We do Command, that the ſame by all thoſe whom it concerneth be obeyed and put inexecution, under the pains to be inflicted upon the Contemners of Our Command, and the Decrees of that Court.

‘And to the end that all our Loving Subjects may be participants of the good thereof, and may complain of thoſe things wherein they ſhall be grieved, contrary to the tenor of the ſaid Decree, and of thoſe that in diſobedience ſhall contemn, or neglect the due obſervance thereof;

‘We do Command Our Printer, that he forthwith cauſe theſe Preſents to be Printed and Diſperſed into the ſeveral Counties of this Realm with expedition; ſo that in every of thoſe Counties, the ſame may be publiſhed at the general Seſſion of the Peace, to be holden next after the Feaſt of the Epiphanie now next coming, that Our People of thoſe Counties may take notice thereof.

‘And we do Command the Juſtices of the Peace, that at their ſaid Seſſions in every of the ſaid Counties, the ſame be openly read: and we do require Our Council in our Court of Star-Chamber, the Juſtices of our Benches, Barons of Our Exchequer, Juſtices of Aſſize and Oyer and Terminer, and Juſtices of the Peace; that againſt all thoſe that ſhall offend againſt the ſaid Decree, they proceed without Connivence, as they tender Our Service and the good of Our People.

‘Whereof We have cauſed theſe Our Letters to be made Patents.

‘THe Defendant, Sir Henry Bealing, together with one Macrobin deceaſed, who bare malice to the Relators Father, and vow'd to be reveng'd of him, falſely informed the Juſtices of Aſſize, That the ſaid Buſhen the Father had murdered his Wife, and thereupon he was bound over to anſwer it at the Aſſizes; and the Grand Jury, upon the Bill of Indictment againſt him, return'd Ignoramus twice: and the Juſtices of Aſſiſe having, for diſcovery of the Truth, examined divers Witneſſes, they gave direction to acquit him by Proclamation; which the Defendant Bealing perceiving, and being incenſed againſt Buſhen for ſome words that he uſed then in Court, he did again preſs and procure the Lord Angier, then Judge of Aſſiſe, to bind the ſaid Buſhen over again unto the next Aſſiſes, and ſaid he would be bound to Proſecute, and find other Evidence againſt him for the King: and between that and the Aſſiſes Bealing vow'd, he would ſpend all the Friends, and Means he had, but he would have Buſhen hang'd; and alſo ſaid he would follow him to Hell-gates, but he would hang him. And to effect that his Deviliſh Purpoſe, he earneſtly ſollicited the Lord Viſcount Loftus, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, to interpoſe therein, and give his Aſſiſtance, telling him great advantage would be made thereby, for that Buſhen was a Man of a great Eſtate; which the Lord Loftus refuſing, Bealing ſent a Servant to Welden, then High-Sheriff of the County, to tell him, that if he would joyn with him the ſaid Bealing to Convict Buſhen, it ſhould be worth him 5000 l. And before the Aſſiſes, Bealing told the Lord Loftus he had gotten a Man of Power that would proſecute it with effect. October the 8*th* 1633. The Articles for his Majeſties Royal Chappel in Scotland.

Charles Rex.

Our expreſs Will and Pleaſure is, That the Dean of Our Chappel, that now is, and his Succeſſors, ſhall be Aſſiſtant to the Right Reverend Father in God, the Arch-Biſhop of St. Andrews, at the Coronation, ſo often as it ſhall happen.

That the Book of the Form of Our Coronation lately uſed, be put in a little Box, and laid into a Standard, and committed to the Care of the Dean of the Chappel ſucceſſively.

That there be Prayers twice a day, with the Quire, as well in Our abſence, as otherwiſe, according to the Engliſh Liturgie, till ſome Courſe be taken for making one, that may fit the Cuſtom and Conſtitution of that Church.

That the Dean of the Chappel look carefully, that all that receive the Bleſſed Sacrament there, receive it Kneeling; and that there be a Communion held in that Our Chappel the firſt Sunday of every Month.

That the Dean of Our Chappel that now is, and ſo ſucceſſively, come duly thither to Prayers upon Sundays, and ſuch Holy-days as that Church obſerves, in his Whites, and Preach ſo, when-ever he Preacheth there. And that he be not abſent from thence, but upon neceſſary occaſion of his Dioceſs or otherwiſe, according to the Courſe of his Preferment.

That theſe Orders ſhall be Our Warrant to the Dean of Our Chappel. That the Lords of Our Privy Council, the Lords of the Seſſions, the Advocate, Clerks, Writers to the Signet, and Members of Our College of Juſtice, be commanded to receive the Holy Communion, once every Year at the leaſt, in that Our Chappel Royal, and Kneeling for Example ſake to the Kingdom. And We likewiſe Command the Dean aforeſaid to make Report yearly to Us, how We are obeyed therein, and by whom; as alſo if any Man ſhall Refuſe, in what manner he doth ſo, and why?

That the Copes which are Conſecrated to Our Uſe, be delivered to the Dean to be kept upon Inventory by him, and in a Standard provided for that purpoſe; and to be uſed at the Celebration of the Sacrament in Our Chappel Royal.

The Letter. Octob. 8.

Reverend Father in God, Truſty and well-beloved Councellor, We Greet you well. We have thought good, for the better ordering of Divine Service, to be performed in Our Chappel Royal there, to ſet down ſome Articles under Our own Hand, to be obſerved therein, which We ſend you here incloſed. And it is Our ſpecial Pleaſure, That you ſee every thing carefully performed, according as We have directed by theſe Our incloſed Articles; and likewiſe that you Certifie to the Lords of Our Privy Council, if any of thoſe appointed by Our former Letters to them, to Communicate in Our Chappel-Royal, ſhall not accordingly perform the ſame, to the end ſuch Order may be taken by Our Council therein, as by Our ſaid former Letters to them We did appoint. Wherein expecting your Diligence and Care, We bid you Farewell.

From Our Court at Whitehall the 8*th* day of October 1633.

Moreover, the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury had a Warrant from the King, to hold Correſpondence with the Biſhop of Dunblane, the preſent Dean of the Chappel-Royal in Edenburgh, and from time to time to Communicate unto him His Majeſties further Directions, for the ordering of this Service. The Royal Chappel being thus ordered, was declared to be for a Pattern of the Intended Reformation to all Cathedrals, Chappels, and Pariſh-Churches in Scotland.

After this the Arch-biſhop wrote divers Letters to Biſhop Balentine, to promote the Deſign, and to let His Majeſty receive a Note, who thoſe be that Conformed, and who not.

Another Letter Informing him of his miſſing the Biſhoprick of Edenburgh, for his Omiſſion of Prayers in the Chappel, according to the Engliſh Liturgie, &c. and Exhorting him to be careful for the future, and that his Excuſe was not ſatisfactory, viz. That the Singing-Men could not come for Debt; for that the Prayers might have been read by his Lordſhips Chaplain. That he did well to acquaint the Lords with His Majeſties Reſolution concerning the Communion there.

Another to like purpoſe, and concerning the payment of the Singing-Mens Wages.

Another, January the 12*th* 1634. giving him Thanks for his Reſolutions about ordering the Kings Chappel, and wearing his Whites, &c.

Another, February the 28*th* 1634. containing Thanks from the King, for the Solemnity of the late Communion, and expreſſing his Hopes, that the other Biſhops were in their Whites, as well as he, that the Envy of the Vulgar might not fall only on him. That he had ſhewed His Majeſty the Paper of thoſe of the Seſſion, as did not Conform at the Communion. That he had done what he could for the Gentleman of the Chappel; but the Times required Patience, &c.

And on the 28*th* of September 1634. the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury cauſed the King to Sign a Common-Prayer-Book, for the uſe of the Church of Scotland: and gave order to the Biſhops of Scotland, to compile certain Canons for the Government of the Church of Scotland; which Liturgie and Canons were to be Impoſed upon that Church, by Regal, and Epiſcopal Authority, without Conſent of Parliament, or of a General Aſſembly. The Biſhops of Scotland, not long after, gave the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury a particular Account of their Proceedings therein, with Thanks for his many Favours to them.

In theſe Times the Communion-Table in Parochial Churches began to be placed Altar-wiſe after the Pattern of Cathedrals, which were called Mother-Churches.

St. Gregories Church.

ON the 3*d* of November was debated before His Majeſty, ſitting in Council, the Queſtion and Difference which grew about the removing the Communion-Table in St. Gregories Church near the Cathedral Church of St. Pauls, from the middle of the Chancel to the upper end, and there placed Altar-wiſe, in ſuch manner, as it ſtandeth in the ſaid Cathedral and Mother-Church, as alſo in all other Cathedrals, and in His Majeſties own Chappel and as it is conſonant to the practice of approved Antiquity; which removal, and placing of it in that ſort, was done by order from the Dean and Chapter of St. Pauls, who are Ordinaries thereof, as was avowed before His Majeſty by Dr. King and Dr. Montfort, Two of the Prebendaries there: yet ſome few of the Pariſhioners, being Five in Number, did complain of this Act by Appeal to the Court of Arches, pretending that the Book of Common-Prayer, and the 82*d Canon*, do give permiſſion to place the Communion-Table where it may ſtand with moſt fitneſs and convenience. Now His Majeſty having heard particular relation made by the Counſel of both Parties, of all the carriage and proceedings in this Cauſe, was pleaſed to declare his diſlike of all Innovation, and receding from Ancient Conſtitutions, grounded upon juſt and warrantable Reaſons, eſpecially in Matters concerning Eccleſiaſtical Order and Government, knowing how eaſily Men are drawn to affect Novelties, and how ſoon weak Judgments, in ſuch Caſes, may be overtaken and abuſed: Further alſo obſerving, that if theſe few Pariſhioners might have their Wills, the Difference thereby, from the aforeſaid Cathedral Mother-Church, by which all other Churches depending thereon ought to be guided, would be the more notorious, and give more ſubject of Diſcourſe and Diſputes that might be ſpared, by reaſon of St. Gregories ſtanding cloſe to the Wall thereof. And foraſmuch as concerns the Liberty given by the Common-Book, or Canon, for placing the Communion-Table in any Church or Chappel with moſt convenience; it was anſwered, That ſuch Liberty is not ſo to be underſtood, as if it were ever left to the diſcretion of the Pariſh, much leſs to the particular Fancy of any humorous perſon, but to the Judgment of the Ordinary, to whoſe Place and Function it doth properly belong to give direction in that Point, both for the thing it ſelf, and for the time when, and how long, as he may find cauſe; upon which Conſideration His Majeſty declared, That he well approved and confirmed the Act of the ſaid Ordinary, and ſo gave Commandment, that if thoſe few Pariſhioners before mentioned did proceed in their ſaid Appeal, the Dean of the Arches, who was then attending at the hearing of the Cauſe, ſhould confirm the ſaid Order of the aforeſaid Dean and Chapter.

Thomas Lord Viſcount Wentworth, Lord Deputy of Ireland, on the 22d of January 1633. was pleaſed to write to His Majeſty a Letter, giving his Humble Opinion concerning a Parliament in His Majeſties Kingdom of Ireland, as followeth.

January 22. 1633. The Lord Deputy of Ireland's Advice to the King, concerning the calling a Parliament.

Albeit the calling of the Parliament in this Kingdom, is at no time of ſo much hazard, (where nothing is propounded as a Law, before it firſt borrows motion from Your Majeſties immediate Allowance under Your Great Seal) as it is in England, where there is a Liberty aſſum'd to offer every thing in their own time, and order; and this Subordination, whereunto they have been led by the Wiſdom of former Times, is ever to be held as a Sacred Prerogative, not to be departed from, in no piece to be broken or infringed: yet is the Propoſition always weighty, and very neceſſary to be conſidered with great deliberation, whether the preſent Conjuncture of Affairs doth now adviſe a Parliament, or no? and after a ſerious Diſcourſe with my ſelf, my Reaſon perſwades me for the Aſſembling thereof.

Lord Deputy Wentworth's Letter. 1633.

For the Contribution from the Country toward the Army, ending in December next, Your Majeſties Revenue falls ſhort Twenty Thouſand Pounds Sterling by year of the preſent Charge it is burthened withall, beſides the vaſt Debt of Fourſcore Thouſand Pounds Iriſh upon the Crown; which yearly Payments alone are impoſſible by any other way to be in time ſupplied, but by the Subject in Parliament; and to paſs to the Extraordinary, before there be at leaſt an Attempt firſt to effect it with eaſe, were to love difficulties too well; rather voluntarily to ſeek them, than unwillingly to meet them; and it might ſeem as well vanity in the firſt reſpect, ſo to affect them, as faintneſs to bow under them, when they are not to be avoided.

The next Inclination thereunto ariſeth in me from the conditions of this Country, which is grown very much more civil and rich, ſince the Acceſs of Your Royal Father of Bleſſed Memory, and Your Majeſty to the Crown.

That all You have here is iſſued out again among them for their protection and ſafety, without any conſiderable Reſervation for other the great Affairs and Expences abroad.

That this great Charge is ſuſtained, and this great Debt Contracted through Imployments for the Publick, whereof the benefit hitherto hath been intirely theirs. That there hath been but one Subſidy granted in all this time, nor any other Supply but this Contribution; in exchange wherewhereof Your Princely Bounty return'd them Graces as beneficial to the Subject, as their Money was to Your Majeſty ; ſo as their Subſtance having been ſo increaſed under the Guard of Your Wiſdom and Juſtice, little iſſued hence from them. The Crown ſo preſſed only for their Good ; and ſo modeſt a Calling upon them now for a Supply, which in all Wiſdom, Good Nature, and Conſcience, they are not to deny ; Should they not conform themſelves to Your Gracious Will, their unthankfulneſs to God, and the beſt of Kings, would become inexcuſable before all the World, and the Regal Power more warrantably to be hereafter extended, for redeeming and recovering Your Majeſties Revenues thus loſt, and juſtly to puniſh ſo great a Forfeit, as this muſt needs be judg'd to be in them.

Next, the frightful Apprehenſions, which at this time makes their Hearts beat, leſt the Quarterly Payments towards the Army, continued now almoſt Ten years, might in fine turn to an Hereditary Charge upon their Lands, incline them to give any reaſonable thing at preſent, to ſecure them from that fear for the future ; and therefore according to the wholeſome Counſel of the Phyſician, Dum dolet, accipe.

And laſtly, if they ſhould meanly caſt from them theſe mighty Obligations, which indeed I cannot fear ; Your Majeſties Affairs can never ſuffer leſs by their ſtarting aſide, when the General Peace abroad admits more united Power in Your Majeſty, and leſs diſtracted thoughts in Your Miniſters to chaſtiſe ſuch a forgetfulneſs, to call to their remembrance, and to inforce from them other and better Duties than theſe.

In the ſecond place, the time Your Majeſty ſhall in Your Wiſdom appoint for this Meeting imports very much, which, with all ſubmiſſion, I ſhould adviſe might not be longer put off than Eaſter or Trinity Term at fartheſt, and I ſhall crave leave to offer my Reaſons.

The Improvements mentioned in my Diſpatch to the Lord Treaſurer, (from which I no way recede) would not be foreſlowed, wherein we loſe much by deferring this Meeting : a Circumſtance very conſiderable in theſe ſtreits, wherein, if ſurpriz'd, it might be of much diſadvantage, in caſe the Parliament anſwer not expectation ; and to enter upon that Work before, would be an Argument for them to ſcant their Supply to Your Majeſty.

Again, A Breach of a Parliament would prejudice leſs thus, than in Winter ; having, at the worſt, Six Months to turn our Eyes about, and many Helps to be gain'd in that ſpace ; where, in the other Caſe, the Contribution ending in December next, we ſhould be put upon an inſtant of Time, to read our Leſſon at the firſt ſight.

Then, the calling of a Parliament, and determining of the Quarterly Payments falling out much upon one, might make them apprehend, there was a neceſſity enforcing a preſent Agreement, if not the good one we would, yet the beſt we could get ; and ſo embolden them to make, and flatter themſelves to gain their own Conditions ; and Conditions are not to be admitted with any Subjects, leſs with this People, where Your Majeſties abſolute Sovereignty goes much higher, than it is taken (perhaps) to be in England.

And laſtly, There being ſome of Your Majeſties Graces, which being paſſed into Laws, might be of great prejudice to the Crown ; and yet it being to be fear'd, they will preſs for them all, and it's uncertain what humor the denying any of them might move in their Minds : I conceive, under favour, it would be much better to make two Seſſions of it, one in Summer, the other in Winter; in the former to ſettle Your Majeſties Supply; and in the latter, to Enact ſo many of thoſe Graces, as in Honour and Wiſdom ſhould be judged equal; when the putting aſide of the reſt might be of no ill conſequence to other Your Royal Purpoſes.

All the Objections I am able to ſuggeſt unto my ſelf are Two: That it might render fruitleſs the intended Improvement upon the concealments, and prejudice the Plantations of Connaght and Ormond. The firſt may eaſily be helped by a ſhort Law propounded in my Diſpatch to my Lord Treaſurer; and Poſito, that there do no other Law paſs the firſt Seſſion, the ſecond is likewiſe ſufficiently ſecur'd.

Then it is to be foreſeen what Your Majeſty will demand; how to induce, and purſue the ſame, for the happy ſettlement of the Regal Rights, and Powers in this more ſubordinate Kingdom.

My Humble Advice is, to declare at the firſt opening of the Meeting, that Your Majeſty intends, and promiſes Two Seſſions: This former for Your ſelf; that latter in Michaelmas Term next for them. This to aſcertain the Payments of Your Army, and to ſtrike off the Debts of Your Crown; That for the Enacting of all ſuch profitable and wholeſome Laws, as a moderate and good People may expect from a Wiſe and Gracious King.

That this being the order of Nature, Reaſon, and Civility, Your Majeſty expects it ſhould be intirely obſerv'd, and Your ſelf wholly intruſted by them; which they are, not only to grant to be fit in the general Caſe of King and Subjects, but ought indeed to acknowledge it with Thankfulneſs due to Your Majeſty in particular, when they look back, and call to mind, how for their eaſe You were content to take Sixſcore Thouſand Pounds (which their Agents gave to be paid in Three) in Six Years; and not barely ſo neither, but to double Your Graces toward them the whilſt, which they have enjoyed accordingly much to their Advantage, and greatly to the loſs of the Crown.

And that conſidering the Army hath been repreſented over to Your Majeſty from this Council, and in a manner from the Body of this whole Kingdom, to be of abſolute Neceſſity, to give comfort to the quiet Minds in their honeſt Labours, to contain the Licentious Spirits within the modeſt Bounds of Sobriety; It conſiſts not with Your Majeſties Wiſdom to give unto the World, no not the Appearance of ſo much improvidence in Your own Councils, of ſo much forgetfulneſs in a Caſe of their Safety, as to leave that Pillar of Your Authority, and their Peace, unſetled for continuance at leaſt one Six Months before the wearing forth of their Contribution.

Therefore Your Majeſty was well aſſur'd, in conformity to the Rules of Reaſon and Judgment, they would preſently grant Three Subſidies to be paid in Three years, to diſingage the Crown of Fourſcore Thouſand Pounds Debt, and continue their Quarterly Payments toward the Army Four years longer; in which time it was hopeful (ſuitable to Your Gracious Intentions) ſome other Expedient might be found out, to maintain the Army without farther Charge to them at all; which Law paſſed, they ſhould have as much leiſure to Enact for themſelves at after, as they could deſire, either now, or in Winter. Nay, Your Majeſty would be Graciouſly pleaſed, with the Aſſiſtance of Your Council, to adviſe ſeriouſly with them, that nothing might remain, either unthought-of, or denied, conducing to the publick Good of this Kingdom; but if they make difficulty to proceed with Your Majeſty in this manner; other Counſels muſt be thought of, and little to be relied on, or expected from them.

I am not to flatter Your Majeſty ſo far, as to raiſe any hope on that ſide, that all this ſhould be granted but by preſſing both, and eſpecially the continuance of the quarterly Payments to the Army, which they dread above any earthly thing. I conceive it probable, that to determine and lay aſleep (as they think) the Contribution, and in acknowledgment of Your Majeſties happy acceſs to the Crown, they may be drawn to a preſent gift of three Subſidies, payable in three years, which alone would keep the Army on foot, during that time; and if my Calculation hold, almoſt diſcharge the debt of the Crown beſide.

For thus I make my Eſtimate. The Contribution from the Country is now but twenty thouſand pounds ſterling by the Year; whereas I have good Reaſon to truſt, each Subſidie will raiſe thirty thouſand pounds ſterling, and ſo there will be 10000 l. for three years, over and above the eſtabliſhment which thirty thouſand pounds ſterling, well and profitably iſſued, will (I truſt) with Honour to Your Majeſty, and Moderate ſatisfaction to the Parties, ſtrike off the whole fourſcore thouſand pounds Iriſh, which in preſent preſſeth ſo ſore upon this Crown.

And then, Sir, after that in Michaelmas Term all Beneficial Acts for the Subject be thought of, as many, no fewer, nor no more Enacted than were fit in Honour, and Wiſdom to be granted; If for a Concluſion to this Parliament we could gain from them other two Subſidies, to buy in Rents and Penſions to ten thouſand pounds yearly value (a thing they are inclinable unto, as is mentioned in my Diſpatch to the Lord Treaſurer) I judge there were a happy iſſue of this Meeting; and that it ſhould through God's Bleſſing appear to the World in a few years, You had without charge made a more abſolute Conqueſt of this Nation by Your Wiſdom, than all Your Royal Progenitors have been able to accompliſh by their Armies, and vaſt expence of Treaſure and Blood.

Theſe being the ends in my poor Opinion, which are to be deſired, and attained; the beſt means to diſpoſe and fit all concurring cauſes thereunto, are not to be forgotten; and therefore as preparatives, I make bold to offer theſe enſuing particulars.

It ſeems to me very convenient, a Committee be forthwith appointed of ſome few of us here, to take into conſideration all the Bills intended, when there was a Parliament to have been called in the time of my Lord Faulkland; Such as ſhall be judged beneficial to make them ready; ſuch as may be of too much prejudice to the Crown, to lay them aſide, and to draw up others, which may chance to have been then omitted. This Work may be by the Committees, either quickned or foreſlown, as the Parliament proceeds warmer, or cooler in Your Majeſties ſupplies.

Next, That Your Majeſties Acts of Grace directed to my Lord Faulkland the 24th of May 1628, may be conſidered by ſuch of Your Council in England, as ſhall pleaſe Your Majeſty to appoint; there being many matters therein contained, which in a Law would not ſo well futurely ſort with the Power requiſite to be upheld in this Kingdom, nor yet with Your Majeſties preſent profit; which hath perſwaded me to except againſt ſuch, as I hold beſt to be ſilently paſſed over, and tranſmit a Paper thereof to my Lord Treaſurer.

It is to be feared, the meaner ſort of Subjects here live under the preſſures of the great men, and there is a general Complaint, that Officers exact much larger Fees than of right they ought to do. To help the former, if it be poſſible, I will find out two or three to make examples of; and to remedy the latter, grant out a Commiſſion for examining, regulating and ſetting down Tables of Fees in all your Courts; ſo as they ſhall find Your Majeſties Goodneſs and Juſtice, watching and caring for their protection and eaſe, both in private, and publick reſpects.

I ſhall indeavour the Lower Houſe may be ſo compoſed, as that neither the Recuſants, nor yet the Proteſtants ſhall appear conſiderable, more one than the other, holding them as much as may be upon equal Ballance; for they will prove thus eaſier to govern, than if either party were abſolute. Then would I in private Diſcourſe ſhew the Recuſant, that the Contribution ending in December next, if Your Majeſties Army were not ſupplied ſome other way before, the twelve pence a Sunday muſt of neceſſity be exacted upon them; ſhew the Proteſtant, that Your Majeſty muſt not let go the twenty-thouſand pounds-Contribution, nor yet diſcontent the other in matter of Religion, till the Army were ſome way elſe certainly provided for; and convince them both, that the preſent quarterly payments are not ſo burthenſom, as they pretended them to be; and that by the Graces they have had already more benefit, than their mony came to. Thus poiſing one by the other, which ſingle might perchance prove more unhappy to deal with.

I will labour to make as many Captains, and Officers Burgeſſes, as poſſibly I can, who having immediate dependence upon the Crown, may almoſt ſway the Buſineſs betwixt the two Parties, which way they pleaſe.

In the Higher Houſe Your Majeſty will have, I truſt, the Biſhops wholly for You. The Titular Lords, rather than come over themſelves, will put their proxies into ſuch ſafe hands, as may be thought of on this ſide; and in the reſt Your Majeſty hath ſuch Intereſt, what out of duty to the Crown, and obnoxiouſneſs in themſelves, as I do not apprehend much any difficulty among them.

To theſe, or any thing elſe directed by Your Majeſty, I will with all poſſible diligence, apply my ſelf ſo ſoon as I ſhall underſtand Your pleaſure therein; moſt humbly beſeeching, You will take it into Your Gracious Memory, how much Your Majeſties ſpeedy Reſolution in this great Buſineſs imports the proſperity of Your Affairs in this place, and in that reſpect vouchſafe to haſten it, as much as conveniently may be.

In this Diſpatch the Deputy alſo writ to His Majeſty Conſiderations tending to the Government of the Church, &c. In theſe words,

May it pleaſe Your Sacred Majeſty.

Conſiderations tending to the better Government of the Church and Clergy in this Kingdom, I offer in a Letter herewith ſent to my Lord's Grace of Canterbury.

THE preſent mean condition of this Army, and the neceſſary courſe to be held in the ſpeedy Reformation thereof, I fully now ſet forth in my diſpatch to Mr. Secretary Cook.

The ſtate of Your Majeſties Revenue, the Annual Iſſues of Your Treaſure, and the debt charged upon this Crown upon my coming to the Government; the Propoſitions humbly offered by me, for the bettering Your Majeſties Affairs in this particular, together with a way of raiſing a conſtant great Rent forth of the Salt, I have at this time alſo tranſmitted to my Lord Treaſurer; of all which I beſeech Your Majeſty at Your beſt leiſure be pleaſed to take a ſummary account.

Now I truſt the importance and weight of this incloſed Diſcourſe, will recompence for the length thereof, and obtain my pardon, albeit I preſume thus to preſent it immediately to Your Sacred Hands; for indeed I take it to be no leſs than the Ground-plot, whereupon to ſet and raiſe ſafety and quiet to this Kingdom, as it ſtands in relation within it ſelf, ſecurity and profit, as it is in dependence to the Crown of England.

And therefore I do moſt humbly beſeech Your Majeſties quickning Spirit may move upon theſe Waters, that we may from Your Directions receive Life, and from Your Wiſdom borrow Light to guide and conduct us along in the way we are to take towards the accompliſhment of ſo happy a Work.

God Almighty aſſiſt You in theſe, and all other Your Counſels, and long preſerve Your Majeſty in full Power and Greatneſs, &c.

Dublin Caſtle,

As in the life time of the greateſt Prelate of this Kingdom, William Laud, Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, the Vulgar ſort would be caſting out reflective paſſages againſt him; ſo that Libelling humour was alſo continued after the death of William Noy the Kings Attorney General, the greateſt and moſt famous Lawyer of that age; for after his Deceaſe, (who departed this Life the 9th of Auguſt this Year) Papers were put upon Poſts, reflecting on him, that his Body being opened there was found in his Head a bundle of Proclamations, in his Maw Motheaten Records, and in his Belly a Barrel of Soap.

Septemb. 19.

To the moſt Reverend Father in God, Our right truly, and right entirely beloved Counſellor, William, Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, Primate and Metropolitane of all England.

Charles Rex,

The Kings Letter to the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury.

MOST Reverend Father in God, right truly, and right entirely beloved Counſellor, We greet you well. There is nothing more dear to Us than the preſervation of true Religion, as it is now ſetled and eſtabliſhed in this Our Kingdom, to the honour of God and the great comfort of Our ſelves, and Our loyal people; and there can nothing more more conduce to the advancement thereof than the ſtrict obſervation of ſuch Canons of the Church as concern thoſe that are to take Orders in their ſeveral times; more eſpecially of keeping that particular Canon, which enjoyns, that no man be made a Prieſt or a Miniſter without a Title: For we find that many not ſo qualified, do by favour of other means procure themſelves to be ordained, and afterwards for want of means, wander up and down, to the ſcandal of their Calling; or to get maintenance fall upon ſuch courſes as are moſt unfit for them, both by humouring their Auditors, and other ways altogether unſufferable. We have therefore thought fit, and we do hereby ſtreightly require and charge you to call ſuch Biſhops to you as are now preſent, in, or near Our City of London, and to acquaint them with this Our Reſolution; And further, that you fail not in the beginning of the next Term to give notice of this Our Will and Pleaſure openly in Our High Commiſſion Court, and that you call into Our ſaid Court every Biſhop reſpectively that preſume to give Orders to any man that hath not a Title, and there to cenſure him as the Canon aforeſaid doth enjoyn (which is to maintain the Party ſo ordered till he give him a Title), and with what other cenſure you in Juſtice ſhall think fit. And Our further Will is, that nothing ſhall be reputed a Title to enable a man for Orders, but that which is ſo by the ancient courſe of the Church, and the Canon Law, ſo far forth as that Law is received in this Our Church of England. And as you muſt not fail in theſe Our Directions, nor in any part of them, ſo We expect that you give Us from time to time a ſtrict account of your proceedings in the ſame.

None to be a Miniſter without a Title.

Given under Our Signet at Our Palace in Weſtminſter, the 19th day of September, in the ninth Year of Our Reign.

In purſuance of this Letter, the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury writ to the ſeveral Biſhops of their reſpective Dioceſſes, to pray and require them, that at all times of Ordination, they be careful to admit into Holy-Orders none but ſuch men as for Life and Learning are fit, and which have a Title for their Maintenance, according to the Law and antient Practice of the Church; and the Arch-Biſhop declared what ſhall be a Title according to the Canon, which theſe perſons Ordained muſt have.

1. A Preſentation to ſome Eccleſiaſtical preferment.
2. Or, A Certificate undoubted, that he is provided of ſome Church void there.
3. Or, A Grant of ſome petty Canons Place, or the like, in a Cathedral or a Collegiate Church.
4. Or, A Fellow, or in the right of a Fellow, in ſome Colledge in Oxford or Cambridge.
5. Or, A Conduct of Chaplain in ſome Colledge in Oxford or Cambridge.
6. Or, A Maſter of Arts of Five years ſtanding, living at his own Charge in either of the Univerſities.
7. Or the intention of the Biſhop that Ordains, ſhortly to admit him to ſome Benefice or Curates place then void.

And I think the Canon intends, that after a Man is once admitted a Curate, the Parſon or Vicar of the Place ſhould not have power to put them off at pleaſure, but only for ſuch criminal Unworthineſs as might deprive him of his Benefice, if he had one.

By reaſon of theſe ſtrict Rules, no Lecture whatſoever was admitted to be a Canonical Title, and ſo all Ordinations of Miniſters to ſupply Lectures was totally ſecluded; alſo no Chaplainſhip to any Noblemans Family was allowed to be a ſufficient Title.

In the Month of February, in Hilary Term, upon an Information in the Star-Chamber againſt Sir David Fowlis, Sir Thomas Layton, and Henry Fowlis Eſq; Defendants, the Cauſe came to Hearing.

The Information being opened to the Court was to this effect.

Sir David Fowlis, &c. queſtioned in the Star-Chamber.

THat whereas ſeveral Commiſſions had iſſued lately out of His Majeſties Court of Exchequer in the 6th, 7th, and 8th Year of His Majeſties Reign, directed to the Lord Viſcount Wentworth, and to divers other Lords, Knights, and Gentlemen of the beſt and principal Rank and Quality in thoſe Northern Parts, who were thereby Authoriz'd for the more eaſe of the Country, to Treat, Commune, and Compound with all and ſingular his Highneſs's Subjects of the City and County of York, and other Northern Counties therein particularly expreſſed, as would make Fine with His Majeſty for their Contempts in not attending His Majeſties Coronation, to have taken the Order of Knighthood, as they ought to have done; and the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth was by expreſs Letters from His Majeſty in that behalf ſpecially appointed to be Collector: And albeit the ſaid Sir David Fowlis had received many Gracious Favours both in Honour and Profit, as well from King James, as His now Majeſty, which might juſtly have incited and ſtirred him up to all dutiful and grateful Thankfulneſs for the ſame; nevertheleſs the ſaid Sir David Fowlis moſt undutifully, and ingratefully, did not regard the ſame, but harbored ſome ſecret diſcontentment, and ill affection in his Heart: for when-as the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth, and other His Majeſties Commiſſioners, carefully and dutifully intended the due Execution of His Highneſs's ſaid Commiſſions, and had by vertue thereof ſummoned, and given notice to Ralph Ewre, James Penniman Eſquires, and ſundry others dwelling and inhabiting near unto the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, to attend the ſaid Commiſſioners at the ſaid City of York, for their Compounding for their ſaid Fines of Knighthood; the ſaid Sir David Fowlis moſt undutifully endeavoured and practiſed what he poſſibly could, to oppoſe His Majeſties Service therein, and to diſſwade and divert perſons from Compounding with the ſaid Commiſſioners, and many times publickly declar'd his diſlike and diſaffection of, and to the ſaid Service, which was generally obſerv'd and noted throughout the Country where he dwelt: which was by him ſo ſpoken of intent and purpoſe, to cauſe Men to forbear and refrain Compounding, or reſorting to the ſaid Commiſſioners, to make any Compoſition

tion for their aforeſaid Contempts; and thereby animated and incouraged ſundry perſons to ſtand out, and refuſe to make any Compoſition at all, who otherwiſe would have Compounded with the ſaid Commiſſioners for their ſaid Fines of Contempt, in not attending at His Majeſties Coronation to take the Order of Knighthood, as aforeſaid. And in farther proſecution of his ill affection, and to ſhew his diſlike of the ſaid Service, and the more fully to expreſs and manifeſt himſelf, and his deſire for the hindrance thereof; he the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, at a Publick Meeting, at the Houſe of the ſaid Sir Thomas Layton, in the beginning of the Month of July 1632. did, in divers of his Conferences with Gentlemen concerning the Compounding with the ſaid Lord Viſcount, and the other Commiſſioners for their Fines and Contempts of Knighthood, publickly affirm and ſay; ‘That York-ſhire Gentlemen had been in time ‘paſt accounted and held ſtout-ſpirited Men, and would have ſtood ‘for their Rights and Liberties, and were wont to be the worthieſt ‘of all other Shires in the Kingdom. And that in former times all ‘other Shires did depend, and would direct all their great Actions ‘by that Country. And that other Counties, for the moſt part, ‘followed and imitated York-ſhire: but now in theſe days York-ſhire-‘Men were become degenerate, more daſtardly and more cowardly ‘than the Men of other Counties, wanting their wonted Courage ‘and Spirit, which they formerly uſed to have. Which ſaid Words and Speeches the ſaid Sir David Fowlis then uſed and uttered purpoſely, to diſſwade and diſcourage perſons from Compounding for the ſaid Contempts and Fines for Knighthood, as aforeſaid. And the more to encourage thoſe that ſtood out, and refus'd to Compound, the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, at the ſame time and place, extoll'd and highly commended one James Maleverer Eſq; for denying and refuſing to Compound with the ſaid Commiſſioners for his Fines of Knighthood, and ſaid; ‘That the ſaid James Maleverer was the ‘wiſeſt and worthieſt Man in the Country; and that he was a ‘brave Spirit, and a true York-ſhire-man; and that none durſt ſhew ‘himſelf ſtoutly for the Good of the Country, but the ſaid Mr. ‘Maleverer, and was to be Honoured therefore. And did very much commend him, both there, and at other places and times, for not Compounding. And the ſaid Sir David Fowlis being then told, it might perhaps prove more chargeable to the ſaid Mr. Maleverer, for his wilful ſtanding-out in that manner; the ſaid Sir David replied, That the ſaid Mr. Maleverer had put in his Plea ‘thereunto, and would eaſily procure his Diſcharge, both of the ‘Fines and Iſſues. And in truth he had Pleaded in His Majeſties Exchequer an inſufficient Plea, and after ſuch time as he had paid 156 l. for Iſſues, at laſt he compounded for his Contempt. And farther to diſcourage and hinder Men from Compounding; The ſaid Sir David Fowlis then alſo alledged; That in other Counties and Shires they had not advanced their Fines of Knighthood ſo high, as was done by the Commiſſioners in York-ſhire, ſaying, that there were many in Buckingham-ſhire and Oxford-ſhire, who did utterly refuſe to Compound: and thereupon ſhewed forth a Liſt or Paper of the Names of ſundry Perſons of thoſe Two Counties, that ſo refuſed to Compound. And the ſaid Sir David Fowlis taking notice of Mr. Ewre's, and Mr. Pennyman's Compounding with the

9 Caroli.

Commiſſioners, blam'd and reprov'd them for ſo doing, ſaying, That they had by Compounding done themſelves ſome wrong, and that the Country hereafter would be much troubled with ſuch Impoſitions. And the ſaid Sir David Fowlis farther, to beget and draw a general diſobedience in the Hearts of His Highneſs's People, and to cauſe them to deny and refuſe to Compound for their Knighthood-Fines with the ſaid Commiſſioners, and to draw a ſcandal upon the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth, and to bring him into diſeſteem in the Hearts and Minds of the Gentlemen of that Country, publickly ſaid and pretended; 'That the People of York-ſhire did adore him the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth, and were ſo timorous and fearful to offend his Lordſhip, that they would undergo any Charge, rather than diſpleaſe him; and that his Lordſhip was much reſpected in York-ſhire, but at Court he was no more reſpected than an ordinary Man; and that as ſoon as his back was turn'd for Ireland, his Place of Preſidentſhip of the Council would be beſtowed on another Man. And the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, and the Defendant Henry Fowlis did, about the beginning of July 1632. and at other times publickly, in the hearing of ſundry Knights and Gentlemen, to the end to hinder His Majeſties Service, and to render the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth odious to the Inhabitants of York-ſhire, and the Places and Countries where he was employed as a Commiſſioner, moſt falſly and untruly ſcandalize and wrong the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth, to have received much Money of the Country for Knighthood-Fines, by vertue of the aforeſaid Commiſſion; and that his Lordſhip had not paid the ſame, either to His Majeſty, or the Exchequer. The contrary whereof did plainly, clearly, and evidently appear by the ſeveral Tallies and Conſtats, which were produced and ſhewed in open Court, teſtifying that the Lord Viſcount Wentworth had, a year before the ſpeaking of thoſe words by the ſaid Sir David, and his Son, paid unto His Majeſties Receipts for Knighthood-Fines the Sum of 24500 l. beſides other Aſſignments by his Lordſhip disburſed about the ſaid Service, amounting to about 700 l. of his own Money, and more than he had at that time received for His Majeſty. And the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, and Henry Fowlis, moſt falſely and malitiouſly, not only to the ſcandal of His Majeſty and His Juſtice, but chiefly to wrong and ſlander the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth, reported, gave out, and affirmed in the Preſence of divers Knights, Gentlemen and others, that when the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth was gone into Ireland, all ſuch as had paid their Fines to his Lordſhip, although they had his Lordſhips Acquittance for the ſame, yet they would and ſhould be forced to pay the ſame over again to His Majeſties uſe. And the Defendant, Thomas Layton, cauſed his Officer and Bailiff to levy about 39 l. Iſſues upon the Goods of one Mr. Wivel, who formerly Compounded and paid his Fine for Knighthood, and had his Lordſhips Acquittance for the ſame; and that Complaint had been made to the Council at York, in the abſence of the ſaid Lord Preſident, that the ſaid Sir Thomas Layton's Officers or Bailiffs had by his privity exacted and taken 40 s. worth of the ſaid Wivel's Tenants Goods, by colour of the ſaid Levy, for ſo levying of the ſaid Iſſues, whereby the ſaid Council conceived, that the ſame would much croſs and oppoſe His Majeſties ſaid Service, and the Exaction was meet to be puniſhed: and therefore did award, and ſend the King's Letter to the ſaid Sir Thomas Layton (being then High-Sheriff for the County of York) for to appear, and anſwer an Information Exhibited againſt him, and his Servants, for ſuch their ſuppoſed Exactions in that behalf, as was lawful for the ſaid Council to do; and cauſed the ſaid Sir Thomas Layton to be ſerved therewith, who immediately ſhewed it to the ſaid Sir David Fowlis: Then the ſaid Sir David Fowlis thereon took upon him in a great Preſence and Aſſembly of divers Knights and Gentlemen of the County (himſelf being then one of His Majeſties ſworn Council in the ſaid Northern Parts, one of the Deputy-Lieutenants there, and a Juſtice of Peace in the North-Riding, where he then dwelt) to adviſe and diſſwade Sir Thomas Layton to yield obedience to His Majeſties Letter, which this Court held to be a great Contempt, and Offence; for that he ſaid, that he held it not fit, that the ſaid Sir Thomas Layton, being High-Sheriff, ſhould appear and anſwer the ſaid Letter, before he had acquainted His Majeſty firſt therewith, and known the King's Pleaſure. The ſaid Sir David ſaying farther, (in ſcorn and contempt of the ſaid Court and Council, whereof himſelf was a Member, and by his Oath bound to maintain and uphold the Rights and Liberties thereof to his uttermoſt) 'That 'the ſaid Court was a Paper-Court, and the ſaid Lord Preſident, 'and Council, had done more than they could juſtifie, by ſending 'for the ſaid High-Sheriff; and that, if he were in the Sheriffs 'caſe, he would not care a Dog's Turd for them. And the more to draw the Council into diſeſteem and diſreſpect in thoſe Parts, he the ſaid Sir David then alſo ſaid, That the ſaid Council had nothing to do with a Juſtice of Peace; ſpeaking withall comparatively, That the Office of a Juſtice was above the Council at York; the one (meaning a Juſtice of Peace) was by Act of Parliament, the other (meaning the Court at York) was made but by Commiſſion. And alſo the ſaid Sir David being reprov'd by ſome Gentlemen there preſent, who much diſliked his Diſcourſe, yet he anſwer'd, He car'd not who heard it, nor if it were proclaim'd at the Croſs.

The Anſwer of Sir David Fowlis.

To this Information Sir David Fowlis made this Anſwer; 'That 'he hath been ſo far from oppoſing the Commiſſion concerning 'Knighthood, as that he hath, according to his Power, advanced 'the ſaid Service; and that he did perſwade James Maleverer, and 'others to ſubmit to the Commiſſioners, and Compound for their 'Fines. That he did perſwade Sir Thomas Layton to appear before 'the Lord Wentworth, and the Council, upon the King's Letter, and 'denieth the words charged upon him. He confeſſeth he did ſay, 'that he knew not how His Majeſty would take it to have a High-Sheriff Committed, and diſgraced for executing His Majeſties 'Writ: and confeſſeth, that it appears by the Information, that 'Mr. Wivel had made his Compoſition for Knighthood, and that he 'receiv'd his Acquittance; nevertheleſs Proceſs was awarded out of 'the Exchequer for levying Iſſues, amounting to 30 l. or thereabout: 'whereupon this Defendant did ſay, That if the Lord Wentworth 'had paid in all the Monies he had receiv'd, he might have done 'well to have taken order, that thoſe who had paid their Money 'to him, ſhould be free from any trouble, and not be compell'd to make double payment.

Henry Fowlis Pleaded Not Guilty.

Sir Thomas Layton's Defence.

'Sir Thomas Layton for himſelf ſaith; 'That a Letter was ſerved upon him from the Lord Preſident and Council, he being then High-Sheriff of the County, doing matters in the execution of his Office; and that before he was in any Contempt, he was within Three days Arreſted by the Purſivant attending the Court, and by him carried Priſoner from his own Houſe to the ſaid Council, about Thirty Miles, and there remain'd in the Cuſtody of the ſaid Meſſenger, till he had anſwer'd an Information there preferred againſt him, and Interrogatories concerning the ſelf-ſame matter now charged upon him; and before he was diſcharg'd, paid the ſaid Wivel the Money levyed by vertue of the Proceſs, and alſo paid 40 s. more, which (as was pretended) Appleby, the Bailiff, exacted from the ſaid VVivel.

'During all which time of this Defendants reſtraint, he was High-Sheriff of the County of York, of all which he deſireth a Conſideration might be had; albeit he might juſtly Plead the Dependence of the Suit at York, yet he doth wave the ſame; and doth deny, that if the ſaid 40 s. were exacted by the ſaid Bailiff, over and above the 39 l. levied upon Mr. VVivel, that the ſame, or any part thereof came to this Defendant.

The Judgment of the Court.

And it plainly appear'd to this Honourable Court, by good and ſufficient Teſtimony then openly read; that all the Particulars before-mentioned, wherewith Sir David Fowlis ſtood charged by the Information, were fully proved againſt him: whereupon the Court, upon grave and deliberate conſideration of all the aforeſaid Premiſſes, declared; That the ſaid Sir David had many ways endeavoured and ſought to oppoſe His Majeſties Service, and had withall greatly and highly thereby ſcandaliz'd His Majeſty, who had done him ſo many Gracious Favours, and affronted His Service, and had unjuſtly traduced His Majeſties Commiſſioners, and great Officers of State, and ſhewed exceeding malice to the Lord Deputy: And the ſaid Sir David ſpeaking theſe words charged upon him, to deter His Majeſties Subjects from making Payment of their Fines to His Majeſties Receiver, for Knighthood-mony: And that the Court duly weighing and conſidering the hainouſneſs of the ſaid Defendant's Offence therein, and declaring the ſame worthy of ſevere and extraordinary puniſhment, ordered;

That the ſaid Sir David Fowlis, being a principal Offender, ſhall ſtand, and be Committed to the Fleet, there to remain during His Majeſties Pleaſure; and that he ſhall pay a Fine of 5000 l. to His Majeſties uſe; and ſhall alſo publickly acknowledge his great and ſeveral Offences, both to His Majeſty, and the ſaid Lord Viſcount Wentworth; not only in this Court, but in the Court of York, and likewiſe at the open Aſſizes in the ſame County, where this Decree ſhall be publickly read. And farther; That the ſaid Sir David Fowlis is a perſon altogether unworthy of the Places he holds, as one of the Council of York, Deputy-Lieutenant, and Juſtice of Peace, who hath breathed out ſo much Faction and Diſobedience; and for that he ſought and endeavoured to draw diſeſteem and ſcandal upon that Court, whereof he himſelf was a Member, and upon the principal Officer and Member of the ſaid Court, the Lord Wentworth, a Noble Perſon of ſingular worth and merit, and worthily employ'd in a matter of greateſt Truſt and Importance. The Court hath therefore ordered and adjudged, That the ſaid Sir David Fowlis ſhall, from henceforth, be held, and made incapable to have, or execute any of the ſaid Places, and that he ſhall pay good Damage to the ſaid Lord Wentworth, Relator in this Court, whom this Court highly commended for vindicating His Majeſties Honour, in ſuch a Service of ſo undoubted Right, juſtly appertaining to the Crown, and which hath been heretofore taken by many Kings, His Majeſties Predeceſſors, conſtantly and ſucceſſively: their Lordſhips generally condemned the ſaid Sir David therefore, and for the baſe and ſcandalous Report, that he ſo publiſhed againſt the ſaid Lord Wentworth, ordered and decreed, That the ſaid Sir David ſhould pay 3000 l. to the ſaid Lord Wentworth.

And touching the Defendant Henry Fowlis, the Court likewiſe thought him worthy of Cenſure, and ordered and decreed, That he ſhould ſtand Committed to the Fleet, and pay 500 l. Fine to His Majeſties Uſe.

And foraſmuch as the Council urg'd no Proof againſt Sir Thomas Layton, they diſmiſſed him from any farther attendance.

This Year alſo, in Hillary Term, a Cauſe came to Hearing in the Court of Star-Chamber, wherein William Noy Eſq; The King's Attorney-General, Plaintiff; William Prynn Eſq; Michael Sparkes, William Buckner, and others, were Defendants.

Mr. Prynn's Cauſe in the Star-Chamber.

THe 7*th* of February Mr. William Prynn, utter Barreſter of Lincolns-Inn, was brought to the Star-Chamber, together with Michael Sparkes, William Buckner, and Four other Defendants, upon Mr. Attorney Noyes Information, which being opened by Mr. Hudſon of Grayes-Inn, did ſet forth, That about 8 Car. Reg. Mr. Prynn compiled and put in Print a Libelous Volume, Entituled by the name of Hiſtriomaſtix againſt Plays, Maſques, Dancings, &c. And although he knew well, that His Majeſties Royal Queen, Lords of the Council, &c. were in their publick Feſtivals, and other times, preſent Spectators of ſome Maſques and Dances, and many Recreations that were tolerable, and in themſelves ſinleſs, and ſo publiſhed to be, by a Book printed in the time of His Majeſties Royal Father: yet Mr. Prynn in his Book hath railed, not only againſt Stage-Plays, Comedies, Dancings, and all other Exerciſes of the People, and againſt all ſuch as behold them; but farther in particular againſt Hunting, Publique Feſtivals, Chriſtmas-keeping, Bonfires, and May-poles; nay, againſt the dreſſing up of a Houſe with Green-Ivy: and to manifeſt his evil and miſchievous deſign in publiſhing of this Libel, he hath therein written divers incitements, to ſtir up the People to diſcontent, as if there were juſt cauſe to lay violent hands on their Prince; and hath expreſſed in many Speeches againſt His Majeſty, and His Houſhold, infamous terms unfit for ſo Sacred a Perſon. He hath caſt an aſperſion upon Her Majeſty the Queen, and railing and uncharitable cenſures againſt all Chriſtian People. He hath commended all thoſe that are factious perſons, that have vented any thing in any Book againſt the State, as the factious Book of Dr. Leighton, Jo. Mariana a Jeſuit, to draw the People from His Majeſties Government, which is of a moſt dangerous conſequence to the Realm and State. His Book is of above 1000 Pages; and he dealt with one Michael Sparkes for the Publiſhing, Licenſing, and Printing thereof, who is a perſon that is a common Publiſher of unlawful and unlicenſed Books; and dealt alſo with Mr. Buckner, another Defendant for the allowing of it for the Preſs; and with the other Four Defendants to Print part of it, and Publiſh the ſame: and by this means this Volume was allowed and publiſhed, to the great ſcandal of the whole Realm; and to have this puniſhed according to the demerit of the Cauſe, is the end of Mr. Attorney's Information.

Mr. Atkins of Lincolns-Inn (afterwards a Judge in the Court of Common-Pleas) opened Mr. Prynn's Anſwer; and Pleaded,

Mr. Prynn's Anſwer in Star-Chamber.

That he the ſaid Mr. Prynn, taking into his ſerious Conſideration the frequent reſort of ſundry ſorts of People to common Stage-plays about the City of London; and having read divers Councils, Laws and Statutes of this and other Realms, againſt the frequenting of common Stage-plays, and the Judgment and Opinion of ſeveral Divines, and other Ancient Authors, and divers Engliſh Writers allowed by publick Authority, and his own Judgment running with thoſe; not intending to reflect, or to have relation to the King, Queen, State, or Government, or your Lordſhips, did about Seven years ago compile this Book Entituled Hiſtrio-maſtix; which is no more but a Collection of divers Arguments and Authorities againſt common Stage-Plays. That about Four years ſince he did commit the ſame to Michael Sparkes, one of the Defendants, to be commended to ſuch Perſons as then had Authority to Licenſe Books for the Preſs. Sparkes did carry it to Mr. King, belonging to the late Arch-biſhop of Canterbury; and before he had perus'd this Book, Mr. Buckner had Authority to allow of the Books to the Preſs: Sparkes brought this Book to Mr. Buckner, who kept it by him Three Months, in which time he did fully peruſe it. In the interim, he gave part of the Book to Sparkes to print, and kept the reſt till he had perus'd it, and ſaid that he ſhould have that alſo to the Preſs. In October following he carried this Copy with the Licenſe, and cauſed them to be entred into Stationers-Hall, and did compound with thoſe that had Authority for the Printing of this Book. It was printed publickly, and not ſecretly; and becauſe there were ſome of the Copies cloſe written, he cauſed thoſe to be brought again to peruſe, to the intent that he might not be deceived in them; and as he ſaw cauſe, corrected them accordingly. That in Eaſter Term was Twelve-month, the Epiſtle, and the whole firſt

firſt part of the Book was printed; and he had time to examine it between Eaſter Term and Trinity, and then he did make ſuch Alterations as he ſaw cauſe, viz. in Page 711. &c. and afterwards the Second Part, and Two Sheets of the Index of the Book was likewiſe Printed, and theſe were likewiſe brought to Mr. Buckner; ſo that the whole Book, with the Index, was bound up about Chriſtmas following, which was Chriſtmas was a Twelve-month. Mr. Buckner ſent for Mr. Prynn; and the Stationer was deſirous that the Book might be Publiſhed, and that he might ſend ſome Volumes to him; but Mr. Buckner ſaid he could wiſh the word (Pity) in ſuch a Page might be left out, and I wiſh with Mr. Buckner, that Pity may be added to every Page of the Book. So when Mr. Prynn ſaw all this from him, that had Licence to allow Printed Books, he conceived it a ſufficient Warrant for his Proceedings. And for that which is alledged in the Information of Mr. Prynn's commending Dr. Leighton, for which the Dr. receiv'd a Cenſure in this Court, in the Quotation whereof, viz. his Book, and of others, he adhereth to their meaning ſo far as, and wherein they are agreeable to the Law; and this Book was printed long before Dr. Leighton was queſtion'd in this Court. And as for encouraging of others to be factious or ſeditious, he ſaith upon his Oath, That he was ſo far from Diſloyalty, Schiſm, or Sedition, or neglect of the King, State, or Government, that he hath with much Joy, Cheerfulneſs, and Thankfulneſs to God, ever acknowledged his, and the reſt of the King's Subjects Happineſs, by the Peace we have under His Majeſties happy Government; and this Anſwer and Intention is ſincere, though other conſtruction he made thereupon. He ſaith he hath taken his Oath of Supremacy and Allegiance in the Univerſity and Inns of Court, where he hath taken his Degrees. That it never came into his thoughts to approve of Schiſm or Sedition: and if any thing in his Book, contrary to his meaning, hath a miſ-conſtruction towards His Majeſties Government, State, or your Lordſhips, he doth proſtitute himſelf at His Majeſties Royal Feet, and crave Pardon and Grace. And he doth appeal to your Lordſhips Interpretations of thoſe Parts of his Book; and doth withal deſire your Lordſhips favour, and to take it into your Conſideration, that he hath been a year Priſoner in the Tower: and this is the ſubſtance of his Anſwer.

Mr. Jenkins of Grayes-Inn opened the Anſwer for Four of the Defendants.

Firſt, for the Poor Widow he ſaith, for any manner of combination, or knowledge of this Book, or of the Contents of it &c. ſhe knoweth nothing. For the reſt, they all ſay, they being Illiterate, were not able to judge, whether it were fit to paſs the Preſs, or not; That the Book was Licenſed to be Printed, allowed after it was Printed, and before it was Publiſhed, and it was Entred in the Stationers-Hall, and the Warden there allowed and ſubſcribed it to be a Book paſſable. The Book hath been Three years in the Preſs. All this time was ſpent before it was printed: there were Searches made during this time, and they came unto the Preſs. They ſaw the Book there in a publick way, and not in Corners, or privately Printed, as is alledged in the Information; and it was Printed and Publiſhed, and ſome of the Books ſold by Sparkes: and Sparkes ſaith the Printing of this Book coſt him almoſt 300 l. and ſaith upon his Oath he ſold not many Books.

And for the Charge upon him of being a common Printer of unlawful Books, he ſaith, he hath proſpered in his Calling; and ſome other Stationers having an Eye upon him for his thrift, have envied him in publiſhing of Books; and leaveth it to my Lords the Biſhops, to know what ſucceſs he hath had in the High-Commiſſion.

Mr. Lightfoot of Grays-Inn opened Mr. Buckners Anſwer.

He ſaith, that he was Chaplain to the late Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, and doth approve of the Church without any ſcruple, and of all the Ceremonies of England. Church-muſick he doth allow of; bowing at the Name of Jeſus: Plays, Muſick and Dancing, he doth eſteem them juſt and lawful. And for thoſe Cenſures againſt Eccleſiaſtical Perſons in this Book, he doth, and ever did abhor and deteſt them. He confeſſeth he Licenſed part of the Book, but never gave order to diſperſe the Book: but when he heard it was publiſhed, he did endeavour to ſuppreſs it; and to the reſt of the Information pleadeth Not Guilty.

Then Mr. Noy Attorney-General ſpake as followeth.

Mr. Noy pleads againſt Mr. Prynn.

This Volume of Mr. Prynns is written by himſelf without the help of any man. There are paſſages in it that reflect upon the King, State and Government, &c. other things reflect upon the Church and Clergy; but for that there is no Charge in the Information, which I did conceive fitter to be left out, and withal I received a Command for the ſame: therefore finding the Church ſo deeply wounded by Mr. Prynn, I do leave Her to avenge Herſelf of him, and to inflict ſuch puniſhment on him as he deſerves. I ſhall be an humble ſuitor to the Court, that they would be pleaſed to commend the proſecution of thoſe things that concern the Church to the High-Commiſſion. There are divers particulars wherewith he is not charged within the Information by way of Crime, and ſo it is not proper now to bring him into queſtion for them: as for mentioning of Ceremonies, &c. of Dedicating Paul's to Diana; of the Diſcipline of the Church; the complaint of new-erected Altars. I wonder what Altars he means, I hope the Church will examine him in due time; as alſo who he means by his Modern Innovators in the Church, and by Cringing and Ducking to Altars, a fit term to beſtow upon the Church; he learned it of the Canters, being uſed among them. The Muſick in the Church, the charitable term he giveth it is, Not to be a Noiſe of Men, but rather a Bleating of Bruit Beaſts; Choriſters bellow the Tenor, as it were Oxen; bark a Counter-point as a Kennel of Dogs; roar out a Treble, like a ſort of Bulls; grunt out a Baſe, as it were a number of Hogs: his complaint for ſuppreſſing Repetitions by way of Conventicles; alſo his general Cenſure of all the Biſhops, and of all the Clergy; they ſcorn to feed the Poor; the Silk and Satin Di- vines; very charitable terms upon them of the Church! Chriſtmas, as it is kept, is a Devils Chriſtmas; nay he doth beſtow a great number of pages to make men affect the name of Puritan, as though Chriſt were a Puritan, and ſo he ſaith in his Index. Then concerning the Images in the Church, he ſpeaketh againſt them, and putteth that now in Print, which was contained in an Anſwer in this Court. Alſo for the Sabbath-day, whether to begin on Saturday night, and end on Sunday at ſix of the Clock. Theſe are things proper to the examination of the Church; and whatſoever becometh of the reſt of the Cauſe in this Court; yet I commend theſe things to the Conſideration of the Church. I wonder what the man means to bring theſe things under the Title of Stage-Players; Pluralities under the Title Stage-Players. He had an end in it; he had an end in it.

Now concerning the Book it ſelf.

This Book, ſaid Mr. Noy, it is the witneſs, it doth teſtifie what was his intention, and by the Book he is to be judged. If it had been found in the Street, and of Mr. Prynns Compiling, and brought to this Court, and conſideration taken of it, the Court would proceed without a Party againſt Mr. Prynn. And here Mr. Attorney recited a Precedent of one that wrote a Book, and it was brought to the Council. It was demanded who was the Accuſer? Anſwer was made, the Book was the Accuſer. Shall the Heretick go unpuniſhed? This Book it is Mr. Prynn's doing, he doth put his Name to it, he ſwears that he did write it all.

Then for the time of Compiling it; ſeven or eight years ago it was Compiled, and is grown ſeaven times bigger than at the firſt. Mr. Prynn about eight years ſince ſhewed it to Dr. Goade, who told him ſo good cauſes of diſlike, that might make any reaſonable man give it over. About ſeven years ago he came to Dr. Harris to deſire his opinion of the Book; and he told him it was unfit, and unworthy to come to the Preſs. In the Parliament-time, before the year 1630, he gave ſome part of it to be Printed; but it came not to Mr. Buckner long after. Sparks ſaid he would Print any thing in Parliament-time.

Now we are to Conſider two things, from the firſt Compiling and Printing of this Book, to the laſt.

Firſt, how it grew in Volume; for after it was delivered to the Preſs, it hath grown up with divers things, which then were impoſſible to be known at that time, when it was delivered to the Preſs; which appeareth by this. In 1628 was the Parliament, and in 1631 St. George began to look abroad into the World. This man beſtows eight whole pages upon St. George, for being ſo bold to look out. He ſaith, that St. George the Arrian was a Cappadocian, though born in Cilicia, a Part or Province of Cappadocia, &c. and that St. George his Advocate was an Engliſhman born in Gloceſter; and that St. Baſil the Great was Biſhop of Caſarea in Cappadocia, the Native Country of St. George the Arrian. Certainly he could could not tell that St. George would then remove himſelf abroad, or in the County of Glouceſter, &c. at that time: but this man did go on according to the occaſion in 1628. A Woman 1628 acted a part of a Stage-play, at Black-friers; he ſpends many pages about this.

We all know what time the Dearth was, three years ago, he taketh occaſion not to paſs it over. He maketh a long Diſcourſe of Playes, Maſques, &c. in the late penurious times, how they were as expenceful as the Wars were. This is to ſhew how by pieces it did grow bigger from time to time.

All Stage-Players he terms them Rogues: in this he doth falſify the very Act of Parliament, for unleſs they go abroad they are not Rogues. The ſame term he giveth unto Scholars Acting. Mr. Prynn had a purpoſe, not only in this to fall upon Stage-Plays, but upon the Body of the Common-wealth, and to infuſe it into mens minds, that we are now turning into Paganiſm and Gentiliſm. He falleth upon thoſe things that have not Relation to Stage-plays, Muſick, Muſick in the Church, Dancing, New-years-gifts, whether Witchery or not? Witchery, Church-ceremonies, &c. indiſtinctly he falleth upon them; then upon Altars, Images, Hair of Men and Women, Biſhops and Bonfires. Cards and Tables do offend him, and Peruques do fall within the compaſs of his Theme. St. George never offended him; but all this is to the end to bring a belief among the people, that we are returning back again to Paganiſm. His end is therefore to perſwade men to go and ſerve God in another Country, as many are gone already, and ſet up new Laws and Phancies among themſelves. Conſider what may come of it.

It may be fit enough and lawful to write againſt Plays, by men that have a Miſſion; and they muſt do their errand in mannerly Terms, and in the ſame Terms as other men expect to bear with them.

Mr. Prynn had no Miſſion to meddle with theſe things, to ſee whether men ſhould not return to Gentiliſm; the Terms which he uſeth are ſuch as he finds among the Oyſter-Women at Billingsgate, or at the Common Condudit. He hath raked up all the vile Terms that could be found.

Now to prove that this is Mr. Prynn's Book, read Mr. Prynn's Examination, Inter. 5*th* (which being read, was to this effect) That Mr. Prynn, without the help of any other, did Write, Pen and Compile the whole Book, called Hiſtrio-maſtix, and the Epiſtle before the Book, and the Index and Table following.

Now for the publiſhing of this Book, it doth appear by the Depoſition of Dr. Goade, that about eight years ſince, Mr. Prynn did bring a Book to him in writing, of about a Quire of Paper, concerning Stage-Plays, to have the ſame Licenſed, but he held it unfit to be allowed; and doth well remember, that as to his Argument of the unlawfulneſs for a Man to put on Womans Apparel, he put Mr. Prynn this Queſtion; Suppoſe Mr. Prynn your ſelf, as a Chriſtian, were perſecuted by Pagans, think you not, if you did diſguiſe your ſelf in your Maids Apparel, you did well? Who anſwered, that he thought himſelf rather bound to yield to death than to do ſo.

An. 1633.

Dr. Harris alſo depoſed, that about ſeven years ago, Mr. Prynn came to him to Licenſe a Treatiſe concerning Stage-plays, but he would not allow of the ſame. So this man did deliver this Book when it was young and tender, and would have had it then Printed; but it is ſince grown ſeven times bigger, and ſeven times worſe.

Noy. We ſhall now prove when it went to the Preſs.

Read Auſtin the Stationer to Interrogatory the 28*th*, which being read, was to this effect; That the ſaid Book called Hiſtrio-maſtix, was given to this Deponent, in, or about the laſt Parliament, at which time ſeven Sheets thereof were Printed, at this Deponents Houſe; which this Deponent ſo Printed, at the requeſt of Mr. Prynn and Mr. Sparkes; upon Mr. Prynn's information, that it was Licenſed, and that he would bring the hand of the Licenſer unto it: But this Deponent did refuſe to Print any more of the ſame.

Read Joſeph H. to prove that Sparkes would ſet upon it unlicenſed in Parliament-time to Inter. 26, who ſaith, that the Defendant Sparkes did, in the time of the laſt Parliament, Print, or cauſe to be Printed divers Books without Licenſe; whereof ſome were Mr. Prynn's, ſome were Mr. Burton's Works: and this Deponent hath heard Sparkes ſay, he durſt Print any thing in Parliament-time.

Another part of the Charge was managed by Mr. Maſon of Lincolns-Inn, reckoning up the number of Epithets, wherewith Mr. Prynn had aſperſed all ſorts of People; and he ſaid, that it was a Libel, not only againſt the State, but againſt every particular Perſon; and proved the Charge by divers paſſages contained in the Book, Fol. 201, &c.

Afterward Mr. Noy proceeded in the farther making good of his Charge againſt Mr. Prynn.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

As he hath fallen foul upon all Things, all Perſons, all Sexes; upon the Magiſtrates, upon the Houſhold of the King; ſo he hath not ſpared the King himſelf. I am ſorry I ſhall have occaſion to ſpeak any thing of it; but there is a great deal too much in his Book. My Lords, After he hath made all theſe complaints as intolerable, he falleth upon all indiſtinctly, and never taketh upon him to diſcern to make a diſtinction, that there may be a toleration, but falleth foul upon every thing, that we are falling into Paganiſm; men and women are naught: he ſpareth not the King himſelf, but takes upon him to teach a remedy; the remedy is worſe than the Diſeaſe. What hateful compariſons he bringeth with other Princes? As Nero; and ſpeaketh of the conſuming of the Treaſure of the Realm with Maſques, and of the late penurious Times; a baſe word! a declaration of Infamy upon Princes, with ſuch like Concluſions as theſe are. When all this is done, he teacheth the Remedy not by way of Precept, but by way of Example; invites men to read John Mariana, and two Grave Authors more, he ſaith men not cenſured. I am very ſorry I am to ſpeak any thing wherein the King ſhould be named, but he would not forbear it when the Pen was in his Hand; ſome of the Words are ſo Naſty that I will not ſpeak them.

After Mr. Attorney-General had ſpoken, he called for theſe paſſages, amongſt others, in Hiſtrio-maſtix, to be read, viz.

To his much Honoured Friends, the Right Worſhipful Maſters of the Bench of the Honourable Flouriſhing Law-Society of Lincolns-Inn.

HAving, upon my firſt arrival here in London, heard and ſeen in four ſeveral Plays (to which the preſſing importunity of ſome Ill-acquaintance drew me, while I was yet a Novice) ſuch wickedneſs, ſuch lewdneſs as then made my penitent Heart to loath, my Conſcience to abhor all Stage-Players ever ſince; and having then likewiſe obſerved ſome woful experiments of the Lewd, Miſchievous fruits of Plays, of Play-Houſes in ſome young Gentlemen of my acquaintance; who though Civil and Chaſt at firſt, became ſo Vitious, Prodigal, Incontinent, debauched (yea ſo far paſt all hopes of amendment) in half a years ſpace or leſs, by their reſort to Plays, where Whores and Lewd Companions had inveagled them; that after many eſſays of their much deſired reformation, two of them were caſt off and utterly diſinherited by their loving Parents; whom I heard oft complaining, even with Tears, that Plays and Play-Houſes had undone their Children, to their no ſmall vexation, (a good Caveat for all Young Students to keep themſelves from Play-Houſes, by theſe two Youngſters harms.) Hereupon I reſolved, out of a deſire of the publick Good, to oppugn theſe common Vice-fomenting-Evils: for which purpoſe about ſeven years ſince, recollecting thoſe Play-condemning paſſages, which I had met with in the Fathers and other Authors, I digeſted them into one intire Written Diſcourſe, which having ſince that time enlarged beyond its intended Bulk, becauſe I ſaw the number of Players, Play-Books, Play-Haunters and Play-Houſes ſtill increaſing; there being above forty thouſand Play-Books Printed within theſe two years (as Stationers inform me) they being now more vendible than the choiſeſt Sermons; two old Play-Houſes being alſo lately re-edified, enlarged, and one new Theatre erected: the multitude of our London Play-Haunters being ſo augmented now, that all the Antient Devils Chappels (for ſo the Fathers ſtyle all Play-Houſes) being five in number, are not ſufficient to contain their Troops; whence we ſee a ſixth now added to them: whereas even in Vitious Nero's Reign there were but three ſtanding Theatres in Pagan Rome, though far more ſpatious than our Chriſtian London, and thoſe three two many. Hereupon I firſt commended it, being thus augmented, to the Licenſer, and from him unto the Preſs, where it hath lingred longer than I did expect; which being now at laſt brought forth into the World, in ſuch a Play-adoring Age, that is like to bid defiance to it; I here bequeath it to your worthy Patronage, to whom it was firſt Devoted, not caring how it fares abroad, ſo it may do good and pleaſe at home.

An. 1633. In the next place Mr. Attorney Noy cauſed to be read out of the Book of Hiſtrio-maſtix, ſuch Paſſages, as were ſcandalous to the King and Government, as Fol. 312, &c.

Mr. Atkins in defence of Mr. Prynn, ſaid, That

The Eloquence of thoſe Gentlemen who argued againſt Mr. Prynn, made an expoſition which was no part of his intention, in which point he would endeavour to clear him; and the way was by letting their Lordſhips know, that many paſſages in that Book are only Relatively ſpoken, and not Poſitive, and moſt of them are but the affirmations of other Authors of ſeveral kinds and profeſſions: as where it is ſaid, that ſuch incarnate Devils as frequent Plays, &c. he ſpeaketh by the way of common frequenting of Plays, leſt they prove incarnate Devils; and ſo of Ladies that caſt of their Nature and Modeſty, that is relatively ſpoken by frequenting Plays, laſcivious Dancing, &c. and when he ſpeaketh of thoſe in a continual propoſition, his Argument is thus;

‘That which doth ordinarily (if not always) defile the Eyes, ‘the Ears, and Souls both of the Actors and Spectators, by ingen‘dring, by exciting Meretricious, Luſtful, Lewd, Adulterous De‘ſires and Affections in their Hearts, or by inſtigating, by prepa‘ring, by inducting them to actual uncleanneſs, muſt needs be ‘abominable and unlawful unto Chriſtians; but theſe Stage-Plays, &c. therefore they muſt needs be abominable. And there is none but Whores, Panders, or foul incarnate Devils, who dare control that Minor truth.

My Lords,

He doth not condemn New-years-Gifts, but acknowledges them to be as tokens and teſtimonies of favour and reſpect from Superiours to their Inferiours; and for dancing, (under favour) he doth not condemn it at all; he hath commended the ſame as ſingle, and dancing the Meaſures. And for dancing in great men and Princes, he doth proteſt it was far from his thought to compare theſe times to Nero's, under ſo Pious and Religious a Prince as we have, and by whom we receive ſo much happineſs. That had been ſo impious and unworthy, that he could by no means make any Apology; but as well his Perſon as his Pen ſhould have been deteſtable, if he had made any ſuch compariſon.

And where he doth ſpeak that Dancing and Maſquing, have been near as expenceful as the Warrs, in that he means in Henry the 8*ths* time, and not in theſe days; as I take it, he ſpeaks there of a Hiſtory, that doth expreſs the great charge in that time.

I ſhall deſire, as I did begin in the opening of his Anſwer, that he may lay faſt hold upon the Rock of the Kings Favour and Mercy, and Compaſſion of this Court; and what his intentions are, they are beſt known to his own heart, his expreſſions known to your Lordſhips. I cannot condemn his Heart, I will not excuſe his Pen.

This if your Lordſhips will give me leave I ſhall ſay; I have long known him in a Society of Inns of Court, where he has lived; and for his ordinary diſcourſes (except the matters in this Book) they have not been factious or ſeditious. But now he is before your Lordſhips, truly for my part, I compare him to the condition of an Aſtronomer, that fixed his Eyes ſo much upon the Stars, that he did not look to his Feet, and ſo fell into a Ditch: for his Eyes were ſo fixed upon this Subject, upon the common reſort to Stage-Playes, and the great abuſe that comes by them, that he forgot to look down to his hand that guided his Pen, which now bringeth him under your Lordſhips cenſure.

That I may not offend the patience of this Court, (the Court is full, and the expectation is great;) I will conclude with all humility, and wiſh and crave, that he who is the ſupreme Judge, may be with your Lordſhips in this matter, and may be over all your good Thoughts, Judgements and Sentences this day, in this cauſe of this poor Gentleman. And this is all I humbly offer in defence.

The next day of hearing, Mr. Holborn of Councel with Mr. Prynn, ſpake thus;

My Lords,

Mr. Holborn pleads for Mr. Prynn.

I am aſſigned Councellor with Mr. Prynn. The information is for publiſhing in Print a Libell or Volume of Libells againſt King, Queen, State, &c. My Lords, for Mr. Prynn, he doth humbly caſt himſelf at your Lordſhips Feet. For the Book, I muſt ſay, he doth humbly ſubmit himſelf to your Lordſhips; yet, my Lords, his heart will not give him leave to ſay, that he is guilty of thoſe groſs Offences, that are laid to his Charge. He confeſſeth himſelf to be juſtly brought before your Lordſhips for his ill expreſſions, which may prove an occaſion of ſcandal by miſconſtruction, and ſo ſome dangerous principle may be infuſed into the Subjects: And he beggeth your Lordſhips to conſider of them, according to the intentions of his heart, which were fair and honeſt, though harſh in expreſſion, that he may receive a favourable conſtruction, for that he citeth his Authors, and their Words, and not his own. And for that he medleth with matters not proper to Stage-Plays, as in mentioning the Sabbath, his meaning was, Stage-Plays upon the Sabbath day: his mentioning Habits and Recreations, was in relation to men putting on Womens Habits, and unlawful Recreation at Plays, and ſo he conceives them not altogether impertinent.

For the manner of his Writing, he is heartily ſorry, that his ſtile is ſo bitter, and his imputations ſo unlimited and general; yet in this, he was led thereunto by Authors in the like caſe, which he offers for his excuſe; he hopes his paſſion againſt theſe abuſes by Plays may a little plead his excuſe.

Now for the manner and matter alledged againſt him out of his own Book, in that he hopes your Lordſhips favour: he ſaith, that thoſe that are Judges of the Book for Licenſing, they are guilty of the matter, and he hopeth that this Book doth differ from all the Books brought into this Court; for here are none brought but ſuch as are Unlicenſed, and this is Licenſed: and he ſubmitteth thus to that point.

My Lords, as to the general end and intention of his Book, he ſweareth, that the general reſort unto Plays was the firſt occaſion, and his end was for the reformation of the abuſe of it, and no otherwiſe; and then, my Lords, he hopeth he ſhall not incur your Lordſhips ſevere Cenſure. He did not ſend the Book beyond the Seas to be Printed, but Printed it here, and it was three years in the Preſs, and Licenſed and publiſhed.

And my Lords, the Declaration to the Information of this Court, ſpeaketh ſomething to his Intentions, viz. to whom he dedicated this Book, and he diſperſed it himſelf to men of known integrity; and certainly if his heart had been guilty of thoſe foul crimes, he would not have preſented one of theſe Books to Mr. Attorney Noy himſelf. He did not abſent himſelf as one guilty of ſuch offences would have done; he was ſo far from having diſloyalty, that he doth commend the King and State, and that could not be with an intention againſt King and State. And all the charges that lye upon him for his foul intentions, are but inferences upon his Book, and conſequences, and ſuch of them only that be ſtrained, and not of neceſſity.

The next thing charged upon him is Perjury, for that he ſaid he ſhewed no part of this Book to any before it was ſhewn to Sparkes; yet it was proved by Dr. Harris and Dr. Goad, that they ſaw it many years ago. As to this he ſaith, they ſpeak only of his Book concerning Plays, containing a quire of Paper, and that it is true, he did ſhew them ſuch a Book; but that Book was not this Book, though they be of one Subject and matter, yet they differ much in form and frame.

Then Mr. Hern ſpake on his behalf as followeth.

Mr. Hern pleads on the behalf of Mr. Prynn.

My Lords,

We that are aſſigned Councel for Mr. Prynn, do come with great diſadvantage, both in number and Judgements, conſidering the great ability of the Kings Councel, who have ſpoken againſt us. If the conſtruction they have made be theirs, then clearly we are (as they would have us) to fall deep by your Lordſhips Sentence.

The weight of this Cauſe, and the aggravations upon it by the Kings Councel, made me the laſt day (without deſire of my Client) to crave farther time, for we durſt not then give any anſwer. All that I can now ſay is, that your Lordſhips would look upon the intentions of his Heart, in that he hath explained himſelf as fair as any man can do by his Oath; how is it poſſible to make other proof of the clear intentions of his heart, than by his Oath? His Oath is admitted as proof againſt him, in the acknowledgement of his Book; and ſhall it not be admitted to him, to clear the integrity of his heart? We beſeech your Lordſhips to look upon him, as not writing theſe things out of perverſeneſs of ſpirit, but out of the abundance of his heart tranſported with zeal againſt the growing evils, which have befaln many of this Nation, and ſome of his own acquaintance, by their frequenting of Stage-Plays. We that know him, muſt ſay as far as our knowledge will give us leave, that in all paſſages that have faln from him, to us he hath expreſſed himſelf full of Devotion and Duty to His Majeſty and the Queen; and ſhall humbly take leave to offer ſome paſſages out of his Book, which do bear evidence, that he doth ſpeak well of both their Majeſties, and of the State; and that by inferences and diſtinctions there made: and what is it but Inferences made out of other paſſages of his Book, which doth reflect upon him? Which paſſages were opened by the Councel, but not read.

The Court proceeds to give their Judgement.

Three Star-Chamber days having been ſpent in the hearing of this Cauſe, the Lords ſate the fourth day to proceed to Sentence, which held till four of the Clock in the afternoon; and they paſſed ſuch ſentence on Mr. Prynn, as is expreſſed in the enſuing ſpeeches, which in effect comprehend all that was ſaid by others.

The firſt was of Francis Lord Cottington, Chancellor of the Exchequer, whoſe turn was to begin firſt to ſpeak, as being in the loweſt degree of quality by his place; and commonly he that beginneth, as he openeth the matter at large, ſo he inclineth thereby many Lords to forbear making of Speeches, and only to declare themſelves to concur in Sentence with him that began firſt, or with ſome other Lord that ſpake before, as their Judgements lead them.

My Lords (ſaid my Lord Cottington.)

Lord Cottingtons ſentence of Mr. Prynn, and other Defendants.

His Majeſties Attorney General hath brought Mr. Prynn before your Lordſhips, with other Defendants Thomas Buckner, Michael Spark, &c. It is for publiſhing a Libellous Book, or Volume of Libels, to the ſcandal of His Majeſty and the State. To my underſtanding it may be more properly ſaid, the great and high malice of Mr. Prynn publiſhed and declared in that Libellous Book; a malice expreſſed in a manner againſt all mankind, and the beſt ſort of Mankind, againſt King, Prince, Peers, Prelates, Magiſtrates and Governors, and truly in a manner againſt all things. But that which hath been more remarkable, is his ſpleen againſt the Church and Government of it; therefore for that I will not ſentence him, (becauſe Mr. Attorney doth forbear to proſecute againſt him, for that which belongeth to the Church,) yet it is an argument of his great and high malice: and when I conſider of that, which hath been ſo often repeated, that he writ this Book alone, ſurely he was aſſiſted immediately by the Devil himſelf, or rather he hath aſſiſted the Devil. He hath written a Book againſt the due reverence and honour, which all Chriſtians owe to our Saviour Jeſus, this doth convince my Judgement againſt him; but the Book (as Mr. Attorney ſaith,) declares the man, it is the witneſs: And if your Lordſhips obſerve the particulars and ſtile of it, you will ſay it is a ſtrange thing; the very ſtile doth declare the intent of the man, and that is (as Mr. Attorney ſaid,) to work a diſcontent and diſlike in the Kings people againſt the Church and Government, and diſobedience to our gracious Soveraign the King. If Mr. Prynn ſhould be demanded what he would have, he liketh nothing, no State or Sex; Muſick, Dancing, &c. unlawful even in Kings; no kind of Recreation, no kind of Entertainment, no, not ſo much as Hawking, all are damned. The very truth is, Mr. Prynn would have a new Government, he would have a new Church, he would have new Laws, new Entertainment, God knows what he would have; a new King he would have, and have all the people

An. 1633. ple of his mind, to be diſcontented with their King and Government.

Mr. Prynn confeſſeth he did write the Book, and it's true he did endeavour the Printing of it, and the Publiſhing of it, this is proved very well; yea but Mr. Prynn had no other intention but a tenderneſs of Conſcience, he meant no hurt to the King or State, (as his Councel ſaid:) but Mr. Attorney anſwered them, that he is not the Declarer of his Intentions, he muſt be judged by the Book, by his Words, more certainly by the effect; for all good men do receive ſcandal by this Book, and all of Mr. Prynns humour were glad of this Book. When I conſider what kind of Libel it is, it is not like other Libels: other Libels have been by perſons diſcontented, ſome poor Rogues, ſcattered up and down; but here's a Libel in folio, and in Print, and juſtifieth it ſelf by Authors with an high hand, That is there, and that is there. And, (my Lords,) when I conſider thoſe high paſſages in his Book, I proteſt unto you they are things to be abhorred; they are not ſpoken relatively (as his Councel would have it) but poſitively, That our Engliſh Ladies, Shorn and Frizled Madams, have loſt their Modeſty; that the Devil is only honoured in Dancing; that Plays are the chief delight of the Devil; that they that frequent Plays are damned, and ſo are all that do not concur with him in his opinion, Whores, Panders, foul Incarnate Devils, Judaſes to their Lord and Maſter, &c. Princes dancing in their own Perſons, his cenſure of them is Infamous, &c. But the fouleſt of all is, That this was the cauſe of untimely ends in Princes.

My Lords,

Shall not all that hear theſe things think, that it is the Mercy of the King that Mr. Prynn is not deſtroyed? have we not ſeen men lately condemned to be hanged and quartered for far leſs matters? One (Pinchman) I was my ſelf imployed with others in the examining of him; he confeſſed, that the writing for which he was queſtioned was a Sermon, that he did intend to Preach: the words were againſt the perſon of the King, yet he never Preached it; yet becauſe he had written it with an intention to preach it, he was brought upon this point and condemned to dye. But this Book is in Print; it is againſt all Magiſtrates, and particularly againſt the King our Soveraign, and his bleſſed Conſort. And yet, my Lords, it pleaſeth his Majeſty to let Mr. Prynn have his Trial here. I will not trouble your Lordſhips with any more parts of the Book: Mr. Attorney noted unto your Lordſhips, that you ſhould ſee how neceſſary it was, that Mr. Prynn ſhould be clean cut off, as one that hath a long time endeavoured to move the People to diſobedience againſt the King, &c. So I ſay with Mr. Attorney, it is high time that Mr. Prynn may be cut off ſo far as may go with the cenſure of this Court. My Lords, Mr. Prynn is better dealt withal, than he would have Princes dealt with; he hath had very fair trials.

For his Defence, I took notice of it likewiſe, I do remember that all thoſe Gentlemen, that were imployed and aſſigned as Councel for his Defence, every one of them began to crave Mercy of the Court; yet they came with a defence and juſtification, ſo far as their cauſe would bear. Mr. Holborn ſaid, that for Players they were Rogues by the Statute: yet Mr. Attorney ſaid, they are not Rogues Rogues by the Statute, unleſs they wander, &c. My Lords, he ſaid, his intention was againſt Publick and Common-Plays, yet ſeek all his Book thorow, and you ſhall find it is againſt Plays in Princes Palaces. His intention now muſt be underſtood by his Book, and by his words; and that which he doth apply of any Author is his own. And I think his defence did aggravate his offence. As to his defence againſt the Ladies, he ſaith, he ſpeaketh it Relatively and not Poſitively, yet he ſaith, our Engliſh Ladies are ſo and ſo whoriſh, &c. And for that part of his Book, wherein he condemns Murder, Mr. Prynn will have Murder unlawful, but execution of Princes is not Murder, and therefore that is a lawful act. Mr. Attorney ſaid well, the end of this man and John * Mariana, &c. they are all one, they all cry malice againſt Princes.

* A Jeſuite.

I ſhall humbly crave pardon, and diſcharge my Conſcience, and ſhall let your Lordſhips ſee, how I do underſtand the ſenſe, and that ſo I am to judge, and I conceive it to be as your Lordſhips ſee, that the malice in this Book is againſt King and State, and, my Lords, with this I Sentence Mr. Prynn.

Mr. Prynns Sentence.

I do in the firſt place begin Cenſure with his Book; I condemn it to be burnt, in the moſt publick manner that can be. The manner in other Countries is, (where ſuch Books are, to be burnt by the Hang-man, though not uſed in England, (yet I wiſh it may, in reſpect of the ſtrangeneſs and hainouſneſs of the matter contained in it) to have a ſtrange manner of burning; therefore I ſhall deſire it may be ſo burnt by the Hand of the Hang-man.

If it may agree with the Court, I do adjudge Mr. Prynn to be put from the Barr, and to be for ever uncapable of his Profeſſion. I do adjudge him (my Lords) That the Society of Lincolns-Inn do put him out of the Society; and becauſe he had his Offspring from Oxford (now with a low voice ſaid the Biſhop of Canterbury, I am ſorry that ever Oxford bred ſuch an evil Member) there to be degraded. And I do condemn Mr. Prynn to ſtand in the Pillory in two Places, in Weſtminſter and Cheapſide, and that he ſhall loſe both his Ears, one in each Place, and with a Paper on his Head, declaring how foul an Offence it is, viz. That it is for an Infamous Libel againſt both their Majeſties State and Government. And laſtly, (nay not laſtly) I do condemn him in 5000 l. Fine to the King. And laſtly, perpetual Impriſonment.

There are other Defendants, Thomas Buckner, whom I conceive to be the Chaplain charg'd with the Licenſing of the Book. I obſerve, that Mr. Attorney hath little or nothing proſecuted againſt him. It is ſaid he did combine with the Writer and Stationer for this infamous Libel. It doth appear that he did Licenſe it, or at leaſt 64 Pages thereof; I think it be alſo true, that Mr. Buckner did ſee the Book after it was printed. It is ſaid, for his excuſe, That Mr. Buckner was cozen'd and ſurpriz'd by Mr. Prynn and Sparkes, but it's plain he Licenſed it, or at leaſt 64 Pages; therefore I ſhall judge according to the Proof, as it is the uſual Cuſtom of this Court. I muſt judge Mr. Buckner to be worthy of a very ſharp Sentence, for certainly there is a very great inconvenience faln upon the State, for want of due Examination: To what purpoſe is there an Examination of Books, if there ſhall be a connivnce and winking at the Party that doth it? I ſhall think Mr. Buckner not only worthy of a ſevere Reprehenſion, but I ſhall Cenſure him firſt to have Impriſonment according to the courſe of the Court, and 50 l. Fine to the King.

Sparkes's Sentence.

Now (my Lords) the next is Michael Sparke, and he is the 3*d*, and he is the Printer of the Book, and Binder, and Publiſher thereof. In his defence he hath ſhewed your Lordſhips a piece of the Book Licenſed by Mr. Buckner, and ſaith it was all Licenſed but that he proves not; but that it was entred in the Stationers-Hall, that he proves. But I do find, that he perſwaded Men to buy this Book, after it was prohibited; and before it was prohibited he perſwaded Men to buy it, ſaying, It was an excellent Book, and it would be called in, and then ſell well. I do Fine Sparkes 500 l. to the King, and to ſtand in the Pillory, without touching of his Ears, with a Paper on his Head to declare his Offence, and it is moſt neceſſary in theſe times; and for the Pillory to be in Pauls Church-yard. (It is a Conſecrated Place, ſaith the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury) I cry your Grace mercy (ſaid my Lord Cottington) then let it be in Cheapſide. For the other Three, I find that Mr. Attorney doth not proſecute them, therefore, my Lords, I do not Cenſure them.

The next in courſe that ſpoke after the Lord Cottington, was the Lord Chief-Juſtice Richardſon.

Lord Chief-Juſtice Richardſon's Sentence.

My Lords,

Since I have had the Honour to attend this Court, Writing and Printing of Books have been exceedingly found fault withal, and have received a ſharp Cenſure, and it doth grow every day worſe and worſe; every Man taketh upon him to underſtand what he conceiveth, and thinks he is no body except he be in Print. We are troubled here with a Book, a Monſter, (Monſtrum Horrendum, Informe, Ingens!) It hath been a Queſtion who is the Author of this Book: Surely I am ſatisfied in my Conſcience he is the Author of it; But truly, give me leave, I do not think Mr. Prynn is the only Actor in this Book, but that there were many Heads and Hands therein beſides himſelf. I would to God in Heaven the Devil, and all elſe that had their Heads and Hands therein beſides Mr. Prynn, were, &c. for I think they are all ill-willers to the State, and deſerve ſevere puniſhment as well as Mr. Prynn doth. This Book is the ſubject of this days work, and it is annexed, by Mr. Attorney, to the very Information it ſelf.

For the Book, I do hold it a moſt ſcandalous infamous Libel to the King's Majeſty, a moſt Pious and Religious King; to the Queen's Majeſty, a moſt Excellent and Gracious Queen; ſuch a one as this Kingdom never enjoy'd the like, and I think the Earth never had a better. It is ſcandalous to all the Honourable Lords, and the Kingdom it ſelf, and to all ſorts of People. I ſay Eye never ſaw, nor Ear ever heard of ſuch a ſcandalous and ſeditious thing, as this miſhapen Monſter is. How ſcandalous a thing it is hath appeared already to your Lordſhips, by the King and Queen's Councel againſt Mr. Prynn; I will not for my part repeat.

Yet give me leave to read a word or two, where he cometh to tell your Lordſhips of the Reaſons why he writ this Book: Becauſe he ſaw the number of the Plays, Play-Books, Play-haunters, and Play-houſes ſo exceedingly increaſed, there being above forty thouſand Play-Books, being now more vendible than the choiceſt Sermons. What ſaith he in the Epiſtle Dedicatory? ſpeaking of Play-Books, They bear ſo big a Price, and are printed in far better Paper, than moſt Octavo and Quarto Bibles, which hardly find ſo good vent as they; and then come in ſuch abundance, as they exceed all number, and 'tis a years time to peruſe them over, they are ſo multiplyed; and then he putteth in the Margin Ben Johnſon &c. Printed in better Paper than moſt Bibles. Now if this be not a Tax upon the Kingdom, to print theſe Books in better Paper than the Bible it ſelf, for my part I leave it to your Lordſhips. This Monſter, this huge miſhapen Monſter, I ſay it is nothing but lies, and venom againſt all ſorts of People. It is a ſtrange thing what this Man taketh upon him. He is not like thoſe Powder-Traytors, they would have blown up all at once; this throweth all down at once to Hell together, and delivereth them over to Satan. I beſeech your Lordſhips give me leave; Stage-Plays, &c. (ſaith he) none are gainers and honoured by them, but the Devil and Hell; and when they have taken their wills in luſt here, their Souls go to Eternal Torment hereafter. And this muſt be the end of this Monſters horrible Sentence. He ſaith, So many as are in Play-houſes, are ſo many unclean Spirits; and that Play-haunters are little better than incarnate Devils. He doth not only condemn all Play-writers, but all Protectors of them, and all beholding of them; and Dancing at Plays, and Singing at Plays, they are all damned, and that no leſs than to Hell. I beſeech your Lordſhips to give me leave but in a word to read unto you what he writes of Dancing, &c. It is the Devils Profeſſion, and he that entereth into a Dance, entereth into a deviliſh Profeſſion; and ſo many paces in a Dance, ſo many paces to Hell: This is that which he conceiveth of Dancing. The Woman that ſingeth in the Dance, is the Prioreſs of the Devil, and thoſe that anſwer are Clarks, and the Beholders are the Pariſhioners, and the Muſick are Bells, and the Fidlers are the Minſtrels of the Devil. I ſaid it was a Seditious Libel; this Point of Sedition is the only thing that troubles me, and it is that which I ſhall offer to your Lordſhips: For I do not know it, the good Opinion, Heart, Will and Affections of the Kings People and Subjects are the Kings greateſt Treaſure. Now if this be ſo, then for any Man cunningly to undermine theſe things, to take away the Hearts of the Subjects from the King, and to bring the King into an ill Opinion among his People, this is a moſt damned offence; and if I were in my proper place, and Mr. Prynn brought before me, I ſhould go another way to work. I proteſt unto your Lordſhips, it maketh my Heart to ſwell, and my Blood in my Veins to boil (ſo cold as I am) to ſee this or any thing attempted, which may endanger my Gracious Sovereign; it is to me the greateſt comfort in this world to behold his Proſperity.

Much hath been ſpoken concerning theſe things, and ſomething by my Lord Cottington before me; but good my Lords, give me leave to remember you one or two Paſſages, not yet ſpoken of. He writeth thus; That Nero's acting and frequenting Plays, was the chiefeſt cauſe that ſtirred up others to conſpire his death; would any Man think, that his acting and frequenting of Plays was the chiefeſt occaſion?

He writeth in another place worſe than this. Fol. 465. Tribellius Pollio relates, That Martian, Heraclius, and Claudius, Three worthy Romans conſpired together, to murder Gallienus the Emperor, (a Man much beſotted, and taken up with Plays, to which he likewiſe drew the Magiſtrates and People by his lewd Examples) as Flavius and others conſpired Nero his Murder for the ſelf-ſame cauſe, &c. Now my Lords, that they ſhould be called Three worthy Perſons that do conſpire an Emperors death, (though a wicked Emperor) it is no Chriſtian Expreſſion.

If Subjects have an ill Prince, marry, what is the remedy? they muſt pray to God to forgive him, and not ſay they are worthy Subjects that do kill him: If they were worthy Acts, Mr. Prynn, I can tell what you are, (Mr. Prynn ſtanding, during the Cenſure, behind the Lord Chief-Juſtice Richardſon, and Arch-Biſhop Neale.) No Man will conſpire to murder a King that can be a worthy Actor. For the very thought of it is High-Treaſon. He ſpeaketh of theſe Three, that they were Three worthy Romans that did conſpire to murder Nero. This is moſt horrible, and here can be no manner of Expoſition, but in the worſt ſenſe; for his excuſe, he hath made none at all, only it was not his intention.

Good Mr. Prynn, you are a Lawyer. Intention! I know where the word ſtandeth equal, as that you may take the Intention this way, or that way, with the right-hand or left-hand, there in that Caſe you may ſpeak the Intention; but where the words are plain and poſitive, as in your Books, here is no help of Intention in the world: your words are plain and clear, therefore you can never make any defence at all out of that. Not to hold your Lordſhips any longer: My Lords, it is a moſt wicked, infamous, ſcandalous, and ſeditious Libel. Mr. Prynn, I muſt now come to my Sentence, though I am very ſorry, for I have known you long, yet now I muſt utterly forſake you; for I find that you have forſaken God, and his Religion, and your Allegiance, Obedience, and Honour, which you owe to both their Excellent Majeſties, the Rule of Charity to all Noble Ladies, and Perſons in the Kingdom, and forſaken all Goodneſs. Therefore, Mr. Prynn, I ſhall proceed to my Cenſure, wherein I agree with my Lord Cottington, as he began very well: Firſt, for the burning of the Book in as diſgraceful a manner as may be, whether in Cheap-ſide or Pauls Church-yard; for though Pauls Church-yard be a Conſecrated Place, yet Heretical Books have been burnt in that Place. And becauſe Mr. Prynn is of Lincolns-Inn, and that his Profeſſion may not ſuſtain diſgrace by his Puniſhment, I do think it fit, with my Lord Cottington, that he be put from the Bar, and degraded in the Univerſity; and I leave to my Lords the Lord Biſhops to ſee that done: and for the Pillory, I hold it juſt and equal though there were no Statute for it. In the caſe of a high Crime, it may be done by the diſcretion of the Court, ſo I do agree to that too. I Fine him 5000 l. and I know he is as well able to pay 5000 l. as one half of 1000 l. and perpetual Impriſonment I do think fit for him, and to be reſtrained from writing, neither to have Pen, Ink, nor Paper; yet let him have ſome pretty Prayer-Book, to pray to God to forgive him his ſins; but to write in good faith, I would never have him: For, Mr. Prynn, I do judge you by your Book to be an inſolent Spirit, and one that did think by this Book to have got the name of a Reformer, to ſet up the Puritan or ſeparatiſt Faction. I would not have Mr. Prynn go without a Recognition of his Offence to the King and Queens Majeſty. I agree to the Sentence on Buckner and Sparkes.

Secretary Cook.

Mr. Secretary Cooke's Speech

By this vaſt Book of Mr. Prynn, it appeareth he hath read more than he hath ſtudied, and ſtudied more than he conſidered; whereas, if he had read but one ſentence of Solomon, it had ſaved him from the danger he is now like to fall into. The Preacher ſaith, Be not over-juſt, nor make thy ſelf over-wiſe, for why wilt thou deſtroy thy ſelf? My Lords, It is a Sentence requireth much ſtudy and conſideration. It is moſt certain, that Righteouſneſs and Wiſdom are ſuch Vertues, as they help forward Juſtice; but when Wiſdom is mixed with a Mans own humours, as for the moſt part it is with Fleſh and Blood, there is danger of ſtraining it too far, and that will tend to the deſtruction of himſelf and others. Examples are too pregnant of this, and he may take it from a good Author, even from Chriſt himſelf. When his Apoſtles, out of zeal to their Maſter, would have called for Fire from Heaven againſt the Samaritans that refus'd to entertain him, the Anſwer was, You know not of what ſpirit you are. I would Mr. Prynn would have conſidered this.

There is a good Spirit that is meek, tempered with modeſty and humility, with mildneſs and with equity; and ſuch a Spirit is always tender, not to deſtroy, root up, overthrow, but to bind, repair and preſerve. But there is another fiery Spirit, which is always caſting of fire, nothing but damnation and deſtruction; certainly ſuch a Spirit ever tends to his own confuſion. And if this be well obſerved, every man ſhall find it true, that ſuch a Spirit ever cometh before deſtruction. I wiſh Mr. Prynn were not an ill Example of this. Certainly, my Lords, vice and corruption ought not only to be reprehended but to be puniſhed ſeverely, and that ſharply too where it is; but Mr. Prynn ſhould have conſidered, every Man is not a fit reprehender. He had no Invitation, nor Office nor Intereſt to imploy a Talent, which doth not belong unto him. If Magiſtrates and Princes ſhould inveigh againſt all things, and tolerate nothing, we muſt live no longer among Men; and certainly, if we will be thought to live with them that are wholly vertuous, we muſt go out of the World; we have a good Author for this. But, my Lords, a Toleration muſt be uſed, and that Mr. Prynn would have found if he had conſidered his own body: Shall a Man upon every light diſtemper and diſorder in his body take Phyſick? Or ſhall ill humors be purged till he purge all out? Certainly he will purge Spirit, Life, and all away with it. And as it is in the Natural Body, ſo it is in the Politick, there muſt be a Toleration and Connivence; it cannot be governed without it, and we have a Warrant for it. Did not Chriſt himſelf forbid the cutting out of the Tares, leſt they ſhould pluck Corn, and deſtroy that too. I think if Mr. Prynn ſhould have been asked the Queſtion that Naaman did to the Prophet, he would not at all have bid go away in peace, he would have threatned Hell and deſtruction. There is a Chriſtian Wiſdom, and there muſt be a Toleration in all States. And certainly the faults that have been tolerated in all times were greater than modeſt Plays, or modeſt Dancing. It is not my intention, neither do I think it is the intention of any of your Lordſhips to Apologize for Stage-Plays, much leſs for the abuſe of them; I wiſh, and ſo I think doth every good Man, that the abuſe of them were reſtrained; but, my Lords, not by railing, curſing, damning, inveighing, &c. not only againſt the faults and Players themſelves, but againſt all Spectators, and thoſe that come to them, and that of all degrees, and with ſuch bitterneſs and acrimony, that in all the Authors alledged, which are infinite, there is not to be found an Example. My Lords, I am very ſorry he hath ſo carried himſelf, that a Man may juſtly fear he is the Timon that hath a quarrel againſt Mankind. But I love not too much to aggravate Offences, which of themſelves are heavy enough.

He calleth his Book Hiſtrio-maſtix; but therein he ſheweth himſelf like unto Ajax Anthropomaſtix, as the Grecians called him, the ſcourge of all Mankind, that is, the Whipper and the Whip. I cannot but concur with the Cenſure already begun by my Lord Cottington, given againſt Mr. Prynn, Buckner and Sparkes.

Afterwards the Earl of Dorſet ſpake to this effect.

Earl of Dorſet his Speech.

SUch ſwarms of Murmurers as this day diſcloſe themſelves, are they not fearful Symptoms of this ſick and diſeaſed time? ought we not rather with more Juſtice and Fear apprehend thoſe Heavy Judgments which this minor Prophet, Prophet Prynn, hath denounced againſt this Land, for tolerating indifferent things to fall upon us for ſuffering them, like thoſe Mutineers againſt Moſes and Aaron, as not fit to breath? My Lords, It is high-time to make a Luſtration to purge the Air. And when will Juſtice ever bring a more fit Oblation than this Achan? Adam, in the beginning, put Names on Creatures correſpondent to their Natures: The Title he hath given this Book is Hiſtrio-maſtix, or rather, as Mr. Secretary Cooke obſerved, Anthropomaſtix; but that comes not home, it deſerves a far higher Title, Damnation, in plain Engliſh, of Prince, Prelacy, Peers and People. Never did Pope in Cathedra, aſſiſted with the Spirit of Infallibility, more poſitively and more peremptorily condemn Hereticks and Hereſie, than this doth Mankind. Leſt any partial Auditor may think me tranſported with Paſſion, to judge of the baſe Liveries he beſtoweth upon Court and Courtiers, I ſhall do that, which a Judge ought to do, viz. aſſiſt the Priſoner at the Bar. Give me leave to remember what Mr. Attorney let fall the other day. I will take hold of it for the Gentlemans advantage, That this Gentleman had no Miſſion; if he had had a Miſſion, it would have qualified the Offence. Our Bleſſed Saviour, when he converſed in this World, choſe Apoſtles, whom he ſent after into the World; Ite, prædicate, &c. to ſhew the way of Salvation to Mankind. Faith, Hope, and Charity, were the ſteps of this Jacobs Ladder to aſcend Heaven by. The Devil, who hates every Man upon Earth, play'd the Divine, cited Books, wrought Miracles, cles, and he will have his Diſciples too, as he had his Confeſſors and Martyrs. My Lords, This contempt, diſloyalty, and deſpair, are the Ropes which this Emiſſary lets down to his great Maſters Kingdom for a general Service. My Lords, As the Tenor of their Commiſſion was different, ſo are the ways: Theſe Holy Men advanced their Cauſe in former times by meekneſs, humility, patience to bear with the weakneſs and infirmities of their Brethren; they taught obedience to Magiſtracy, even for Conſcience ſake; they divided not their Eſtates into Factions; they detracted from none, they ſought the Salvation of Mens Souls, and guided their Bodies and Affections anſwerably; they gave to Cæſar the things that were Cæſars; if Princes were bad, they prayed for them, if good, they praiſed God for them; however, they bore with them: This was the Doctrine of the Primitive Church, and this they did. I appeal to my Lords that have read this Book, if Mr. Prynn has not with breach of Faith diſcharged his great Maſters end. My Lords, When God had made all his Works, he looked upon them and ſaw that they were good. This Gentleman, the Devil having put Spectacles on his Noſe, ſays, that all is bad: no Recreation, Vocation, no Condition good; neither Sex, Magiſtrate, Ordinance, Cuſtome Divine and Humane, things animate, inanimate, all, my Lords, wrapt up in Maſſa Damnata, all in the Ditch of Deſtruction. Here, my Lords, we may obſerve the great Prudence of this Prince of Darkneſs, a Soul ſo fraught of Malice, ſo void of Humanity, that it gorgeth out all the filth, impiety and iniquity that the diſcontent of this Age doth contract againſt the Church and State: but it may be ſome follower of his will ſay, It was the Pride and wickedneſs of the Times that prompted him to this Work, and ſet his Zeal, through tenderneſs of Conſcience, to write this Book. My Lords, you may know an unclean Bird by his Feathers; let him be unplum'd, unmasked, pull off the deceitful Vizard, and ſee how he appeareth; this brittle-Conſcience, brother, that perhaps ſtarts at the ſight of the Corner-Cap, ſweats at the Surplice, ſwoonds at the Sign of the Croſs, and will rather dye than put on Womans Apparel to ſave his life; yet he is ſo zealous for the Advancement of his Babel, that he invents Legions, Coins new Statutes, corrupts, miſapplies Texts with falſe Interpretations, diſhonours all Men, defames all Women, equivocates, lies; and yet this Man is a Holy Man, a Pillar of the Church: do you (Mr. Prynn) find fault with the Court and Courtiers Habits, Silk and Satten Divines? I may ſay of you, you are all Purple within, all Pride, Malice, and all diſloyalty; you are like a Tumbler, which is commonly Squint-ey'd, you look one way, and run another way: though you ſeemed by the Title of your Book to ſcourge Stage-Plays, yet it was to make People believe, that there was an Apoſtacy in the Magiſtrates; but, my Lords, admit all this to be venial and pardonable, this Pigmy groweth a Gyant, and invades the Gods themſelves, where we enjoy this felicity under a Gracious Prince with ſo much advantage, as to have the light of the Goſpel, whilſt others are kept in darkneſs, the happineſs of the Recreations to the health of the Body, the Bleſſed Government we now have; when did ever Church ſo flouriſh, and State better proſper? and ſince the Plagues hap'ned

An. 1633. none have been ſent among us ſuch as this Caterpillar is; what Vein hath opened his anger? or who hath let out his fury? when did ever Man ſee ſuch a Quietus eſt as in theſe days? yet in this Golden Age is there not a Shimei amongſt us, that curſeth the Anointed of the Lord, ſo puffed with pride; nor can the Beams of the Sun thaw his frozen Heart, and this Man appeareth yet. And now (my Lords) pardon me, as he hath wounded His Majeſty in His Head, Power, and Government, and Her Majeſty, His Majeſties Dear Conſort, Our Royal Queen, and my Gracious Miſtreſs; I can ſpare him no longer, I am at his Heart. Oh quantum! &c. If any caſt infamous aſperſions and Cenſures on our Queen and Her Innocency, ſilence would prove impiety rather than ingratitude in me, that do daily contemplate Her Vertues; I will praiſe Her for that which is her own, ſhe drinks at the Spring-Head, whilſt others take up at the Stream. I ſhall not alter the great Truth that hath been ſaid, with a Heart as full of Devotion, as a Tongue of Eloquence, the other day, as it came to his part (meaning Sir John Finch.) My Lords, Her own Example to all Vertues, the Candor of Her Life, is a more powerful Motive than all Precepts, than the ſevereſt Laws, no Hand of Fortune nor of Power can hurt Her; Her Heart is full of Honour, Her Soul of Chaſtity; Majeſty, Mildneſs and Meekneſs are ſo married together, and ſo impaled in Her, that where the one begetteth Admiration, the other Love; Her Soul of that excellent temper, ſo harmoniouſly compoſed, Her Zeal in the ways of God unparallel'd; Her Affections to Her Lord ſo great, if ſhe offend him, it is no Sun-ſet in Her anger; in all Her Actions and Affections ſo Elective and Judicious, and a Woman ſo conſtant for the redemption of all Her Sex from all imputation, which Men (I know not how juſtly) ſometimes lay on them; a Princeſs, for the ſweetneſs of Her Diſpoſition, and for Compaſſion, always relieving ſome oppreſſed Soul, or rewarding ſome deſerving Subject: were all ſuch Saints as She, I think the Roman Church were not to be condemned; on my Conſcience She troubleth the Ghoſtly Father with nothing, but that She hath nothing to trouble him withal. And ſo when I have ſaid all in Her Praiſe, I can never ſay enough of Her Excellency; in the relation whereof an Orator cannot flatter, nor Poet lye; yet is there not Doeg among us, notwithſtanding all the Tergiverſations his Councel hath uſed at the Bar? I can better prove, that he meant the King and Queen by that infamous Nero, &c. then he proves Players go to Hell; but Mr. Prynn your Iniquity is full, it runs over, and Judgment is come; it is not Mr. Attorney that calls for Judgment againſt you, but it is all Mankind, they are the Parties grieved, and they call for Judgment.

(1.) Mr. Prynn, I do declare you to be a Schiſme-maker in the Church, a Sedition-ſower in the Common-wealth, a Wolfe in Sheeps-cloathing, in a word, Omnium malorum nequiſſimus. I ſhall Fine him Ten Thouſand Pounds, which is more than he is worth, yet leſs than he deſerveth; I will not ſet him at liberty no more than a plagued Man or a mad Dog, who though he cannot bite, he will foam; he is ſo far from being a Sociable Soul, that he is not a Rational Soul; he is fit to live in Dens with ſuch Beaſts of Prey as Wolves and Tigers like himſelf: Therefore I do condemn him to perpetual Impriſonment, as thoſe Monſters that are no longer fit to live among Men, nor to ſee light. Now for Corporal Puniſhment, (my Lords) whether I ſhould burn him in the Forehead, or ſlit him in the Noſe; for I find, that it is confeſſed of all, that Doctor Leighton's Offence was leſs than Mr. Prynn's, then why ſhould Mr. Prynn have a leſs Puniſhment? He that was guilty of Murder was marked in a place where he might be ſeen, as Cain was. I ſhould be loth he ſhould eſcape with his Ears, for he may get a Periwig, which he now ſo much inveighs againſt, and ſo hide them, or force his Conſcience to make uſe of his unlovely Love-Locks on both ſides: Therefore I would have him branded in the Forehead, ſlit in the Noſe, and his Ears cropt too. My Lords, I now come to this Ordure, I can give no better term to it, to burn it, as it is common in other Countries, or otherwiſe we ſhall bury Mr. Prynn, and ſuffer his Ghoſt to walk: I ſhall therefore concur to the burning of the Book; but let there be a Proclamation made, that whoſoever ſhall keep any of the Books in his hands, and not bring them to ſome publick Magiſtrate to be burnt in the Fire, let them fall under the Sentence of this Court; for if they fell into wiſe mens Hands, or good Mens Hands, there were no fear; but if among the common ſort, and into weak Mens Hands, then tenderneſs of Conſcience will work ſomething. Let this Sentence be Recorded, and let it be ſent to the Library of Sion, (meaning a Colledge in London) whether a Woman, by her Will, will allow Mr. Prynns Works to be ſent.

For Mr. Buckner, I believe that he had no intention at all this Work ſhould come abroad, he is ſaid to be a conformable Man to the Church of England; I ſhall hardly Cenſure him, he deſerveth admonition.

For Sparkes, I concur in all things: The Feodary had his Office taken away from him by this Court; I ſee therefore no reaſon but that he may be barred from printing and ſelling of Books, and kept wholly to binding of Books.

The Inns of Court Preſent a Maſque to the King and Queen at Whitehall.

TO welcome His Majeſty home, after His Progreſs this Year into Scotland, the Four Inns of Court agreed to Preſent to the King and Queen a moſt glorious Maſque; and accordingly on the 18*th* day of February this Year, on Shrove-Tueſday at night, in a gallant way Four Gentlemen, out of each Inns of Court, did ride on Horſe-back, richly habited to Whitehall, accompanied alſo with a Train of Chriſtian Captives many years enſlaved in Chains under the Emperor of Morocco, and now ſent by him as a Preſent to the King, for His aſſiſtance in deſtroying a Port of Pyrates that annoyed that Emperor, and which alſo proved to the future ſecurity of Traders in the Mediterranean Sea.

And the City, willing to do ſomething anſwerable, feaſted their Majeſties a fortnight after, at the Lord Majors-Houſe, (Alderman

for the Year, 1634.

We continue the Courſe deſigned, to Commence every Year with the Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Diary.

March 30. Arch-biſhop of Canterbury's Diary.

PAlm-Sunday, ſaith the Arch-Biſhop, I Preached to the King at Whitehall.

May 13. I received the Seals of my being choſen Chancellor of the Univerſity of Dublin in Ireland; to which Office I was choſen, September 14. 1633. There were now, and ſomewhat before, great Factions in Court, and I doubt many private ends followed, to the prejudice of publick Service: good Lord preſerve me.

June 11. Wedneſday Mr. Prynn ſent me a Letter about his Cenſure in the Star-Chamber for his Hiſtrio-maſtix, and what I ſaid in that Cenſure, in which he hath many ways miſtaken me, and ſpoken untruth of me.

June 16. I ſhewed this Letter to the King, and by His command * ſent it to Mr. Attorney Noy.

June 17 Mr. Attorney ſent for Mr. Prynn to his Chamber, ſhewed him the Letter, asked him whether it were his Hand? Mr. Prynn ſaid he could not tell unleſs he might read it; the Letter being given into his Hand, (and Mr. Attorney going to his Cloſe-ſtool, needing a Paper for that purpoſe) he tore it in ſmall pieces, and threw it out at a Window, fearing, it ſeems, an Ore tenus.

For this, June 18. Mr. Attorney brought him into the Star-Chamber where all this appeared; * I there forgave him.

* But it was with ſomewhat a ſharp Letter, the Copy whereof was found among his Papers.

* Becauſe nothing was there proved, for Mr. Attorney knew not how to proceed or make good his accuſation.

July 26. I received word from Oxford, that the Statutes were accepted and publiſhed, according to my Letters, in the Convocation-houſe that week.

Auguſt 9. Saturday, Mr. William Noy, His Majeſties Attorney-General died at Brentford, circiter horam noctis decimam.

And on Sunday morning Auguſt 10. his Servant brought me word of it to Croydon before I was out of my bed; I have loſt a dear friend of him, and the Church the greateſt She had of his condition, ſince ſhe needed any ſuch.

Auguſt 11. one Robert Seale of St. Albans came to me at Croydon, and told me ſomewhat wildly about a Viſion he had at Shrovetide laſt, about not Preaching the Word ſincerely to the People; and a Hand appeared unto him, and Death, and a Voice bid him go tell

Aug. 30. Saturday, at Oatelands, the Queen ſent for me, and gave me thanks for a buſineſs, with which She truſted me; Her Promiſe then that She would be my friend, and that I ſhould have immediate addreſs to Her when I had occaſion.

September 30. I had almoſt faln into a Fever, with a Cold I took, and it held me about Three Weeks.

December the 1*ſt Monday*, my ancient friend E. R. came to me, and performed great Kindneſs, which I may not forget.

Jan. 8. I married the Lord Charles Herberts, and the Lady Mary, Daughter to the Duke of Buckingham, in the Cloſet at Whitehall.

February 5. Thurſday, I was put into the great Committee of Trade, and the Kings Revenue, &c.

Sunday March 1. The great Buſineſs which the King commanded me to think on, and gave me account of, and L. T.

Saturday March 14. I was named one of the Commiſſioners for the Exchequer, upon the death of Richard Lord Weſton, Lord High Treaſurer of England. That evening K. B. ſent to ſpeak with me at Whitehall; a great deal of free and clear expreſſion, if it will continue.

Monday March 16. I was called again the next day into the Forreign Committee by the King.

March 22. Palm-Sunday, I Preached to the King at Whitehall.

The King, in the beginning of this Year, May the 5*th*, had timely in his thoughts, how to raiſe Monies to ſet out a Fleet for the Guard of the Narrow-Seas, (which afterwards proved to be in the way of Ship-Money) the Narrow-Seas being at this time infeſted by Pirates of all his Neighbour-Nations, and from the Mediterranean by Turks and Algiers-men, was pleaſed to declare His Pleaſure and Expreſs Commandment, That no Mariner or Sea-faring-men, Ship-Wright, or Ship-Carpenter whatſoever, being His Majeſties Subjects, ſhould, without the Kings Licenſe, or the Licenſe of the Admiral of England, enter, or attempt, or go about to enter into the Service of any Forreign Prince or State, or be employed out of this Realm in any Sea-Service whatſoever, unleſs it were in the Kings own Service, or of ſome of His Subjects. And if any at this time be in the Service of any Forreign Prince, that they forthwith return under a great Penalty.

And on the ſame Day His Majeſty thought fit to declare His further Pleaſure, concerning the Flags to be employed for His Royal Navy, as well as for the Ships of His Subjects of South and North-Britain; and conceiving it meet for the Honour of the Kings own Ships in His Navy-Royal, and of ſuch other Ships as are, or ſhall be employed in the Kings immediate Service, that the ſame be by their Flags diſtinguiſhed from the Ships of any other of His Subjects; doth therefore prohibit and forbid, That none of the Subjects of any of His Nations and Kingdoms, ſhall from henceforth preſume to carry the Union-Flag in the Main-Top, or other part of any of His Ships, that is St. George's Croſs, and St.

Andrews Croſs joyned together, but that the ſame Union-Flag be ſtill reſerved as an Ornament proper to the Kings own Ships, and Ships in his immediate Service and Pay, and none others; and his Majeſties further Will and Pleaſure is, that all other Ships of his Subjects of England, or South-Britain bearing Flags, ſhall from henceforth carry the Red Croſs, commonly called St. George his Croſs; and alſo that all the other Ships of the Kings Subjects of Scotland and North-Britain, ſhall from henceforth carry the White Croſs, commonly called St. Andrews Croſs.

And it concern'd his Majeſty to think of ſome other ways than hitherto he had done to raiſe monies for his Occaſions, for that the Monies which were to come to the Exchequer upon the Compoſition with Recuſants, fell far ſhort of expectation.

Recuſants Compoſitions fall ſhort of expectation.

For the King inſtead of receiving two full parts of three out of Recuſants eſtates, had little above one part in ten or twelve, eſpecially in the North where their Compoſitions were higheſt. Roger Widdrington of Cartington in the County of Northumberland Eſquire paid 60. l. per Annum into the Exchequer, his Eſtate being better worth than 500 l. per Annum; William Anderton, of Anderton in the County of Lancaſter Eſquire paid 20 l. per Annum, his Eſtate being eſtimated worth 500 l. per Annum. Francis Harecourt of Ranton in Staffordſhire, paid 25 l. per Annum, his Eſtate being worth above 200 l. per Annum. Sir Henry Merry of Darbyſhire, Kt. paid 66 l. 13 s. 4 d. per Annum, his eſtate being worth 600 l. per Annum and upwards. Sir. John Thimbleby of Lincolnſhire, Knight, paid 160 l. per Annum, his eſtate being eſtimated at 1500 l. per Annum. Sir Ralph Ellecare of Yorkſhire, Knight paid 50 l. per Annum, his eſtate being worth 600 l. per Annum. And much to the like proportion did others compound in thoſe Northern Counties; but afterwards by the advice of Mr. Noy, a more ſubſtantial way was thought upon, to raiſe a notable Revenue for the King, by Ship-money, of which more fully in its proper time and place.

Mr. Prynn of Lincolns-Inn was brought to the Bar of the Court of Star-Chamber on the 11th of June, and Mr. Attorney Noy thus opened the matter againſt him.

My Lords,

'There hath been an Information againſt Mr. Prynn in this 'Court, for a Seditious Railing Libel, or rather a Volume of 'Libels.

'He had the ſentence of the Court for the ſame. I will ſay thus 'much, it was more favour ſhewed him than he did deſerve; he
'was mercifully dealt withal. He hath been in Priſon he hath
'been Degraded; he hath had his Ears cut off, and undergone all
'ſhame. It ſeems he hath been admitted to Pen, Ink and Paper in 'the Tower, and he hath made uſe of it. My Lords, he did write
'a Letter or rather a Scandalous Libel, to ſome of your Lordſhips,
'and falleth particularly upon ſome of your Lordſhips here; for

Mr. Noy. Mr. Prynn once more brought into the Star-Chamber.

‘he doth examine whatſoever was ſaid at the hearing of his Cauſe: and he ſaith, what was done by one, was done by all the reſt.

‘My Lords, This Libel came to the King's Attorney-General, and he ſent for Mr. Prynn, and wiſhed him to give over this practice of Rayling now at laſt. He was asked whether it was his writing or no? (no wonder he would tell a lye, ſeeing he had ſo often lied, and forſworn himſelf in Court before) He anſwered, he could not tell, unleſs he might read it all; ſo it was delivered unto him to read, conſiſting of five pages. He read as much of it as was his pleaſure, yeſterday in my Chamber, in my preſence; and my back being from him, and his from mine, he taketh the Letter (the Libel) and teareth it in pieces, like a Rat, or a Vermine, and throweth it out of the Window: yet I cauſed the pieces to be gathered up, which your Lordſhips may ſee, and the Libel in a great part may be read. Then he was asked, if he did tear it? He ſaid I will anſwer you nothing. My Lords, I ſhall deſire he may be asked here, whether he did tear it, or no?

Lord Keeper.

‘Mr. Prynn, Mr. Attorney deſires to know, whether you did tear this, or no? Mr. Prynn anſwered, If it may pleaſe your Lordſhips, I have been cenſured in this Court, and ſubmitted my ſelf to every particular in the execution of it; and I have ſo carried my ſelf in publick, without giving any offence at all in the leaſt kind; and if Mr. Attorney exhibit any thing in Court againſt me, I deſire that I may give a legal Anſwer unto it. I hope this Court will be favourable toward me. I did nothing in publick to give any offence, and what I wrote in private, was not my intention to come in publick. I am a man ſubject to paſſion, as all men are; therefore I hope your Lordſhips will not impute it as a Crime.

Lord Keeper.

‘Here is humility for the time to come, but for the time paſt it is very ill.

Mr. Noy.

‘I ſhall deſire your Lordſhips that he may be in Goal, and kept cloſe Priſoner; and neither to have Pen, nor Ink, nor Paper, nor go to Church; and I ſhall afterward proceed againſt him for this here. I think in my Conſcience (ſaid Mr. Noy) he hath neither Grace, nor Modeſty.

The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury.

‘My Lords, He hath undergon a heavy puniſhment, I am heartily ſorry for him; and Mr. Prynn, I pray God forgive you for what you have done amiſs. I confeſs I do not know what it is to be cloſe Priſoner, and to want Books, Pen, Ink and Company. Certainly a man alone in that Caſe, who knoweth how he may be inſtigated? And as Mr. Attorney ſaith, he is paſt all Grace, and Modeſty; ſurely then he had need to be more free, and have Books and go to Church, that he may become better. I ſhall therefore be an humble ſuitor to your Lordſhips, that he may have the privilege to go to Church (ſaith Mr. Prynn, with a low voice, I humbly thank your Grace.) But my Lord Keeper asked the reſt of the Lords, what they thought of it? but no reſolution was given at all, but they would take it into their Conſideration. The Lord Richardſon then ſaid, let him have the Book of Martyrs, for the Puritans do account him a Martyr.

‘Mr. Prynn deſired the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, that he might have the Books, which his Officer ſeized upon in his Study; and the Arch-Biſhop did ſeriouſly proteſt, that they were ſeized without his privity, and that he had direction to ſeize no Books, but thoſe queſtioned in Court; but would give a Warrant under his hand to re-deliver them.

In purſuance of the ſettlement of Church-Affairs, the Biſhop of London did about this time deſign to impoſe the Engliſh Liturgy and Diſcipline, upon the Engliſh Companies and Regiments in Foreign parts, and upon the Churches of Foreingers living in England, and repreſented to the Lords of the Council his advice therein, in propoſitions to this effect.

Propoſitions preſented to the Council by the Biſhop of London concerning Engliſh Preachers employed in Foreign Parts.

1. Whether it be not fit (I had almoſt ſaid neceſſary) that the ſeveral Colonels in the Low-Countries ſhould entertain no Miniſter, as Preacher to their Regiments, but ſuch as ſhall conform in all things to the Church of England eſtabliſhed, and be commended unto them from your Lordſhips, by the advice of the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury or York, for the time being.

2. That the Company of Merchants reſiding there, or in any other foreign parts, ſhall admit no Miniſter, as Preacher unto them, but ſuch as are Qualified, and Commended as aforeſaid.

3. That if any Miniſter, having by feigned carriage, got to be ſo recommended, either to any of the ſeveral Colonels, or to the Deputy-Governor and Body of the Merchants there, that be after found unconformable, and will not mend upon warning given by the Colonels, or Deputy-Governor of the Merchants, he ſhall within three months after ſuch warning given, and refuſed, be diſmiſſed from his ſervice, that a more orderly and peaceable man may be ſent unto them.

4. That every Miniſter or Preacher with any Regiment of Souldiers, that are his Majeſties born Subjects, or with the Company of Merchants there, or elſewhere, ſhall read Divine Service, Chriſten Children, Adminiſter the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, Marry, Inſtruct the Younger or more ignorant ſort in the Catechiſm, Viſit the Sick, Bury the Dead, and do all other duties according as they are preſcribed in the Book of Common-Prayer, maintained in the Church of England, and not otherwiſe: and that he which will not conform himſelf ſo to do, ſhall not continue Preacher, either to any Regiment of Engliſh, or Scotiſh, or to the Merchants.

5. That if any Miniſter, or Preacher, being the King's Subject, ſhall with any bitter Words, or Writings in Print, or otherwiſe, defame the Government of the Church of England eſtabliſhed, His Majeſties Ambaſſador or Agent in thoſe parts, for the time being, is to be informed of it; and upon notice given from him to the State, he, or they ſo offending ſhall be commanded over by Privy-Seal, or otherwiſe, to anſwer their Offence, or Offences here.

6. That no Colonel of any ſeveral Regiment, or Deputy-Governor of the Merchants ſhall give way, that their Miniſter or Preacher ſhall bring any other Miniſter to Preach for him in time of his Sickneſs, Abſence, or other neceſſary employment, but ſuch, as for whoſe conformity to the Church and Government he will be anſwerable.

7. That if any Miniſter, being a Subject of the King's, in any parts beyond the Seas, ſhall in any Auditory, or elſewhere publickly lickly Speak, Write, Print or Divulge any thing derogatory to the Doctrine or Diſcipline eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, or againſt the temporal State and Government, that the King's Agent do certifie his Offence, that ſo he may be recalled by Privy-Seal.

8. That no man ſhall be choſen or ſent over by the Merchants here, either to Delf, or any other part of their Reſidence beyond the Seas (whenſoever any place, or places ſhall become void) but ſuch a man as is conformable to the Church of England; and ſuch as will be careful to ſee, that they who are under his Government ſhall obſerve all ſuch Church-duties, as are expreſſed and required in any of the former propoſals.

9. That whenſoever the Merchant-Adventurers ſhall become Suitors to renew or confirm their Patent (as in moſt Kings times is uſual to do) that then there be a Clauſe inſerted into their Patent, to bind them to the obſervance of all, or ſo much of thoſe Inſtructions, as ſhall be thought fit by His Majeſty, and the Lords, &c.

June 17. 1634.

The Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury thought fit to purſue thoſe Propoſals, he had made to the Council, and writ a Letter to the Merchants at Delf, to the purpoſe following.

After our hearty commendations, &c. We are commanded by His Majeſty to ſignifie unto you that this Bearer Mr. Beaumont choſen by joint-conſent of your Company to be your Preacher at Delf, or where elſe you ſhall at any time reſide, is a man learned, ſober and conformable to the Doctrine and Diſcipline eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, and that you are to receive him with all decent and courteous uſage fitting his Perſon and Calling, and to allow him the uſual ancient ſtipend which Mr. Forbes lately, or any other before him hath received. And further we are to let you know, that it is His Majeſties expreſs Command, that both you, the Deputy, and all and every other Merchant, that is, or ſhall be reſiding in thoſe parts beyond the Seas, do conform themſelves to the Doctrine and Diſcipline ſetled in the Church of England: And that they frequent the Common-Prayers with all religious duty and reverence at all times required, as well as they do Sermons: And that out of your Company, you do yearly about Eaſter, as the Canons preſcribe, name two Church-Wardens and two Sides-men, which may look to the Orders of the Church, and give an account according to their Office. And Mr. Beaumont himſelf is hereby to take notice that His Majeſties expreſs Pleaſure and Command to him is, that he do punctually keep and obſerve all the Orders of the Church of England, as they are preſcribed in the Canons and the Rubricks of the Liturgy. And that if any of your Company ſhall ſhew themſelves refractory to this Ordinance of His Majeſty (which we hope will not be,) he is to certifie the name of any ſuch Offender, and his Offence to the Lord Biſhop of London for the time being, who is to take Order and give Remedy accordingly. And theſe Letters you are to regiſter and keep by you, that they which come after may underſtand what care His Majeſty hath taken, for the well-ordering of your Company in Church-affairs.

affairs. And you are likewiſe to deliver a Copy of theſe Letters to Mr. Beaumont, and to every ſucceſſor of his reſpectively, that he and they may know, what His Majeſty expects from them, and be the more inexcuſable if they diſobey. Thus not doubting, but that you will ſhew your ſelves very reſpectful of theſe His Majeſties Commands, we leave you to the Grace of God, and reſt,

June 17. Your very Loving Friend,
W. Canterbury.

Order in the Court of Star-Chamber concerning Farthing Tokens, and the impoſing them on the people for Wages.

THis day the Board did take into Conſideration, the Complaints made from ſeveral parts of the Kingdom, concerning the ſtop and refuſal of Farthing-Tokens, proceeding as well from the abuſe in counterfeiting the ſame, as in cauſing the ſame to paſs, as well in payments as for Commodities, and for Wages to Workmen and Labourers, in greater quantities than was intended.

And whereas upon a Decree lately made in the High Court of Star-Chamber, the 25*th* day of April laſt, wherein Sir Francis Crane Knight, was Plaintiff againſt William Hawks and others, for making and venting counterfeit Farthing-Tokens, their Lordſhips did call to mind, that there was conſideration likewiſe had, and proviſion made by the ſaid Decree againſt the abuſe in forcing the ſame upon men for Wages and in other payments, and directing the right uſe to be made of them for the good and benefit of the Subject, according to His Majeſties Royal Intention, and the Proclamations publiſhed in that behalf:

It was therefore by the Board thought fit and Ordered, that ſo much of the ſaid Decree as concerned the regulating of the buſineſs de futuro, ſhould be ſet down in this Order, and together with the ſame, be forthwith Printed and Publiſhed, which part of the ſaid Decree doth accordingly follow in theſe words.

The Court being informed, that by the abuſe of ſome particular perſons, whoſe only aim is to make a private gain and profit to themſelves, His Majeſties people are much abuſed in many parts of this Kingdom, and poor Labourers, whoſe neceſſities are ſuch, as enforceth them to take their hire in any money, are compelled many times to take their whole weeks Wages in Farthings, from ſuch as buy great quantities at low rates, and make a Commodity thereby: Which abuſe, as it is already become a great burden and grievance, to His Majeſties people in many parts of the Realm,

ſo it is to be feared it will hereafter turn to the great diſadvantage of His Majeſties Patentees, if it be not remedied by a timely Reformation. Their Lordſhips being willing to prevent and meet with ſuch growing evils, and deſirous to remove the inconveniences of forcing His Majeſties Subjects to take ſuch great quantities of Farthings in Payments; which Farthing-Tokens rightly uſed, are of themſelves very uſeful and neceſſary, and were made chiefly for the relief of the Poor, and to be vented and uſed only for exchange in ſmall Sums, but not to be put upon any in great Payments, have thought fit and Ordered, and it is by this their Lordſhips Sentence declared, That it is utterly unlawful, and expreſly contrary to the true meaning of His Majeſties Letters Patents and Proclamation, that any ſuch Farthing-Tokens ſhould be inforced upon any poor Labourers or Workmen, or other perſons in any Payments, either of greater or leſſer Sums.

And they declare further, That they think it fit that no perſon ſhould pay above Two-pence in Farthings to any other perſon at any time. And this Court doth alſo declare it to be unlawful, for any Man to buy or barter for any Farthing, at, or for leſſer rate than they are uſually vented by His Majeſties Patentees, to whom the ſole making thereof is granted, and upon whom the re-change thereof lyeth at the ſame rate: And if any perſon ſhall be found herein to offend in either of theſe kinds, this Court is reſolved ſeverely to puniſh the Offenders. And the Court doth withal hold fit, and deſire that His Majeſty ſhould be moved, to declare and command the ſame, by His Highneſs's Proclamation, to be publiſhed throughout this Kingdom, that ſo the true uſe of thoſe Farthing-Tokens, intended for the good of the Poor, may be continued, and the abuſes aforeſaid may either be prevented, or puniſhed.

THe Defendants being Soap-boilers of the City of London, did, contrary to His Majeſties Proclamation, uſe divers great quantities of Fiſh-Oyl in making their Soap, and ſome of them alſo uſed Spyke-Oyl in the making thereof, to qualifie the ſcent of the Fiſh-Oyl; His Majeſty, by that Proclamation, having prohibited the uſe of any other Oyl, than Olive and Rape-Oyl to make Soap withal, ſo as it might be ſweet, and more ſerviceable. And the Defendants, Griffin, Cope, and Revel, in further contempt of His Majeſties ſaid Proclamation, and in contempt and oppoſition to His Majeſties Letters Patents, granted to the new Corporation of Soapers of Weſtminſter, and by the inſtigation and encouragement of the Defendant, Whitwell refuſed to ſuffer the Aſſay-Maſter for Soap to try, or mark their Soap, although His Majeſty, by his ſaid Proclamation, commanded the doing thereof, and that none ſhould be ſold until it were marked and tryed; and albeit the Defendants were no Corporation, Body, or Fellowſhip by any lawful Authority, yet the Defendant Overman, Baker, and Troughton, with others, did at ſeveral times, and at ſeveral Taverns in London, aſſemble themſelves together, to confer about the Sale of their Soap, and buying of Fiſh-Oyl of the Greenland-Company, and did there conclude and agree, not to ſell their ſecond beſt Soap under 54 s.

Mich. Term. 1634.

THere happened this Term a ſudden Remove in the Court of Common-Pleas: Sir Robert Heath who was Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas was removed, and Sir Jo. Finch was ſworn Lord Chief-Juſtice of that Court. Great were the Diſcourſes what the occaſion ſhould be of that ſudden Advancement. But Four days after the Writ for Ship-money coming forth, it was conceived, by common Diſcourſe, that he was to be inſtrumental to advance that buſineſs.

And on the 16th of October the Lord Keeper Coventry made this Speech unto him, at the time of his Inſtallment in the Court of Common-Pleas.

The Lord Keepers Speech to Sir John Finch, at the time he was to be made Chief-Juſtice of Common-Pleas, the 16th of October 1634.

Mr. Serjeant Finch.

‘THE Kings Majeſty calling to mind your many Services to ‘ Himſelf, and the Queen, and knowing well your great ‘ Learning, accompanied with much Dexterity in the accompliſhing
‘ of Buſineſs of weight, hath appointed you to ſucceed in
‘ the Place vacant in this Court, and here to ſit as Chief-Juſtice.
‘ In this you ſee a manifeſt Argument of ſingular Goodneſs of ‘ the King and Queen, ſo mindful of their Servants, imitating God
‘ above, that rewardeth not ſecundum, ſed ſupra Bona Opera. Now
‘ as many heretofore, ſo you in your due time have cauſe to acknowledge
‘ with David, that your Cup doth overflow. As this is a ‘ great comfort to ſee your Endeavours not only favoured with ‘ Acceptance, but Crowned with Reward; ſo it will inſtruct you,
‘ (your Service having brought you Promotion) and put you in ‘ mind of your Service, that the Gifts of Princes, though they are ‘ ſine aliquo reddendo, yet they are not to be reckoned ſo by them that ‘ have them; but as Fruits ſown in Fruitful Ground to them that ‘ receive them: and of this nature is your Place, which your Maſter ‘ gives you to ſerve him in; and yet you muſt ſerve him ſo, as ‘ you may be fruitful to His People. I remember in Rotulo Parlia-

Upon the Removal of Sir Robert Heath from being Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas, Sir John Finch, the Queens Attorney, was choſen into that Place.

An. 1634.

‘menti 20 Ed. 1. in a great Cauſe between Humphry de Bohun, and Gilbert de Clare; It was ſaid of that King, he was as great a Law-giver, as a Victorious Prince, and therefore ſtyled the Juſtinian of England, Rex omnibus Juſtitiæ Debitor. The King, Our Maſter, as much as any, makes the ſame acknowledg ment in Practice: never any King, I may ſay, never any Man of juſter, or more upright Heart, that equal Juſtice ſhould be miniſtred to His Subjects; for he knows well, that Rex & Subditus are Correlatives, even as Man and Wife; and the Emblem of King not wanting betwixt them. As the Subject owes Obedience, ſo the King Protection and Juſtice. This Debt is Debitum Juſtitiæ, too great and heavy a Burthen to be born by a King, compounded only of Mortal Fleſh, were it not that His Councel were as Religious and Juſt, as he is Wiſe and Politick; and thereby the Load of the King's Buſineſs is lighted, by laying a part of the great and inſupportable Burthen upon the Judges: For His Debitum Juſtitiæ, which is the Debt of a King primarily, by a Secondary Means becomes the Debt of Judges, and under as great Bonds as may be; Greater there cannot be to bind the Conſciences of Men. The firſt Bond is Debitum Patriæ, due to all the Kings People, whoſe Cauſes and Places are the proper Subjects of this Tribunal, and whoſe flouriſhing Eſtate depends much upon the Juſt Proceedings of this Court. Were there no other Motive, yet this that prevails among the Heathen, Amor Patriæ, were ſtrong enough to make Judges deſirous of this Duty. The ſecond is Debitum Regi; for he truſts them with his Richeſt Treaſure, that which is dearer than the Apple of His Eye. His Juſtice is one Prime-part of His Oath at His Coronation, Facies fieri in omnibus Juſtitiam Æquam & Rectam: And what you are to give the King for this, you ſhall need to go no farther than your Oath, the neglect of which puts you to the Will of the King, for Body, Laws and Goods. The third the greateſt of all, Debitum Deo, as he is the Fountain of all Juſtice, and a fearful avenger of them that do the contrary. And three ways I ſhall mind you how this is a Debt to God. Firſt, Ratione Juramenti, by reaſon of your Oath, for the immediate relation it hath to God; that it is Religio Juriſjurandi, and therefore, under this Oath, you are bound to God in a full diſcharge. Secondly, Ratione Loci, for the Seat of Judges; God ſits whereon you ſit; and you may aſſure your ſelf, that he that ſets you there, will take ſtrict account of you. Thirdly, Ratione Judicii: The Judgment it ſelf is Gods, if you be upright, as you ought. It is ſaid in the 82*d Pſalm*, God ſtands in the Congregation of Princes, is the Judge among Gods; and ſo when you ſit here, you muſt think God is in your Face to give Judgment as it is right, or otherwiſe to puniſh; and therefore when you ſhall ſit your ſelf on your Cuſhion, either here, or in any other place, you have cauſe to ſay, as Jacob did when he had ſlept in Bethel, How dreadful is this Place! This is the Houſe of God. This in the general. I fear I have ſpent too much time; I will make amends in the Particulars: Somewhat for Order. Communia Placita, the Pleas of the People; as they are numberleſs, ſo neceſſarily muſt their Pleas and Cauſes be, therefore they are all Civil, whether for Lands, Goods real, perſonal, or mixt: they are the proper Object of this ‘Court. Firſt therefore, you muſt uſe diligence in attending and diſpatching the multitude of buſineſs in this Court. Common Induſtry may diſcharge Common Employment; but this is Superlative and Tranſcendent, and therefore your diligence muſt be extraordinary. Secondly, you muſt uſe great Patience in Matters brought before you: I muſt confeſs, that a multitude of Buſineſs, and a Good-will to diſpatch, will as ſoon try ones Patience as any thing; yet whatſoever Tryal you are put to, be not from your Tryal. Nothing better becomes a Judge than Patience. Thirdly, you muſt uſe great caution in diſcerning thoſe things brought before you; for thoſe that have ill Cauſes will omit no endeavour to beguile you: therefore you muſt keep Watch and Ward, and try every thing, that no Counterfeit come to be put upon you. Then, in the fourth place, it is neceſſary to uſe all expedition. Nulli deferemus is coupled with Nulli negabimus, Nullo vendemus Juſtitiam: all three naught, and none can tell which is the worſt. In the firſt place, I ſhall adviſe and wiſh you, in all your Judgments, to inſiſt upon the ancient ways of your Common Law. New Opinions are many times in a Councellor retain'd, to defend a Side; but they ſtand not with the Gravity of a Judge. To invent or find out any thing is commendable in a Councellor, but let a Judge ſtand ſuper antiquas vias; for Lex Loci, & Conſuetudo Angliæ is all in all. One Particular more, which (I think) conduduceth much to Juſtice, is, to give all encouragement to the good and expert Clerks of this Court. It hath ever been the great Commendation and Honour of this Court to be furniſhed with the beſt Clerks. Theſe encourage others, inform, and reduce to the ſame purity of Pleading, which (as Mr. Littleton ſaith) is one of the moſt Honourable things in the Law. And if a Man obſerve what a multitude of juſt Cauſes are overthrown by vitious Entries, and Pleadings, he will have juſt cauſe to believe it. I know to whom I ſpeak. Your great Underſtanding and Judgment, and that Integrity in you, need not that I ſhould ſay half this: and yet, conſidering what Order is, and the Duty of my Place, and affection to your Perſon, I could do no leſs. I ſhall ſhut up all in Two Memento's. The one, That the Juſtices of this Court are ſtyled by the Name of Juſtitiarij without Addition, and the Proceſs likewiſe coram Juſtitiariis without Addition. Addition, for the moſt part, diminiſhes. It is an Honour, and ſomewhat more, that it hath been attributed more to this Court than to any other. Think on it, and let it be an occaſion for you to think what it is, and to follow it. The next Memento is, to remember the Catalogue of your Predeceſſors: for I may be bold to ſay, as many and Reverend Men have been upon the Cuſhion in this Court, as ever ſat on any; eſpecially the remembrance of the beſt is the beſt Inſtruction and Leſſon to your ſelf. Out of my true and hearty affection to you, I wiſh you may often think of them; and ſo think of their Ways, that your Ways may exceed, and out-run the beſt.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip,

Levis eſt Dolor, qui Conſilium capere poteſt.

‘GReat Joy brings forth no leſs, and breeds no leſs perturbation
‘in their thoughts that enjoy it. How it muſt then be with ‘me, at this preſent, I leave to your Lordſhip to judge. To my ‘ſelf, I muſt confeſs, I appear like one for a long time ſhut up in a ‘dark Room, upon whom a great Light, on a ſudden, hath broken
‘in. I muſe at the conſideration of my own weak acknowledgment
‘of the Kings Goodneſs ſhining upon me at this time. Ignotus moritur ſibi,
‘is a ſad finiſhing of a Man's own Courſe. I
‘ſhall crave your Lordſhips Patience; and if I live, ſhew you how ‘unwilling I am to live the one, or die the other. I have now ‘ſpent (I would I could ſay not miſ-ſpent) Thirty-four Years in ‘relation and practice of the Common-Law; Relation I call it,
‘for the firſt Six Years beſtowed by me in the Books of Law, by ‘ſome unhappy means I was diverted, and my Reſolution fitted to ‘another way for Forreign Employment, to which, after Nine or ‘Ten Years, I was deſign'd: and at that time, the Great Seal being ‘put into the Hands of that High-Treaſurer of all Learniug and ‘Eloquence, the Lord of St. Albans, (pardon my good Lord, if ‘my never-forgotten Favours deſire to revive him, whoſe faults let ‘them be buried with him in the Grave; I remember his Vertues)
‘by him was I invited to the Practice of the Common-Law. His ‘Fall, and other Misfortunes to your Lordſhip not unknown, drew
‘me from my Study: But afterwards, reſolutely turning my Hand
‘to the Plough again, it pleaſed God to ſend your Lordſhip that ‘Place, which now you hold, (which God continue) and my ‘Prayer ſhall be ever from the bottom of my Heart, that I may never ‘ſee it in another Hand: and when Atalanta-like I ſtooped at the ‘Ball of Profit, neglecting the Goal of Honour, ſpending my time
‘more in the Service of the Subject, than my own Good; He, in ‘whoſe Hands the Hearts of Kings are, hath bowed the Heart of ‘my Gracious Sovereign and Maſter to me; and I learn to think
‘that is beſt which he doth, and ſo ſubmit my ſelf to His Pleaſure.
‘This hath bred in me ſeveral Meditations, ſome of Comfort and ‘Conſolation. Here ſit by your Lordſhip Three Grave and Learned ‘Judges well-verſed in the ways of this Grave Court; and I ‘am as confident of their particular Affection to me, as certain
‘of my own to them; two of the ſame Society where I was bred,
‘my Ancient Acquaintance; and from the third I ever had a reſpective ‘Carriage. I ſhall think it no diſparagement to ſee with ‘their Eyes, to hear with their Ears, and to ſpeak with their ‘Tongues, till my own Obſervation, and what I ſhall hear by them,
‘may make me more ſubſtantial. In the Goſpel of Chriſt His Coat
‘is ſaid to be without Seam; and in the Pſalms, that the Queens
‘Veſture

‘Veſture was of divers Colours: upon which one of the Fathers makes this Obſervation, In Veſte varietas, Sciſſura nulla. Sometimes we may differ in opinion; but our Hearts ſhall be like our Robes. My chiefeſt Comfort is in the confidence of your Lordſhips Noble Favour, whom I ſhall ever ſet as a Mirror before my Eyes. I count it happy, that I ſhall attend your Lordſhip in a Court whereby I may learn, and you ſee my Endeavours to follow your Precepts and Example, which hath ever been accompanied with all Vertues: The aſſurance of the Kings Majeſties Favour is Happineſs, as fit for my Wonder, as for my Words. At His firſt Acceſs to the Crown, He was pleaſed, upon ſome ſmall occaſion to caſt a Princely Eye upon me; after He made me of His Learned Council, and then commended me to the Service of my ever moſt Gracious and Excellent Miſtreſs; and ſtill doubled His Favours in continuing me in His own Service. Afterward He pricked me out to the Parliament to ſerve Him and the Commonwealth; and though my own diſability made me ſeek to decline it, Himſelf gave me means to ſupport it, (a thing before not known) and found out a way to add ſome more value to me, by ranking me above others before me in Place and Merit. Theſe, and more Favours innumerable have comforted me; that nothing but my own demerits can leſſen His Grace to me. I begin to think of what Demoſthenes ſaid to the People of Athens, when they choſe their Officers:

‘To take up Thoughts and Cogitations fit for the Greatneſs and Dignity of this Place; and in that I cannot but remember thoſe Judges which Jethro commended to Moſes, (whom your Lordſhips remember) Men Timentes Deum, & qui oderunt avaritiam. His Majeſties Love ſhall make me hate all baſe and ſordid Thoughts, and ſtir up in me all Zeal to His Service. For uprightneſs between Man and Man, I ſhall need no other Argument but the juſtneſs of His Royalty, who likes beſt of thoſe Servants that beſt diſtribute His Juſtice to His People; for the reſt, Levavi oculos meos in montem, unde venit auxilium; Gods Grace give me aſſiſtance, as he did to the poor Fiſhermen. I ſhall account it your Lordſhips great Favour to make my humble Recognitions and Reſolutions, with the beſt advantage of your Lordſhips Expreſſion, known to the Kings Majeſty.

The firſt Writ for Ship-mony.

TO the Major, Commonalty, and Citizens of Our City of London, and to the Sheriffs of the ſame City, and good Men in the ſaid City, and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, Greeting. Becauſe We are given to underſtand, That certain Thieves, Pirates, and Robbers of the Sea, as well Turks, Enemies of the Chriſtian Name, as others, being gathered together, wickedly taking by force, and ſpoiling the Ships, and Goods, and Merchandizes, not only of Our Subjects, but alſo of the Subjects of Our Friends in the Sea, which hath been accuſtomed anciently to be defended by the Engliſh Nation; and the ſame, at their pleaſure, have carried away, delivering the Men in the ſame into miſerable Captivity: And foraſmuch as We ſee them daily preparing all manner of Shipping, farther to moleſt Our Merchants, and to grieve the Kingdom, unleſs remedy be not ſooner applied, and their Endeavours be not more manly met withal; alſo the dangers conſidered, which, on every ſide, in theſe times of War do hang over Our Heads, that it behoveth Us, and Our Subjects, to haſten the Defence of the Sea and Kingdom with all expedition or ſpeed that We can; We willing by the help of God chiefly to provide for the defence of the Kingdom, ſafeguard of the Sea, ſecurity of Our Subjects, ſafe Conduct of Ships and Merchandizes to Our Kingdom of England coming, and from the ſame Kingdom to foreign Parts paſſing; foraſmuch as We, and Our Progenitors, Kings of England, have been always heretofore Maſters of the aforeſaid Sea, and it would be very irkſome unto Us, if that Princely Honour in Our times ſhould be loſt, or in any thing diminiſhed. And although that Charge of defence, which concerneth all Men, ought to be ſupported by all, as by the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Kingdom of England hath been accuſtomed to be done: Notwithſtanding We conſidering, that you Conſtituted in the Sea-Coaſts, to whom by Sea as well great dangers are imminent, and who by the ſame do get more plentiful Gains for the defence of the Sea, and Conſervation of Our Princely Honour in that behalf, according to the Duty of your Allegiance againſt ſuch Attempts, are chiefly bound to ſet to your helping hand; We command firmly, enjoyning you the aforeſaid Major, Commonalty and Citizens, and Sheriffs of the ſaid City, and the good Men in the ſame City, and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, in the Faith and Allegiance wherein ye are bound unto Us, and as ye do love Us, and Our Honour, and under the forfeiture of all which ye can forfeit to Us, That ye cauſe to be prepared and brought to the Port of Portſmouth, before the firſt Day of March now next enſuing, one Ship of War of the Burthen of Nine Hundred Tuns, with Three Hundred and Fifty Men at the leaſt, as well expert Maſters, as very able and skilful Mariners; One other Ship of War of the Burthen of Eight Hundred Tuns, with Two Hundred and Sixty Men at the leaſt, as well skilful Maſters, as very able and expert Mariners: Four other Ships of War, every of them of the Burthen of Five Hundred Tuns, and every of them with Two Hundred Men at the leaſt, as well expert Maſters, as very able and skilful Mariners: And one other Ship of War, of the Burthen of Three Hundred Tuns, with a Hundred and Fifty Men, as well expert Maſters, as very able and skilful Mariners: And alſo every of the ſaid Ships with Ordnance, as well greater as leſſer, Gun-powder, and Spears and Weapons, and other neceſſary Arms ſufficient for War, and with double Tackling, and with Victuals, until the ſaid firſt of March, competent for ſo many Men; and from that time, for Twenty-ſix weeks, at your Charges, as well in Victuals as Mens Wages, and other things neceſſary for War, during that time, upon defence of the Sea in Our Service, in Command of the Admiral of the Sea, to whom We ſhall commit the Cuſtody of the Sea, before the aforeſaid firſt Day of March, and as he, on Our behalf, ſhall command them to continue; ſo that they may be there the ſame day, at the fartheſt, to go from thence with Our Ships, and the Ships of other faithful Subjects, for the ſafeguard of the Sea, and defence of you and yours, and repulſe and vanquiſhing of whomſoever buſying themſelves to moleſt or trouble upon the Sea Our Merchants, and other Subjects, and Faithful People coming into Our Dominions for cauſe of Merchandize, or from thence returning to their own Countries. Alſo We have Aſſigned you, the aforeſaid Major and Aldermen of the City aforeſaid, or any thirteen, or more of you, within thirty days after the receit of this Writ; to Aſſeſs all men in the ſaid City, and in the Liberties, and Members of the ſame, and the Landholders in the ſame, not having a Ship, or any part of the aforeſaid Ships, nor ſerving in the ſame, to contribute to the expences, about the neceſſary proviſion of the premiſes; and to Aſſeſs and lay upon the aforeſaid City, with the Liberties and Members thereof, viz. upon every of them according to their Eſtate and Subſtances, and the portion Aſſeſſed upon them; and to nominate and appoint Collectors in this behalf. Alſo we have Aſſigned you, the aforeſaid Major, and alſo the Sheriffs of the City aforeſaid, to levy the Portions ſo as aforeſaid Aſſeſſed upon the aforeſaid men and Landholders, and every of them in the aforeſaid City, with the Liberties and Members of the ſame, by diſtreſs and other due means; and to commit to Priſon all thoſe, whom you ſhall find Rebellious and contrary in the premiſes, there to remain until VVe ſhall give further Order for their delivery. And moreover We Command you, that about the Premiſes ye diligently attend, and do, and execute thoſe things with effect, upon peril that ſhall fall thereon: but We will not, that under colour of Our aforeſaid Command, more ſhould be levied of the ſaid men, than ſhall ſuffice for the neceſſary expences of the Premiſes; or that any, who have levied mony for Contribution, to raiſe the aforeſaid Charges, ſhould by him detain the ſame, or any part thereof; or ſhould preſume, by any manner of Colour, to appropriate the ſame to other uſes; Willing, that if more than may be ſufficient ſhall be Collected, the ſame may be paid out among the Contributers, for the rate of the part to them belonging.

Witneſs My Self, at Weſtminſter the 20*th* day of October, in the 10*th* year of Our Reign.

The Writs going the next year into the Inland-Counties, theſe Inſtructions following were prepared to be ſent into every County, for the better executing of the ſaid Writ.

Inſtructions and Directions from the Lords of the Council, for the Aſſeſſing and Levying of the Ship-mony againſt this next Spring.

After our hearty Commendations; Whereas His Majeſty hath ſent His Writ to you the High-Sheriff of the County of Middleſex, and to the High-Sheriff of the County of Hartford; and to the Majors and other Head-Officers of Corporate Towns within the ſaid Counties, to provide one Ship of two hundred and fifty Tuns beſides Tunnage, to be furniſhed with Men, Tackle, Munition, Victuals, &c. and other neceſſaries; to be ſet forth for the ſafeguard of the Seas, and defence of the Realm, at the charge of the ſaid Counties, and Corporate-Towns in the ſame.

We are by His Majeſties directions and expreſs Commandment, to let you know, that he hath upon moſt important and weighty Reaſons concerning not only His Majeſties own Honour and the ancient Renown of this Nation, but the ſafety of your ſelves, and all His Subjects in theſe troubleſom and War-like-times, ſent out the aforeſaid Writ unto you, and the like into all the Counties, Cities and Towns throughout the whole Kingdom; that as all are concerned in the mutual defence of one another, ſo that all might put to their helping hands, for the making of ſuch Preparations, as (by the bleſſing of God) may ſecure this Realm, againſt thoſe dangers and extremities which have diſtreſſed other Nations, and are the common effects of War, whenſoever it taketh a People unprepared: and therefore as His Majeſty doubteth not of the readineſs of all His Subjects to contribute hereunto with cheerfulneſs and alacrity; ſo he doth eſpecially require your care and diligence in the ordering of this buſineſs, ſo much concerning His Majeſtie, and all His People, that no meanalty nor other miſcarriage may either deter or diſgrace the Service, which in it ſelf is ſo juſt, honourable and neceſſary: for which cauſe we have, by His Majeſties like-directions ſent you, together with the ſaid Writs, theſe enſuing Advices and Inſtructions, for your better proceeding: which upon the receit hereof, you the Sheriff of the County of Middleſex are preſently to communicate with the Head-Officers of the Corporate-Towns in that County.

Firſt, That you meet with the Sheriff and Head-Officers in the Writ mentioned, and that you make Aſſeſſments how much each of the ſaid particular Counties ſhould pay towards the ſetting forth of the ſaid Ship according to the tenor of the ſaid Writ. And becauſe divers of you may be acquainted with the charges of ſuch Maritime preparations, and the miſtaking thereof might hinder the Service, we have thought good to let you know, that upon a juſt and due valuation, we find, that the Charge of a Ship furniſhed will be 3300 l. whereof we think fit, that the County of Middleſex bear 1800 l. and the County of Hartford 1500 l.

That the City of Weſtminſter and the Liberties bear 350 l. and the reſt of the County the reſidue of the ſaid ſum of 1800 l.

Secondly, When you have ſetled the General Aſſeſſments, we think fit that you ſubdivide the ſame, and make particular Aſſeſſments, in ſuch ſort as other common Payments upon the County and Corporate-Towns aforeſaid, are moſt uſually ſubdivided and aſſeſſed; and namely, that you the Sheriff divide the whole Charge laid upon the County into Hundreds, Lathes, and other diviſions, and thoſe into Pariſhes and Towns; and the Towns and Pariſhes muſt be rated by the Houſes and Lands lying within each Pariſh and Town, as is accuſtomed in other Common Payments, which fall out to be payable by the County, Hundreds, Lathes, Diviſions, Pariſhes and Towns. And whereas His Majeſty takes notice, that in former Aſſeſſments, notwithſtanding the expreſs orders given in Our Letters to eaſe the Poor, that have been Aſſeſſed towards this ſervice, poor Cottages and others, who having nothing to live on, but their daily work; which is not only a very charitable Act in it ſelf, and grievous to ſuch People, but can admit no better inſtructions, than that it was done out of an adverſe humour, of purpoſe to raiſe clamour, and prejudice the Service.

Not to Aſſeſs poor Cottages, except means in Mony or Goods, to live over and above their labours.

Wherefore His Majeſties expreſs Command is, that you take effectual care, and order by ſuch Precepts and Warrants as you iſſue for this Service; that no Perſons be Aſſeſſed unto the ſame, unleſs they be known to have eſtates in Mony, or Goods, or other means to live by, over and above their daily Labour: and where you find ſuch Perſons to be taxed, you are to take off what ſhall be ſet upon them, and lay it upon thoſe that are better able to bear it. And that you may the better ſpare ſuch poor People, it is His Majeſties pleaſure, that where there ſhall happen to be any man of ability, by reaſon of gainful Trades, great Stocks of Mony, or other uſual Eſtates, who per-chance, have or occupie little or no Land, and conſequently in an ordinary Landſcot would pay nothing, or very little; ſuch men be rated and aſſeſſed according to their worth and ability: and that the monys which ſhall be levied upon ſuch, may be applied, not only to the ſparing and freeing of the ſuch poor people as aforeſaid, but alſo to the eaſing of ſuch, as being either weak of Eſtate, or charged with many Children, or great Debts, or unable to bear ſuch great charge, as their Lands in their occupation might require, in an uſual and ordinary proportion; and the like cauſe to be held by the Head-Officers in the Corporate-Towns, that a poor man be not ſet in reſpect of the uſual Tax of his Houſe, or the like, at a greater ſum than others of much more wealth and ability; and herein you are to have a more than an ordinary care and regard, whereby to prevent complaints of inequality in the Aſſeſſments, whereby we were much troubled the laſt year.

If Taxed, then to alter it.

Perſons of ability by reaſon of gainful Trades, &c. occupying of no Land, to be rated by their abilities

No man to be ſet by uſual Tax of his Houſe, at a greater ſum than men of great abilities.

Thirdly, To the end this may be effected with more equality and expedition, you the Sheriff are to govern your ſelf in the Aſſeſſment for His Service, by ſuch publick payments, as are moſt equal and agreeable to the Inhabitants of that County; and for your more eaſie and better proceeding herein, after you have accordingly rated, the ſeveral Hundreds, Lathes and Diviſions of that County, you may ſet forth your Warrants to the Conſtables, requiring them to call unto them, ſome of the moſt diſcreet and ſufficient men of every Pariſh, Town or Tything, and to conſider with them how the ſum charged upon each Hundred, may be diſtributed and divided as aforeſaid, and with moſt equality and indifferency; and to return the ſame in Writing, under their hands, with all poſſible expedition: which being done, you are to ſign the Aſſeſſment ſet on the ſeveral Perſons of every particular Pariſh, Town or Tything, if you approve thereof; and if for inequality you find cauſe to alter the ſame in any part, yet after it is ſo altered, you are to ſign the ſame, and keeping the true Copy thereof, you may thereupon give order, for the ſpeedy Collection and Levying of ſuch ſums accordingly, by Conſtables of Hundreds, petty-Conſtables and others, uſually applied for Collections of other Common Charges and Payments; and when any ſhall be by them returned to you, either to have refuſed or neglected to make payment,

To proceed according to payments agreeable, and moſt equal to the Inhabitants of the County.

To Aſſign the Aſſeſſment if approved of, otherwiſe to alter and keep a Copy.

The Writ to be executed upon ſuch as refuſe, cauſing diſtreſſes to be taken and ſold for their Aſſeſſment, and their charges, &c.

ment, you are without delay to execute the Writ upon them, cauſing Diſtreſſes to be taken of them, to be ſold for the payment of the Aſſeſſment, and the juſt charges thereupon ariſing, and the overplus of the Diſtreſſes to be rendred back. And you the Head-Officers of the Corporate-Towns aforeſaid, obſerving your uſual diſtribution by Wards, Pariſhes or otherwiſe, as is accuſtomed among you, for your common payments, are to do the like by your ſelf and your ſeveral Miniſters under you reſpectively, as is before appointed to be done by the Sheriff, ſo far forth as may be agreeable to the courſe and ſtate of your Town or Corporation in the ſaid ſeveral Aſſeſſments of each Pariſh; as well you the Sheriff, as you the Head-Officer of the ſaid Towns, are to cauſe to be particularly expreſſed, how much every Clergy-man is rated for his meer Eccleſiaſtical Poſſeſſions, and what for his Temporal and Perſonal Eſtate; and to ſend to this Board under your hands within a month after the Aſſeſſment made, and returned to you, and ſigned by you, an exact and true Certificate, as well what is ſet upon every Pariſh in general, as particularly upon every Clergy-man, in each of them as aforeſaid.

Return a Note to the Board of the Aſſeſſment, and the Names of the Clergy-men within a month.

Clergy to be Aſſeſſed for the preſent.

Upon a complaint by a Clergy-man, the Dioceſan or Chancellor is to hear, &c.

Puniſheth the Complainant, ſo, &c.

Fourthly, Concerning the Aſſeſſment of the Clergy: Albeit His Majeſty is reſolved to maintain all their due Priviledges which they have enjoyed, in the time of his Royal Progenitors; yet being it hath not been hitherto made ſufficiently appear to His Majeſty or this Board, what Priviledges have been allowed to them in former times, touching Payments and Services of this nature; His Majeſty is pleaſed, that for the preſent you proceed to tax and aſſeſs them for this ſervice; and to receive and levy their Aſſeſſments, as you are Authoriſed to do of the reſt of His Majeſties Subjects; but with this care and caution, that you and your Miniſters fail not to bear due reſpect both to their Perſon and Calling, not ſuffering any inequalities, or preſſures to be put upon them. And as His Majeſty is reſolved that ſuch your Aſſeſſments and Proceedings ſhall not be prejudicial in the future to them, or any of their Rights or Priviledges, which upon future ſearch ſhall be done unto them: ſo His Majeſties pleaſure is, that where any Clergy-man ſhall find himſelf juſtly grieved; upon complaint made to the Dioceſan, under whom he is, or to his Chancellor, or to ſuch other Perſon as the Dioceſan ſhall appoint; you with ſome of them ſhall hear the ſame complaint, and (if there be cauſe) relieve the Party complaining according to equity; but if the Complaint ſhall be altogether frivolous and cauſleſs, then the Dioceſan is to puniſh the Complainant.

Perſons refuſing to do their Office, to bind them over to the Board.

Refuſing to be Bound, to Commit them.

Fifthly, If any Conſtables, Bayliffs, or other Officers, refuſe or neglect to do their duties in obeying your Warrants, either for Aſſeſſing, Collecting, or Levying, or for doing any other thing incident or neceſſary for this ſervice, you are to bind them over to anſwer ſuch their faults, and neglect of the Board; and if any of them refuſe to enter into ſuch Bond, then you are to commit them till they ſhall enter into ſuch Bond accordingly, or perform their Duties according to your Warrants. That you are to take ſpecial care in the mean time, that notwithſtanding their refuſal or refractorineſs, the Aſſeſſing, Collecting and Levying of the mony for the ſaid Service, do proceed by your ſelf, and ſuch others as you ſhall appoint, and find more ready to do the ſame, the doing of the Service being by His Majeſties Writ committed to your ſelf. And therefore howſoever for your eaſe and better diſpatch of the buſineſs we like well, that you require the Aſſiſtance of the Conſtables, or ordinary Officers; yet in caſe any of them do not their duties, you are to do yours, and by your ſelf, and ſuch Inſtruments as you like beſt and ſhall chooſe, to ſee the buſineſs effected.

Service Commanded to the ſheriff himſelf.

Sixtly, If you find or underſtand, of any Perſons that are refractory, or do unneceſſarily delay payment of what ſhall be Aſſeſſed upon them for the ſaid Service, whereof you muſt frequently and often call for an account from the Conſtables, Officers and others intereſted under you; you are preſently without any delay, partiality or reſpect of Perſons, to proceed roundly with them, of what quality or condition ſoever they are, according to His Majeſties Writ, and not to defer medling with them to the laſt, or until others have paid (as was done by ſome Sheriffs in former years) whereby all the trouble and burthen was caſt upon the end of the year, and thoſe that were refractory gained time above thoſe that were well-affected to the ſaid Service.

To proceed againſt any perſons whatſoever.

Laſtly, And for all other matters, not particularly mentioned in the Inſtructions, you muſt upon all occurrences govern your ſelf according to the Writ to you directed, and as may beſt accompliſh the Service committed to your truſt; wherein you are to uſe all poſſible diligence to effect the ſame with ſpeed, that the mony for this Service may be ſo truly paid in, as that Proviſion may be ſeaſonably bought and provided to furniſh, and to ſet forth the Fleet, at the day expreſſed in His Majeſties Writ. For aſſure your ſelf, that whatſoever you ſhall leave unlevied during your Shrievalty, will not be caſt upon your Succeſſor, as in former years ſome Sheriffs expected, and therefore retarded the ſervice; His Majeſty being reſolved not to put upon the Succeſſor the burthen of his Predeceſſors neglect; but that all ſuch ſums that ſhall be left unlevied by your ſelf after the end of the year, ſhall be levied upon you by Warrant from your Succeſſor, or ſuch other Warrant as ſhall be thought moſt behoveful. And as for the money which ſhall be Levied and Collected for this ſervice, you are from time to time to pay the ſame at London, to the Treaſurer of the Navy for the time being, who hath Power and Warrant under the Great Seal, to receive the ſame from you and your Agent, and to give Acquittances and Diſcharges for what he receives for the ſaid Service. And you are in like manner, from time to time, to call the Head-Officers to the Corporate-Towns, within your County, to Aſſeſs and Levy what is reſpectively ſet upon the ſame; and to require him either to ſend the ſum to London, to his ſaid Treaſurer of the Navy, or to pay it to you in convenient time, to be ſent up with what you are to pay in. And as you ſhall herein perform your duty with diligence, you may be aſſured to receive Governed according to the Writ.

The mony to be paid in timely, to make proviſion to ſet forth the Fleet at the day.

Not the deferring the Collecting.

To pay the mony to the Treaſurer of the Navy.

THis day was read to this Court His Majeſties VVrit, directed to the Major, Commonalty and Citizens of this City, and to the Sheriffs of the ſame, for, and touching the providing of ſeven Ships of VVar, furniſhed with Men, Victual, and all warlike Proviſions, for the defence of the Seas and other occaſions in the ſaid VVrit contained; the tenor whereof enſueth in theſe Words following, viz. Carolus Dei Gratia, &c. Whereupon this Court, after due and ſerious conſideration taken of the premiſes, conceiving that by their ancient Liberties, Charters, and Acts of Parliament, they ought to be freed and diſcharged of thoſe things, which by the ſaid Writ are required by them to be done, doth Order and Agree, That the draught of a Petition touching the ſaid Buſineſs, this day read to this Court, ſhall be Engroſſed, and with all dutiful reſpect for, and on this Cities behalf, humbly preſented to the Kings moſt excellent Majeſty.

It is likewiſe Ordered and Agreed upon by this Court, That (for the more full ſatisfaction of the Kings Moſt Excellent Majeſty, whom God long preſerve to Reign over us) the words (ſo far as in them lieth) which are inſerted in an Act of Common-Council, made the nineteenth day of November laſt paſt, upon a ſubmiſſion made by this Court to His Majeſties moſt gracious Judgement and Award, touching the difference between the Parſons and Vicars, and the Pariſhioners of the ſeveral Pariſhes of this City, ſhall be expunged and put out; and the ſame Act of Submiſſion certified to His Majeſty under the Seal of the Majoralty without Which Committee did agree upon this Petition following.

To the Kings Moſt Excellent Majeſty.

The Humble Petition of Your Faithful Subjects, the Major, and Commonalty, and Citizens of Your City of London, moſt humbly ſhewing,

THat where Your Majeſty by Writ, bearing teſte 20 Octobris laſt, Commanded Your Petitioners, at their Charge, to provide ſeven Ships of War, furniſhed with Men, Victual, and all Warlike proviſions, to be at Portſmouth by the firſt of March next, and to continue from thence by the ſpace of twenty ſix Weeks in Your Majeſties Service, upon the defence of the Seas and other cauſes in the ſaid Writ contained:

Your Petitioners, do in all ſubmiſſive humbleneſs, and with acknowledgement of Your Sacred Majeſties many Favours unto Your ſaid City, inform Your Majeſty, that they conceive, that by ancient Priviledges, Grants, and Acts of Parliament (which they are ready humbly to ſhew forth) they are exempt, and are to be freed from that Charge.

And do moſt humbly Pray,

That Your Majeſty will be graciouſly pleaſed, that the Petitioners, with Your Princely Grace and Favour, may enjoy the ſaid Priviledges and Exemptions, and be freed from providing of the ſaid Ships and Proviſions.

And they ſhall Pray, &c.

THe Defendant, out of malice to the Relator, and in the Dining-Hall of His Majeſties Palace of VVhitehall, (whither His Majeſty and the Queen were then coming to Dancing) ſhaked his Fiſt, and bent his Brows at the Relator, (then attending His Majeſties coming, being one of His Majeſties Gentlemen-Penſioners) laid hands on his Cloak, ſhaked him, caught him by the Throat, called him baſe Raſcal, baſe Dunghil Rogue, ſwore he would be reveng'd on him, and would cut his Throat, threatned to kick him out of the Houſe, and provoked and challenged him to go out and fight with him the ſaid Defendant: and the Defendant being adviſed by the Treaſurer of His Majeſties Houſhold, and the Comptroler, to be adviſed, and conſider where he was; and being told, that they wondred he would abuſe the Relator, being His Majeſties Servant, the Defendant ſlighted their words, anſwered them very intemperately, and called the Relator baſe fellow. And after the Dancing was over, and the King gone out of the Room, the Defendant, in like ſort as before, challenged the Relator, and after, in the Court-yard, took him by the Throat, and gave him divers blows; and for this he was committed to the Tower during the Kings Pleaſure, 1000 l. Dam'.

Windebanck.

Which came to a Hearing the 5*th* of November before the King and Council, and it is thus expreſſed in the ſaid Order.

Tyths within the City of London.

‘THis day the Matter in difference concerning Tyths within the City of London, demanded of ſome particular Citizens then preſent, was heard by His Majeſty ſitting in Council. And whereas, after ſome entrance into the Cauſe, it was conceived by His Majeſty, that the Caſe in queſtion might concern the City in general, and to that end Mr. Recorder, and ſome Aldermen were required to attend, to take notice of His Majeſties Pleaſure therein: And foraſmuch as the Caſe in queſtion is not agreed upon, whereby His Majeſty might proceed to hear Arguments, and debate thereupon; and being deſirous, out of His Princely diſpoſition, to reconcile the ſame, he did demand of Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen there preſent, whether they would refer the Cauſe to His arbitrement: but they humbly deſired His Majeſty, in as much as they came not as Parties intereſſed in that Queſtion, but in obedience only attended His Majeſties Pleaſure, they might have time to acquaint the Court of Lord Major and Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City therewith, which His Majeſty willed them to do, and thereupon was pleaſed to give them reſpite until Sunday the ſixteenth of this Month, at which time they were to attend with full Power.

10 Caroli.

‘Now touching the particular Perſons, who did attend according to order, about the Cauſe, It was thought fit they ſhould be diſcharged of further attendance until that time.

Afterwards, on the 16th of November, another Order was made by the Council-Board to this effect.

‘WHereas the Fifth of this Month, at the hearing of the Matter in difference, concerning Tyths within the City of London, demanded of ſome particular Citizens, His Majeſty ſitting in Council, demanded of Mr. Recorder, and the Aldermen then preſent, whether they would refer the Cauſe to His arbitrement? whereupon they humbly deſired His Majeſty, in as much as they came not as Parties intereſſed in that Queſtion, but in obedience only attended His Royal Pleaſure, they might have time to acquaint the Courts of Lord Major and Aldermen, and Common-Council of the City therewith; which His Majeſty willed them to do, and thereupon was pleaſed to give them reſpite until this preſent day. They did now accordingly attend, as did alſo they of the other Party, viz. ſundry Miniſters of the City of London. And the Recorder of the ſaid City having related, that the aforeſaid Court of the Lord Major and Aldermen had been aſſembled, and acquainted with His Majeſties Pleaſure, did farther repreſent unto His Majeſty, That it appeared by Record, that in the Reign of King Henry the Eighth, and in the ſame Cauſe which is now in agitation, upon like directions then given by the Council-Board, the ſaid Cauſe was propounded to their ſeveral Wards; and the Common-Council having received their ſeveral Anſwers, did thereupon ſubmit to the courſe ſet down; whereupon he did humbly move, whether His Majeſty would be pleaſed that the ſame courſe be now taken? the rather in regard the Authority of the ſaid Common-Council, is only for matter of Government and ſafety, not medling with the Right or Intereſt of any. But His Majeſty having other Preſidents as ancient as Edward the Fourth, alledged by Mr. Attorney-General, that the Common-Council had ordered Buſineſs of this very nature, did abſolutely declare, that he would not wait for the iſſue of ſuch a manner of proceeding, but he would expect a direct and full Anſwer from the Lord Major and Aldermen, and likewiſe from the Common-Council, which is the repreſentative Body of the City; and that if any would be refractory, and not conform themſelves, they ſhould ſtand to their own hazard, and that he would take notice as well of them, as of thoſe who would ſubmit to His Arbitrement. And His Majeſty was pleaſed further to declare, That His only end in taking this pains, was to ſettle Peace and good underſtanding between the Miniſters and their Pariſhioners; and that he looked not ſo much at any Particular, as at the General, that there may be a firm Order and Accommodation well-eſtabliſhed. Laſtly, His Majeſty was pleaſed to appoint this day ſevennight, which was the 23d of that Month, for their next attendance; at which time they were to come with full Power to give their laſt Anſwer.

And afterwards the ſame Matter being taken into conſideration by the King and Council, on the 14*th* of December, produced another Order to this effect.

An Order concerning Tyths within the City, of London the 14*th* of December.

THis day, His Majeſty being preſent in Council, the matter in difference concerning Tyths within the City of London, and Liberties thereof, was heard at the Board: At which time the Lord Biſhop of London was there preſent, and ſome of the Miniſters on behalf of themſelves, and the reſt of the Miniſters of London on the one part, and ſome of the Aldermen, and the Recorder on the behalf of the ſaid City on the other part: After ſome debate did mutually ſubmit the ſaid differences to be arbitrated and ſetled by His Majeſty, which His Majeſty was pleaſed withal. And in as much as the ſaid Lord Biſhop, and the ſaid Miniſters, had now by an Inſtrument in writing, under Hand and Seal, tendered their ſaid Submiſſion to His Majeſty; It was thought fit and equal, that by an Inſtrument in writing alſo under the Common Seal of the City, the like ſubmiſſion ſhould be made by the City to His Majeſty, which the Aldermen and Recorder authorized from the City this day preſented to His Majeſty, being preſent in Council: Whereupon it was reſolved and ordered, That Sunday the 18*th* of January next ſhould be appointed for the hearing of this Cauſe at large at the Council-Table, before His Majeſty and the Lords; at which time the Parties on both ſides, with their Council learned, were to attend.

The Dutch and French Churches.

The Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, in his Metropolitical Viſitation, ſummoned the Miniſters and Elders of the Dutch and French Churches to appear before his Vicar-general, who had two Injunctions preſcribed by the Arch-biſhop.

Two Injunctions concerning them.

1. That all the Natives of the Dutch and Walloon Congregations in his Graces Dioceſs ſhould repair to their ſeveral Pariſh-Churches of thoſe ſeveral Pariſhes where they inhabited, to hear Divine Service and Sermons, and perform all Duties and Payments required in that behalf.

2. That the Miniſters, and all other of the Dutch and Walloon Congregations, which were not Natives and Born-Subjects to the Kings Majeſty, or any other Strangers that ſhould come over to them, while they remained Strangers, might have and uſe their own Diſcipline, as formerly they have done; yet it was thought fit that the Engliſh Liturgy ſhould be tranſlated into French and Dutch, for the better ſetling of their Children to the Engliſh Government.

Feb. 21. 1634. They Petition their Biſhop.

Upon the publiſhing of theſe Injunctions, the Dutch and Walloon-Churches at Norwich preſented an humble Petition and Remonſtrance to the Biſhop of that Dioceſs, that the ſaid Injunctions ſeemed to be oppoſite, not only to the ſundry Orders of His Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy-Council, heretofore upon ſeveral occaſions granted unto ſeveral Congregations of the ſaid Strangers, but chiefly to all the Gracious Priviledges granted unto them of old, and continued during the Reign of three moſt famous Princes, King Edward the 6th, Queen Elizabeth, and King James of Glorious Memory, and confirmed by His now Majeſties Regal Word, which He was pleaſed Graciouſly to give unto the Deputies of all the Strange Congregations in England proſtrate at His Majeſties Feet the 30th of April 1625. But the Petitioners finding no Redreſs as to their Complaint by the Biſhop of Norwich,

They Petition the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.

Afterwards they preſented a Petition to the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, to the effect of that given to the Biſhop of Norwich; to which Petition the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury gave an Anſwer in a Letter to the ſaid Dutch and VValloon Churches at Norwich, Dated Aug. 19. 1635. to this effect.

That His Majeſty was reſolved, that His Inſtructions ſhould hold, and that obedience ſhould be yielded to them by all the Natives after the 1ſt Deſcent, who might continue in their Congregations, to the end the Aliens might the better look to the Education of their Children, and that their ſeveral Congregations might not be too much leſſened at once; but that all of the ſecond Deſcent born here in England, and ſo termed, ſhould reſort to their ſeveral Pariſh-Churches where they dwelt, concluding his Letter in theſe words. And thus I have given you Anſwer fairly in all your Particulars, and do expect all obedience and conformity to my Inſtructions, which if you ſhall perform, the State will have occaſion to ſee how ready you are to practiſe the obedience which you teach: And for my part, I doubt not but your ſelves, or your Poſterity at leaſt, ſhall have cauſe to thank both the State and the Church for this care taken of you; but if you refuſe, (as you have no cauſe to do, and I hope you will not) I ſhall then proceed againſt the Natives, according to the Laws and Canons Eccleſiaſtical, ſo hoping the beſt of your ſelves, and your obedience, I leave you to the Grace of God, and Reſt,

W. Cant.

By theſe Injunctions the Forreign Churches were moleſted and diſquieted ſeveral years together, for refuſing Conformity, and ſome of their Miniſters and others of their Congregations, deſerted the Kingdom, and went beyond Seas.

Offence taken at the Arch-biſhop his ſetting-up of Pictures in the Church-windows.

This year being the very firſt year after Biſhop Laud his Tranſlation from London to Canterbury, great offence was taken at his ſuddain ſetting-up of Pictures in the Church-windows at his Chappel at Lambeth and Croydon, the Portraiture of them being made according to the Roman Miſſal, and bowing towards the Table or Altar, uſing of Copes at the Sacrament, whereupon the People made a great Clamour, that the Arch-biſhop endeavoured to ſubvert Gods true Religion, by Law eſtabliſhed in this Realm, and inſtead thereof, to ſet up Popiſh Superſtition and Idolatry; aggravating this his Action to be the greater crime, becauſe he was Primate and Metropolitan of

of all England, principally intruſted with the care of Religion, who ſhould of all other Men have been moſt vigilant againſt all Popiſh Idolatrous Innovations, and not profeſſedly to ſet up a-freſh thoſe Idolatrous, Superſtitious, Romiſh, Pictures, which were by our Statutes, Homilies and Injunctions purpoſely defaced and broken down at the beginning of Reformation, as Monuments of Popery, Superſtition and Idolatry, contrary to the Word of God, and eſtabliſhed Injunctions of the Church of England.

The Arch-biſhops Defence.

But let us not be ſo uncharitable to the deceaſed, as not to mention his Defence made when he was living to a Charge of this nature, when he was afterwards queſtioned for the ſame in Parliament; therefore take what he ſaid then in vindication of himſelf, which was to this effect.

The firſt thing the Commons have in their Evidence charged againſt me, is (ſaid he) the ſetting up and repairing Popiſh Images and Pictures in the Glaſs-windows of my Chappel at Lambeth, and amongſt others, the Picture of Chriſt hanging on the Croſs between the Two Thieves in the Eaſt Window; of God the Father in form of a little Old Man, with a Glory, ſtriking Myriam with a Leproſie; of the Holy Ghoſt deſcending in form of a Dove; and of Chriſts Nativity, laſt Supper, Reſurrection, Aſcenſion, and others, the Pattern whereof Mr. Prynn atteſted I took out of the very Maſs-Book, wherein he ſhewed their Portraitures.

To which I anſwer, firſt, That I did not ſet theſe Images up, but found them there before.

Secondly, That I did only repair the Windows which were ſo broken, and the Chappel which lay ſo naſtily before, that I was aſhamed to behold, and could not reſort unto it, but with ſome diſdain, which cauſed me to repair it to my great Coſt.

Thirdly, That I made up the Hiſtory of theſe old broken Pictures, not by any Pattern in the Maſs-Book, but only by help of the fragments and remainders of them, which I compared with the Story.

Fourthly, Though the very reſemblances of them be in the Maſs-Book, yet I proteſt I never knew they were there, till Mr. Prynn ſhewed them in it at this Bar: it is but a meer fallacy, the Pictures which I repaired are in the Maſs-Book; Ergo, I took the Pattern of them out of it.

Fifthly, Mr. Calvin himſelf allows an Hiſtorical uſe of Images, Inſt. l. 1. cap. 11. Sect. 12. where thus he writes, Neq; tamen ea ſuperſtitione teneor, &c.

Sixthly, Our Homilies themſelves allow an Hiſtorical uſe of Images, as appears by Page 64, 65.

Seventhly, The Primitive Chriſtians approved, and had the Pictures of Chriſt himſelf; Tertullian recording, That they had the Picture of Chriſt engraven on their Chalices, in form of a Shepheard carrying home the loſt Sheep on his back.

Eighthly, I hope the repairing and ſetting up of theſe Pictures is no High-Treaſon by any Law.

Ninthly, Images and Pictures in Arras, or Glaſs-windows, are not againſt the Statute of 3 E. 6. c. 10. but Statues only.

Reply.

To this was reply'd: Firſt, That he did not find thoſe Images there, compleat or entire, but broken and demoliſhed by vertue of our Statutes, Homilies, Injunctions fore-cited, and that at the beginning of Reformation; ever ſince which time they continued unrepaired, as Monuments of our indignation and deteſtation againſt them, like the Ruines of our Abbies and Monaſteries.

Secondly, We have here confitentem reum, the Arch-biſhop plainly confeſſing that we charge him with, viz. the repairing of the broken Images of Chriſt, the Holy Ghoſt, in Glaſs-windows; and no ways denying, extenuating, but juſtifying this Popiſh Fact of his againſt our Statutes, Homilies, Injunctions, Writers, yea, his own frequent Subſcriptions to our Homilies, and Articles of Religion: Nay Mr. Brown, his own Joiner, atteſted, That he, by the Arch-biſhop's directions, repaired and new-made the broken Crucifix in Croyden Chappel, as well as in Lambeth Chappel; and the Arch-biſhop plainly confeſſeth, that he had no great devotion to ſerve God in Lambeth Chappel, nor yet to reſort unto it, till theſe Images were repaired, and now beautiſied to pleaſe his Eyes.

Thirdly, That himſelf took pains, and gave directions to the Glaſiers to make up the Stories and Pictures in the Windows, out of the broken fragments remaining, and new-made them to his exceſſive Coſt, whereas he might have new glazed them with unpainted Glaſs, for the tenth part of that his painted Pictures coſt him.

Fourthly, He confeſſeth the very Portraitures of the new-furbiſhed Pictures in his Chappel to be all contained in the Maſs-Book, which we made ſo apparent to your Lordſhips, that he could not but with ſhame deny it; but proteſts he knew them not to be in it, and that he took not his Pattern out of it. To which we muſt reply, That he having noted his Maſs-Book, wherein we ſhewed them to be portrayed in every Page almoſt with his own hands, and turning this Book ſo frequently over, muſt of neceſſity ſee theſe Pictures in it, which are ſo large and viſible, unleſs we ſhall ſuppoſe him blind, or ſuch an hater of them, as purpoſely to turn his Eye-ſight from them, which is improbable; and therefore, notwithſtanding this bold proteſtation of his, we hold our Argument both true and ſolid. The new Images in his Chappel-windows exactly agree in all things with the printed ones in his Maſs-Book, which he could not but know, and ſee too, as oft as he noted or peruſed his Roman Miſſal; Ergo, He took his Pattern from the Maſs-Book in the repairing, as well as his Popiſh Predeceſſors in the firſt making of them, ſince no other Pattern hath been produced by him, by which he gave directions to new-make them but by the Roman Miſſal.

Fifthly, We wonder greatly, that he that hath ſo much traduced, reviled Mr. Calvin publickly heretofore, ſhould fly thus unto him for ſhelter now; but as he abuſed his Perſon, and Memory then, ſo he miſerably perverts and miſapplies his words now point-blank againſt his meaning. Mr. Calvin only affirms, That he is not ſo ſuperſtitious as to think it altogether unlawful to make any Images

An. 1634. of Men or Beaſts for a civil uſe, ſince Painting is the gift of God; from whence the Arch-biſhop hath inferred, Ergo, Mr. Calvin holds it lawful to make the Picture of Chriſt's Nativity, laſt Supper, Paſſion, Reſurrection, coming to Judgment; of God the Father, like an Old Man; of Chriſt on the Croſs, of God the Holy Ghoſt in form of a Dove, and Cloven Tongues; of the Virgin Mary, other Saints, and to ſet them up in Churches, as he did theſe Images in the Chappel: Whereas Mr. Calvin, in the ſelfſame place, in moſt poſitive terms, concludes the contrary; witneſs the very next words following thoſe he objects: Purum & legitimum utriuſque uſum requiro, ne qua Dominus in ſuam gloriam, & bonum noſtrum nobis contulit, ea non tantum polluantur præpoſtero abuſu, ſed in noſtram quoq; perniciem convertantur. Deum effingi viſibili ſpecie nefas eſſe putamus, quia id vetuit ipſe, & fieri ſine aliqua gloriæ ejus deformatione non poteſt, which he proves at large. Then ſpeaking of Images in Churches, he writes, they were introduced thither, Non judicio aut delectu, ſed ſtulta & inconſiderata cupiditate.

This Author hath many ſuch-like paſſages in his other Works, and therefore the Arch-Biſhop's citing of him to juſtifie his Chappel-Images, argues either extreme ignorance, or falſhood.

Sixthly, Whereas he would pray in aid from our Homilies, to juſtifie the Hiſtorical Uſe of theſe Images in his Chappel, the Homilies are ſo point-blank againſt it, as we have proved, that Impudency it ſelf would bluſh to cite them to ſuch a purpoſe, eſpecialally ſince the third part of the Homily againſt the peril of Idolatry, pag. 41, 42, 43. expreſly reſolves it unlawful to make the Picture of Chriſt, or any Perſon in the Trinity, much leſs to ſet them up in Churches.

Seventhly, For his averment that the Primitive Chriſtians approved of Images, and had the Picture of Chriſt in their Churches, and engraven on their Chalices, is a moſt notorious falſhood. For Juſtin Martyr, Clemens Alexandrinus, Irenaus, Tertullian, Minutius, Felix, Origen, Arnobius, Cyprian, Lactantius, Gregory Nyſſen, Athanaſius, Ambroſe, Epiphanius, Euſebius, Hierome, Auguſtin, Hilary, Chryſoſtom, Theodoret, Theophilact, and other Ancients unanimouſly agree, that the Primitive Chriſtians had no Images at all in their Churches; together with the Councils of Eliberis, Conſtantinople, Toledo, Frankford, and Conſtantine the Great, Conſtantius, &c. with ſundry other godly Emperors, utterly demoliſhed and caſt them out of Churches; as Eccleſiaſtical Authors, our own Homilies, Writers, prove at large againſt the Papiſts. Lactantius and other Primitive Chriſtians write expreſly, that without doubt there can be no Religion at all in that place whereſoever any Image is; whereupon Epiphanius rent the Image of Chriſt, or ſome other Saint, which he found in a Church, painted in Cloth, out of holy indignation, as contrary to the Authority of the Scriptures. In few words, our own Homilies againſt the peril of Idolatry, Part 2. p. 38. expreſly reſolve, that when Images began to creep into the Church, they were not only ſpoken and written againſt by godly and learned Biſhops, Doctors and Clerks, but alſo condemned by whole Councils of Learned men aſſembled together; yea the ſaid Images by many Chriſtian Emperors and Biſhops were defaced, broken and deſtroyed; which Mr. Calvin in the place objected by the Biſhop affirms likewiſe: And therefore it is a moſt deſperate aſſertion in the Arch-Biſhop, thus falſly to affirm the contrary, point-blank againſt our Homilies and his own ſubſcription to them. And whereas he cites Tertullian, to prove that the Chriſtians in his days had the Picture of Chriſt upon their Chalices; we anſwer, that if the Book De Pudicitia be Tertullians own, (of which ſome doubt) yet his words import no ſuch thing, which are theſe, A parabolis licebit incipias ubi eſt Ovis perdita a Domino acquiſita, &c. Picturæ Calicum veſtrorum, &c. (not noſtrorum.) And that he hath moſt groſly abuſed Tertullian, your Lordſhips and his Auditory, in alledging Tertullian in defence of Images, and their uſe among the Primitive Chriſtians: certainly Tertullian is ſo far from any ſuch opinion, that he hath written a whole Book De Idololatria, next before this De Pudicitia, wherein he expreſly condemns, not only the having, but making of any Image or Picture for any uſe, and the very Arts of Carving and Painting Images, as contrary to the ſecond Commandment (as the Jews, Joſephus, Philo and others did before him, and the very Turks and Perſians at this day.) Take but this ſentence of his inſtead of many; Omnis forma vel formula Idolum ſe dici expoſcit. Idolum TAM FIERI quam coli Deus prohibet: quanto precædit, &c. which he proſecutes at large throughout this Eloquent Book, and therefore his ſophiſtry in citing Tertullian for defence of Images in Churches, who is thus point-blank againſt the making of any Image whatſoever, even for civil uſes, is an intolerable, inexcuſable boldneſs.

Eighthly, Whereas he anſwers, that the ſetting up of theſe Glaſs-Images is no high Treaſon by the Statute: We grant it not to be ſo ſimply in it ſelf, neither do we urge it to be ſo, but as it tends to ſubvert our Religion, Laws, and ſet up Popery, concurs with his other practices of this nature, ſo it may, and will prove high Treaſon. The ſecond part of the Homily againſt the Peril of Idolatry, pag. 37. aſſures us, that the maintenance of Images hath brought in a Sea of Miſchief, horrible Schiſms, Rebellions, Treaſons; and his maintaining them hath done the like.

Ninthly, We conceive that the Statute of 3 E. 6. c. 10. which commands all Images of Stone, Timber, Alabaſter, or Earth, graven, carved or painted; which heretofore have been taken out of any Church or Chappel, or yet ſtand in any Church or Chappel, to be defaced and deſtroyed, extend to Images in Glaſs-Windows as well as others, which are but painted Earth; and that which confirms us in this opinion is, that the Homilies againſt the Peril of Idolatry (the occaſion of this Law) and the Injunctions of Queen Elizabeth made in purſuance of it, extend in direct terms to Images in Glaſs-Windows, as well as to Images of Stone, Timber, and the like: yea, the practice of that time in defacing the Glaſs-Images in Lambeth Chappel Windows (which he of late repaired) and in moſt other places, infallibly proves it; together with the Statute of 3 Jac. c. 5. which reckons up Images and Crucifixes, of what matter ſoever, among the Relicks of Popery, and enjoins them to be defaced: wherefore this evaſion of his is moſt falſe and frivolous, eſpecially ſince Popery may creep in at a Glaſs-Window, as well as at a Door; and our Homilies, Injunctions, Writers cenſure all of them alike, if this Statute do it not.

After the Reply was made, the Biſhop proceeded in his Defence.

The ſecond thing objected againſt me (ſaid he) as a Popiſh Innovation in my Chappel at Lambet , is, my removing and Railing in the Communion-Table there, Altarwiſe, with the ends of it North and South againſt the Wall; my furniſhing it with Baſons, Candleſticks, and other Furniture, and hanging a Cloth of Arras behind it, with the Picture of Chriſt and his Apoſtles, eating the Lords Supper together.

To which I anſwer; Firſt, That the Railing in and Placing the Table Altarwiſe, is warranted by Queen Elizabeth's Injunctions, which preſcribe, that the Holy Table in every Church be decently made and ſet in the place where the Altar ſtood: Now the Altars generally in all Churches, as all Antiquity manifeſts, ſtood at the Eaſt-end of the Quire, North and South cloſe to the Wall, as the Tables were lately placed, and there were Railed in: this therefore is no Innovation.

Secondly, The Furniture on the Altar is no other than ſuch as is in uſe in the Kings own Chappel at Whitehall, and had been there uſed ever ſince, and before my time.

Thirdly, That the Arras-Piece at the Back of the Table, containing the ſtory of Chriſt's laſt Supper, was fit for that place and occaſion: that ſuch Images and Repreſentations were lawful, approved by the Lutheran Churches, yea by Mr. Calvin himſelf, for an Hiſtorical uſe, in the place fore-cited, Inſt. l. 1. c. 11. Sect. 12.

Reply. To this the Commons Replied; Firſt, That neither Queen Elizabeths Injunctions, nor the Rubrick in the Common-Prayer Book, nor any Law or Canon of our Church, preſcribe the Railing in of our Communion-Tables, or placing them Altarwiſe againſt the Wall, with the ends North and South; there is no ſillable in any of them to warrant any ſuch Popiſh Innovation, preſcribed only by Popiſh Canons, as we have proved: That it cannot be proved that Altars were generally ſo placed and railed in anciently, either in England or elſewhere; the contrary whereof we ſhall prove anon: That the makers and executers of theſe Innovations knew beſt of any, where, and how Communion-Tables were to be ſituated by vertue of them; and they generally placed them throughout the Realm, in the midſt of the Quire or Chancel, with the ends Eaſt and Weſt, ſtanding a convenient diſtance from the Eaſt Wall, without any Rail about it, in which poſture they generally ſtood in all Churches, Chappels, and in Lambeth-Chappel it ſelf for one, ever ſince theſe Injunctions publiſhed, till this Innovating Arch-Biſhop altered this their ancient Situation. Yet both the Rubrick in the Common-Prayer-Book, the Queens Injunctions, the 82*d* Canon, Biſhop Jewel, Biſhop Babington, Doctor Fulk, and other of our Writers agree, that when the Sacrament is adminiſtred, it ought to ſtand in the Body of the Church or Chancel, of which more hereafter: This therefore is an Innovation, and that a Popiſh one too, tending to introduce private Maſs, to remove the Lords Table as far as poſſible from the view and audience of the common People, when the Sacrament is celebrated at it.

Secondly, We have proved, that this Altar-furniture of Canleſticks, Tapers, Baſons, Crucifixes, and the like, was originally borrowed from the Roman Ceremonial, Pontifical, and the Popiſh Council of Aix, which enjoyn them; That the 3*d* part of our Homilies againſt the Peril of Idolatry, and Queen Elizabeth's Injunctions, (which he cites for placing of the Lords-Table Altar-wiſe) Injunct. 2. 23, 25. condemn, cenſure, aboliſh, as Superſtitious, Ethnical and Popiſh, all Candleſticks, Trendals, Rolls of Wax, and ſetting up of Tapers, for that they be things tending to Idolatry and Superſtition, which of all other offences God Almighty doth moſt deteſt and abhor, for that the ſame diminiſh moſt his Honour and Glory: Therefore the Kings Altar-furniture in His Chappel at Whitehall, can be no juſtification nor extenuation of his offence, who ſhould have reformed His Majeſties Chappel, (whereof he was the Dean and Superintendent according to our Laws, Homilies, Injunctions, which condemn ſuch Altar-trinkets) not conformed his own Chappel-Altar to the Kings, in theſe meer Popiſh ſuperſtitious Innovations.

Thirdly, The Arras-hanging was rather ſuited to the Crucifixes in the Glaſs-window over it, and other Images of Chriſt in that Chappel, than to the Place or Lords-Table where it hanged; the Table and Sacramental Elements themſelves, with the uſual participation of them every Month, being ſufficient to mind us of our Saviours laſt Supper, Paſſion, Death too, and to ſhew them forth till he come, (who uſed no ſuch Pictures nor Crucifixes, when he inſtituted his laſt Supper) without any ſuch Image or Crucifix; which being condemned by our Statutes, Homilies, Injunctions, Canons, Writers, as we have formerly evidenced, yea by all Antiquity, by Mr. Calvin himſelf, and many Lutherans too, ought not to have been placed there, the rather, becauſe there is no Warrant nor Precept for it, but only in the Roman Ceremonial, Pag. 69, 70. his Conformity whereto was the only ground of hanging thoſe Arras-Pictures, which well deſerves another hanging, eſpecially in an Arch-Prelate who profeſſeth himſelf a Proteſtant, and as averſe from Popery as any man whatſoever.

Defence of the Arch-biſhop to the third Innovation.

The third ſort of Innovations in my Chappel charged againſt me, is the ſetting up of a Credentia or Side-Table, my own and my Chaplains bowing towards the Table or Altar at our approaches to it, our going in and out from the Chappel; my Chaplains with my own uſing of Copes therein, at the celebration of the Lords Supper, and ſolemn conſecration of Biſhops, atteſted by Doctor Heywood my own Chaplain, who confeſſed, that he celebrated the Sacrament at Lambeth-Chappel in a Cope; That my other Chaplains did the like, and that he thought I was ſometimes preſent when they did it; That the Bread when the Sacrament was adminiſtred, was firſt laid upon the Credentia, from whnece he took it in his hand, and then carried it too, and kneeling down upon his Knee preſented it, laid it on the Lords Table, on which there were Candleſticks, and Tapers, but not burning, as he had ſeen them at Whitehall; which Mr. Cordwell, once my Servant, likewiſe depoſed: adding that I was preſent ſometimes when this was done, and that my Chaplains

An. 1634. lains bowed down thrice towards the Altar at their approaches to it.

To which I anſwer, Firſt, That I took my pattern of the Credentia from Biſhop Andrews Chappel.

Secondly, That this bowing towards the Altar was uſed in the Kings Chappel, and in many Cathedrals, both in Queen Elizabeth and King James their Reigns.

Thirdly, That the uſe of Copes is preſcribed by the 24*th* Canon of our Church, Anno 1603. which orders thus in all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, the Holy Communion ſhall be adminiſtred upon principal Feaſt-days, ſometimes by the Biſhop if he be preſent, and ſometimes by the Dean; ſometimes by a Canon or Prebendary, the Principal Miniſter uſing a decent Cope: This therefore is no Innovation.

Reply. To this was retorted in general, that Sir Nathaniel Brent, and Dr. Featly depoſed, there was no ſuch Credentia, bowing towards the Table, Altar, or any Cope at all uſed in Lambeth-Chappel, in his Predeceſſors time; therefore all theſe are meer Innovations: In particular it was replied, that it appears not by proof Biſhop Andrews had any ſuch Utenſils, Veſtments, or bowing in his Chappel, therefore this is a meer groundleſs evaſion. But admit he had, yet Biſhop Andrews Chappel was no Law, Canon, nor pattern for him to follow, againſt our Laws, Common-Prayer-Book, Homilies, Injunctions, which exclude ſuch Innovations: And if the Pattern of the Chappel and its Furniture which we gave in evidence were Biſhop Andrews, as he avers, it was as groſly Popiſh and Superſtitious as the Popes, or any Popiſh Prelates Chappel whatſoever. As for the Credentia, it is directly taken out of the Roman Ceremonial and Pontifical, as we have proved, the only Canons we know preſcribing it: and we find the uſe of it only in ſome Popiſh Churches, and mentioned no where but in the Roman-Miſſal, among the Rites of celebrating the Maſs; therefore it is a meer Popiſh Utenſil, appropriated to the Maſs, and a forerunner of it.

Secondly, This bowing to and towards the Altar, was never preſcribed by our Statutes, Articles, Homilies, Common-Prayer-Book, Injunctions, Canons, never practiſed by any till of late, but ſome few Popiſh Court-Doctors, and Cathedraliſts; never uſed by his Predeceſſor, or his Chaplains; introduced only by Papiſts at the firſt, in honour and adoration of their Breaden God upon the Altar; and enjoyned only by the Roman-Miſſal, Ceremonial and Popiſh Canoniſts, as we have largely manifeſted; therefore not to be juſtified or excuſed.

Thirdly, The Book of Common-Prayer, and Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England (the only Directory what Veſtments, Ceremonies are to be uſed, confirmed by our Laws) preſcribes not any of thoſe; warrants not, but excludes the uſe of Copes upon any occaſion: whereupon our Homilies and beſt Writers condemn Copes as Jewiſh, Popiſh, Paganiſh, enjoyned only by the Roman Ceremonial, and Pontifical, as we have proved, Injunctions deeming them Popiſh: yea, the third part of the Homily againſt the Peril of Idolatry, hath this memorable paſſage concerning them, Page 72. And becauſe

Se the Homily.

becauſe the whole Pageant muſt throughly be played, it is not enough thus to deck Images and Idols (with Gold, Silver, Rich, Wanton and Proud Apparel, tempting their Paramours to wantonneſs) but at laſt come in the Prieſts themſelves, likewiſe decked with Gold and Pearls; that they may be meet ſervants for ſuch Lords and Ladies, and fit worſhippers of ſuch Gods and Goddeſſes; and with a ſolemn pace they paſs forth before the Golden Puppets, and fall down to the ground on their Marrow-bones before the honourable Idols, (and their gorgeous Altars too:) therefore certainly it is impudency for him thus to introduce and juſtifie them againſt theſe Authorities. Now whereas the Arch-Biſhop pleads the 24th Canon, made in the year 1603, to warrant the uſe of Copes in his Chappel; We anſwer, firſt, That the Canon extends only to Collegiat and Cathedral Churches, not Parochial, much leſs to Chappels: therefore it can no way warrant, but condemns this uſe of Copes in his Chappel.

Secondly, It enjoyns only the chief Miniſter to uſe a decent Cope, not a gaudy one with Images, and rich embroidering upon it ſuch, as the Copes were.

Thirdly, This Canon was never binding to any, but meerly void in Law, being never confirmed by Parliament, and croſſing both the Common-Prayer-Book and Homilies ratified by Parliament; therefore all theſe his Anſwers in juſtification of theſe Innovations diſplay his impudence to the World in juſtifying ſuch Popiſh Reliques as theſe.

At Edenburgh there was a Printed Pamphlet diſperſed, reflecting upon the King

Some of the Scots who were members of that Parliament which ſate at Edenburgh Anno 1633, and were then againſt paſſing of the Act for wearing of Whites, &c. remained full of diſcontent; and with ſome of their privity there was put forth in Print, a Pamphlet called a Libel, which reflected upon the Kings proceedings in the ſaid Parliament, charging His Majeſty with gaining of Votes by undue means and practice, to obtain the ſaid Act to paſs in that Parliament: which Libel this Year paſt through many hands till Spottiſwood and ſome of the Lords of the Council found out the Author, and it fell upon one Hagg, who eſcaped and went beyond Seas; but upon further enquiry it was faſtned upon the Lord Balmerino, who was preſently apprehended and committed Priſoner to the Caſtle at Edenburgh for Treaſon, afterwards tryed and condemned; but the King was graciouſly pleaſed to reſtore him to his honour, life and eſtate.

Lord Balmerino queſtioned for the ſame, and condemned.

His Father had been Secretary to King James, who as the Hiſtory ſaith, ſhufled a Letter of his own contriving, from King James to Pope Clement, in favour of the Catholicks, for which Balmerino, the Father was queſtioned by King James, and accuſed of High-Treaſon, and condemned to ſuffer death; but aftewards pardoned by King James, and reſtored to life, eſtate and honour: ſo both Father and Son had an obligation put upon them by both their Majeſties; yet the friends of Balmerino remained diſſatisfied with both the ſentences of death, and would be talking that which might have brought them alſo into danger.

His Father was likewiſe arraigned and condemned in King James's time.

But both pardoned by King James.

About this time there hapned a great Battel in Germany, of which take a brief account, for the Victory was great.

After the diſorder of the Imperial Army by VVallenſtines murder, the King of Hungary, ſon to the Emperor, was liberal and bountiful to the Souldiers, giving them plenty of money for Pay; took the Oaths of the Souldiers to be faithful to the Emperor: but the Emperor ſtood in great need at this time of help and aſſiſtance from his Allies and Friends to ſupport the Houſe of Auſtria, for the Swede at this time had got almoſt half Germany; whereupon the Cardinal Infanto came from Milan with the old Spaniſh, Italian and Burgundian Bands through all Switzerland: theſe Forces joyning with the Imperialiſts, marched into the Dutchy of VVitzemburgh; but Nordlengen being a ſtrong Town and Garriſon in their way gave a ſtop to their Advance.

The Cardinal Infanto marches with an Army to the Emperors aſſiſtance.

They came to the Emperors Camp before Nordlingen on the 2*d* of September, and alarmed the Swedes, who gather all their Forces together; Guſtavus Horn joyns with the Duke Bernard, and adviſes rather to ſpare the Enemy a Town or two, than to hazard the Publick Cauſe upon a Battel.

After this a Second Council of War was called, and it was reſolved again not to fight, but to ſtay till the Rhinegrave with his Troops, conſiſting of 4000 men, were arrived; but upon Munday, September the 4*th*, the Field-Marſhal Cratz, together with Major-General Kagg, arrived to the Aſſiſtance of the Swedes: this prevailed with Duke Bernard to put on a Reſolution to Fight, and not to ſtay the coming of the Rhinegrave and his 4000 men.

On Tueſday the 5*th* of September they joyned their Forces, and in the Evening advanced into the Valley under Gopingen, half a League from the Imperial Camp.

The Battel near Norlindgen.

September the 6*th*, The Swedes very early before ſix of the Clock aſſaulted the Imperial entrenched Army, with great fury obtained ſome Standards and Enſigns, and three pieces of Canon, took one of the Sconces upon the Hill; about which were engaged two Regiments of Swedes, who loſt their lives, being blown up either by a Mine ſprung, or fire given to Gunpowder in the Sconce. But this loſs did not at all ſtartle the Swedes, nor the Enemies great Canon from a Battery; but on they marched to the Body of the Enemy, who had the remainder of their Ordnance, laden with great and ſmall ſhot, hid behind ſome Buſhes on a riſing ground; and when the Swedes came ſomewhat near unto them in Battel-array, they diſcharged their Canon behind the Buſhes all at one time, which did incredible ſlaughter, and made partitions in the Swedes Army with men that fell like Streets. This much daunted the Swedes, and in this confiſion the Horſe of the Imperial Army commanded by the Duke of Lorrain and John de VVert managed their Armes ſo well, inſomuch as in two hours time they obtained an abſolute Victory over the Swedes. 2000 Swedes Horſe were cut off, 4000 VVitzemburghers were put to the Sword, 2000 loſt at the Sconce; The Swedes likewiſe loſt all their Canon, being eighty pieces of Ordnance, 300 colours, their Wagons, Bag and Baggage; and that brave ſoldier Guſtavus Horn was taken Priſoner. This great ſucceſs of the Imperialiſts anſwered for their loſs at the two Battels of Lipſwick and Lutzen.

The Swedes overthrown.

Duke Bernard was wounded, but retired to Helbrun to collect again the diſperſed Troops, 1000 Swedes Horſe eſcaped and came to the the Rhinegrave, where, in a ſhort ſpace, the Rhinegrave had an Army of 6000 Men, and joyning with Baniere, got up a conſiderable Army, and ſtaying till Duke Bernard came to them, they fell into Action to offend the Enemy; and meeting with ſome of the Infanta's Army, which he was ſending back by the way of Briſac, had thereabouts a brisk Encounter with them, and though the Enemy were Armed Cap-a-pe; yet the Swedes killed many, and took many Priſoners at that time.

The Swedes rally and get up an Army.

The Queen goes a Progreſs.

This Summer Her Majeſty made a Progreſs North of Trent, the King accompanying Her all the way: they had no ſooner paſſed the Trent, but were entertained at Bolſover Caſtle in Darby-ſhire by the then Earl (afterwards Duke) of Newcaſtle, where nothing was ſpared which might add Splendor to the Feaſt, ſo highly Honoured with the Preſence of both their Majeſties.

The Earl ſent for all the Gentry of the Countries of Darby and Nottingham to come and wait upon their Majeſties, who came with great joy and chearfulneſs, and were nobly Treated by the ſaid Earl, for he ſpared for no Coſts to render his Reception of both their Majeſties worthy their Royal Acceptance.

The Expence which the ſaid Earl was at in the preceding year in entertaining the King at Welbeck, and at this time at Bolſover, was eſtimated by Men of judgment to coſt the ſaid Earl 10000 l. and upwards.

All this was but an Earneſt of this Earls Duty and Love to his Prince, for afterwards, when the unhappy Wars broke out, he adventured Life and Fortune for the King; and his Eſtate was ſold by the Parliament as forfeited, out of which was raiſed by the ſale thereof 111593 l. 10 s. 11 d. Beſides, he had other great loſſes out of his Eſtate Real and Perſonal, during thoſe troubleſome times.

Mr. Cook ordered to recant his Sermon.

On the 19*th* of July, this year, Mr. Thomas Cook of Brazen-noſe Colledge in Oxford, was enjoined Recantation for uſing ſome Paſſages in a Latin Sermon, reflecting upon the Arminian Party, wherein he violated the Kings Edicts concerning ſuch Points of Controverſie.

Mr. Hobbs ordered to make Recantation.

Likewiſe William Hobbs, Fellow of Trinity Colledge, for Preaching againſt Falling from Grace, &c. and reflecting upon the Arminian Party, contrary to the Kings Declaration, was on the 25*th* of January enjoined Recantation for the ſame, Recorded in the Univerſity Regiſter fol. 54.

Some Privy-Councellors Romiſh-Recuſants.

It was uſual in thoſe days, by the Interceſſion of the Queen, Queen-Mother, and Powerful Privy-Councellors about the King, who then were ſuſpected to be, and afterwards dyed, of the Romiſh Religion, viz. the Lord Treaſurer Weſton, Lord Cottington, and ſome others of the Privy-Council of the ſame Romiſh Faith, to prevail with the King to grant Letters of Grace to ſtay Proceedings againſt Recuſants upon any Indictment, Preſentment or Information, for or concerning Recuſancy. Here followeth the Example of Two or Three of many that were granted in that kind in that year.

By the King.

A Letter of Grace from the King to a Romiſh-Recuſant.

* He was afterwards a great Actor in the Iriſh Rebellion.

W*Hereas We have received good Teſtimony of the Loyalty, and Duty and Affection of Our truſty and well-beloved Captain John Read; and becauſe he may be ſubject to the Penalties of the Laws againſt Recuſancy, theſe are to ſignifie, That We are graciouſly pleaſed to extend Our Special Grace towards him; and do hereby Will and Command, That no Indictment, Preſentment, Information, or Suit in Our Name, or in the Name of any other, be henceforth commenced, proſecuted, or accepted againſt him by any of Our Officers or Subjects whatſoever, for or concerning Recuſancy. And if any ſuch ſhall happen, then Our Will and Pleaſure is, That upon ſight hereof the ſame ſhall be diſcharged and made void, or otherwiſe not prejudicial unto him. Given under Our Signet the 13th day of July, in the 10th Year of Our Reign.

To all and ſingular Our Judges of Aſſize, Juſtices of Peace, Majors, Sheriffs, Clerks of Aſſize, Bailiffs, Conſtables, Informers, and all other Our Officers and Miniſters whom it doth or may concern, and to every of them.

Another Letter of Grace of the Kings to a Romiſh-Recuſant.

Charles Rex.

TRuſty and Wel-beloved, We greet you well. We have been often and earneſtly moved by Our dear Mother the Queen-Mother of France, to extend Our Favour to Sir Henry Bedingfeild Knight, his Wife and Family, who are Popiſh Recuſants, and We are very willing, that for Her ſake they ſhould receive Our Favour, when they ſhall ſtand in need thereof for that Cauſe; yet we muſt ſo perform it, that it may not be of ill example to others, who are or ſhall be in the like kind obnoxious to Our Laws for Recuſancy, nor be ſcandalous to Our Government, whereof We are and muſt be tender: therefore Our Will and Command to you is, That you take knowledge of Our Pleaſure herein, and take ſpecial care to preſerve the ſaid Henry Bedingfeild, and his Wife, from the danger of the Laws made againſt Popiſh Recuſants, that Sir Henry himſelf ſhall not be impeached any way for any of his Family for being Popiſh Recuſants; for the doing whereof from time to time by ſuch ways you ſhall think fitteſt, this ſhall be your Warrant. Dated the 20th of November 1634.

Another Letter of Grace of the Kings to a Romiſh Recuſant.

Charles Rex.

W*Hereas Our truſty and wel-beloved Sir* Francis Englefeild Knight and Baronet being a Recuſant, is thereby ſubject to Our Laws and Statutes in that caſe provided; theſe are to ſignifie Our Royal Will and Pleaſure, That no perſon or perſons ſhall at any time hereafter ſue, proſecute, implead, either by way of Indictment, Information, or otherwiſe, againſt the ſaid Sir Sir Francis Englefeild, for being a Recuſant, or cauſe or procure him to be indicted or convicted by vertue of any of Our Laws, or Statutes againſt Popiſh Recuſants, till We ſhall ſignifie Our Pleaſure to the contrary. Given under Our Signet at Our Palace at Weſtminſter the 6th day of December, in the 10th Year of Our Reign.

To all Our Judges of Aſſize, Juſtices of the Peace, Majors, Sheriffs, Bailiffs, Conſtables,
Headboroughs, Purſivants, and to all other
Our Officers and Miniſters, whom it may or doth concern, and to every of them.

Beſides theſe Letters of Grace, Protections were uſually granted, that Courts of Juſtice ſhould not proceed againſt ſuch Popiſh Recuſants, which were ſignified by a Letter from a Secretary of State to the Judges of the Court, that they ſhould not be Eſtreated into the Exchequer. Thoſe Protections were in form following.

17. Ap. 10. Car. p. 157. of the Seſſions-Book.

UPon ſpecial directions given by His Majeſty, and ſignified by a Letter from Mr. Secretary to the Right Honourable Sir Tho. Richardſon Knight, Lord Chief-Juſtice of His Majeſties Court of Kings-Bench, bearing date the ſixteenth day of April 1634. and ſhewed now to this Court; it is ordered by this Court, That the Recognizance taken in Court at the Seſſions of Goal-delivery, holden for the County of Middleſex, at Juſtice-Hall in the Old-Baily, the 4*th* day of October laſt paſt, wherein Alexander Baker, of the Pariſh of St. Andrews in Holborn in the County of Middleſex Gentleman, was bound to His Majeſty with two Sureties for his appearance at the Seſſions of Goal-delivery then next following, at which Seſſions he made default, ſhall not be Eſtreated, but all further Proceedings thereupon ſhall be forthwith ſtayed.

In this buſineſs, and ſome other of great conſequence, during the Commiſſion for the Treaſury, my old Friend Sir F. W. forſook me, and joyned with the Lord Cottington, which put me to the exerciſe of a great deal of patience, &c.

September 2. Wedneſday, I was in attendance upon the King at Woodſtock, and went thence to Cudſden to ſee the Houſe which Dr. John Bancroft, then Lord Biſhop of Oxford, had there built, to be a Houſe for the Biſhops of that See for ever, he having built that Houſe at my perſwaſion.

September 3. Thurſday, I went privately from the Biſhop of Oxfords Houſe at Cudſden, to St. Johns in Oxford, to ſee my Building there, and give ſome directions for the laſt finiſhing of it, and returned the ſame night, ſtaying there not two hours.

September 23. I went to St. Pauls to view the Building, and returned that night to Croyden.

September 29. the Earl of Arundel brought an Old Man out of Shrop-ſhire, he was this preſent Michaelmas-day ſhewed to the King and the Lords for a Man of 152, or 153 Years of Age.

October 26. Monday, This morning between Four and Five of the Clock, lying at Hampton-Court, I dreamed that I was going out in haſte, and that when I came into my Outer-Chamber, there was my Servant W. Pennell in the ſame Riding-Suit which he had on that day ſeven-night at Hampton-Court with me: me thoughts I wondred to ſee him, (for I left him ſick at home) and aſked him how he did, and what he made there? and he anſwered me, he came to receive my Bleſſing, and with that fell on his knees; and hereupon I laid my Hand on his Head, and prayed over him, and therewith awaked. When I was up, I told this to them in my Chamber, and added, that I ſhould find Pennell dead or dying. My Coach came, and when I came home, I found him paſt Senſe, and giving up the Ghoſt; ſo my Prayers, (as they had frequently before) commended him to God.

November 22. Saturday, Charles Elector Palatine came to VVhitehall to the King.

November 30. St. Andrews day, Monday, Charles Prince-Elector Palatine, the Kings Nephew, was with me at Lambeth, and at ſolemn Evening-prayer.

December 14. Monday, Charles Prince-Elector came ſuddenly upon me, and dined with me at Lambeth.

December 35. Chriſtmas-day, Charles Prince-Elector received the Communion with the King at VVhitehall; he kneeled a little beſide on the Left-hand; he ſat before the Communion on a Stool by the Wall, before the traverſe, and had another Stool and a Cuſhion before him to kneel at.

December 28. Monday, Innocents-day, about Ten at night the Queen was delivered at St. James's of a Daughter, Princeſs Elizabeth, I Chriſtened Her on Saturday following.

Jan. 2. Tueſday, February 2. Candlemas-day, my nearer care of J. S. was profeſſed, and his promiſe to be guided by me, and abſolutely ſetled on Friday after.

February 28. I Conſecrated Dr. Roger Manwaring Biſhop of St. Davids.

March 6. Sunday, VVilliam Juxon, Lord Biſhop of London, made Lord High-Treaſurer of England; no Church-man had it ſince Henry the 7th's time: I pray God bleſs him to carry it ſo, that the Church may have Honour, and the King and the State Service and Contentment by it: And now if the Church will not hold up themſelves, under God I can do no more.

SIr John Banks Kt. Your Attorney-General, Informeth Your Majeſty, That whereas as well the late Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, and the late Sovereign Lord King James, Your Majeſties Father of Bleſſed Memory, by ſeveral Proclamations publiſhed throughout the Realm, did command, That Perſons of Livelihood and Means ſhould reſide in their Countries, and not abide or ſojourn in or about the City of London, and other Towns, for that hereby the the Countries remained unſerved; and Your Majeſty did by Your Proclamation dated the Twentieth day of June, in the Eighth Year of Your Majeſties Reign, publickly proclaim in all the Counties of Your Realm (amongſt other things) declare, That Your Majeſty having obſerved, that of late years a greater number of Nobility and Gentry, and abler ſort of Your People, with their Families, have reſorted to the Cities of London and VVeſtminſter, and Places adjoining, and there made their reſidence than in former times, contrary to the ancient uſage of the Engliſh Nation, which hath occaſioned divers inconveniences: for where by their reſidency and abiding in ſeveral Countries where their Means ariſeth, they ſerved Your Majeſty in ſeveral Places according to their Degrees and Ranks in aid of Government, whereby, and by their Houſe-keeping in thoſe Parts, the Realm was defended, and the meaner ſort of Your People were guided, directed, and relieved; but by their reſidency in the ſaid Cities, and Parts adjoyning, they have not employment, but live without doing any Service to Your Majeſty, or Your People; a great part of their Money and Subſtance is drawn from the ſeveral Countries where that ariſeth, and is ſpent in the City in exceſſive Apparel provided from Forreign Parts, to the inriching of other Nations, and unneceſſary conſumption of a great part of the Treaſure of this Realm, and in other vain Delights and Expences, even to the waſting of their Eſtates, which is not iſſued into the Parts from whence it ariſeth, nor are the People of them relieved therewith, or by their hoſpitality, nor yet ſet on work, as they might and would be, were it not for the abſence of the principal Men out of their Countries, and the exceſſive uſe of Forreign Commodities.

By this occaſion alſo, and of the great numbers of looſe and idle People that follow them, and live in and about the ſaid Cities, the diſorders there grew ſo great, and the delinquents there, became ſo numerous, as thoſe places were not ſo eaſily governed by their ordinary Magiſtrates, as in former times; and the ſaid Cities were not only at exceſſive charge, in relieving a great number of thoſe idle and looſe People that grew to beggery, and became diſeaſed and infirm, but alſo were made more ſubject to contagion and infection; and the Prices of all kind of Victuals both in the ſaid Cities, and in divers other Places, from whence thoſe Cities were ſerved, were exceedingly increaſed, and the ſeveral Countries undefended; the poorer ſort of Your Majeſties People were unrelieved, and not guided or governed as they might be in caſe thoſe Perſons of Quality and reſpect reſided among them. Your Majeſty finding thoſe inconveniences to ariſe from thence, and foreſeeing that more would enſue if timely remedy were not provided, did further, in and by Your ſaid Proclamation, declare Your Highneſs's reſolution for the common Good of Your People, uſe all good ways for preventing of thoſe great evils; and obſerving that Your Noble Progenitors, Kings of this Realm, have uſed, when for the common profit of the Realm that was neceſſary, to command the People as well of the Clergy, as of all ſorts of the Laity, to keep reſidence at their Dwellings in the ſeveral parts of the Realm, where, for defence and good ſafety thereof, was moſt neceſſary, and to reſtrain their departure, or changing their Habitation from thence under divers pains, upon the contemners of thoſe commands, Your Majeſty did theretofore, in and by Your ſaid Proclamation, ſtraitly charge and command Your Lords both Spiritual and Temporal, Your Lieutenants, and Deputy-Lieutenants of Counties, Your Majeſties Juſtices aſſigned for conſervation of the Peace, Baronets, Knights, Eſquires, Gentlemen, and all Clerks having Benefices with Cure, or Prebends, or Dignities in Cathedral, or Collegiate Churches, and all other Your Majeſties Subjects of the ſeveral Parts of the Realm, that had Manſion-Houſes, and Places of Reſidence in other Parts, and were not of Your Majeſties Council, or bound to daily attendance on Your Highneſs, Your deareſt Conſort the Queen, or Your Children, that before the end of forty days next after the publiſhing of the ſaid Proclamation, within Your City of London, they with their Families ſhould depart from the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, the Suburbs and Liberties thereof, and places adjoyning, and reſort to their ſeveral Counties, where they uſually reſide, and there keep their Habitations and Hoſpitality, attend their Services, and be ready for the defence and guidance of thoſe Parts, as their Callings, Degrees, and Abilities ſhould extend, upon ſuch pains as were to be inflicted upon thoſe that ſhould neglect the publick Service and Defence of the Realm, in contempt of Your Majeſties Command; and that thoſe as well thereby commanded to return to their ſeveral Countries, as thoſe which were already there, ſhould upon the ſame Pain continue the Reſidency of themſelves and their Families there, and do their Duties and Services as aforeſaid. And Your Majeſty did further, in and by Your ſaid Proclamation, declare, That it was Your Majeſties firm reſolution to withſtand ſuch great and growing evil as aforeſaid, by all juſt ways, and by a conſtant ſeverity towards the Offenders in that behalf; for which cauſe Your Majeſty gave ſuch timely warning, that none ſhould hereafter preſume to offend, nor put themſelves to unneceſſary charge in providing themſelves to return in Winter to the ſaid Cities and Places adjacent, but that they ſhould conform themſelves to Your Royal Commandment expreſſed in Your Highneſs's ſaid Proclamation, as they tendered their Duties to Your Majeſty, or the Good and Wel-fare of their Countries and themſelves; as by the ſaid Proclamation, which the one and twentieth day of the ſame Month was publickly Proclaimed in Your ſaid Cities of London and VVeſtminſter, and elſe-where, more at large appeareth.

Yet nevertheleſs ſo it is, may it pleaſe Your Moſt Excellent Majeſty, That the Right Honourable John Earl of Clare, Henry Viſcount Newark, VVilliam Viſcount Mounſon, John Lord Mohun, Thomas Viſcount Fitz-williams, Lord Tunbridge, and Henry Lord Stafford, who hold, and long have holden, Places of Imployment under Your Majeſty in ſeveral Counties of this Realm; and Sir Thomas Stiles Knight and Baronet, Sir Thomas Staples Knight and Baronet, Sir John Symonds, Sir James Stonehouſe, Sir John Ayres, Sir Anthony Bruggs, Sir Peregrine Bartye, Sir Edmond Lenthall, Sir Ralph Gore, Sir Henry Hart, Sir Thomas Littleton, Sir Thomas Thynne Knights, Sir Humphry Foſter Baronet, Sir Ralph Maddiſon Knight, Sir Gregory Norton Knight and Baronet, Sir Edward Payton, Sir Robert Harlowe, Sir John Telbye, Sir George Vane, Sir VVilliam Playter,

An. 1635. vants to Your Deareſt Conſort, the Queen, or Your Children.

All which ſaid Perſons before-mentioned have divers Manors, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments in ſundry Counties of this Your Majeſties Realm of England; and albeit all the ſaid Parties are able at their pleaſure to provide for themſelves meet Places of habitation in other places, than the City of London and Places adjacent, and other Cities and Corporate Towns, and be able to keep Houſe, and relieve and comfort poor and needy People in ſeveral Parts; yet have all of them, being more led and guided by their own Wills, than any ways affected to yield obedience to Your Majeſties Proclamation, unlawfully agreed together how, and in what manner to oppoſe, reſiſt, and withſtand Your Majeſties ſaid Proclamation, and Royal Pleaſure therein expreſſed; and have had ſeveral Meetings, and therein adviſed and conſulted, how and in what manner they might effect the ſame, and have promiſed each other to aid, aſſiſt, and countenance each other in ſuch their contempt and diſobedience. And the ſaid parties afore-named, according to their ſaid Agreements, unlawfully, and contrary to the tenor of Your Majeſties ſaid Proclamation, and in contempt thereof, did ſeverally and reſpectively ſtay, reſide, and inhabit in the ſaid Cities of London and VVeſtminſter, and in the Suburbs and Places near thereunto adjoyning, with their Families, for the ſpace of many Months after the publiſhing of the ſaid Proclamation, and after the forty days therein mentioned were expired, though they had Houſes and Places of Reſidence in ſeveral Counties of this Your Majeſties Realm of England, as aforeſaid, with Lands of good value, and were able in other places to provide Places of habitation where they might, and ought to reſide for Service of Your Majeſty, according to their Rank, and to guide, direct, and relieve the meaner ſort of Your Majeſties People, and to ſerve in the ſeveral Places and Offices, wherein they were truſted, (as by the ſaid Proclamation they were enjoyned to have done) and have made ſhew of leaving the ſaid Cities and Places adjacent, and reſorted into Cities and Corporate Towns abroad, and there made ſmall ſtay, and returned again to the ſaid Cities and Places adjoyning: and by means of ſuch their ſtaying and reſiding in and about the ſaid Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and Suburbs thereof, thoſe Places have been diſordered and diſturbed, and the Service of Your Majeſty and Your People in the ſeveral Countries, have been neglected and undone. And the ſaid Parties afore-named, long after the ſaid forty days were expired, being occaſioned by ſome neceſſary Buſineſs and Imployments of their own to repair unto their Houſes, or other Places in ſeveral Counties in this Your Majeſties Realm, did moſt unlawfully, and contrary to Your Majeſties ſaid Proclamation, and in contempt thereof, in further execution of ſuch their unlawful Agreements, and in performance of ſuch unlawful Promiſes as they had made the one to the other, as aforeſaid, after ſuch time as they had ſeverally diſpatched their own occaſions in the Country, did contemptuouſly return again to Your Majeſties ſaid Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and the Suburbs thereof, where they have ever ſince, and do ſtill remain and dwell, with themſelves and their Families, in high contempt of Your Majeſty, and contrary to the tenor of the ſaid Proclamation, and againſt the Laws; all which ſeveral unlawful Meetings and Agreements, Treſpaſſes, Contempts, and other the Offences and Miſdemeanors aforeſaid, are of a high nature, and deſerve ſevere and exemplary puniſhment, and remain unpardoned. May it pleaſe Your Majeſty to grant Your Majeſties Writ of Subpœna to be directed to the ſaid John Earl of Clare, Henry Viſcount Newark, William Viſcount Mounſon, John Lord Mohun, Thomas Viſcount Fitz-williams, Lord Tunbridge, Henry Lord Stafford, Sir Thomas Stiles, Sir Thomas Staples, Sir John Symonds, Sir James Stonehouſe, and to all the Perſons before-named, commanding them, and every of them, at a certain day, and under a certain Pain therein to be limited, perſonally to be and appear before Your Majeſty, and the Lords of Your Majeſties Honourable Privy-Council, in Your Majeſties High Court of Star-Chamber, then and there to anſwer the Premiſſes, and to ſtand to and abide ſuch further Order and Direction, as to Your Majeſty and Your ſaid Council ſhall be thought meet. And Your ſaid Attorney ſhall pray for Your Majeſties long and proſperous Reign over Us.

From my Lord of St. Andrews and other Biſhops about the Scotiſh Liturgy and Canons.

May it pleaſe your Grace,

We have put our Brother the Biſhop of Roſs to the pains of a long Journey, for aiding the Liturgy and Canons of the Church, and as we have found your Graces Favour both to our Church in General, and our ſelves in divers Particulars, for which we are your Graces Debtors, ſo we are to entreat the continuance thereof in this, and our common Affairs. We all wiſh a full Conformity in the Churches; but your Grace knoweth, that this muſt be the Work of Time. We have made, bleſſed be God, a further Progreſs, *than all have here expected in many years, by His Majeſties Favour, and your Graces Help; and hope ſtill to go further, if it ſhall pleaſe God to continue your Grace in Health and Life, for which we pray continually. Thomas Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England, his Speech at the delivery of his Charge, as he received it from his Majeſty, to all the Judges of England, Judges of Aſſize in the Star-Chamber, June 17. 1635.

June 17. 1635. The Lord Keeper Coventry's Speech to the Judges in the Star-Chamber.

My Lords the Judges,

‘THe Term being done and ended, the Aſſizes near at hand, you are to divide your ſelves for your ſeveral Circuits. Circuits are for the ſervice of the King, and the good of the people. They are the execution of the Kings Laws, and the adminiſtration of Juſtice. In the Term the people follow and ſeek after Juſtice, in the Circuit juſtice followeth and ſeeketh after the People. So gracious is the frame and conſtitution of the Kings Government, that twice a-year, at the leaſt, Juſtice followeth the Subjects home to their own Doors, which as it is a great eaſe of the trouble, charge and travel of the Country: ſo it giveth the People a better knowledge of Juſtice, and the ends of it, that they may bleſs God and the King for the ſame. It hath been the cuſtom, that before your Circuit you ſhould receive ſuch Directions, as the King, or his Council think ſeaſonable to impart unto you for the Service of the King, and Weal of the People; in the declaring whereof, I ſhall ſay but little of the Juſt Acts you are to do between Party and Party, only that you do equal Right between Poor and Rich, the particulars are left unto your ſelves, as they happen in your Circuits: but ſince you are ſent by the King to hear the cauſes of the people, it is his Majeſties pleaſure that you ſo hear and order, that they may have no cauſe to complain to His Majeſty, either for denial, or for delay of Juſtice. Of the tryal of Capital Offenders I ſhall ſay as little; that part of Juſtice moveth in a frame, and if all Officers under you did their parts, you ſhould walk in ſo ſtreight a path, that you would find it very hard to tread awry; therefore you had need to heed them narrowly, leſt they prevent Juſtice.

‘Look to the corruptions of the Sheriffs and their Deputies; the partiality of Jurors; the bearing and ſiding with men of Countenance and Power in their Country: when you meet with ſuch, your proceedings ought to be ſevere and exemplary againſt them, otherwiſe Juſtice ſhall be overbron, howſoever you in your own Perſons bear your ſelves with never ſo much uprightneſs. And becauſe the time of Aſſizes is very ſhort, and expireth in a few days, it is neceſſary, that you afford as much time as may be, unto thoſe buſineſſes that are moſt general, and moſt concern the publick. The Tryal of Niſi prius, and particular cauſes, they are in the number of thoſe things that are not to be left undone; but thoſe things that concern the general and publick good, you are to account them as the weightier matters of the Law, and therefore you are to take them into prime and chief care and cogitation. Now, among thoſe I ſhall commend unto you, in the firſt place, the preſenting and convicting of Recuſants: for as it concerneth Religion, ſo it hath Relation to His Majeſties profits, which are 'two great Motives. To which you may add a third, becauſe the King hath, many years ſince, aſſigned thoſe Forfeitures to the publick defence.

'2. In the next place, I do require you, that you make a ſtrict inquiry after Depopulations and Incloſures; a crime of a crying nature, that barreth God of his Honour, and the King of His Subjects; Churches and Houſes go down together. His Majeſty knoweth, and taketh notice, that according to former directions given to you in this place, you have given it in charge unto the grand Inqueſts to inquire, but to little effect; and without doubt, the Free-holders of England do hate and deteſt them. Depopulation is an oppreſſion of a high nature, and commonly done by the greateſt Perſons, that keep the Juries under and in awe; and that is the cauſe there are no more preſented and brought in queſtion: but howſoever your Charge and Inquiry, touching this point, hath not taken effect worthy His Majeſties Care, and your Pains; yet His Majeſty willeth, that you do not ceaſe, but inquire on ſtill: for it is His Reſolution, againſt all oppoſition to make all men ſee, that he hath a care of this over-ſpreading evil, and of the means of his People; to have Churches and Towns demoliſhed, and his People eaten up like Bread, to ſatisfie the greedy deſires of a few, who do waſte as profuſely, as they do gather together unconſcionably, and bring unto their Poſterity that Wo, which is pronounced to thoſe that lay Houſe to Houſe, and Field to Field, to dwell alone in the midſt of the Earth.

'3. The next thing that I ſhall mention to you is, the rectifying, and reforming of Ale-houſes and Tipling-Houſes; and thoſe I account one of the greateſt peſts of the Kingdom. Firſt, Therefore let none be enabled, either to ſet up, or continue without Licenſe. There are a kind of People that do take upon them Licenſes, Recognizances, or Laws, or what you will; who have been a great deal the worſe, becauſe they ſee a great multitude tolerated, that have no Licenſe. And for the Licenſed Ale-houſes, let them be but a few, and in fit places; if they be in private Corners, and Ill-places, they are become the Dens of Thieves; they are the publick ſtages of Drunkards and diſorder. In Market-Towns, or in great Places, or Roads, where Travellers come they are neceſſary.

'Next unto this, let thoſe that be Licenſed, be held ſtrictly according to the Law. It hath been obſerved, and very truly, that in the Taverns, Inns, and Ale-houſes in England, by the falſhood of their meaſure, and unjuſt prices, they have drawn more from the Gueſt, than out of the ſizes of Ale and Beer is exacted by the States in Holland. A ſtrange thing! that People for a publick Work, for any thing that is Good, ſhould be loth to part with any thing; and yet with open eyes to ſee themſelves deceived by ſuch baſe and lewd people.

'Next unto this, let care be taken in the choice of Ale-houſe-keepers, that it be not appointed to be the Livelihood of a great Family; one or two is enough to draw Drink, and ſerve the People in an Ale-houſe; but if 6, 8, 10, or 12 muſt be maintained by Ale-houſe-keeping, it cannot chooſe but be an exceeding diſorder, and the Family by this means is unfit for any other good works, ‘or employments. I have not skill enough to underſtand all the inconveniences that come from this one Ill-fountain, and my Memory will not contain what I have ſo many times obſerved of them my ſelf; but your Lordſhips have a knowledge and experience of them, therefore I will leave them unto you. Only this, becauſe in many places theſe ſwarm by the default of the Juſtices of Peace, that ſet up too many; and there are none (except your ſelves at the Aſſizes) all the year long can meet with this evil, but the Juſtices of the Peace: and if the Juſtices of Peace will not obey their charge herein, certifie their default, and Names, and I aſſure you, they ſhall be diſcharged. I once did diſcharge two Juſtices for ſetting up one Ale-houſe, and ſhall be glad to do the like, upon the like occaſion.

‘4. In the next place I will commend unto you the puniſhment of Vagabonds and Wanderers, to rid the Ale-houſes of ſuch unruly Gueſts; it would make ſome way of amendment to thoſe Ale-houſes: and it cannot be denied but the Law hath appointed hands enow to do this work; the Conſtable, Headborough, Tithingmen, and the reſt of the inferiour Officers, and Watchmen, who may do all with a particular Warrant from the Juſtices of the Peace: and the Juſtices of the Peace are bound to call them to an account, and puniſh them for their neglect. If this were done, and other Officers choſen as they ought to be (not people of little wealth, and as little underſtanding) but that they were elected out of the better ſort of Yeomanry, and the Wathces kept by able-men; I am aſſured theſe looſe people that wander up and down would quickly be gone: therefore you may do well to let it be known in the Country, that the Lords of Leets, and thoſe that have the Election of Conſtable and Officers, they are by the Law anſwerable for their Choice. There have been Precedents, that where an inſufficient Coroner hath been choſen by a County, the whole County hath been Anſwerable to the King for the Coroner's fault; and if the Lords of Leets, and their Homagers, and thoſe that make choice of the Conſtable and Officers, were ſometimes awakened by ſome ſeizing of their Leets, or Fines, or Quo Warranto, I make no doubt but the Countries would be better ſerved many years after, for ſome ſuch ſervice done. Therefore I could wiſh, that this were made known to the Country, that the Lords, and thoſe that chooſe them were Anſwerable for their default.

‘5. Now for the bringing of looſe people in order, the Houſe of Correction had need to be looked unto, and be put in readineſs, that thoſe that are Idle may not want work; Ducere Volentes, Trahere Nolentes. And for the Houſes of Correction (as it is in ſome Countries) it were convenient they were placed near the Gaol, that not only Idle perſons, but that the Priſoners of the Gaol might be made to eat the labour of their own hands. This, as it hath been formerly, ſo it is now commended by His Majeſty to ſee it effected as ſoon as may be.

‘6. The binding of Apprentices is a thing fit to be preſſed throughout all the Circuits. Oppoſition hath been made againſt it by ſome, though without any ground, or Law. Sometimes the Parents are not willing to leave their Children, though they

11 Caroli.

‘have not meat to feed them at Home; ſometimes the Pariſhioners not willing to give them Cloaths, and ſometimes the Maſters refuſe them, and thoſe that bind them are negligent: but all theſe muſt be over-ruled, and made to ſmart for their oppoſition. In a word, you are to call upon all to whom it belongeth, but eſpecially the Juſtices of Peace to ſee His Majeſties Printed Orders be put in execution. You are to ſatisfie your ſelves what Juſtices of the Peace are diligent in it, and who neglect it, and ſo to certifie to the Lords of the Council.

‘7. I have but one thing more to give you in charge, and it is a thing of great weight and importance. It concerneth the Honour of His Majeſty and the Kingdom, and the ſafety of both. Chriſtendom is full of Wars, and there is nothing but rumors of Wars. What hath been done of late years abroad by Fire and Sword, it were a pity and grief to think of; yet we have had the goodneſs of God, and His Majeſties Providence all this while, and have enjoyed a moſt happy Peace and Plenty. As it is a good Precept in Divinity, ſo it holdeth in Polity too ——— Jam Proximus Ardet; which if we obſerved to defend our ſelves, it would be a warning to all Nations, and we ſhould be the more aſſured to enjoy our Peace, if the Wars abroad do make us ſtand upon our Guard at home. Therefore no Queſtion, it hath ever been accounted the greateſt wiſdom for a Nation to Arm, that they may not be inforced to fight; which is better then not to Arm, and be ſure to Fight. The one is Providence, the other is Neceſſity. Therefore His Majeſty in theſe doubtful times, hath not only Commanded, that all the Land-Forces of the Kingdom ſhould be ſet in Order and Readineſs, but to ſet to Sea a Royal Fleet, at His Majeſties great charge, but with the Aſſiſtance of the Maritain-places of this Kingdom. The cauſes, occaſions and times of War, with the preparation and ordering of them, is proper to the King; and dutiful obedience in ſuch things doth beſt become the Subject: and yet His Majeſty hath vouchſafed, even by his Writs, to declare enough to ſatisfie all well-minded men, and to expreſs the clearneſs of His Princely Heart in aiming at the general good of His Kingdom. The Dominion of the Sea, as it is an ancient and undoubted right of the Crown of England, ſo it is the beſt ſecurity of the Land; for it is Impregnable, ſo long as the Sea is well-guarded: therefore, out of all queſtion, it is a thing of abſolute neceſſity, that the guard of the Sea be exactly looked unto; and thoſe Subjects, whoſe minds are moſt fixed upon the Honour of the King and Country, will with no patience endure to think of it; that this Dominion of the Sea, which is ſo great an Honour, ſhould be either loſt or diminiſhed: beſides, for ſafeties ſake, the Dominion of the Sea is to be kept, and the Sea guarded.

‘The Wooden-Walls are the beſt Walls of this Kingdom: and if the Riches and Wealth of the Kingdom be reſpected, for that cauſe the Dominion of the Sea ought to be reſpected; for elſe what would become of our Wool, Lead and the like, the prices whereof would fall to nothing if others ſhould be Maſters of the Sea. There is a caſe in the Book of Aſſize, 43. which putteth me in mind of certain men, that went down into the Country,

An. 1635.

'try, and carried a report, that no Wooll ſhould paſs over the Sea 'that year; upon this they all fell to ſo low Prices, that the men 'that carried the Report were Queſtioned and Fin'd. Now if a 'Report alone, and that a falſe one too, wrought ſuch an effect 'upon the Woolls of England, think what would be wrought by a 'real loſs of the Dominion of the Sea in all our Commodities, if 'our Trade ſhould be at the Command of other Princes and States. 'Therefore as His Majeſty out of His Great Wiſdom, hath found 'it expedient to ſet to Sea that Fleet, that is now upon the Sea; 'ſo His Majeſty being engaged, both in His Honour, and the Honour of the Kingdom, he findeth it to be of abſolute neceſſity 'to ſtrengthen this with a greater ſtrength, and more Shipping 'the next year. Therefore upon advice he hath reſolved, that he 'will forthwith ſend forth new Writs for the preparation of a greater Fleet the next year; and that not only to the Maritime Towns, 'but to all the Kingdom beſides: for ſince that all the Kingdom is 'intereſſed, both in the honour, ſafety and profit, it is juſt and reaſonable, that they ſhould all put to their helping hands.

'Now that whcih His Majeſty requireth from you, and doth command is, That in your Charges at the Aſſizes, and in all places 'elſe, where opportunity is offered, you take an occaſion to let the 'People know how careful and zealous His Majeſty is to preſerve 'his own Honour, this Kingdom, and the Dominion of the Sea, 'and to ſecure both Sea and Land by a powerful Fleet, that foreign 'Nations may ſee, that England is both able and ready to keep it 'ſelf, and all its Rights. And you are to let them know how juſt 'it is, that His Majeſty ſhould require this for your defence, and 'with what Alacrity and Cheerfulneſs they ought, and are bound 'in Duty to contribute unto it; that foreign Nations may obſerve 'the Power and Readineſs of this Kingdom, which will make them 'ſlow to contend with us, either by Sea or Land; and that will be 'the beſt way to confirm unto us a firm and ſure Peace. This is 'the ſubſtance of all that which I received in Commandment from 'His Majeſty. There are many things elſe that concern the publick; but your Judgements are well known in them. Theſe are 'the particulars I had Command to mention unto you; ſo I will 'trouble you no farther, but leave them to your Grave Conſiderations.

July 21: A reſtraint of the King's Subjects departing out of the Realm without Licenſe.

FOr as much as it is one of the Principal Duties of all the Kings Subjects to attend at all times, the Service and Defence of their King and Native Country, when they ſhall be thereunto required; and foreſeeing what danger might enſue to this State, if People might at their pleaſure paſs or depart out of this Realm into foreign Parts: for prevention whereof, the King doth Command and forbid all his Subjects, that they, nor any of them, other than Soldiers, Mariners, Merchants and their Factors, and Apprentices, ſhall at any time, without the King's Licenſe, or of ſix of the Privy-Council, depart out of this Kingdom, or any the King's Dominions into the Kingdom, or Country of any Foreign Prince, State or Potentate.

For the ſuppreſſing of Prophane Curſing and Swearing.

WHereas at a Parliament held at Weſtminſter the 9*th* of February, in the 21*ſt* year of King James, it was Enacted, That no Perſon, or Perſons, ſhould from thenceforth prophanely Swear or Curſe, under the penalties therein contained; We taking into Our Princely Conſideration the great increaſe of thoſe ſins, which are more audaciouſly practiſed and frequently committed by looſe and wicked perſons; hath therefore for the better ſuppreſſing thoſe odious ſins, by Letters-Patents, dated the 21*ſt* of July laſt paſt, erected an Office for the receiving of the Forfeitures incurred by ſuch Prophane Swearers and Curſers: and hath thereby appointed Robert Leſley Eſquire, one of the Gentlemen of the Kings Privy-Chamber; by himſelf and his Aſſigns, that he ſhall in every Pariſh within this Kingdom attend that Service and Office, for a certain number of years therein contained; and ſhall and may receive the Penalties appointed by the ſaid Statute, from all Perſon and Perſons offending againſt the Tenure of the ſaid Act; and that the monies ariſing thereby ſhall be paid to the Biſhops of the Dioceſſes, to be diſtributed among the Poor of the ſeveral Pariſhes. And all perſons employed herein ſhall be exempted and freed from bearing any other Office, or Charge in the Pariſhes where he and the reſt ſhall dwell.

The King ſettles the Letter-Office of England, and Scotland.

TO this time there having been no certain or conſtant Intercourſe between the Kingdoms of England and Scotland, His Majeſty hath been pleaſed to Command his Servant Thomas Witherings Eſquire, His Majeſties Poſt-maſter of England for foreign Parts, to ſettle one Running-Poſt, or two, to run night and day between Edenborough in Scotland and the City of London, to go thither and come back again in ſix days; and to take with them all ſuch Letters as ſhall be directed to any Poſt-Town in the ſaid Road, and the Poſts to be placed in ſeveral places out of the Road, to run, and bring and carry out of the ſaid Roads the Letters as there ſhall be occaſion, and to pay two-pence for every ſingle Letter under fourſcore Miles; and if one hundred and forty Miles, four-pence; and if above, then ſix-pence. The like rule the King is pleaſed to Order to be obſerved to Weſt-Cheſter, Holyhead, and from thence to Ireland: and alſo to obſerve the like Rule from London to Plimouth, Exeter, and other places in that Road; the like for Oxford, Briſtol, Colcheſter, Norwich, and other places. And the King doth Command, that no other Meſſenger, Foot-Poſt, or Foot-Poſts ſhall take up, carry, receive or deliver any Letter, or Letters whatſoever, other than the Meſſengers appointed by the ſaid Thomas Witherings; except Common known Carriers, or a particular Meſſenger to be ſent on purpoſe with a Letter to a Friend.

Auguſt 24. The King declares his Royal Grace and Pleaſure to confirm to his Subjects their Defective Eſtates, in their Lands and Poſſeſſions, by His Commiſſion lately renewed and enlarged to that purpoſe.

WHereas for the good of the Subjects the King hath been graciouſly pleaſed to renew and enlarge his former Commiſſion of Grace, and hath thereby Authorized the Lords, and others of His Privy-Council, and ſome of the Judges and Learned Council to Sell, Grant and Confirm to the People their Defective Eſtates, Poſſeſſions and Titles, being void by inſufficient Grants, or By-Patents of Concealments; and notwithſtanding the Subjects ſlackneſs in taking hold of that favour, yet the King, out of a deſire to ſettle His Subjects in their Eſtates and Poſſeſſions, is once more pleaſed, to make known theſe His Royal Intentions of favour to ſuch as ſhall timely embrace the ſame, upon moderate Compoſitions, and that they repair to the Kings Commiſſioners in Fleetſtreet before Hillary Term next; and ſuch as do neglect, the courſe of Law ſhall be taken againſt them, to reduce thoſe Lands to the Crown again.

The Caſe of the Church-Wardens of Beckington in Somerſetſhire.

THe Church-Wardens of Beckington in Somerſetſhire were Excommunicated by the Biſhop of Bath and Wells, for refuſing to remove and Rail in the Communion-Table, and pull down the Seats that ſtood above at the Eaſt end of the Chancel. They appealed to the Arches, and after much ſolliciting, procured from Sir John Lamb, Dean of the Arches, a Letter to the Biſhop to abſolve them for a certain time; which he did for a few Weeks, and afterwards excommunicated them again. The Church-Wardens appealed to the Arches the ſecond time, with a Petition to the Arch-Biſhop, and a certificate from the Pariſh, that their Communion-Table had ſtood time out of mind in the midſt of the Chancel, being the moſt convenient place; and that near Threeſcore years ago the Pavement of the Chancel, whereon the Table ſtood, was new made and raiſed a foot above the reſt of the Chancel-ground, and incloſed with a Decent Wainſcot-Border, and none went in thereat but the Miniſter, and ſuch as he required. Their Appeal was rejected, and they threatned with the High-Commiſſion, and commanded to obey their Dioceſan. After this they petition the King, but with no ſucceſs; for it was ſuggeſted, that if thoſe men had their Wills, many of the Pariſhes which had already conformed would fall back, and others would never come in. The Church-Wardens ſtood excommunicated a whole year, and afterward were taken, and caſt into the Common-Goal, where they lay a long time. Whence at length they were releaſed by the Biſhop, upon their publick Submiſſion and Penance, performed in the Pariſh-Church of Beckington and two other Churches.

Septemb. 6. The King declares for preventing the Abuſes of Informers, Clerks and others in their Proſecutions upon the Laws and Statutes of this Realm.

WHereas for the more due execution of the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, and for the better reformation of the abuſes of Common-Informers, in their unjuſt Proſecutions and Vexations of our Subjects; the King by His Letters-Patents under the Great Seal, dated the 20*th* of February, 5 Car. 1. did confirm the Office of Receiver and Collector of Fines and Forfeitures due upon penal Laws, formerly erected by King James, in the 18*th* year of His Reign; and thereunto the King united and annexed the Surveying, Regiſtring, Collection and Receipt of Fines and Forfeitures, for tranſgreſſing the Common-Law of this Realm, and of all Recognizances thereupon grounded, which ſhould be forfeited in any Courts of Juſtice and Judicature, and of all ſums of Mony due or growing, by reaſon of any Information, Bill, Plaint, Suit, Action, Preſentment, Compoſition, Verdict, Judgement, Execution, or other Proceeding Commenced by the King's Attorney-General, or by any common Informer againſt any Offender for Tranſgreſſing the Laws, ſince the 31*ſt* of Queen Elizabeth; except the Collecting of Fines and Forfeitures due, or to be due by any Sentence of our Court of Star-Chamber, or of the Court holden by the Lord Preſident and Council in the Marches of Wales, and in the North part of this Kingdom, or in any Court Leet, &c. whereof the Collection was by any Letters Patents granted to any other Perſon before the 15*th* of October, in the 18*th* of King James.

And whereas the King hath by Letters Patents, Granted the ſaid Office to James Chambers Doctor of Phyſick, and Edward Brown, Eſquire, for term of their Lives, to be executed by themſelves or their Deputies; but notwithſtanding the ſeveral proviſions made in the ſaid Letters Patents, for preventing Fraud and Abuſes, committed by the ſubtile practiſes of Common Informers, Combining with under-Clerks, they have proſecuted the Kings Subjects, for their private Gain: for preventing of which Abuſes for time to come, the King doth Charge and Command, that the Directions following be obſerved, upon pain of the Kings high diſpleaſure.

Which being very long, ſee at large in the Appendix.

November 1. A Reſtraint of Exceſſive Carriages to the deſtruction of the High-ways.

THat in the Reign of King James, and ſince the King's acceſs to the Crown, ſeveral Proclamations have been publiſhed for the reſtraint of exceſſive Carriages, to the deſtruction of the High-ways; and yet by daily experience thoſe great Abuſes are ſtill continued and increaſed to the publick Nuiſſance, and likely to hinder the general Commerce of People, and become unrepairable, without exceſſive charge and burden to the Country: The King therefore by the Advice of the Lords, and others of the Privy-Council doth Command, that no common Carriers or other Perſons, do upon the Common High-way, go, or Travel with any Wagon, Cart, &c. whereon is, or ſhall be laid at once above two thouſand weight, nor to uſe above five Horſes, or above four Oxen and two Horſes, or above ſix Oxen without Horſes at any one time; and becauſe ſuch extraordinary Carriages, have heretofore, by the opinion of the Judges, been held to be general Nuiſſances, the King doth Command all Judges and Juſtices diligently to inquire after theſe Offences.

IN the month of November, Mr. Samuel Ward, a Miniſter in Ipſwich, Preached againſt the common Bowing at the Name of Jeſus, and againſt the King's Book of Sports; and further ſaid, that the Church of England was ready to ring Changes in Religion, and the Goſpel ſtood on tip-toe, as ready to be gone. For this he was cenſured in the High-Commiſſion, and there ſuſpended, injoyned publick Recantation, which he refuſing was committed to Priſon, where he lay a long time.

November 10. 1635.

The Charge of the Bill is for a groſs deceit and coſenage by Sir James Bagg of the Plaintiff, and in that of the abuſe of the Name of the Lord Treaſurer Weſton.

Star-Chamber. Sir Anth. Pell Plaintiff. Sir James Bagg & Alios Defendants.

THe Caſe was thus; Sir Anthony Pell being Surveyor and Keeper of his late Majeſties Hawks Aug. 2. Car. the King gave direction for the payment of 7000 l. unto him, as due from His Majeſty.

Quarto Car. this was unpaid, and to prove this the Plaintiff lent the King 3000 l. more, and had an Order of the Council-Table for the payment of 4000 l. part of his great debt upon the farm of the Cuſtoms, which was paid accordingly; and the 6000 l. reſidue to be paid by levying of Tallies of the firſt monys that ſhould come into the Exchequer, upon the impoſition of Coales, benefit of Soap, Recuſancy, or otherwiſe; failing of all theſe, notwithſtanding his attendance on Sir Richard Weſton Lord Treaſurer, 12. October 5. Car. he did Petition the King, acquainting him with the ſaid Order, and that he had received no Payment or Aſſignment of the 6000 l. His Majeſty anſwered, That he found great reaſon in the Plaintiffs requeſt, and commiſerated his hard Eſtate, and referred the conſideration thereof to the Lord Treaſurer, to take the beſt and moſt ſpeedy courſe which might ſtand with His Majeſties other affairs for the Plaintiffs ſatisfaction, with which he acquaints the Lord Treaſurer; That the other Defendant Sir James Bagg often reſorting to the Lord Treaſurers Houſe, and there meeting with the Plaintiff, ſubtilly inſinuated himſelf into the Plaintiffs acquaintance, and told him that he had a great and inward relation with the ſaid Lord Treaſurer, and was a great negotiator of buſineſs which paſſed the Lord Treaſurers hand, and offered himſelf an Agent on the Plaintiffs behalf to the Lord Treaſurer for procuring Aſſignments for the 6000 l. and did ſcandalouſly pretend to the Plaintiff that there was no hope for him to obtain ſatisfaction for his 6000 l. and damage for forbearance thereof, but by giving ſome reward to the Lord Treaſurer; and did affirm to the Plaintiff that he had former experience thereof, and had laid many a thouſand pound upon the ſaid Lord Treaſurers Table, and under his Beds head for buſineſs of like nature; and told Sir Anthony, that if he would promiſe him the ſaid Sir James 500 l. on the ſudden to ſupply the Lord Treaſurers preſent occaſions, he would forthwith procure from the Lord Treaſurer good Aſſignment to be made for the 6000 l. and damage for forbearance, and all other monys due from His Majeſty to the Plaintiff for arrear of Wages, which amounted to above 12000 l. Whereupon in December 8. Car. he procured a Friend to lend 500 l. for the ſaid Lord Treaſurers uſe, as Sir James pretended, and took a bond of Sir James and one Harris to pay the ſame at ſix months; notwithſtanding this promiſe the Plaintiff attended above a year, and nothing could be done. Then Sir James Bagg by conſederacy with the other three Defendants, did in November 9 Car. affirm to the Plaintiff, that if he would give 2000 l. more to the Lord Treaſurer for a gratuity (whereby to draw 2000 l. from the Plaintiff, and then to ſhare it among themſelves) he would procure the Lord Treaſurer to make Aſſignments before St. Thomas day next following for all the Plaintiffs Debts, Arrearages of Wages and Damages; whereupon 4 Decemb. 500 l. was borrowed at Intereſt of Sir William Acton, and 500 l. of others, and Sir James Bagg, and Sir Richard Tichburn were bound for the payment of this 1000 l. 21 Decemb.

The 21*ſt* of December came; then Sir James affirmed to the Plaintiff, that the buſineſs was diſpatched and aſſignments made: but yet the Lord Treaſurer would have the other 1000 l. in hand before the Plaintiffs ſhould have the Aſſignments, and ult. January he ſhould not fail of them. The Plaintiff upon the engagement of his whole eſtate procured 1000 l. more, and alſo upon Sir James Bagg and Mr. Gibbon's Bond to repay the ſame 30 January; which Bond to Sir James and Gibbons was in truſt to the Plaintiff, that upon ſuch Aſſignments to be made 30 January, both his laſt Bond and his other Bond to Sir Richard Tichburn ſhould be delivered up to be cancelled: beſides this 2000 l. delivered to the hands of Sir James for the Lord Treaſurers uſe, as he falſly pretended, he cauſed the Plaintiff to undertake to pay Owen Brett and Charles Eſcourt 760 l. which Sir James owed to them, which was to be a reward for his own pains for procuring the Plaintiff his Aſſignments, he ſtill affirming that the 2000 l. was paid to the Lord Treaſurer for a gratuity.

Nov. 10. 1635. Sir James Bagg his Anſwer.

The Defendant Sir James Bagg in his Anſwer denied the charge of the Bill to be true in any part of it, and thereupon the Plaintiff and Defendant went to Iſſue, and examined Witneſs, and the Cauſe was brought to Hearing, which held the Court ſeveral days; and this day was appointed for the Lords to give their Judgement and Opinion in the Cauſe, the debate and conſideration whereof, and the many Speeches made by the Lords, held the Court ſitting from nine in the morning till four in the afternoon; and then the Court was divided equally in Judgement, there being Nine of the Court for Sir Anthony Pell, and nine for Sir James Bagg. The diviſion was in manner following.

1. Lord Cottington,	pro Bagg.	10. Lord of Carlile,	pro Bagg.
2. Chief-Juſtice Finch,	pro Pell.	11. Lord of Dorcett,	pro Bagg.
3. Chief-Juſtice Bramſton,	pro Pell.	12. Lord Marſhall,	pro Bagg.
4. Secretary Windebanck,	pro Bagg.	13. Lord of Lindſey,	pro Pell.
5. Secretary Cook,	pro Pell.	14. Duke of Lenox,	pro Bagg.
6. Sir Henry Vane,	pro Pell.	15. Lord Privy-Seal,	pro Bagg.
7. Biſhop of London,	pro Bagg.	16. Arch-Biſhop of York,	pro Bagg.
8. Lord Barret,	pro Pell.	17. Arch-B. of Canterbury,	pro Pell.
9. Lord of Holland,	pro Pell.	18. Lord Keeper,	pro Pell.

It was at this time diſcourſed by the Auditors then preſent in the Court, that the Speeches then made, were rather pro Amico, than pro Quer' aut Deff.

AT the hearing of this Cauſe the Queen was preſent in a Room that had a Window looked into the Court, ſhe came in favour of Sir James Bagg, as was Conceived.

Memorandum, That Mr. Arthur the Regiſter, before he had drawn up the Decretal-Sentence received a Warrant under the Kings hand to forbear Entring the Cenſure of the Court in this

An. 1635. Cauſe, as regularly His Majeſty might do by the Rules of this Court, for Informations in the Star-Chamber are directed to the Kings Majeſty himſelf; and accordingly the Decretal Order was ſtopt from being Entred: But how the Matter was compoſed afterwards we know not.

It is to be obſerved as another Rule in that Court, that if the Court be equal in Voices, the Lord Keeper hath the Caſting-voice, in like manner as the Speaker hath in the Houſe of Commons, who being in his Judgment for Sir Anthony Pell, the ſame was to have been Decreed, and entred accordingly for Pell.

It would be too tedious to the Reader to have all the Harangues and Speeches made this day ſet down at large, and the Repetitions upon Repetitions, by ſome Lords, of what others did ſpeak, would take up time to repeat; we omit them therefore at large, only to ſatisfie the Readers curioſity we inſert theſe two.

My Lords,

THe Charge of the Bill is for a groſs deceit and coſenage by Sir James Bagg of the Plaintiff, and in that the abuſe of the Name of an Honourable and Great Lord. Take theſe two Charges aſunder, or ſeverally, there is not one of them but of great weight and conſequence: and put them both together, and it is of as great a weight as any Cauſe in this Court. Take them ſeverally, I will not ſay, that every coſenage or deceit is fit for this Court: But if a fraud or coſenage be accompanied with a publick inconvenience, or reflecting upon the Juſtice of the King, it hath ever been held fit for this Court to take notice of it.

My Lords,

In matter of Bargain and Contract between Man and Man, if he will make his fraudulent Conveyance, he hath his remedy at Law and in Equity, and yet of late many Preſidents your Lordſhips have made, becauſe it tendeth to the publick damage of the Common-Wealth; and in many other Caſes I hold this Bill, as it is laid, to be of danger and conſequence, not only in regard of the Publick, but of the reflection upon the King. For the Publick, there is nothing more dangerous, or of leſs comfort to the Common-Wealth, than when there ſhall be Panders and Brokers about Judges, for the adminiſtration of Juſtice.

My Lords,

For my part, let him be a Miniſter of Juſtice, or of the Kings Revenues, that ſhall have any Servant or Familiar, who will take upon them, in the name of their Maſter, under ſhew of carrying on their Buſineſs, to take a Reward, but for the procuring of juſt and due Debts: My Lords, I ſhall ever hold it to be of that danger and conſequence, that I had rather ſee both puniſhed, than one to eſcape.

My Lords,

And for that part which concerneth my Lord Treaſurer, it is true, I will not ſay if that had been the ſole Charge of the Bill, I would have held Sir Anthony Pell a fit Party to complain in this, or to be the Judge of this, or to manage it: But I ſhall leave that to be followed in ſuch courſe as the Kings Attorney ſhall direct.

And where in this Caſe, or any other Caſe it ſhall be accompanied with any deceit to the Party, that will enable any private Man to be a fit Complainant in this Court; therefore for the ſcandal, which I hold of a great and eminent nature, if it had been the ſingle Charge of the Bill, I ſhould have given my voice to have thrown it out; but as the Charge of this Bill is laid, it is a groſs coſenage of the Plaintiff. This is drawn in by an aſperſion upon the great Lord; and in this caſe I cannot but hold Sir Anthony Pell to be a fit perſon to complain in this Court, and to mingle that with the ſcandal upon my Lord: It was therefore wiſely done of the Defendants to wage their demurrer. My Lords, in this Caſe I do find the Parties intereſſed are the Plaintiff and Four Defendants; but it is true, there is another intereſſed in this Cauſe, and that is the Honour of a great Lord, who as he did bear an Office of great Truſt, ſo he had great Truſt repoſed in him. And I do not blame my Lord of Portland, that he is eager in vindicating the Honour of his Father, which hath deſcended unto him, and to diſcover that this Bill was put in as a Cloud to hang over his Father. I ſhall, as my Lord that laſt ſpoke, leave him freely to take his courſe, be it againſt whom he will.

In truth, my Lords, I do remember what that great Lord did here in Court earneſtly move your Lordſhips, that this Cauſe might receive all the expedition that could be, that this Cloud might not hang over him, that when it came to a hearing, to repair him by ſome exemplary Sentence. This I know your Lordſhips do remember, and will be as ready to do for him, as if himſelf was living.

For, my Lords, in this Cauſe I muſt deal clearly, that I hold it little better than a non liquet, either to be puniſhed by ſome exemplary Sentence upon the Plaintiff, or Defendants, or ſome of them, let it light where it will: For, my Lords Honour all this while having been a Defendant in the Hearing of the Cauſe, is now juſtly, upon the Hearing, become Plaintiff. The Bill layeth it plainly to be a ſcandalous aſperſion caſt upon my Lord Treaſurer by Sir James Bagg, but no part of the Bill doth trench upon my Lord Treaſurer; ſo that the Honour of that great Lord, in ſtead of a Defendant, is now worthily before your Lordſhips a Plaintiff, and requireth as

An. 1635. much vindication, which muſt be by ſentencing the Plaintiff or Defendants, for a foul and ſcandalous Libel.

My Lords,

In this Cauſe I muſt ſay ſomething for a general delivery of my ſelf to your Lordſhips, before I deſcend to the Particular parts of my Sentence.

Under favour, I hold it a great error, that any ſhould think, that in every Cauſe in this Court, a Man muſt for every Particular, or Phraſe that doth countenance to prove the Bill, have two Witneſſes. If one be charged with oppreſſion, you do never condemn without two Witneſſes.

I conceive witneſs in the ſame, though but ſingularis Teſtis ſhall ſerve.

For to ſay, that Sir James Bagg did utter theſe and theſe words, every Phraſe in this is not to be expected to be proved by two Witneſſes, by the courſe of the Court. In any Caſe it is an error to think, that two Witneſſes are of neceſſity, for one Witneſs and Circumſtances, (as others do aver) amount to a further Witneſs, to draw on your Lordſhips to your Sentence: But I do hold in this Caſe, there will fall upon ſome of the Defendants a full Proof upon two Witneſſes.

For the Defendant, Sir Richard Tichburne, near in Blood to the late Lord Treaſurer, I do hold him a Man of worth, and I am glad I do find him ſo. And for my part, if the courſe of the Court will allow him remedy here, I ſhall willingly condeſcend; but however, I ſhall deſire that there may be mention made of his clearneſs.

For Mr. Gibbins, I find him clear in this Caſe, and ſo I leave him.

For Mr. Luke, I find ſome touches of him, but not ſuch as ſhall any ways move me to a Sentence. Mr. Luke did direct the making of the Petition; I clear him.

My Lords,

For Mr. James Bagg, I ſhould be as glad to acquit him as any of the reſt, but I muſt deal clearly. I cannot, I will not ſay, that Sir James Bagg is guilty of every Particular in the Bill. I do wonder to find ſo much in a Caſe of this nature; I do not think it neceſſary, that every Particular in the Bill be proved; Circumſtances may perhaps be added by Councel, put in to draw out interrogation of the Party to make the Truth appear: And yet I muſt needs ſay, that of ſome words in the Bill there is no proof made. As that Sir James Bagg ſhould ſay, He had laid many a Thouſand Pounds under my Lord Treaſurers Pillow for Buſineſs in that kind; for which I ſhould ſentence him.

My Lords, In this Caſe that doth concern Bagg, it is very hard to divide the oppreſſion ſeverally from the ſcandal on my Lord Treaſurer. I cannot make any thing of the Cauſe and take it all aſunder.

The firſt thing I begin withal, is the Particulars of the Money. 2. the 500 l. borrowed of Sir William Acton Dec. 4. 1633. I find it is proved the Plaintiff did not intend to borrow it for himſelf, but for Sir James Bagg ; I find that Sir James ſaid, the helping him to this Money would be a means to help him to the Aſſignments. Sir James Bagg ſaid it would do the Plaintiff a curteſie. If Sir James had done no more, but drawn a Man to lend him Money for ſuch a diſpatch, I would have held it a Crime fit for the Sentence. Hem, hem, hem, hem, Leave that faſhion, (meaning of heming) I only ſpeak of this to this purpoſe, to ſhew how this Money was borrowed, and that the application of borrowing it, was in relation to the Aſſignments. The Money was borrowed 4. Dec. to be paid the 21*ſt* of December ; ſo it was but a borrow for ſeventeen days. And if it were Sir James Baggs own Money, why did he tell him, Pell ſhould be his Pay-maſter. When 21. December came, Bagg did deſire continuance of the Money till the latter end of January, and in that time he would effect his buſineſs.

Next Sum was the 500 l. borrowed of Mr. Herne, of which the Plaintiff was never poſſeſſed ; it was delivered to Sir James Bagg's Man, and this was payable long after the time of the Aſſignments : Their Sum is 300 l. in Dec. 21. upon a Letter 17. of Dec. Sir Anthony Pell, I pray you ſend me 500 l. to my Lodging. It ſeems he had the Plaintiff in a String. It is objected by Sir James Bagg, the Plaintiff was ſo careful of good Security, that he would not part with the Money, unleſs Mr. Eſcourt would be bound, that Mr. Gibbins ſhould Seal. If never ſo good Security, if they were in his hands, how might he have handled Sir Anthony.

When Sir James was that night at the Kings-Head, and ſaw the Money did not come ; ſaith one Witneſs, Sir James, ſaid he (meaning the Lord Treaſurer) could not ſleep ; he ſaid alſo at that time, If it were not delivered, the Plaintiffs Buſineſs would be daſhed, and fall more backward than ever it was, the Plaintiff would be undone it ſtaid ſo long.

Your Lordſhips finding this Depoſition not to agree, appointed Marſh to be heard, as it was in the Caſe between Vaughan and Vaughan, and ſent for the Witneſs hither, who did explain the Depoſition, and your Lordſhips gave credit to that Explanation ; ſo for Marſh, for my part I muſt deal clearly, I ſhall take his Explanation according to the Rules of this Court, to be clear and expreſs, that he ſaid, My Lord Treaſurer could not ſleep that night : yet not to forget Mr. Examiner by the way, I find that he hath committed as great an abuſe, as could be put on the Court. I find many Depoſitions very obſcurely ſet down ; for Sir William Actons Depoſition, and his variation afterwards, adds little credit to his Perſon. I find cunning enough in the Examiner, to excuſe the entertaining of Sir James Bagg at a Tavern. I do not forget his threatning of Marſh about his Explanation, That my Lord Treaſurer could not ſleep. I cannot in my Conſcience be ſatisfied of his carriage in this Cauſe, I ſhall never hold him a perſon fit to bring things to a clear Judgment before your Lordſhips.

When this 100 l. came at laſt, and he had put it up : Come let us make haſt to Wallingford-houſe, for I muſt pay it away preſently, and if it had not come, the Plaintiffs buſineſs had been loſt. So I ſee ſtill, if he might not have the Money when he would, and how he pleaſed, your Buſineſs would be undone.

For

An. 1635.

For the 500 l. of Harries, what was between Bagg and Harries, I know not; it may be poſſible, that Pell might help Bagg to this for Harries's good and his own; but this was lent at the Plaintiffs inſtance, and ſaid he would not have lent it, but to be a means to help the Plaintiff to his Aſſignments.

This was but a Mask that Sir James put upon the buſineſs, to draw him up and down with a hook in his Noſe which way he would.

For the 700 l. owing to Owen Brett, it was very true that Pell was not ingaged for this; for I remember the reaſon why he put him off, for perhaps he might come ſhort of it.

Thus for the Particulars I have run through. There are two other things untouched; I am very tender to enter into theſe things that concern the Revenue of the Kingdom; but coming neceſſarily before your Lordſhips in Judgment, I cannot but take notice of the 7000 l. that it ſhould be cut off by the agreement of Sir Anthony Pell, I find that is ſo by His Majeſties Letter omni exceptione; and that my Lord Treaſurer did teſtifie that it was ſo: Therefore, my Lords, to enter into the conſideration or diſcuſſion of that, I will not; but this, my Lords, I will ſay, that in the Books I find no proof it was Sir Anthony Pells agreement: If I did, I hope it not material.

It is apparent by Sir Robert Pyes Certificate, that 13000 l. was due to him; and I preſume that Man is of ſo great worth, that I think he looked narrowly unto it, before he would make any Certificate; but to ſay the Debt was full ſo much, I dare not, but leave it to thoſe to whom it doth belong under the King to do it.

It is true, I find it teſtified likewiſe, that 3000 l. was to be advanced for the Kings Service: Whether Sir James Bagg informed my Lord thus, or he ſpoke with Pell, I know not; but for Bagg's advancing of 2000 l. truly my Lord I muſt deal clearly, whether he did or not it is not material; but I find if he did, it could not be in reſpect of Pells breaking with my Lord Treaſurer, and failing to perform for this Bill under my Lord Treaſurers Hand of the Receipt of Bagg's 2000 l. was 9. July. And Mr. Lake writ a Letter to Mr. Bond 15. July, to keep Sir Anthony Pell to 3000 l. and then the Aſſignments were not Cancelled. But would Sir James Bagg ſuffer poor Sir Anthony Pell to be undone for the want of a Thouſand Pounds? for Bagg had 2000 l. in his Hands of his, and for 1000 l. more he might have been able to have advanced 3000 l. to get the Aſſignments. Suppoſe Pell was but his Broker, to take up Money for him, would Bagg ſuffer the Plaintiffs Buſineſs to periſh, or his Aſſignments to go back in ſuch a ſtrait? I muſt needs in my own Conſcience ſay, it was one of the hardeſt paſſages in the Cauſe, and I do wonder that Sir James Bagg, who hath been ſo careful to prove every thing that he is wanting as to the Privy-Seal; my Lords, it is objected that there is no proof of a Reward, I ſhould hold Bagg a Fool if Sir Anthony Pell ſhould prove a Contract. And for the delay, I ſhall not trouble your Lordſhips, you have ſeen his many Letters; but I wonder Sir James Bagg would be ſo zealous to neglect the Kings Service of ſpecial Truſt, and attend here ſeven Months to effect and diſpatch this buſineſs for the Plaintiff, and all this for nothing. And when he had been ſeven Months, and brought the buſineſs to an effect for the changing the 2000 l. he had but in the name (meaning to ſay it was Pells 2000 l. and not his) to make this poor Gentleman loſe all. I cannot in my Conſcience let this paſs, the very Act of the managing of the buſineſs doth much reflect upon the Juſtice of the King, who gave a moſt Gracious Anſwer to Sir Anthony's Petition, in ſaying He commiſerated his Caſe, and gave ſpecial direction for the ſpeedy payment of his Monies. And yet by Baggs deceit and coſenage, I pray God no Man have occaſion to ſay that it is an Epidemick Diſeaſe: It hath been ſaid, (meaning my Lord Cottington) ſuppoſe he had the Money, is it a crime if a Man undertake to effect a Buſineſs for another, will not the Court of Juſtice allow him for his pains? For my part, I will be none of thoſe Judges to give my opinion ſo; and I think if he come into Chancery, he will have but ſmall comfort.

Now my Lords I will come to the Point of Scandal.

The firſt Proof for this, that this was with a Judgment, (ſaith Baxter) He muſt give a Reward to my Lord Treaſurer, for he had experience of it. This cometh not very ſhort of the Scandal, of laying many a Thouſand under my Lords Pillow. The ſubſtance of the Proof cometh cloſe to it; and though Baxter be Singularis Teſtis, yet I ſhall joyn him with others. I ſhall in the next place obſerve all the cunning expreſſions of the Defendants: He could not ſleep that night, he muſt to Wallingford-houſe, the Buſineſs will be undone, and go more backard than ever. He that hath Wit, and knoweth how to carry himſelf, to put ſuch odious reflections upon my Lord Treaſurer, deſerves to be ſeverely puniſhed. I am ſatisfied in my Conſcience he did this cunningly, to make the Plaintiff believe my Lord Treaſurer was to have it: Then (my Lords) laying all theſe together, and that of Owen Brett, it is apparent from him and the other Witneſſes. I find none of them diſcredited, though it is a dangerous Caſe; and I do not know how any Cauſe of the King may periſh if ſuch a gap be opened, as never to take exception to a Witneſs, but juſt at the hearing to blow upon them, (meaning by Sir James's Councel) and to ſay they were Serving-men or Foot-men; who but Servants can beſt tell of any Paſſages between their Maſter and others? I do take them to be upright and good Witneſſes; he that ſweareth Sir James took that Execration upon him (meaning God damn me) that he was never a Peny better for his Money, my Lord Treaſurer had it all. Add this to Marſh, that my Lord Treaſurer could not ſleep till he had the Money: And that of Owen Brett, it will add a little Grain to the Ballance, whom I do find no ways diſparaged. I do find it confirmed by Turner, that Bagg and Lake told Jones, (as Jones ſaid) that My Lord Treaſurer had the Money, and ſo Jones ſpared not to tell them his mind; and this ſpoken from a Man that was in a Conſumption, to another, I do crave pardon if I do not altogether decline this.

I do hold Sir Anthony Pell in this Cauſe ſo far from having an Impoſition of Fine pro falſo clamore or non liquet, as that I conceive he hath juſt cauſe for this Bill, and to hold Sir James Bagg guilty in this

An. 1635. this Cauſe foully. I do adjudge him to pay 5000 l. to the King, and Impriſonment during the Kings Pleaſure, and that in the Tower; and for the Offices which he doth hold, Two of great Truſt and Weight about the King, truly, my Lords, I know the King doth underſtand the worth and value of his Servants, as well as ever any King in Chriſtendome did; I will not take upon me the boldneſs to diſplace a Servant of the Kings, or take him from his Service, but in all humility ſhall offer my advice to His Majeſty, that I do not hold Sir James a fit Man to be truſted in a Place of that Importance, or to meddle with any Actions of the King, in which how he hath carried himſelf I know not; I ſhall leave your Lordſhips to conſider of the condition of the Treaſury.

I can do no leſs than adjudge Bagg to repay the 2000 l. which is not yet paid, and for which the Plaintiff is ingaged. I do find 500 l. paid to Acton, and ſince the Bill came in or about that time; and I do adjudge him to pay to the Plaintiff for Damages Fifteen Hundred Pounds.

Some Notes of my Lord of Canterburies Cenſure.

My Lords,

THis is a Cauſe of great danger, I ſhall be as ſhort as I can, (before I ſpeak of the Defendant) I ſhall ſpeak of the great Miniſter of State. If the Court think fit to leave it to my Lord of Portland to vindicate his Fathers Honour, I ſhall do ſo too. I do remember what both my Lord Chief-Juſtices have ſaid, whether this Charge can be ſevered from the Scandal or not? whether a neceſſity to name the Lord Treaſurer or not? I do conceive it to be unavoidable. If a neceſſity in uſing his name, then what fault in Sir Anthony Pell? If no neceſſity, I muſt condemn Bagg for being in a far greater fault, that by his open mouth ſo much vilified the Honour of the Name of my Lord Treaſurer. I deſcend to the delivery of my Judgment clearly, and am of opinion that my Lord Treaſurers Honour ſtandeth right in this Court, there being nothing by way of Proof or aſperſion that can faſten upon him. If any thing, it muſt ariſe from the Plaintiff, or from the Defendants. And I ſhall be as ready as any Man to protect the Honour of that great Lord, be it againſt Pell or Bagg, or whom-elſe ſoever. But (My Lords) if it be a fault in Sir Anthony Pell for the ſpreading of this, the fault muſt light upon Sir James Bagg, for he gave the occaſion of all theſe Reports.

My Lords,

Having, as far as lyeth in me, done the Duty I owe to the Dead, whom I hold to be clear in all, I ſhall fall upon the Particulars. Firſt, for the Examiner, I never knew ſo many groſs abuſes in any Cauſe by an Examiner, as in this. If this Courſe be held, any Cauſe of the Kings may be overthrown. Since I had the honour to ſit in this Court, never ſuch groſs abuſes were committed by an Examiner. That Order may be taken with this baſe Examiner, I hold him to be the moſt unworthy fellow, and a Cut-throat of any Mans Cauſe.

For Sir Richard Tichburne, I hold him innocent from any aſperſion; but I can give no reparation. What if Five or Six Defendants, and only Proof be brought againſt them, One or Two, ſhall this fall foul upon the Plaintiff for want of Proof?

For the Plaintiffs Debt, I ſhall not ſay any thing, nor think it a Crime, that Pell was delayed in the payment of his Money; for the King hath a great many very great publick and important occaſions, that he cannot pay all upon demand: And withall conſidering that the original Debt was but 7000 l. and it ſuddenly grew to above 13000 l. therefore the Lord Treaſurer had need to look about him. God forbid, that upon main occaſions, when the King promiſeth a Suit (perhaps directly) of ſo much Money, and is not preſently paid, that the King muſt pay Intereſt for this; this is no fair uſage of the King.

The thing that troubleth me is this, of the Attendants on the Lord Treaſurer. If the Lord Treaſurer have a near Kinſman, or Secretary, or any other imployed for him, if thoſe Men ſhall be corrupt, or do thoſe Acts which ſhall make the World believe it is ſo, it ſhall be as much as if they were really guilty. For by this means the People will run on with an opinion of Bribery and Corruption: They cannot have it out of this great Mans Hand, but they muſt go that way of Bribery to the Secretary for it. It ſhall not only bring great Men into deſpite, who perhaps never heard of it; but Men when they cannot have their Money without going this way, care not what they do.

Becauſe he nameth the great Officer in the Bill, is it a ſcandal? muſt this be a Terror to any Man for doing the Kings Service? Oh, but there is medling with the Kings Revenue! What hath Sir Anthony Pell to do with it? If there be but a poſſibility of fraud, ſhall the King have no Court of Juſtice to do him right? If it come to this paſs, that no abuſe concerning the Revenue muſt be queſtioned, the King ſhall never know what the Eſcheat is.

Here are four Defendants.

For Sir Richard Tichburne, the Lord Treaſurer had no diſhonour by him; a Gentleman of an ancient Family, and very worthy as any Man: therefore I ſhall concur, that the Sentence may be drawn up with a fair mention of his manifeſt Innocency throughout the Cauſe.

For the Second Defendant, Mr. Gibbins, I do clear him.

For the Third Defendant, his Secretary Mr. Lake, I an very ſorry to meet him here upon this occaſion, not that I ſhall Cenſure him, but yet ſomewhat ſticketh with me, and that is his Letter to Mr. Bond, that upon his Faith and Credit he had Aſſignments of 6000 l. in keeping for the Plaintiff. Should he be ſo adventurous as to write ſo without his Lords privity? It troubleth me the more, partly for the Proof of it, becauſe there are Six days between Sir James Baggs Advancement of 2000 l. and Mr. Lakes Letter to Bond to help Sir

An. 1635.

Anthony to 3000 l. therefore a fraud is contrived in ſome kind: Yet I ſhall acquit Mr. Lake, though I cannot think ſo well of him as I have done.

My Lords,

Now as for Sir James Bagg, I do not ſtand upon it, whether Sir Anthony Pell is damnified in this Buſineſs, yea or no? the Queſtion is, what fraudulent Practiſes here are by Sir James Bagg? And if there be but an Intention to do the ſame, I hold him as guilty as if he had done it. Joyn this together with his uſing of my Lord Treaſurers Name to lend theſe Monies, that ſo he might be inticed by that meerly to get the Aſſignments; I do hold this Practiſe to be criminal in this Court.

The Proof is, That he had Experience in Buſineſſes of this nature; he was to have but Seven Hundred Pounds for his pains. He muſt to Wallingford-houſe: though in anſwer to this it was wittily obſerved by Sir James Bagg's Council, this Conſtruction, (ſenſu diviſo, ſenſu compoſito) that he muſt pay the Money, and then preſently to Wallingford-houſe and pay the Money there.

If Two Witneſſes not concurring in Time and Place, yet if they concur in proving the Crime, they are of force to me, they all come home to this Plot and Practice. I ſhould be of opinion with my Lord of London if theſe things were ſeveral.

But conſider the Shooe-horne they draw on by the Name of the Lord Treaſurer, and the Plot will appear.

I find this Money pretended to be for my Lord Treaſurer, though it was never paid back again, nor ever tendred; and yet what a glorious defence at Bar was offered, that Bagg would not pay it till the Bill came in. For why? becauſe that the World ſhould not take notice, that he was afraid of the Bill. This is but a gloſs and weakning of himſelf. All the World may ſee, if it had not been for the Bill, Sir Anthony Pell ſhould never have had his Money. It is even as if one fall upon another in the High-way, and they rob him, and make him enter into Bond, that he will not queſtion him hereafter; and then others come and ſee them, then he that robbed him anſwers, Here is your Money, I did but borrow it. I conceive the getting of the Money by Bagg from Pell as bad, as if he had gone away with the Two Thouſand and Five Hundred Pounds.

I agree in one thing with my Lord Finch, That Bagg was a moſt unnatural Man, that had drawn Two Thouſand Five Hundred Pounds for the uſe of himſelf and his friends, from the Plaintiff: And whereas Sir Anthony was in a ſtrait how to advance Three Thouſand Pounds, that he ſhould be ſo hard-hearted, (that Two Thouſand Five Hundred Pounds being in his Hands) as not to help him at ſuch a time, I would have Sentenced him for this unnatural part alone: Poor Sir Anthony muſt ſuffer all this, while it is likely Bagg would never have been gull'd in a Buſineſs. He was an Ingenious Man, Sir Anthony was a ſingle plain Man.

If Bagg had put this Bill in, I ſhould have conceived the worſt of it; but I ſhall never believe poor Sir Anthony had in him that malice, as if Bagg had put it in: For his Councel to take Exceptions againſt Witneſſes at the Hearing, is of dangerous conſequence; any Cauſe of the Kings may be ſo ſpoiled. They ſay one of Sir Anthonies witneſſes was but ſeventeen years of age; if it were ſo, yet he was of age enough to tell and receive mony. They except againſt them becauſe they are Sir Anthonies Servants. Who are ſo proper to be Witneſſes as his men? Why is here no exceptions taken to Sir James Baggs Witneſſes? for he had two Servants ſworn as well as Sir Anthony.

For Mr. Eſcourt, they ſay he was then preſent, and heard no ſuch words as Marſh ſweareth; that might be true, and he not hear, for they might be ſpoke and not in his hearing. What if Pell did fail in the proof of his Bill, not only in the matter but in the manner?

I will not look upon Pell, but upon the Publick: but I hold this proved both in matter and manner; for it would not have been ſufficient for Pell to have proved, he was coſened thus much, but in this manner. That which is worſt of all, and is ſo foul, that his Councel offered no defence at all, and that was Baggs own anſwer; where he ſweareth, that he never did deſerve any ſuch kindneſs of Sir Anthony Pell for to do ſo great Curteſie, as to lend him theſe monys. Look but upon, and ſee the many Letters he writ; James Bagg, your moſt real Friend, your buſineſs will be better done if you leave it to your Friend James Bagg. Here is his Hand againſt his Oath, and his Oath againſt his Hand. He was a moſt baſe fellow to ſay, your moſt real Friend, and to ſerve Sir Anthony as he did. I have now done with that bottomleſs Bagg, and my cenſure; I leave my Lord of Portland to do what he thinketh fit againſt him. I hold it as dangerous a practice of him as ever was in this kind. I fine him at 5000 l. and Impriſonment during the Kings pleaſure; and for his Office leave it to the Kings pleaſure: only pray, that a man whoſe Hand and Oath cannot be taken may not be in truſt, eſpecially in places concerning His Majeſty. The Plaintiff hath a loſs perſonal and real, and ingaged himſelf in many thouſand pounds for the obtaining of mony, therefore I fine Bagg 500 l. damages to Sir Anthony Pell.

The Lord Cottington, who firſt began according to the courſe of the Court, was of opinion Sir James Bagg ought to be acquitted, and Sir Anthony Pell to be cenſured pro falſo Clamore, for caſting an aſperſion upon my Lord Treaſurer, by putting thoſe paſſages of ſcandal into his Bill.

And the Earl of Dorſet declared he did not think it to be a crime for a Courtier that comes up to Court for His Majeſties ſervice, and lives at great expence in his attendance, to receive a reward to get a buſineſs done by a great man in Power, and was of opinion with my Lord Cottington, to fine the Plaintiff pro falſo Clamore.

The Biſhop of Canterburies Letter to the Arch-Biſhop of St. Andrews in Scotland.

My very good Lord,

F*Or the Particulars entruſted by the Church to the Lord Biſhop of* Brechen, and namely about the Abbacie of Lindores, you muſt expect them from the Lord Biſhop himſelf, and from ſuch relations as you will receive by my Lord and the Earl of Traquair. Now at this time you ſhall receive nothing, but that which is commanded me by the King, and muſt be my part to act in the preſent and future buſineſs for the Church of Scotland.

My Lord, For the preſent the King is reſolved, upon ſome great reaſons of State, which have prevailed with him, not to meddle with the Abbacy of Lindores, or any other of that nature, as yet, but to leave them in that ſtate in which they now are, till ſuch time as he may conſider the Decrees, and the Act or Acts of Parliament which concern them; and till he can find a way to order them better, both for his own profit, and the contentment of His people there: aſſuring you in the mean time, that both in this and all other buſineſs, he will be very careful both of the credit, and of the maintenance of the Church; whereof if your ſelf or any other Biſhop or Clergy-man, ſhall make doubt, I am commanded to tell you, that therein you will not only do His Majeſty wrong, but hurt your ſelves and the Church, which you ſeek to benefit. And in this very particular, you are to know, and make known to others, that it is not the diſlike of any perſon or perſons, or of the thing it ſelf, that cauſes this preſent ſtay, but reaſon of ſtate only, and the care which the King hath that all proceedings may go on according to Law. As for the Biſhopricks His Majeſty will take their wants into as Provident care as he can, and hath ſetled Arbroth upon the Biſhoprick of Brechen, but in what form I am not able to tell you, as not being ſo well acquainted with the Cuſtoms and Conſtitutions of that Kingdom, and therefore leſt I ſhould miſtake in any circumſtance, I leave that wholly to the Biſhops own Relation.

For all the buſineſs of that Church in future, which muſt come to the Exchequer or any other publick Audience, or any other buſineſs that may reflect upon the Church, or any thing that belongs to the Kings ſervice, in which Church-men are truſted, you are immutably to hold this Rule, and that by his Majeſties ſtrict and moſt ſpecial Command, namely that your ſelf, or the Lord Roſs, or both of you together, do privately acquaint the Earl of Traquair with it, before it be propoſed in publick, either at the Council-Table, or the Exchequer, or elſewhere: and the Earl hath aſſured the King in my preſence that he will ſtrictly obſerve and hold the ſame correſpondency and courſe with you; and further, that he will readily and faithfully do all good Offices for the Church, that come within his power, according to all ſuch Commands as he ſhall receive, either immediately from the King, or otherwiſe by direction of his Majeſty from my ſelf. And if at any time your Lordſhips, and my Lord Traquair ſhall upon any of the forementioned buſineſs ſo differ in Judgement, that you cannot accord it among your ſelves, let it reſt, and write up either to His Majeſty, or to my ſelf, to move His Majeſty ſty for further direction, which once received you are all to obey, that ſo this little unhappy difference, which lately aroſe about Lindores, may be laid aſleep; and that no other may hereafter riſe up in the place of it, to diſturb either the Kings or the Churches ſervice, or diſorder any of your ſelves, who are known to be ſuch careful and direct Servants to both. And to the end this may go on with better ſucceſs, His Majeſty preciſely commands, that this mutual Relation between the Earl of Traquair and you, be kept very ſecret, and made known to no other Perſon, either Clergy or Laity, for the divulging of theſe things cannot but breed Jealouſies amongſt men, and diſſervices in regard of the things themſelves; and therefore the King bids me tell you, that he ſhall take it very ill at his hand, whoever he be, that ſhall not ſtraightly obſerve theſe his directions. This is all which I had in command to deliver to you, and I ſhall not mingle with it any particulars of my own; therefore wiſhing you all Health and Happineſs, and good ſpeed in your great affairs, I leave you to Gods Bleſſed Protection, and reſt,

Your Graces very Loving Friend

The Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Letter to the Lord Arch-Biſhop of St. Andrews.

My very good Lord, S. in Chriſto.

I Have but one thing at this preſent to trouble you with, but that hath much diſpleaſed the King, and not without very juſt cauſe; for now while the King is ſetling that Church againſt all things that were defective in it, and againſt the continuance of all unwarrantable cuſtoms unknown to, or oppoſed by the ancient Church of Chriſt, the now Biſhop of Aberdeen, hath given way to, and allowed a publick Faſt throughout his Dioceſs, to be kept upon the Lords-Day, contrary to the Rules of Chriſtianity, and all the ancient Canons of the Church. I was in good hope that Church had quite laid down that Ill-Cuſtom: but ſince it appears the now Biſhop of Aberdeen hath continued it, and perhaps others may follow his example, if this paſs without a check; therefore His Majeſties Expreſs Will and Command to your Grace is, That you and my Lord Glaſcow, take order with all the Biſhops in your ſeveral Provinces reſpectively, that no man preſume to Command, or Suffer any Faſt to be upon that day, or indeed any publick Faſt upon any other day without the Spetial Leave and Command of the King, to whoſe Power it belongs, and not to them. And further His Majeſties Will and pleaſure is, that if the Canons be not already Printed (as I preſume they are not) that you make a Canon purpoſely againſt this unworthy Cuſtom, and ſee it Printed with the reſt; and that you write a ſhort Letter to the Biſhop of Aberdeen, to let him underſtand how he hath over-ſhot himſelf, which Letter you may ſend together with theſe of mine, if you ſo pleaſe. This is all which for the preſent I have to trouble you with; therefore leaving you to God's Bleſſed protection, I reſt

Your Graces very Loving Friend and Brother,

An. 1635.

Mr. Chancey queſtioned in the High-Commiſſion.

Mr. Chancey Miniſter of Ware in Hertfordſhire for oppoſing the making of a Rail about the Communion-Table in that Pariſh-Church, as an Innovation and Snare to mens Conſciences, was brought into the High-Commiſſion, and there pronounced guilty of contempt of Eccleſiaſtical Government, and raiſing a Schiſm; and was ſuſpended from his Miniſtry, till he ſhould make in open Court a Recantation after a preſcribed form, acknowledging his great offence in uſing the invective Words, and proteſting that he was perſwaded in his Conſcience, that kneeling at the Sacrament was a Lawful and Commendable Geſture, that the Rail ſet up in the Chancel with a Bench thereunto annexed, for kneeling at the Holy Communion, was a decent and convenient Ornament, and promiſing never by Word nor Deed to oppoſe either that, or any other Laudable Right and Ceremony preſcribed in the Church of England.

He is condemned in great coſts of Suit, and was impriſoned till he paid the ſame, or performed the order of the Court.

Afterwards Mr. Chancey having made the enjoyned Recantation, was diſmiſſed with a judicial admonition given by the Arch-Biſhop to live Peaceably and Conformably to the Doctrine, Diſcipline and Ceremonies of the Church of England, and neither by Word nor Deed to oppoſe, or to bring into a diſeſteem any of them.

January 19. Againſt Hackney-Coaches in and about London, giving diſturbance in the Streets.

The Kings Majeſty took into conſideration, the reſtraint of the multitude and promiſcuous uſe of Coaches about London and Weſtminſter. His Majeſty perceiving that of late the great numbers of Hackney-Coaches were grown a great diſturbance to the King, Queen and Nobility through the Streets of the ſaid Citys, ſo as the common paſſage thereby was hindred, and made dangerous, and the Rates and Prices of Hay and Provender, and other Proviſions of the Stable thereby made exceeding dear, hath thought fit, with the advice of His Privy-Council, to publiſh His Royal Pleaſure for Reformation therein; and therefore doth Command and Forbid, that from the Feaſt of St. John the Baptiſt next coming, no Hackney, or hired Coach, or Coaches be uſed or ſuffered in London, or Weſtminſter, or the Suburbs or Liberties thereof, except the ſame Hackney-Coach or Coaches be to travel at the leaſt three miles out of London or Weſtminſter, or the Suburbs thereof, or farther. And alſo that no Perſon or Perſons ſhall go in a Coach in the Streets of London or Weſtminſter, or Suburbs or Liberties thereof, except the Owner of the ſame Coach ſhall and do conſtantly keep within the ſaid Cities and Suburbs thereof four ſufficient able Horſes or Geldings fit for His Majeſties Service, whenſoever His Majeſties occaſions ſhall require them, upon great Penalties contained in the ſaid Proclamation; and for the due execution thereof, His Majeſty doth Command all Juſtices of Peace, Majors, Bailiffs, Conſtables of the ſaid Cities and Suburbs, to be aiding and aſſiſting, whereby ſuch as wilfully do offend in the Premiſes, may be brought and preſented to His Majeſties Privy-Council, to be proceeded againſt according to the demerits of the Offenders.

It is worth obſervation, that in the firſt year of the Reign of King Charles, no Hackney-Coaches did ſtand in the Streets, but at their Stables, and they were ſent unto to come abroad by thoſe who had occaſion to uſe them: and there were not above twenty Hackney Coaches at that time, to be had for hire in and about London.

The grave Judges of the Law conſtantly rid on Horſeback, in all weathers, to Weſtminſter: All Lawyers in thoſe days pleaded in Ruffs, falling-bands came afterwards in faſhion.

February 1. The Priſing of Wines.

THe King by the advice of His Privy-Council, according to a Statute made in the fourth year of King Edward the third did publiſh and declare, that for one year following, Canary-Wines, Muſcadels and Alicant be ſold in groſs at 17 l. the Pipe, and at 12 d. the Quart; Sacks and Malagoes at 15 l. the But in groſs, and 10 d. the Quart by retail; Gaſcoin and French Wines at 18 l. the Tun; the Rochel-Wines at 15 l. the Tun, and at 6 d. the Quart by retail.

February 25. A Proclamation for the ſuppreſſing of Felons and Out-laws, their Aydets & Abettors, by bringing them to be anſwerable to the ſeveral Laws of the ſeveral Realms of England and Scotland.

WHereas the Kings Majeſty was informed by the Chief Landlords and Inhabitants of the Lands and Poſſeſſions next adjoyning to the Out-bounds of his Kingdoms of England and Scotland, that by the great and general Intercourſe, ſecret Practiſes and Combinations of Out-Laws, Felons and Malefactors of both thoſe Kingdoms, divers and ſundry Outrages and Felonies have been by them committed; The King hereupon taking into His Princely Conſideration the reformation of ſuch Miſchiefs; and calling to mind that ſundry the Chief Landlords of the Lands and Poſſeſſions next adjoyning to the Frontiers of the ſaid two Kingdoms, were contented to undertake to King James, that thoſe Tenants under them ſhould be anſwerable to the Kings Laws for any Felony or Capital Crime they ſhould be charged with; and if the Party Delinquent ſhould happen to fly, before he, or they ſhould be apprehended, and the Party grieved ſhould by courſe of Law Indict and Convict the Party or Parties Delinquent of the ſaid Felony or Felonies, that then the ſaid Landlord, to whom the Forfeiture of ſuch party Convicted ſhould accrew, ſhould make Reſtitution to the Party Grieved of ſuch Goods as were ſtolen from him by the ſaid Party or Parties Convicted; the ſaid Landlord being Authoriſed himſelf and Officers to ſearch for, and apprehend any Felons, Fugitives, Abettors, Out-putters, or any ſuſpected Perſons ſecretly lurking, remaining, or being within the ſaid Landlords Bounds or Limits, and him, or them to bring to anſwer to the ſeveral Laws of the Land: of which ſaid Undertaking the King did well approve; and did therefore command all Chief Landlords in the Counties of Cumberland and Northumberland, to put the ſame in Execution, to the utmoſt of their Power.

March 26. To Inroll Mare Clauſum.

HIs Majeſty this day in Council taking into Conſideration a Book lately Publiſhed by John Selden Eſq; Intituled Mare Clauſum, ſeu de Dominio Maris, written by the Kings Command, which he had done with great Induſtry, Learning and Judgment, and hath aſſerted the Right of the Crown of England to the Dominion of the Brittiſh Seas. The King requires one of the ſaid Books to be kept in the Council-Cheſt, another in the Court of Exchequer, and a third in the Court of Admiralty, as faithful and ſtrong Evidence to the Dominion of the Brittiſh Seas.

April 5. Mariners.

THe Kings Majeſty being informed, that divers Marriners being Preſſed for His Service at Sea, have lately withdrawn themſelves from His Majeſties Ships, and are entertained by Merchants and others, doth require and command, That all ſuch Marriners do immediately repair to His Majeſties Service, for which they are or ought to be entertained for His Majeſties uſe. And the King doth inhibit and forbid all Merchants and Maſters of Ships whatſoever, to receive or continue any Mariner in their Service, who have deſerted the Kings Ships.

April 7. Plague.

His Majeſty, as to Mare Clauſum, further expreſſeth His Pleaſure on the 15th of April.

April 15.

Mare Clauſum Printed beyond Sea.

‘WHereas there was heretofore by the Kings Command Publiſhed a Book Intituled Mare Clauſum, ſeu Dominio Maris, for the manifeſting of the Right and Dominion of the King and His Royal Progenitors in the Seas, which incompaſs the Realms and Dominions of Great Brittain and Ireland. And whereas, ſince the Publiſhing thereof, ſome have cauſed the ſaid Book to be Printed in ſome Place beyond the Seas, and to the ſaid Impreſſion have added more than what was therein printed at firſt, and hath falſly put in the name of the City of London for the place of the Impreſſion.

‘The King doth require, that no perſon whatſoever, do, or ſhall import, publiſh, ſet to ſale, any of the ſaid Books of the ſaid Forreign Edition, either in Latin or Engliſh, except only ſuch as have, or ſhall be licenſed by the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Realm.

April 18. An Order againſt counterfeit Jewels.

THe Kings Majeſty having taken into conſideration the great quantity of Money exhauſted from His Subjects, and exported out of His Dominions into Forreign Parts for counterfeit Jewels, of Pearl, Pendants, Chains, and falſe Stones, carrying only a ſhew and ſemblance of Precious Stones, Pearls and Jewels. Doth, by the Advice of His Privy-Council, charge and command, That from henceforth no Perſon or Perſons whatſoever, do wear or uſe any counterfeit Jewels, Pearls, Pendants, Chains, or falſe Stones, upon pain of Forfeiture of the ſame, and ſuch other Pains as ſhall be inflicted upon them.

Upon the 19th of April His Majeſty, as to the Liturgie deſigned for Scotland, thus expreſſed His Pleaſure

Liturgy in Scotland.

Charles Rex,

‘I Gave the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury Command, to make the Alterations expreſſed in this Book, and to fit a Liturgy for the Church of Scotland; and whereſoever they ſhall differ from another Book Signed by Us at Hampton-Court, September 28. 1634. Our Pleaſure is, to have theſe followed rather than the former, unleſs the Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews, and his Brethren, who are upon the Place, ſhall ſee apparent reaſon to the contrary.

April 22. Plague.

THe Kings Majeſty finding, that the Infection of the Plague hath begun to break forth in ſome Places, near unto the City of London, and ſome other Parts of the Kingdom:

Doth, out of a provident Care, and for the ſafety of his People, (a timely uſe of good means being required to prevent the diſperſing thereof) take notice, that in the time of the laſt Plague, there were divers good Orders publiſhed, with Rules preſervative, and Directions againſt the Infection; His Majeſty is pleaſed that the ſaid Orders, Rules and Medicines ſhall be again now publiſhed and renewed. And doth therefore require all Juſtices of Peace, Majors, Sheriffs, and other Officers and Miniſters, to take knowledge of His Majeſties Pleaſure herein: and that every one in their ſeveral Places, where the Infection ſhall happen to be, uſe all care and endeavours effectually to prevent the ſpreading of the ſame.

1. May 1636. To prevent the Printing of Books beyond Sea, which were firſt Printed at the Univerſities in England.

‘THe King doth declare His Pleaſure, That whereas in His Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge, and in His City of London, divers Books not elſe-where Printed and Publiſhed, at the Coſts and care of ſome of the Kings Subjects, and afterwards ſome of the ſaid Books have been re-printed in the Dominion of Forreign Princes, or States, and from thence Imported, and put to Sale here; by which the Subjects (at whoſe Coſt the firſt Impreſſion was made) have been much prejudiced in the Sale of ſuch their ſaid Impreſſion.

‘The King being deſirous to give ſpecial encouragement to all good and lawful endeavours, uſed to advance good Arts and Learning, and to prevent the like Importation, doth charge and command,

An. 1636.

'mand, That no perſon whatſoever ſhall import into the Realm of 'England or Ireland, or Dominion of Wales, out of the Dominions 'of any Forreign Prince, or ſhall offer to put to Sale any Forreign 'Edition, or any Books or Copies, either in Latin or Greek, or in 'the Hebrew, Caldea, Syriack, and Arabick Tongues; the firſt Edi'tion of publiſhing whereof hath been firſt come out of any Preſs 'or Houſe of Printing in the ſaid Univerſities, or out of the 'City of London.

The King appeared this Year with a formidable Armado in the Narrow-Seas, Algernoune Earl of Northumberland being Admiral, had 60 Sale under his command, who ſet out from the Downs towards the North, where the Dutch Buſſes were Fiſhing upon the Coaſts of the Iſles, part of the King of Great Britain's Dominions; but the Admiral requiring them to forbear, they ſeemed indiſpoſed thereunto; whereupon the Admiral fired at them; ſome of them were taken, other ſunk, and the reſt fled: And the Dutch immediately hereupon prevailed with the Admiral to mediate with the King, that they might by His Permiſſion go on this Summer to Fiſh upon the Coaſts, and agreed to give the King for this Year 30000 l. which was paid accordingly; and the Dutch expreſſed their willingneſs to obtain a Grant from the King, for their Permiſſion to Fiſh for time to come, paying a yearly Tribute.

His Majeſty thought fit at this time to declare His Pleaſure for Reſtraint of Fiſhing upon His Majeſties Seas and Coaſts without Licence.

10. May 1636.

'WHereas King James did, in the Seventh Year of His Reign 'of Great Britain, ſet forth a Proclamation touching Fiſh'ing; whereby, for the many important Reaſons therein expreſſed, 'all Perſons of what Nation or Quality ſoever, (being not His Na'tural-born Subjects) were reſtrained from Fiſhing upon any the 'Coaſts and Seas of Great Britain, Ireland, and the reſt of the 'Iſles adjacent, where moſt uſually heretofore Fiſhing had been, 'until they had orderly demanded and obtained Licences from the 'ſaid King, or His Commiſſioners in that behalf, upon pain of ſuch 'chaſtiſement as ſhould be inflicted upon ſuch wilful Offenders: 'Since which time, albeit neither the ſaid King, nor His Majeſty 'have made any conſiderable execution of the ſaid Proclamation, 'but have with much patience expected a voluntary conformity of 'His Neighbours and Allies to ſo juſt and reaſonable Prohibitions 'and Directions, as are contained in the ſame.

'And now finding by experience, that all the inconveniences 'which occaſioned that Proclamation, are rather increaſed than 'abated: His Majeſty being very ſenſible of the Premiſſes, and well-'knowing how far he is obliged in Honour to maintain the Rights of 'His Crown, eſpecially of ſo great conſequence, has thought it 'neceſſary, by the advice of His Privy-Council, to renew the afore'ſaid Reſtraint of Fiſhing, upon His aforeſaid Coaſts and Seas, 'without Licence firſt obtained from Him; and by theſe Preſents do ‘make publick Declaration, That His Reſolution is, (at times convenient) to keep ſuch a competent ſtrength of Shipping upon His Seas, as may (by Gods Bleſſing) be ſufficient both to hinder ſuch further encroachments upon His Regalities, and aſſiſt and protect thoſe His good Friends and Allies, who ſhall henceforth, by vertue of Our Licences, (to be firſt obtained) endeavour to take the benefit of Fiſhing upon His Coaſts and Seas in the Places accuſtomed.

16. May 1636. The King inhibits the Importation of Whale-Oyl or Whale-Fins.

‘WHereas His Majeſty King James, by His Proclamation dated the 18*th* of May, in the 17*th* Year of His Reign, for the incouragement of His Subjects, the Company and Merchants Trading for Muſcovy, Greenland, and the Parts adjoyning, commonly called the Muſcovy-Company, did inhibit the Importation of Whale-Fins by any perſon, other than by that Company:

‘The King being now minded to give the like incouragement, which, by the increaſe of Navigation, conduceth much to the common Good of the King and People, doth now think fit to prohibit all Aliens, and Strangers whatſoever, as well as the Kings Natural-born Subjects, that they, nor any of them, other than the Muſcovy Merchants, only Import, or bring any Whale-Oyl or Whale-Fins into any of the Kings Dominions, upon penalty of forfeiture of the ſame, and upon pain of ſuch other puniſhment as by the Court of Star-chamber ſhall be thought fitting, and that none do preſume to buy, utter, ſell, barter, or contract for any Whale-Oyl or Whale-Fins of any others than of the Muſcovy-Merchant.

27. May 1636. The King by Two Proclamations Adjourns part of Trinity-Term.

‘THe Kings Majeſty finding that the Infection of the Plague is at this preſent ſcattered and diſperſed in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and the Suburbs of ſome Pariſhes adjoyning to the ſame, and weighing the danger and inconvenience, which may fall out by the reſort of His Subjects from all Parts of the Kingdom to His Cities of London and Weſtminſter, for their neceſſary Cauſes and Suits the next Term, hath thought fit, by the advice of His Privy-Council, to Adjourn ſome part of Trinity-Term next, from the ſecond Return thereof, until Tres Trinitatis, being the laſt Return of the ſame; and that to be for ſuch Cauſes as are hereafter expreſſed.

‘See this Proclamation at large in the Appendix.

June. 1636. Trin'-Term. Sir R. B. Knight refuſed to let the Caſe of Ship-money be argued.

WHereas Richard Chambers Merchant, having commenced a Suit for Treſpaſs and falſe Impriſonment againſt Sir Edward Bromfeild, for impriſoning him the ſaid Chambers, for refuſing to pay Ship-money in the time that Sir Edward Bromfeild was Lord Major of the City of London; in which Suit the ſaid Sir Edward Bromfeild did make a ſpecial Juſtification: Sir R. B. Knight being then one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench in Trinity-Term 1636. then ſitting on the Bench in the ſaid Court, upon debate of the ſaid Caſe between the ſaid, Chambers and Sir Edward Bromfeild, ſaid openly in Court, That there was a Rule of Law, and a Rule of Government, and that many things which might not be done by the Rule of Law, might be done by the Rule of Government, and and would not ſuffer the Point of Legality of Ship-money to be argued by Chambers his Councel.

June 6. The opinion of all the Judges, whether the Books written by Burton and Baſtwick did amount to High-Treaſon

Upon Tueſday the 6th of June 13 Caroli, all the Judges met at Serjeants-Inn, and all the Kings Council, about ſeditious Books written and diſperſed by Mr. Burton, and Dr. Baſtwick. After ſeveral Speeches made by the Kings Councel, endeavouring to prove that there were divers Paſſages in the Books that amounted to High-Treaſon: The Judges in their abſence debated the Buſineſs, and reſolved as followeth.

1. That if there were any thing in the Books that amounted to Treaſon, no Indictment would be found good for Treaſon, unleſs it was grounded upon the Statute of 25 Edw. 3. either for compaſſing the Kings Death, or imagining the ſame, or elſe for levying of War.

2. If any Man ſeditiouſly, maliciouſly, and of purpoſe to raiſe Rebellion, and to incite Rebellion, did take Arms to reduce the courſe of Government, of the State, either Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, and thereby to compaſs the Kings deſtruction, this was Treaſon.

3. That the Indictment was to be framed upon the ſaid Statute of 25 Edw. 3. and further the Judges went not that day. And this was delivered by the Lord Chief-Juſtice to the King and Council, and ſo they parted at that time.

About this time the New-Statutes for the Univerſity of Oxford were finiſhed and publiſhed in Convocation.

The Preface to thoſe Statutes diſparaged King Edwards Times and Government, declaring, that the Diſcipline of the Univerſity was then diſcompoſed and troubled by that Kings Injunctions, and the flattering novelty of the Age, and that it did revive and flouriſh again in Queen Maries days, under the Government of Cardinal Poole; when, by the much to be deſired felicity of thoſe Times, an in-bred Candor ſupplied the defect of Statutes.

THis ſame Year there aroſe a Difference between the Arch-biſhop and the Two Univerſities, Oxford and Cambridge, concerning the Right of Viſiting thoſe Univerſities; the Arch-biſhop claiming it Jure Metropolitico, and they Pleaded that it was ſetled in the King alone, as King, and their Founder. This Cauſe came to a Hearing before His Majeſty, ſitting in Council; Sir John Banks the Kings Attorney-General Pleading for the Arch-biſhops Right, and the Kings; the King then in Perſon arguing and giving Judgment againſt himſelf.

The Buſineſs debated in the Kings Preſence.

At Hampton-Court, on the 21*ſt* of June, the King and Council being ſat, the Lord Arch-biſhop ſtanding at the Right-Hand of the King, ſpake to this effect. That by Letters he had acquainted the Two Univerſities, that he conceived he had power to Viſit them, as being within his Province, and Metropolitical Juriſdiction, and deſired to know their Anſwers. To this a civil Anſwer was returned, both from Oxford and Cambridge, That to yield to ſuch a Propoſition by their own Power, without a Command from His Majeſty, were a wrong to the Univerſities. Thereupon he delivered a Petition to His Majeſty, and deſired a Gracious Hearing; and now he humbly beſought His Majeſty to do him the favour to hear this Cauſe; for the Church of England ſhould never be able to ſettle things right without ſome Power over the Univerſities.

Then the Earl of Holland, Chancellor of the Univerſity of Cambridge, ſtanding at the Left-Hand of the King, ſpake, and ſaid, That he hoped His Majeſty would not ſuffer that Univerſity to loſe its ancient Priviledge; it being never wont to be Viſited, ſave by His Majeſty, and thoſe by Commiſſion from him, and ever exempted from the Viſitation of any Biſhop or Arch-biſhop.

The Kings Attorney argueth for the Arch-biſhop.

Then the Attorney-General argued, as followeth.

The Queſtion in ſhort is, whether the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, as Metropolitan, ought to Viſit the Univerſities of Oxford and Cambridge, as being within his Province? This doth no way intrench upon Your Majeſty, for it muſt be acknowledged, that Your Majeſty is the Supreme Ordinary, and hath Supreme Juriſdiction, and may Viſit both Univerſities by Your Commiſſion, notwithſtanding You may do it by Your Lord Arch-biſhop; this is an undoubted Right. My Lord Arch-biſhop hath a double Capacity; the one as Arch-biſhop, the other as Chancellor of Oxford. He deſires to do equal Juſtice, and to offer no otherwiſe to that Honourable Perſon, the Chancellor of Cambridge, than to himſelf. Biſhopricks and Arch-biſhopricks are all of them of Your Majeſties, and Your Royal Progenitors Foundation, originally Donative, long before the Conqueſt, and before time of memory: And as ancient as the Arch-biſhop is, ſo ancient is the Juriſdiction. The Viſitation of the Arch-biſhop is of Common Right, and not of ſpecial Perſons, but of the Clergy, and the People in all Cauſes that be Eccleſiaſtical, and in all Places within his Province, without any manner of Exception. By the Statute of 21 H. 8. it doth appear, that all Houſes of Religion, all Colledges, &c. are within the Viſitation of the Arch-biſhop of the Province. And by another Statute expreſs Proviſion is made, that in all Places, as well exempt, as not exempt, the Arch-biſhop ſhall have Power to Reform, and puniſh thoſe that do ought againſt the Orders of the Church, Common-Prayer, &c. 13 Eliz. a Statute which confirmeth the 39 Articles, entruſteth the Lord Arch-biſhop to ſee the Doctrine of the Church maintained. It will appear, that in the time of Edw. 1. Rich. 2. Edw. 4. the Arch-biſhop Viſited the Univerſity in his own Metropolitical Right, and not by any Bull from the Pope; and there is as urgent neceſſity in theſe Times. Many things may be omitted by the Chancellors, that are commonly great Men, and many things to be Reformed concerning the Adminiſtration of the Sacraments, and the Orders of the Church. In Cambridge there may be Chappels that were never yet Conſecrated. In the review of all Eccleſiaſtical Laws appointed by Act of Parliament in the Times of H. 8. and Edw. 6. which ſhew the opinion of the Times; it appeareth expreſly, there ſhould be no Exemption of Colledges from the Arch-biſhop's Viſitation.

An. 1636.

Sir John Lamb ſeconds the Kings Attorney.

Sir John Lamb ſeconded the Kings Attorney, and ſaid, The Archbiſhop Viſiteth of common Right, and the Univerſities are parts of his Province, and the Burthen is caſt on the other ſide to prove the Exemption. That in Cauſes handled in the Univerſities they had a Remedy to appeal to the Arch-biſhop, who heard the Complaints of the Parties, and Viſited them; this he ſaid he would ſhew by Record, which had been kept many Hundred Years.

Hereupon His Majeſty commanded the Univerſities to ſhew their Exemption, and propoſed that one ſhould ſpeak for both; but it was anſwered, that the Defences for both were different one from the other.

Then Mr. Gardiner, Recorder of London, ſpake on the behalf of Cambridge.

The Recorder of London on the behalf of the Univerſity of Cambridge.

In ſtating this Queſtion it's thus far agreed, That Your Majeſty hath power of Viſitation; but the Queſtion is, whether Your Majeſty hath the ſole Power, or my Lord's Grace a Power concurrent with Your Majeſty.

No, ſaith the King, the Queſtion is, whether he hath not Power to Viſit there as within his Province.

The Recorder thus proceeded. I ſhall tell your Majeſty what I conceive of Metropolitical Viſitations, and then of the manner of Government, and Rule of the Univerſity; and then how the Rule of the one will ſtand with the other. And laſtly, I ſhall offer what we have for Exemption.

In England there be Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, and Arch-deacons. The Biſhop hath his Viſitation every Three Years; my Lord's Grace hath his Viſitation once in his time, and he Viſiteth thoſe of the Province; to the end they may be ſubordinate, and in all their Cauſes and Sentences they Appeal to him as Superiour.

Here the Arch-biſhop interpoſed, ſaying, I may Viſit as oft as I will.

Mr. Gardiner went on. For the Government of the Univerſity there is a Chancellor, Vice-chancellor, Proctors, &c. They may proceed by way of Excommunication; they may impriſon and baniſh, which is more Power than appertains to any Metropolitical Viſitation. Only one Biſhop of Ely did Excommunicate one of this Univerſity; but the Biſhop was afterwards Excomunicated; and the Cauſe being heard before Cardinal Wolſey, he was made to ſubmit himſelf. Further than this we find no Preſident, that either the Ordinary of the Dioceſs, Arch-deacon, &c. did ever meddle.

5 R. 2. In the Petition to the Parliament. We are ſtil'd an Univerſity founded by Your Majeſties Progenitors: wherefore the Power of Viſitation doth of right belong to Your Majeſty, and this is an Exemption from any ordinary Juriſdiction. For other Exemptions, We have Bulls from the Pope, and Charters: about the beginning of King Richard the 2d's Time moſt of the Charters were burn'd by an Inſurrection in the Town; but many of them were Confirmed to the Time of H. 6. upon a Suit made to the Pope, to give ſome Confirmation to their Priviledges, in regard their Charters were burn'd. Whereupon the Pope granted a Commiſſion, and Witneſſes were examined, which Examination was a means to produce Two ancient Bulls, exempting them from Metropolitical Viſitation; the one bearing date Anno 624. the other 699.

The Arch-biſhop ſaid, Theſe Exceptions were not to be found in any Priories, or Nunneries at the firſt Foundation; but as ſoon as they got any Money, they ſent preſently to Rome to get an Exemption; and by that means the Biſhops loſt their Reputation, and Juriſdiction, even the Council of Trent and Spaniſh Biſhops have all plaid their part herein. And this is the Complaint of whole Chriſtendom againſt the Council of Trent; of which, next to Purgatory, the Pope of Rome hath made his great Advantage. Unto this the King ſaid, I dare ſay the Pope doth as much to beat down Biſhops, as any Puritan doth in England.

In the Cloſe the Arch-biſhop proceeded thus.

There are Three Chappels in Cambridge not Conſecrated. I demanded why they were not? Dr. Chadderton made anſwer, He hoped they were Conſecrated by Faith and good Conſcience. They come into the Chappel without Surplices, and other dangers are growing, and the Univerſity will be paſt remedy before any Complaint be made.

The Earl of Holland anſwered, All this may be Reformed in the way that we deſire. If you will Viſit, you may do it by Commiſſion; the King can grant it. The Biſhop replied, No; I deſire to have my own Power.

Upon the Hearing of the whole Cauſe, it was declared by the King, with the Advice of the Privy-Council, That it was granted on all Hands, that the King had an undoubted Right to Viſit the Univerſities; and that the Arch-biſhop, in the Right of his Metropolitical Church in Canterbury, had Power to Viſit the whole Province, in which the Univerſities were ſituated, and were under the ſame Power, unleſs they could ſhew Priviledge and Exemption.

That the Exceptions then alledged were not ſuch as could give ſatisfaction. That they could be Exempted by no Papal Bull; and that they were Exempted by none of their Charters. That the long omiſſion of the Arch-biſhops to Viſit, could be no preſcription to bar the Right of the Metropolitical See. That it appear'd, that both Univerſities had been Viſited by Three Arch-biſhops, his Predeceſſors Jure Metropolitico, and not by a Legative Power. That this coming in queſtion, upon the reſiſtance of the Univerſity of Oxford, it was, upon full Hearing of both Parties, adjudg'd for the Arch-biſhop by King Richard the 2*d*, and afterward, upon the like Hearing and Re-examination by King Henry the 4*th*, and both of their Judgments eſtabliſhed by Act of Parliament 13 Hen. 4. And the Arch-biſhop produced before His Majeſty the Original Renunciation of all Priviledges from any Pope, made by the Univerſity of Cambridge under the Hands of the Heads of Houſes.

So the King and Council adjudg'd the Right of Viſiting Univerſities, and Chancellors Scholars, and all Perſons enjoying the Priviledges thereof, to belong to the Arch-biſhop, and Metropolitical Church of Canterbury by themſelves or their Commiſſaries.

Whereupon the Arch-biſhop made this motion to the King: Firſt, for himſelf, that His Majeſty would be Graciouſly pleaſed, that he might have the Sentence drawn up by the Advice of His Majeſties Learned Councel, and put under the Broad Seal, to ſettle all differences that hereafter might ariſe. Then on behalf of both the Univerſities, that they ſhould remain free and exempt from the Viſitation, and Juriſdiction of the Biſhop of the Dioceſs, or Arch-deacon.

Alſo, ſeeing it was declar'd to be his Right to Viſit Metropolitically, and it was not limited by Law how often; therefore, notwithſtanding the laſt Cuſtom of Viſitation ſemel in vita tantum, that he might Viſit the Univerſities by himſelf, or his Commiſſary, as often as any great emergent cauſe ſhould move him: provided that neither he, nor any of his Succeſſors, ſhould, after the firſt Viſitation, Viſit upon ſuch emergent Cauſes, unleſs it be firſt made known to His Majeſty and His Succeſſors. All which was granted by the King, and ſo ſetled.

Laſtly, Whereas it was alledged, that the Chancellors of either Univerſity were, and are like to be Perſons of great Honour and Eminencie; and therefore it might be inconvenient, that they ſhould be call'd to ſuch Viſitation: It was declar'd by His Majeſty, that in the courſe of Law the Chancellor would be allowed to appear by his Proxie.

Serjeant Thin deſired leave of His Majeſty to ſpeak a few words for the Univerſity of Oxford, which was to the effect following, he being the Mouth of the reſt of the Councel.

Serjeant Thin. THat it was an ancient Univerſity, and had as ancient Priviledges, and, by Bulls from the Pope, was ever exempt from the Viſitation of any Arch-biſhop as in his Metropolitical Right; for as none can Found an Univerſity but Your Majeſty, and Your Progenitors, ſo none have Power but Your Majeſty to Viſit there. But that which concerneth us is, that it was a Foundation long before the Conqueſt; from the time of the very Foundation of this Univerſity unto this day, we conceive there was never any Viſitation made by any Arch-biſhop, as being within his Province.

King. Never any, (ſaith the King:) As the Univerſity is ancient, ſo likewiſe Our Cuſtom is as ancient, which for many Hundred Years we may preſcribe (the King anſwered) but a bare Preſcription in this Caſe will not prevail.

Thin. We have no Records ſo old, yet this we have, divers Recitals in E. 3d's time, which ſheweth, that they had ſome original Grant of Exemption. Pope Boniface 8. did grant to the Univerſity of Oxford a particular Exemption from all Archiepiſcopal Juriſdiction; but I know well that there will be an Objection made, that the Pope did grant a Juriſdiction there. This Difference came before the King, and the King then did declare, That the Viſitation did belong to the Arch-biſhop of Right.

King. What is that? Did the King declare that it did of right belong to the Arch-biſhop to Viſit there? that's very hard for you to anſwer.

Thin. I object thus againſt my ſelf (to ſhorten the Caſe) for if I do not, they will.) This was in King Rich. 2d's time. The occaſion was upon the Queſtion touching Wicliffe his Caſe grounded upon a miſtaking of the Law. Before that time there was never ſo much as a Challenge to Viſit this Univerſity Metropolitically.

King. I will not grant that (Mr. Serjeant) that my Predeceſſor did miſtake the Law, perhaps he was miſ-informed of the Law.

Thin. Pardon me for the Phraſe; the King was miſ-informed as we conceive of the ancient uſage and manner there.

King. You muſt ſuppoſe the King did know it.

Thin. The Arch-biſhop was then a Potent Man in thoſe days.

King. My Lord Arch-biſhop doth not intend to Viſit the Statutes of the Univerſity, nor of any particular Colledge.

Arch-biſhop. I do intend to Viſit Metropolitically. I am to Viſit, as I conceive, the Body of the Univerſity, and every Scholar that is in it, for his obedience to the Doctrine and Diſcipline of the Church of England; and this is the extent I intend, and not to meddle with the Statutes of Colledges or Univerſity, or particular Viſitors of any Colledge.

King. I do underſtand why you do not meddle with that, becauſe it is my foundation.

Arch-biſhop. I do ſuppoſe they do tell you of that which they will not make appear to be your foundation.

Thin. There was never ſince the firſt foundation of this Univerſity any Viſitation made by any Arch-biſhop; ſeveral have been made by the Kings themſelves, but never by the Arch-biſhop.

King. As I remember you did confeſs he did Viſit once.

Thin. No, only an attempt to Viſit was made by Arch-biſhop Arrundel, who was reſiſted by the Univerſity I will give up the Cauſe if he can ever find any Appeal of any Cauſe to the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury from that Univerſity. I find it in Fitz. N. Bre. that the Chancellor of Oxford may certifie an Excommunication. From whom had the Chancellor that Juriſdiction, but from the King? then thoſe Acts are not to be Viſited by any Power but by the King.

King. That is no good Inference, for every Biſhop hath Power to Viſit.

Thin. Since de facto the Arch-biſhop did never Viſit Oxford, but was ever Viſited by Your Majeſty, or by Commiſſion from Your Majeſty, and withal, their ancient Charters they have loſt, which might (if they had them) ſhew their Priviledge; and ſince there is ſo memorable a Preſcription in this Caſe for ſo many Hundred Years, we humbly deſire (with Your Majeſties Favour) to be ſtill Viſited by Your Majeſty.

Arch-biſhop. Theſe Exemptions were not to be found in any Nunneries or Priories at the firſt Foundation; but as ſoon as ever they got any Money, they preſently ſent to Rome to get an Exemption, and then by that means the Biſhops loſt their Reputations, and ſo brought down the Juriſdiction of the Biſhops, even at the Councel of Trent; and Spaniſh Biſhops have all plaid their parts herein. And this is the Complaint of whole Chriſtendome againſt the Councel of Trent, of which, next to Purgatory, the Pope of Rome hath made his greateſt advantage.

An. 1636. King. I dare ſay the Pope doth as much to beat down Biſhops as any Puritane I have in England doth.

Arch-Biſhop. King H. 8. by Statute thruſt out all, and whatſoever power the Pope had given in England by Bull, &c. all is gone at one blow by that Statute? Now I will ſhow you a Bond from the Univerſity of 1000 l. that if they oppoſe my Juriſdiction then to be forfeit, I ſpeak it upon my Reputation and Duty to Your Majeſty. Ann. 1506. Chriſts Colledge was ſubject to the Biſhops Viſitation: I am able to ſhow the very original Deed in H. 8's time, where the Univerſity of Cambridge have ſubmitted themſelves to the Arch-Biſhop, and here is the Original-Deed (which was read and ſhowed to His Majeſty) being a ſubmiſſion of the Univerſity to the Arch-Biſhop, and to diſclaim any right by Bull or the like. If I ſhould have put them to have ſubmitted upon this evidence, they would have ſaid either for fear, or one reſpect or other, they had ſubmitted to your Arch-Biſhop without any hearing. Therefore not to put this upon either Univerſity, I got Your Majeſty to hear it, if you have any thing to ſhow for it, God forbid I ſhould deſire it if you have better evidence. If not, then I hope His Majeſty will give me leave to carry it.

King. Read the date of the Deed my Lord ſtands ſo upon (which being read was dated 27 H. 8.

Arch-Biſhop. So your Majeſty may ſee before the Common-Law did take that away, they did ſubmit themſelves a year before. I will make it appear that the Arch-Biſhop did viſit Cambridge as in Metropolitical right three whole years together, and that it is ſo expreſſed in the Act.

King. They ſay that the Biſhop was then a powerful man, and the times were troubleſome.

Biſhop. They tell you indeed 20 R. 2. was a troubleſome time, but of 12 H. 6. they do not tell you what a troubleſome time that was.

King. But was Cambridge viſited three whole years.

Recorder. It is true, we did continue it for three whole years. I did in the opening of it mention as much, that he did viſit Ann. 1401. and did continue it till 1404, and that in the ſtory of that time, he did it by a Metropolitical right (as it is ſo mentioned) but how dangerous thoſe times were, we have opened, and ſince that time never any ſuch offer was made.

Kings Attorney-General, Sir John Banks, May it pleaſe your Majeſty, their main objections conſiſts of Bulls. Now concerning any Bull or Exemption from the Pope, they are of no force, and though thy here plead it verbally, yet they will not do it upon Record; for that Statute which bringeth them in a power, that Statute doth make all void: It is true, there is a ſaving of ſome that are confirmed under the Great-Seal, but they make no ſhew of them, ſo as clearly they are out of the exception of that Act of Parliament of 28 H. 8. Then they object, that the Univerſity is of the foundation of the King, and there the Biſhop hath no Metropolitical Viſitation. 1 E. 6. The Deanry of VVells was diſolved, upon that a new Foundation, and E. 6. the Founder, and to him was the Donation of the Deanry; yet in that caſe it is expreſly adjudged, that the Arch-Biſhop in his Metropolitical Viſitation may viſit the Deanry: It is true, he may not viſit their Lands and local Statutes. It was further objected, there was no Viſitation within theſe 200 years, and therefore a Preſcription for it. But as to that no Civilian will allow, that any Preſcription lieth againſt a Metropolical Viſitation. I have looked upon the Statute, and I do find no particular exemption from any Juriſdiction that is Metropolitical. They ſay further, that the Viſitation made by Peckham, was by vertue of the Legantine Power, and the other Viſitations are de jure Metropolitico.

King. They ſay that Peckham did viſit as Legatus Natus.

Attorney. That is plain to be diſtinguiſhed by the Records.

Arch-Biſhop. In Cardinal Pools Caſe, he doth viſit by Legantine power (if he will uſe the ſtile of greater dignity than Arch-Biſhop) Shall therefore that which he doth by the name of dignity loſe his Power as Arch-Biſhop?

Attorney-General. Divers Lord Treaſurers, ſome have been Biſhops of Oxford ſome of Lincoln, ſhall they loſe their Power as Arch-Biſhops? The Biſhoprick of London hath not been viſited theſe 200 years till now. )

Dr. Duck. Legatus Natus hath only power to grant a Viſitation) but to Viſit, I do think they can never find that he ever had Power but Metropolitically.

King. The Queſtion is whether Legatus Natus can viſit as Legatee, and not as Arch-Biſhop.

Recorder. I think he cannot; but only by vertue of his Legantine Power he might viſit.

Biſhop. Legatus Natus, and Legatus a Latere. The one Legate can viſit, the other Legatecannot.

Recorder. We appeal to this Biſhop Arrundel as Legatus Natus.

Arch-Biſhop. I thank you for that Evidence, Cambridge did not oppoſe Arrundel, but Oxford did it. What if he were baniſhed the Realm, he was baniſhed for bringing in a Bull. In E. 1, & E. 3 time, it was common to ſend forth Proclamations againſt any that brought Bulls from the Pope.

Recorder. When this Queſtion was between Oxford and Arrundel, there was an Order in Chancery for ſearch for Bulls: and declared that this was againſt the Crown, and like to be the deſtruction of the Univerſity.

Arth-Biſhop. What was done then in R. 2's. time, which they ſay was ſo troubleſom a time. Yet H. 4. did declare the very ſame judgement his Predeceſſor had done, and confirmed it by Act of Parliament, that it doth belong unto the See of Canterbury, as of right to viſit the Univerſities, upon penalty of 1000 l. upon every time that he ſhould diſobey, and a forſeiture of all their Priviledges, if they did diſobey it. And I ſhewed a Deed under the Great-Seal, which the Councel for the Univerſity did confeſs.

King. What can you ſay againſt this?

Recorder. I ſhall ſubmitt the Cauſe unto Your Majeſties Judgement, for that which hath been urged of King H. 4. It is true, and they do declare that de jure, he ought to viſit; it is true, it is ſo declared by Parliament, but this is only for Oxford and not for Cambridge. Cambridge is not ſo much as mentioned: My Anſwer is but this, It doth appear in the very Record it ſelf, that the Univerſity of

of Oxford had got an exorbitant Bull from the Pope, to exclude all manner of People that countenanced Hereticks.

King. No that cannot be.

Recorder. The Record it ſelf ſaith it was gotten to countenance Hereticks, and other Malefactors; they did oppoſe the Archbiſhop manu forti. The State taking offence at this, thereupon there was a ſubmiſion to the Judgement of R. 2. And thereupon he did declare, and H. 4 grounded his Judgement upon that the Biſhop of right ſhould viſit, and H. 4. doth diſanull the Bull as being againſt Law.

Lord Privy-Seal. There comes a Grant of later Kings, and takes notice of theſe Priviledges and Exemptions, and confirms and ratifies all ſuch Priviledges as they do claim by any Charter or colour of any Bull.

Recorder. He doth confirm all Liberties or Grants. If my Lords Grace may viſit the Univerſity, then he may viſit the Chancellor; and of late time they have been perſons of great Honour attending upon your Majeſty, and ſo may be called away from your Majeſty upon a Viſitation to attend there.

Arch-Biſhop. He may appear by Subſtitute.

Holland. If your Grace will viſit, you may do it by Commiſſion; the King can grant it.

Biſhop. No, I deſire to have my own Power.

And ſo the King adjudged it for the Arch-Biſhop againſt himſelf; and permitted the Kings Attorney-General to plead for the Arch-Biſhop againſt the King.

Some few paſſages more in way of Dialogue there were, but this is all taken in Characters at that time; but ſee for the Order of the King, and the Lords of the Council, upon this Hearing at large in the Appendix.

July 8. Star-Chamber Sir Pierce Croſby to Anſwer Interogatories.

A Warant was on the 8*th* of July 1636. directed to Mathew Francis Eſquire, one of His Majeſties Serjeants at Arms, reciting, whereas Sir Pierce Crosby Knight and Baronet, ſtanding charged with divers Crimes, by an Information at the ſuit of His Majeſty's Attorney-General in the Court of Star-Chamber, for ſcandalizing the Lord Deputy of Ireland, doth withdraw himſelf from the uſual place of his abode, ſo as the courſe of Juſtice by His Majeſties Writs and Proces cannot proceed againſt him; theſe are in His Majeſties Name to Will and Command you, to make your preſent repair unto any place priviledged or not priviledged, where you ſhall underſtand of the ſaid Sir Pierce Crosby his Being or Reſidence, and by vertue hereof to apprehend him, and to deliver him over to the Cuſtody of one of the Meſſengers of His Majeſties Chamber, to remain with him in ſafe Cuſtody, untill he ſhall have anſwered the ſaid Information and Interogatories againſt him; and in caſe of need theſe are in His Majeſties Name, to Will and Command all His Majeſties Officers, whom it may concern, to be aiding and aſſiſting unto you herein, that thereof they may not fail, as they will anſwer the contrary at the Star-Chamber.

For a Commiſſion about Depopulation.

Likewiſe a Warrant was on the 9th of this month of July directed to the Clerk of the Crown or his Deputy in His Majeſties Name, His Majeſties eſpecial ſervice to prepare ſeveral Commiſſions according to the form delivered unto him, to inquire touching Depopulations and converſions of Lands to Paſture ſince the tenth year of Queen Elizabeth in the Counties of Oxford, Canbridge, Warwick and Nottingham, directed to Edward Savage and Edmond Windham, two of the Gentlemen of His Majeſties Privy-Chamber, and to Gilbert Boon of Lincolns-Inn Eſquire, or any two of them.

By vertue of which Commiſſion, and the terror of the Fine impoſed in the Star-Chamber, on Sir Anthony Roper for committing Depopulations, there was brought into the Exchequer 30000 l. and upwards ——— The like Commiſſions were granted into other Counties.

July 9. Letters Patents for the ſurveying and ſetling a conſtant Reel.

‘Whereas Complaints have been heretofore made, as well ‘unto His Majeſty King James in his life-time, and unto ‘His now Majeſty ſince His acceſs to the Crown, and alſo to His ‘Privy-Council, and the Juſtices of Aſſizes in their Circuits, and ‘Juſtices of the Peace in ſundry Counties at their Seſſions, of the ‘great deceits frequently uſed among Weavers, Combers, Spinſters ‘and other workers and makers of Cloth and Yarn, by the daily falſifying their Yard, as well in the length of the Reel-Staff, as in the ‘number of Threads:

‘For Remedy and Reformation whereof, and for ſetling a conſtant ‘courſe for the ſaid Reel, and increaſe of the Poors Wages; It ‘hath been thought fit, that the courſe of keeping the Staff-Reel ‘may proceed and go on for the general good of the People; and ‘that the Spinſters ſhall have for their Spinning and Reeling a ‘peny increaſe, and Labourers imployed about the Trade of Cloathing ‘and Yarn-making, ſhall have the increaſe of Wages. And for the ‘eſtabliſhing of the ſame, the King hath by Letters Patents, bearing date the 20*th* of January laſt paſt, ordained and appointed ‘there be a conſtant Reel provided and kept by all and every Clothier, Weaver, Comber, Spinſter, and other Workers and Makers ‘of Cloth and Yarn, either Woollen or Linnen, and the Reel-ſtaff ‘to be one yard about the ſingle Reel, and two yards about the ‘double Reel, every Knot containing fourſcore Threads.

Jan. 20.

July 26. The King prohibits the keeping of Bartholomew-Fair and our Lady Fair in Southward.

‘His Majeſty the better to prevent the danger and increaſe of ‘the preſent Infection, hath given ſeveral directions to the ‘Lord Major of London and Juſtices of Peace, to prevent concourſe ‘of People; yet finding the Plague is diſperſed in and about ‘the City of London and Southwark, which if the Fairs of Bartholomew and Our Lady in Southwark ſhould be held, might in all ‘likelihood increaſe the Sickneſs; His Majeſty therefore hath ‘thought good, to require all His Subjects to forbear to reſort this ‘year to thoſe Fairs. And doth enjoyn the Lords and others intereſted in the ſame, that they do not hold the now next Bartholomew Fair.

An. 1636.

Auguſt 8. 1636.

The Lords of the Privy-Council writ this enſuing Letter to the Lord Major and Aldermen of the City of London.

WE have received by ſome of you the Aldermen a denial in the name of the City to Our late Letter, for the ſetting forth of Shipping for the preſent and neceſſary defence of the Kingdom, and the excuſes which are made ſince, upon the like occaſions; VVe cannot impute it truly to any thing but want of Duty. VVe do therefore in His Majeſties Name, and by His commandment, require you to ſee the directions of Our ſaid Letter performed upon your allegiance, and as you will anſwer the contrary at your perils. And ſo, &c.

Auguſt 11. AFterwards there was preſented to the Board a Petition from the Major and Commonalty of London, by Mr. Recorder, Sir VVilliam Cockin, and divers Aldermen and Commoners, deſiring an abatement of the Twenty Ships rated upon the City, unto Ten Ships and Two Pinnaces, alleadging want of ability, notwithſtanding the abſolute Declaration formerly given by the Board.

That the Caſe at this time might no farther be replyed unto, Mr. Secretary Cooke, by Order of the Board, made anſwer to the effect following.

That the former Commandment given unto them, firſt, was neceſſary, becauſe the Board knoweth that the preſervation of the State did require it. Secondly, that the Charge required for the performance of the ſaid Commandment was not immoderate for the whole City, which exceeded not the proportion of many of their private Eſtates. That to this Commandment Petitions and Pleadings were not to be received, which tend to the danger and prejudice of the Common-wealth. That as the Commandment was given to all in general, and to every Particular of the City, ſo the State would require an account Both of the City in general, and of every particular of the performance of it; for which purpoſe they had formerly received direction. And that whereas they mention Preſidents, they ſhould know that the Preſidents of former times were obedience, and not direction. And that there were alſo Preſidents of the puniſhment of thoſe that diſobey'd His Majeſties Commandments ſignified by the Board, in the caſe of the preſervation of the State, which they hope there ſhould be no occaſion to let them more particularly underſtand.

Ferdinando, Emperor of Germany, took a Reſolution to ſettle the Empire in Peace after ſo bloody a War;and called a Dyet to meet at Ratisbone the midſt of September, where the Emperors Son, already King of Bohemia, was propoſed to be elected King of the Romans.

At which time the Earl of Arundel, Earl Marſhal of England, was ſent Ambaſſador to this new Emperor, to whom he preſented the conditions of the Prince-Elector-Palatine his great ſufferings; and the Ambaſſador endeavoured to prevail with the Emperor for his Reſtoration, which he hoped his now Imperial Majeſty would be diſpoſed unto: but all the Anſwer he could obtain of the Emperor was, that in time no doubt ſome conſideration might be had of him for enjoying the lower Palatinate; but for the other it much concerned the Duke of Bavaria, who was in poſſeſſion thereof: and that Duke declared himſelf, that what he had got with ſo much hazard of his Perſon, and expence of Treaſure won by the Sword, he would now maintain with the ſame Power, he being in Poſſeſſion. But the Ambaſſador being highly diſſatisfied with the Emperors ſlight Anſwer, and indeed affront, retired for England without taking leave of the Emperor.

2. Octob. 1636. The King by Proclamation further Adjourneth Michaelmas-Term.

‘WHereas the Kings Majeſty, out of His Princely care to the ‘Health and Safety of His Subjects, and to prevent the ‘danger that might ariſe to them by their reſort to London or Weſtminſter about the occaſion of the Term, in times of Infection of ‘the Plague there; did therefore, by His Proclamation dated the ‘6th of September laſt, ſignifie His Pleaſure, That part of Michaelmas-Term next ſhould be Adjourned, according to thoſe Returns ‘mentioned in that Proclamation, and then did think fit to Adjourn ‘the ſame, as in the Proclamation is expreſſed.

See this at large in the Appendix.

The Reader is deſired to pardon any miſtake of the Sums of the Welch Counties; for the Copy given to the Printer was ſo obſcurely writ, that perhaps ſome miſtake is therein committed.

18. Octob. 1636. The King commands a general Faſt to be weekly obſerved throughout the Realm of England by reaſon of the Peſtilence.

‘THe heavy Judgment of God in his preſent Viſitation in the Cities of London and Weſtminſter, and divers other parts of the Kingdom at this time with the Peſtilence, ought to move Us to acknowledge the immediate Hand of God therein, for the ſins of this Land, thereby to afflict and correct his People.’

‘And His Majeſty having taken into His Religious Care, that in common Calamities the ſpecial means to remove evil is by ſerious humiliation to implore the Grace and Favour of that Supreme offended Majeſty who can only heal it, hath thought fit to command a general and publick Faſt be held through the whole Realm, in ſuch manner as in His Proclamation is directed.

Inſtructions from His Sacred Majeſty to the Arch-biſhops and Biſhops of Scotland.

Charles Rex,

‘THat you advert, that the Proclamation for authorizing the Service-Book, derogate nothing from Our Royal Prerogative.

‘That in the Kalendar you keep ſuch Catholick Saints as are in the Engliſh; that you peſter it not with too many, but ſuch as you inſert of the peculiar Saints of that Our Kingdom, that they be of the moſt approved; and here to have regard to thoſe of the Blood-Royal, and ſuch Holy Biſhops in every See moſt renowned; but in no caſe omit St. George and Patrick.

‘That in your Book of Orders, in giving Orders to Presbyters, you keep the words of the Engliſh Book without change, Receive the Holy-Ghoſt, &c.

‘That you inſert amongſt the Leſſons ordinarily to be read in the Service, out of the Book of Wiſdome the 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6. Chapters, and out of the Book of Eccleſiaſticus the 1, 2, 5, 8, 35, and 49. Chapters.

‘That every Biſhop within his own Family twice a day cauſe the Service to be done; and that all Arch-biſhops and Biſhops make all Univerſities and Colledges within their Dioceſſes to uſe daily twice a-day the Service.

Tranſporting of Fullers-Earth.

THis day was brought unto this Bar, John Ray of London Merchant, againſt whom Sir John Banks Knight, His Majeſties Attorney-General did inform Ore tenus on his Highneſs behalf, that the ſaid Ray had committed ſeveral great offences worthy the Cenſure of this Court, which would appear by ſeveral examinations taken of him, whereunto his Name was ſubſcribed, which His Majeſtie's ſaid Attorney prayed might be ſhewed unto him the ſaid Ray, and read in the Court; and that thereupon the Court would impoſe ſuch a Cenſure on him for his ſaid Offences, as their Lordſhips in their great wiſdoms ſhould hold fit. Whereupon the ſaid Delinquents, ſeveral examinations were ſhewed, being by him acknowledged, they were openly read in the Court, and were as followeth: The Examinant having ſhewed unto him a Letter to my loving Friend Mr. Henry Baldroe Merchant at Mr. James Deckwers houſe in Rotterdam, beginning thus; Quinborow the 4*th* 1630. Mr. Baldroe according to your Letters, &c. and ending thus, and ſo I reſt your loving Friend, and ſubſcribed John Ray. He ſaith that it is his hand-writing; being demanded what the Commoditie was whereof in the Letter is mentioned; he ſaith the Commodities were Fullers-Earth, for he ſaith that near about that time, he ſent from Rocheſter into Holland threeſcore and ſixteen loads of Fullers-Earth to Henry Baldroe a Norfolk-man, that reſides at Rotterdam. He ſayeth alſo that the Fullers-Earth was bought by a man of Leyden in Holland who paid the Examinant for the Fullers-Earth after the rate for four Gilders; he ſaith that he bought the Fullers-Earth of one Richard Rods of Maidſtone at the rate of ſix Shillings the load, beſides twelve-pence to Litherman.

This Fullers-Earth was loaden in the Ship called the Hope for Grace, whereof John Coldee was Maſter from Rocheſter. Being demanded whether thoſe Goods were entred in the Cuſtom-Houſe, he ſaith that they were entred for the Port of Lynn, as he remembreth, and a Port-coquet was made accordingly. Being demanded who were bound for the diſcharge at Lynn, and for bringing a Certificate, Certificate; ſaith that himſelf and the Maſter were bound, but what Certificate was procured he knows not, nor from whence. And there was one Cuſtom paid for the Fullers-Earth, but aſſured he is, that it was landed in Holland. He ſaith that he ſhipped this Earth within ſeven or eight days, before the birth of Prince Charles, His Majeſtie's Son; and he remembreth it better, for that while he was at Rocheſter, Bonefires in token of joy of his Birth were made; and it was ſhortly after His Majeſties Proclamation, inhibiting tranſportation of Wooll and Fullers-Earth. But he ſaith he cannot tell whether he had notice of the Proclamation or not? But he well knew that he intended to take benefit of His Majeſties gracious Pardon granted forth about that time. He alſo ſaith that ſince that time he hath not ſhipped any Fullers-Earth, but about ſix years paſt he ſhipped over ſome other Fullers-Earth, all which matters being contained in his firſt examination, he confeſſeth in his further examination taken by His Majeſties now Attorney-General as true: and alſo ſaith, that Robert Coſens of Horſely-down about a year ſince tranſported four or five Barques loading of Fullers-Earth to Skeedam in Holland, and there ſold it; and that a Plumber in Tower-ſtreet, and a Plumber in Rocheſter, whoſe names he knows not, were ſecret at the Cuſtom-Houſe, that the ſaid Fullers-Earth ſhould not be tranſported. Upon grave and deliberate conſideration whereof, the Delinquent being now at the Bar, who was demanded by their Lordſhips what Anſwer he could make thereunto for his defence or extenuation of his Offences; the whole Court was of opinion, and did declare, that the ſaid Delinquent John Ray had committed (as appears by his own examination) two ſeveral offences both of great conſequence and of a high nature, in tranſporting of Fullers-Earth out of this Kingdom, contrary to His Majeſties Proclamation, whereby he did what in him lay to rob the Kingdom of the Trade and Manufacture of making Cloth, which is the ſupport and livelihood of a very great number of the Poor ſort of People of this Realm, and deceiving His Majeſty of the Cuſtoms by colour of a Port-Coquot, which he gained to colour his deceit, and to carry away the ſaid Fullers-Earth with ſecurity; both which Offences as they are of a high nature, ſo in their Lordſhips Opinions they deſerved a very ſharp, ſevere and exemplary puniſhment: and therefore the whole Court, and all the Honourable Preſence there ſitting, have with an unanimous conſent, thought fit, ordered, adjudged and decreed that the ſaid John Ray, ſhall for his Offences aforeſaid, ſtand and be committed to the Priſon of the Fleet, there to remain during His Majeſties pleaſure; and that if His Majeſty ſhall at any time hereafter be graciouſly pleaſed to enlarge the ſaid Defendant, it is then Ordered and Decreed, that before ſuch his enlargement, he ſhall become bound with good Sureties for his good behaviour hereafter: and it is withal Ordered and Decreed, that the ſaid John Ray ſhall pay a Fine of 2000 l, to His Majeſty's uſe, and ſhall alſo be ſet in the Pillory, with a Paper on his Head, declaring the nature of his Offences, to the end others may by his Example be deterred from daring to commit the like Offences hereafter.

The Sentence of the Court.

Defendants ſentenced in Star-Chamber for Tranſporting of Gold.

THis day came to be heard the Matter of Complaint exhibited into this Court by Sir John Bankes Knight, His Majeſties Attorney-General, Plaintiff againſt Henry Fluter, Henry Sweeting, Peter Hern, John Terry, Arnold Brames, Iſaack Gold, Randal Crew, Francis Brogden, Luke Lee, Timothy Eman, John Perryn and Edward Vaghan, for tranſporting of Gold and Silver out of this Kingdom into Foreign parts, and for culling out the weightieſt Mony, and for melting down His Majeſties Coyn into Bullion, and giving above the prices of His Majeſties Mint for Gold and Silver (as by the ſaid Information more at large, it doth and may appear.) In the Opening and Proſecution of which Cauſe, His Majeſties ſaid Attorney informed the Court, that in purſuance of their Lordſhips Order at Council-Board, he did before Iſſue joyned in this Cauſe, enter a Rule, that he would not at this time proceed in the Examination of any Witneſſes, touching the buying of Gold and Silver above the price appointed to be given at His Majeſties Mint, but reſerve that part of the Cauſe to be Examined, Heard and Conſidered of hereafter, if their Lordſhips ſhould think fit. Thereunto their Lordſhips again conſented, holding it moſt meet ſo to be done. And upon full and deliberate hearing of the other matters complained of againſt all the before-named Defendants, except Francis Brogden, whom His Majeſties ſaid Attorney did not now proceed againſt by direction of this Court, in reſpect he was gone beyond the Seas before his Cauſe was ſet down to be heard, and was not yet returned, as was verified by Oath. It appeared that notwithſtanding His Majeſty out of His Princely Care for the good of His Subjects, foreſeeing the dangerous conſequences, which would enſue the tranſportation of Gold and Silver out of this Kingdom, did by His Proclamation and Articles Viceſſimo quinto Maij tertio Caroli, Prohibit and Command, that no Perſon ſhould then after without His Majeſties Licenſe, Tranſport, Carry and Convey out of this Realm any Gold or Silver, either in Coin, Plate, Veſſels, Jewels, Gold-Smiths-work, Bullion or other Maſs, or otherwiſe whatſoever. And that no Perſon ſhould Aid, Aſſiſt, Counſel, or any ways Partake, or Conſent with any other Perſon, purpoſing or attempting to Tranſport, Carry or Convey out of this Realm any Gold or Silver, in any Species or Kind as aforeſaid, either by gathering or getting together ſuch Gold or Silver, or by packing up the ſame fit for Tranſportation, or Conveying the ſame to or towards any Port, Haven, or other place of Exportation, or by any other way or colour. And that no Gold-Smith, Finer, or Parter, or other Perſon whatſoever, of what Miſtery, Trade, or quality ſoever, ſhould melt, or cauſe to be molten any Gold or Silver Coins, which were then, or hereafter ſhould be the Currant Monies of any His Majeſties Realms or Dominions, either to make Plate, Veſſel, or for any other Manufacture or Uſe, or ſhould cull or ſort from the reſt any the weightier Monies, to the intent to convey the ſame out of this Realm, or to otherwiſe alter it from Coin, the ſame being alſo contrary to divers Laws and other Proclamations: yet the ſaid Defendant Henry Sweeting, between the month of April 1629. and the month of June undecimo Caroli, did ſend the ſum of fifteen hundred pounds to Dover by a Foot-Poſt, and willed him to ſend the ſame over to Callis, to one John Lovell, a Merchant there; which he did according to the ſaid Sweeting his directions. And the ſaid Defendant Peter Hern, within the ſpace of two or three years laſt paſt, ſent by the ſaid Foot-Poſt to Dover about 3000 l. to one Nathaniel Pringall, who as himſelf confeſſed, ſent the ſame over to Callis in France; and the ſaid Hern, (as himſelf alſo confeſſed to one of the Witneſſes (whoſe Teſtimony was now read at another time) ſent 500 l. to Callis to one Iſaac Lamews. And the ſaid Defendant John Terry ſent up one Rainger a Foot-Poſt 200 l. to one John Wallopp of Dover, who at that time ſhewed the ſaid Rainger a Letter from the ſaid Terry, to him the ſaid Wallopp, to ſend the ſaid two hundred pounds to one Peter Pool at Callis, which the ſaid Wallopp did, and accordingly as he afterwards told the ſaid Rainger and the ſaid Terry about three or four years ſince, ſent one hundred and fifteen pound more to the ſaid Wallopp to Dover, who ſent the ſame to Callis to the ſaid Peter Pool, as he was directed. And the ſaid Arnold Brames (as himſelf confeſſeth) hath within ſeven years laſt paſt ſent divers quantities of Foreign Coin and Bullion into France, Flanders, and other Foreign Parts to coyn in Baggs, and the Bullion which came from Spain. It likewiſe plainly appeared to this Honourable Court, the Defendant Timothy Eman's conſtant courſe, from the year of our Lord God 1621, until the year of 1631, was to receive Merchants mony, and then to imploy his Servants to Cull and Sort out by the Ballance, the heavieſt Shillings and Sixpences, and afterward ſold them by the Ounce, and thereby made three pound in the hundred profit, it being uſual to find 14, 15, 16 l. or more heavy in 100 l. and in the year 1628, 1629, 1630, 1631, the ſaid Defendant cauſed his Servants to cull 500000 l. a year, which did produce 7, or 8000 l. yearly heavy mony, which in part he melted down into Ingots, and ſo ſold them, and the greateſt part he ſold unmelted to the value of 20000 l. and the ſaid Defendant was alſo furniſhed by divers ſeveral perſons with heavy cull'd Engliſh-mony, to whom he gave ſometimes two Shillings and ſometimes three Shillings in a hundred pound to have the Culling thereof; and the ſaid Defendant Eman, from the year 1621, or 1622, to the year 1626, did melt down 5000 l. and from 1626 to the year 1631 he did melt down 15000 l. and had profit out of the ſaid mony ſo melted down amounting to above 1000 l. and the Defendant Henry Futter, did buy and gather together light Gold, and did furniſh one Violet with 1000 l. of light Gold, beyond the Allowance of great Rates, knowing he either bought it either to tranſport himſelf, or to furniſh Tranſporters therewithal. And the Defendant John Perryn (as himſelf confeſſeth) and is proved againſt him, bought certain quantities of heavy Engliſh Coyn, and melted the ſame into Bullion.

Upon grave and deliberate conſideration of all which matters, the Court did declare and adjudge the ſaid Defendants, Henry Sweeting, Peter Hern and John Terry guilty of Tranſportation of

An. 1636. Engliſh Gold, and the Defendant Arnold Brames of Tranſportation of Foreign Coin and Bullion, into ſuch ſeveral parts beyond the Seas, the Defendant Timothy Eman of Culling out and Melting down the heavy Coin of this Kingdom for his own particular End and private Gain, the Defendant Henry Futter of buying light Gold, and ſelling the ſame again, to furniſh Tranſporters, and the Defendant John Perryn of melting down His Majeſties heavy Coin. All which Offences their Lordſhips held to be of a very great and dangerous conſequence, and very prejudicial to the good and floriſhing eſtate of this Kingdom, and therefore to deſerve a ſharp and ſevere Cenſure. In reſpect whereof their Lordſhips, having well and gravely weighed the nature and quality of each particular mans Offence, have Ordered, Adjudged and Decreed, that the ſaid Defendants, Henry Futter, Henry Sweeting, Peter Hern, John Terry, Arnold Brames, Timothy Eman and John Perryn, ſhall all of them ſtand to be committed to the Priſon of the Fleet, and pay for their ſeveral Fines to His Majeſty's uſe as followeth; (viz.) Peter Hern, John Terry and Timothy Eman 2000 l. a piece, Arnold Brames 1000 l. Henry Futter, and Henry Sweeting 500 l. a peice, and John Perryn 100 l. And as touching the Defendant Iſaac Gould, Randal Crew, and Luke Lee, albeit it did appear that they being Eaſt-Country Merchants, had tranſported out of the Kingdom, and carried over in their Ships ſeveral ſmall ſums and quantities of Rix-Dollers, which the Court holds and declares to be an offence puniſhable in that Court, if it be done without His Majeſties Licenſe: Yet in reſpect it did not clearly appear that they had Tranſported any great quantities, and for that the neceſſity of the Trade requires the Exportation and carrying with them of ſome monies, to defray Cuſtoms and other neceſſary occaſions in their Voyages to Norway; the Court did forbear at this time to cenſure them, and did diſmiſs and diſcharge them of, and from any other attendance thereabouts hereafter. And for the Defendant Edward Vaughan it was Ordered he be diſmiſſed and diſcharged of, and from any further Attendance there-abouts hereafter.

Thomas Lord Coventry, Lord Keeper of the Great-Seal of England, his Speech or Charge, which he delivered by Command from the King, to all the Judges of England, being in the Court of Star-Chamber 14 die Februarii Anno Regni Regis Caroli xii Annoq; Domini 1636. Together with the Kings Letters, Caſes, and the Judges Opinions touching the Ship-mony.

My Lords,

I Have but one particular more, and that of great Importance, wherof by ſpecial Direction and Commandment from His Majeſty, I am to ſpeak unto you at this time.

All of you are the Witneſſes of His Majeſties Proceedings, though the Candour, and clearneſs of His own Heart exceedeth your Teſtimony, and your Teſtimony is not only fit to be declared in this place, but in all the places of the Realm. His Majeſty hath now the third time ſent forth Writs to require the aid of his Subjects, for the guard of the Dominion of the Seas, and ſafety of the Kingdom; this His Majeſty did upon great deliberation and advice, and upon Important and Weighty Reaſons. In the firſt year, when the Writs were directed to the Ports and the Maritime places, they received little or no oppoſition; but in the ſecond year, when they went generally thoughout the Kingdom (though by moſt well obeyed) have been refuſed by ſome, not only in ſome Inland ſhires, but in ſome of the Maritime places; and Actions have been brought againſt ſome that have been imployed about the Execution of thoſe Writs. I ſuppoſe no man will expect Arcana Regni, the private Reaſons of a Prince, ſhould either upon this, or other occaſions, be made more publick; but ſo many reaſons as were fit to be opened, were formerly declared by me in this place to you the Judges of this Realm.

The firſt was, That the whole Kingdom is concerned in point of ſafety: for admitting there were no other Council, or Attempt againſt us, but only to interrupt us in the Dominion of the Sea, our moſt ſecure and ſafe defence, better than either Caſtle or Forts, which if it be Commanded by others, it lays us open to much peril and danger.

Secondly, The whole Kingdom is concerned in point of Honour; for it is one of the moſt Antient and Honourable Rights of the Crown of England, even the Dominion of the Sea; and all Records do ſhow, how the Kings and People of England have ever been careful, that this Honour ſhould never periſh; and certainly the whole Kingdom is concerned in point of Trade, and Profit; for the Traffique doth not only inrich the Maritime places, but the Inland Towns; and if Trading fail, the Inland places will find it in the fall of the Prices of Wooll, Lead, and Staple Commodities: this, experience ſhoweth daily, when upon every ſtop of the Vent of Cloth, there cometh ſuch outcries by the Weaver, Fuller, Spinner, and Wooll-growers themſelves; and the Authority of the Laws ſheweth the ſame in the Book of Aſſize 43, which your Lordſhips know better than I. It appeareth that certain men went into the Country and caſt out a fame, that for that year no Wooll ſhould be tranſported beyond the Seas; preſently upon this the price of Wooll fell, and thoſe men were called into queſtion, and adjudged in a Fine for it. Now if a Rumor did ſo much abate the Trade in the heart of the Kingdom, what would the loſs of the Dominion of the Sea do, which expoſeth Us, and all our Trade to the mercy of our Neighbours, therefore ſithence the Realm, and the whole Realm is concerned in point of Honour, Safety and Profit, what Reaſon, but all ſhould contribute to the maintenance of it. This, or to this effect I did formerly declare to you (the Judges) by His Majeſties Commandment, and His Majeſty received ſatisfaction in that you made a full Declaration thereof in your Circuits; and this I may ſay for the moſt part, the Subjects have ſhewed themſelves moſt dutiful and obedient in this ſervice of His Majeſties, and this year the ſum impoſed on the County of York being 12000 l. is brought in already by the Sheriff, and ſo is

An. 1636 moſt part of Lancaſhire, and other Shires; but when His Majeſty heard of ſome refuſals, though he had cauſe to be ſenſible of it, yet was far from being tranſported with Paſſion, but thought good to reſort to the adviſe of you His Judges, who are ſworn to give him faithful and true Counſel, in that which appertaineth to the Law, and this His Majeſty for the direction of His own courſe, as for the ſatisfaction of His Subjects, required you to deliver your Opinions herein, to which you returned an Anſwer under your own hands; and becauſe the Commandment which you received from the King is expreſſed in a Princely Letter under his own Signature, I ſhall not take upon me to repeat it; you ſhall hear it read; which being delivered by my Lord Keeper, to one of the Clerks in Court, was read to this or the like effect.

Carolus Rex.

Truſty and well-beloved, We greet you well, taking into Our Princely Conſideration, that the Honour and Safety of this Our Realm of England, (the preſervation whereof is only entruſted in our Care) was, and is now more nearly concerned than in former times, as well by divers Counſels and attempt to take from us the Dominion of the Sea, of which we are the ſole Lords, and rightful Owners, the loſs whereof would be of great danger and Peril to this Kingdom, and other our Dominions; We for the avoiding of theſe and the like dangers, well weighing with Our ſelves, that where the good, and ſafety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger, there the Charge and Defence ought to be borne by all the Realm in General; did for prevention of ſo publick a Miſchief, reſolve with Our Selves to have a Royal Navy provided, that might be of force, and power, with Almighty Gods Bleſſing and Aſſiſtance, to protect and defend this our Realm, and Our Subjects therein, from all ſuch Perills, and Dangers; and for that purpoſe we iſſued forth Writs under Our Great-Seal of England, directed to all our Sheriffs, of all our ſeveral Counties of England and Wales, Commanding thereby all Our ſaid Subjects in every City, Town and Village, to provide ſuch a number of Ships well furniſhed, as might ſerve for this Our Royal Purpoſe, and which might be done with the greateſt equality that could be, in performance whereof, though generally throughout all the Counties of this Our Realm, We have found in Our Subjects great Chearfulneſs and Alacrity, which we graciouſly interpret as a Teſtimony as well of their dutiful Affections to Us and Our Service, as of the reſpect they have to the Publick, which well-becometh every good Subject. Nevertheleſs, finding that ſome few haply out of ignorance what the Laws and Cuſtoms of this Our Realm are, or out of a deſire to be eaſed, and freed in their Particulars (how general ſoever the charge ought to be) have not yet paid and contributed the ſeveral Rates and Aſſeſſments that were ſet upon them; and foreſeeing in Our Princely Wiſdom, that from hence divers Suits and Actions are not unlikely to be Commenced and Proſecuted in Our ſeveral Courts at Weſtminſter: We deſirous to avoid ſuch inconvenience, and out of Our Princely Love, and Affection to all Our People, being willing to prevent ſuch errors as any of Our Loving Subjects may happen to run into, have thought fit in a Caſe of this Nature to adviſe with you Our Judges, who we doubt not are all well ſtudied and informed in the Right of Our Soveraignty; and becauſe the Trials of Our ſeveral Courts, by the formality of Pleading, will require a long protraction, We have thought expedient by this Our Letter directed to you all to require your Judgments in this Caſe, as it is ſet down in the incloſed Paper, which will not only gain time, but alſo be of more Authority to over-rule any prejudicate opinions of others in the Point.

Given under Our Signet at Our Court at Whitehall the ſecond day of February, the twelfth Year of Our Reign 1636.

This being thus read, the Lord-Keeper commanded the Caſe incloſed to be read, being as followeth.

Carolus Rex,

'WHen the good and ſafety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger, whether 'may not the King, by Writ under the Great Seal of England, command all the Subjects of Our Kingdom at their charge to provide 'and furniſh ſuch a number of Ships, with Men, Victuals, and 'Munition, and for ſuch time as we ſhall think fit for the defence 'and ſafeguard of the Kingdom from ſuch danger and peril, and by 'Law compel the doing thereof, in caſe of refuſal or refractorineſs? 'and whether in ſuch a caſe is not the King the ſole Judge both 'of the danger, and when, and how the ſame is to be prevented and 'avoided.

The Judges Opinions to the Caſe.

May it pleaſe your Moſt Excellent Majeſty,

WE have, according to Your Majeſties Command, every Man by himſelf, and all of us together taken into ſerious Conſideration the Caſe and Queſtion Signed by Your Majeſty, and incloſed in Your Royal Letter; and we are of opinion, that when the good and ſafety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the Kingdom in danger, Your Majeſty may, by Writ under the Great Seal of England, command all Your Subjects of this Your Kingdom, at their Charge to provide and furniſh ſuch a number of Ships, with Men, Victuals, and Munition, and for ſuch time as Your Majeſty ſhall think fit for the defence and ſafeguard of this Kingdom from ſuch danger and peril: and that by Law Your Majeſty may compel the doing thereof in caſe of refuſal, or refractorineſs: and we are alſo of opinion, that in ſuch caſe Your Majeſty is the ſole Judge both of the danger, and when, and how the ſame is to be prevented and avoided.

An. 1636.

The ſaid Letter of the Kings, the Caſe and Judges Opinions thereupon, being then diſtinctly read in Court in the preſence of all the Judges, except Judge Crooke, who at that time was indiſpoſed as to his health, the reading of which ſo publickly ſeemed a ſurprize to ſome of the Judges preſent; the Lord Keeper proceeded and ſpake as followeth.

My Lords,

Lord Keeper.

'This being the uniform Reſolution of all the Judges Opinions with one Voice, and ſet under their own Hands: I ſay this being ſo reſolved as they do here expreſs upon every Mans particular ſtudying of the Caſe, and upon a general Conference among themſelves, it is of very great Authority; for the very Lives and Lands of the Kings Subjects are to be determined by the Judgment of theſe Reverend Judges, much more a Caſe of this nature, which God knoweth cannot be burdenſome to any, but is of ſingular uſe and conſequence, and for the ſafety of the whole Kingdom.

'The Commandment from His Majeſty is, That I ſhould publiſh this your Opinion in this place, and give order that it ſhould be entred in this Court, in the High Court of Chancery, in the Courts of Kings-Bench, Common-Pleas, and Exchequer; for this is a thing not fit to be kept in a corner: And His further Command is, That you the Judges do declare and publiſh this general Reſolution of all the Judges of England throughout all Parts of the Kingdom, that all Men may take notice thereof, and that thoſe His Subjects which have been in any Error, may Inform themſelves, or be Reformed.

'You have great cauſe to declare it with Joy, and you can hardly do it with Honour enough to the King, that in ſo high a Point of His Sovereignty he hath been pleaſed to diſcend, and to communicate with you His Judges; which ſheweth, that Juſtice and Sovereignty in His Majeſty doth kiſs each other.

'His Pleaſure further being, That you let all know, that it is not His Purpoſe by this Reſolution to ſtop or check the Actions or Suits which any have brought, or ſhall bring concerning this; for it is His Majeſties Command, That all ſuch as proceed in an Action about the ſame, ſhall have equal and meet Juſtice, and that they be ſuffered to proceed in Courſe of Law, ſo as you call the Kings Learned Council unto their Proceedings, that they may not be ſurprized.

'Now, my Lords, I have little more to ſay, but this I am ſure of, that if any contrary opinion ſhall yet remain among Men, it muſt proceed from thoſe that are Sons of the Law, or from ſome not towards the Law. Of the latter I will ſay, (Felices demum eſſent artes ſi de illis ſolum judicarent Artifices.) And as to the former, you the Judges of the Realm, are, and ever have been accounted the Fathers of the Law, then will it ill-become the Son to diſpute againſt, or take upon him to be wiſer than the Father. Having thus delivered unto you, that which I received in Commandment from His Majeſty; as His Majeſty doth, ſo do I, leave it to your Judgments.

Here followeth the firſt part of the Lord Keepers Speech to all the ſaid Judges this day, which was Poſtponed, becauſe that which is before-mentioned was pertinent to the great Queſtion in hand concerning Ship-money; but his Lordſhip in the beginning declared to the ſaid Judges what he had in command from His Majeſty concerning Matters relating to their reſpective Circuits, and ſpake to this purpoſe.

My Lords the Judges,

THe Term being now at an end, and the Aſſizes at hand, His Majeſty hath commanded, that according to the Cuſtom in former times, ſo now you ſhould in this place receive ſome directions for the execution of Juſtice in all Parts of the Kingdom whereto you reſort. This, (as it may juſtly be) is a great comfort to His Majeſties Subjects to ſee His Majeſties care herein, which as it is a Teſtimony of their own Happineſs in receiving Juſtice from the King Himſelf the Fountain of Juſtice, ſo it may as juſtly add ſtrength and encouragement to you when you go your Circuits, not only to be armed with your own Authority by Commiſſion, but with your Princes Inſtruction. In the doing of Juſtice you will find things of ſeveral natures and degrees. In ſome Pleas before you Commutative Juſtice beareth ſway, as in that which is Meum & Tuum: In others Diſtributive Juſtice, as in Præmium & Pœnam; ſome concern one, and a few others concern the multitude, others concern the King and all the Kings People. In ſome Pleas things are drawn a-fore you that are ad Nocumentum of this and that particular Town: Some ad Nocumentum totius Regni: Some things are drawn a-fore you that are Contra Pacem Regis, and others Contra Coronam & Dignitatem Regis. And in this variety of buſineſs, that as there are many of a leſſer and lower degree, yet not to be omitted; ſo you have Graviora Legis, upon which you are to pitch your Mark, hæc oportet fieri illa non omittere. In that Juſtice which you are to do between Party and Party, His Majeſty doth require you, as in all His Courts here, ſo in your Circuits you adminiſter impartial Juſtice, and redreſs vexatious and wrangling Suits, not worthy the Dignity of your own Perſons, and the Court where you ſit; for theſe actions, as they empty the ſpleen on the one ſide, ſo they never fail to empty the Purſes on both ſides. But beſides the doing of Juſtice between Man and Man, there is much more expected from your Lordſhips: For the publick buſineſs of the Country is of much more importance than the Tryal of a Niſi prius, and fitting you ſhould eſteem them ſo. And therefore it is His Majeſties Command, that thoſe Services which concern Himſelf, and the Publick, be timely thought of, and not poſted off to the end of the Aſſize. Now a-fore all other things the advancement of Religion and Piety towards God, the Peace of the Church, and the execution of thoſe Laws that tend to theſe ends ought to have the firſt place. As oft as I have had occaſion to ſpeak to you here, I have ſeldom ſpared to give you a Charge of the Laws againſt Recuſants; and I muſt reiterate it now, for if you convict them not in the Country, there is like to be little reformation or profit to His Majeſty. And whoſoever they be that will not be found

An. 1636. found in the Church, it behoveth you to take order that they be found in the Exchequer. Next place, That you proceed roundly againſt capital and fellonious offenders, eſpecially Robbers in the High-way, who now march in Troops after a high hand. As a good Judge ought in Court to ſhew ſeverity to thoſe in the Goal, ſo the ableſt and activeſt Men in the Shire ought to do their utmoſt endeavours for the apprehending of ſuch offenders as are abroad, that when you are there or here at the Term, the Service may proceed in a good way, and you be made a terror to malefactors, as ſome of your Predeceſſors have been; for if your care be not great, malefactors will abound; therefore you muſt ſhew a ſevere and conſtant ſway of Juſtice when they are found, and it will ſoon abate their pride, wherewith they now bear up themſelves: and fit it is with an unanimous conſent you all agree of one courſe, for if there be a remiſneſs in any one Circuit, this leaveth a way to Malefactors to overthrow all reformation, and Juſtice is thereby diſcouraged. Next, Care muſt be had of thoſe Laws that concern Luxury and Idleneſs, the ſuppreſſing and puniſhing of Vagabonds, the ordering and imploying of Houſes of Correction, the repreſſing of Ale-houſes and Tipling-houſes, binding of Apprentices. If theſe were well and conſtantly obſerved, they would ſave many able Bodies which die miſerably at the Gallows, and cut off a multitude of enormities that peſter this Common-wealth, and leſſen the number of Thieves and Robbers. And therefore your Lordſhips ſhould do well to have a ſpecial care to the execution of thoſe Laws. And this gives me occaſion to put you in mind of thoſe Printed Orders publiſhed by His Majeſty in the Year 1630. wherein at firſt there was a direction given for an Accompt to be made by the Sheriff and Juſtices of the Peace. This ſame was orderly kept in divers places, in others not ſo well. It was afterwards adviſed by your ſelves, that the way of Accompt ſhould be changed, and that you ſhould receive it at the Aſſize, and preſent it to the Council-Board; yet it is my part to tell you it hath not ſo appeared by the Accompt that is come to the Council-Table, and it is expected a better be given by you at the next Term. Now in reſpect the publick Service dependeth much upon the Juſtices of the Peace in the Country, it will be neceſſary that you caſt your Eye upon them, that they give due attendance at the Aſſize. It is their duty to do it, and yours to enforce it upon them. An Aſſize laſteth but few days: But the Inſtructions which they may receive from you in that ſhort time may be of great uſe for the County for the whole Year. Alſo, that you examine whether they give due attendance at the Quarter-Seſſions, although there is an expreſs Article in their Oath that they ſhould give it; therefore it is a thing very fitting and well-worthy your labour, that in the beginning of every Aſſizes you truſt not the Clark of the Peace his Information, but that your ſelves do caſt an Eye upon his Book, and command him to return the Names of ſuch Juſtices of Peace as you find by his Book were abſent at the Quarter-Seſſions. Fit it will be that you let them know, that to prefer a Riding, or Bowling, or Hunting-Match before their attendance at the Quarter-Seſſions, is little better than Perjury. And if your admonition will not ſerve the turn, a remedy ſhall be taken. Third place, It is neceſſary for you to enquire how they attend the monthly Meetings, or other times of Publick-ſervice; for this I am ſure they are all within one Commiſſion, and have the ſame Oath, and the ſame Attendance is impoſed upon all, and why the greateſt number ſhould exempt themſelves, and leave the Publick-ſervice upon a few, I know not. But if I may know the particular men (of which I hope I ſhall henceforwards by your Lordſhips) I ſhall rid them out of the Commiſſion and put others in their places.

An Humble Remonſtrance to His Majeſty againſt the Tax of Ship-mony impoſed, laying open the Illegality and Inconvenience thereof, intended to have been preſented by a private hand unto His Majeſty; which met with obſtruction, and was to this effect.

Moſt Gracious and Dread Soveraign,

WE your Poor and Loyal Subjects of this your Realm of England, now grieved and oppreſſed with the late Taxes impoſed on us, for ſetting out of divers Ships to guard the narrow Seas, without our Common Conſent in Parliament thereunto had; do here in all Humility and Duty proſtrate our ſelves and this our Remonſtrance againſt the ſaid Taxes, at Your Highneſs Feet, beſeeching Your Majeſty of Your Royal Juſtice and Clemency, to take the ſame into Your moſt Juſt and Gracious Conſideration, and thereupon to releaſe us Your poor Subjects from this Intolerable Burthen and Grievance, under which we groan and languiſh, and know not how long it may continue.

And here firſt of all, we moſt humbly repreſent to Your moſt Excellent Majeſty, that this Tax of Ship-mony is directly contrary to the Fundamental Laws and Liberties of this Your Realm of England, which Your Majeſty, both in point of Juſtice and Honour is obliged inviolably to preſerve, according to the Oath made to God and Your Subjects at Your Coronation, and Your frequent Printed Royal Proteſtations ſince, both in Your Anſwer to the Petition in the third year of Your Highneſs Reign, in Your Royal Speech in Parliament, Printed therewith by Your Command, and in Your Declaration to all Your Loving Subjects of the Cauſes, which moved Your Majeſty to diſſolve the laſt Parliament, publiſhed by Your Special Command.

Likewiſe page 23, 42, 43, 44, in all which Your Majeſty (to all Your Subjects Comforts) hath made theſe ſeveral Declarations of Your Royal Pleaſure, in theſe moſt gratious Words.

‘The King willeth that Right be done according to the Laws and Cuſtoms of the Realm, and that the Statutes (recited in the Petition of Right) be put in Execution, that His Subjects may have no cauſe to complain of any Wrong or Oppreſſion contrary to their Juſt Rights and Liberties (to the preſervation whereof he holds himſelf in Conſcience as well obliged as of His Prerogative) let right be done as is deſired; and I aſſure you my Maxime

An. 1636.

‘is that the Peoples Liberties ſtrengthen the Kings Prerogative, and the Kings Prerogative is to defend the Peoples Liberties. I do here declare, that thoſe things which have been done whereby men had ſome cauſe to ſuſpect the Liberty of the Subject to be trencht upon, ſhall not hereafter be drawn into example for your prejudice; and in time to come (in the Word of a King) you ſhall not have the like cauſe to complain. We are not unmindful of the preſervation of the Juſt and Antient Liberties of Our Subjects, which We ſecured them by Our Gracious Anſwers to the Petition of Right in Parliament, having not ſince done any Act whereby to Infringe them. But Our care is, and hereafter ſhall be, to keep them intire and inviolable, as We would do Our own Right and Soverainty. We do alſo declare, that We will maintain the Antient and Juſt Rights and Liberties of Our Subjects, with ſo much conſtancy and juſtice, that they ſhall have cauſe to acknowledge, that under Our Government and Gracious Protection they live in a more happy and free Eſtate, than any Subjects in the Chriſtian World.

If then we ſhall make it appear to Your Majeſty, that this Tax is againſt the Laws of this Your Realm, and the juſt antient Rights and Liberties of Your Subjects, we doubt not, but Your Majeſty out of Your Royal Juſtice and Goodneſs will be moſt Graciouſly pleaſed to exonorate us thereof, and never to draw it into Example more.

That it is againſt the Fundamental-Laws, Juſt-Rights, and Antient Liberties of Your People, we ſhall make it appear by theſe particulars, Firſt, We humbly conceive it to be contrary to ſundry Statutes of this Your Realm.

Firſt, to the Statute of Magna Charta cap. 29. (thirty times ratified in Parliament) 5 Edw. 3. cap. 9. 25. Edw. 3. Cap. 4. 28. Edw. 3. Cap. 3. 37. Edw. 3. Cap. 18. and to the late Petition of Right in the third year of your Majeſties Reigh.

Which Enact that no Freeman ſhall be taken, or diſeiſed of his Freehold or Liberties, or Free-Cuſtoms, or to be Outlaw'd or Exiled, or otherwiſe deſtroyed nor paſſed upon, nor dealt with, but by the lawful Judgement of his Peers, or by the Laws of the Land.

But divers of your poor Subjects, by vertue and Authority of the Writs for Ship-mony, have been taken and impriſoned by Your Officers, their Goods and Cattle ſeized, diſtrained and ſold, to their great damages and diſtraction, without any lawful Judgement firſt given againſt them, and before the Right or Title of this Tax, hath been legally heard and decided againſt the tenure of this Statute.

Secondly, Againſt the Statute 25 Edw. 3. de Tallagio non concedendo. 14 Edw. 1. Stat. 2. Cap. 1. 25 Edw. 3. 11 Rich. 2. Cap. 9. 1 Rich. 3. Cap. 2. and the late Petition of Right ratified by Your Majeſty, which Enact that no Tallage, Aid, Loan, Benevolence, nor any ſuch like charge, ſhall be laid or levied, by the King or His Heirs of this Realm, without the good will and aſſent of Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Earles, Barons, Knights, Burgeſſes, and other Freemen of the Commonalty of this Realm.

By vertue of which Statutes Your Subjects inherited this Freedom, that they ſhould not be compelled to any Tax, Aid, or any other like Charges not ſet by Common-conſent in Parliament (as is recited in the ſame Petition) therefore not with this Tax, Tillage, Aid or Charge of Ship-mony, it being againſt theſe Acts, and not ſet by Common-conſent in Parliament.

Thirdly, Againſt all the Acts of Tunnage, and Poundage, and other Subſidies, which have from time to time in all Your Royal Progenitors Reigns been granted them, either for years, or term of their natural Lives, a certain Tax or Subſidy for the ſafe-guard and defence of the Seas, againſt Enemies and Pirates, as a free and voluntary Grant, Becauſe they by themſelves by their Royal Prerogative had no power to impoſe it on their Subjects. Some few of which we ſhall here recite.

Firſt, 14 Edw. 3. Stat. 1. Cap. 20, & Stat. 3. The Prelates, Earls, Barons, and Commons in Parliament, granted the King the ninth Lamb, Fleece and Sheep, and the ninth part of all Goods and Chattels in Burroughs for two years ſpace then next enſuing, to be taken and levied by lawful and reaſonable Tax by the ſame two years made, for the good-keeping of His Realm, as well by Land as by Sea; and of His Wars as well againſt the Parties of Scotland, France and Gaſcoign, as elſewhere; with this promiſe, that this Grant ſo chargeable, ſhould not another time be had forth in Example, nor fall to their prejudice in time to come. And that all the profits thereof, with others ariſing of the Realm of England, ſhould be imployed for the maintenance of the Wars in Scotland, France and Gaſcoign, and in no place elſewhere during the ſaid Wars.

Secondly, 5 R. 2. Par. 2. Stat. 1. a Subſidy of Tunnage and Poundage of two ſhillings of every Tun of Wine, and ſix-pence the pound of every Merchandize elſe imported (ſome few excepted) was granted to the King by Parliament for two years; during which time the Mariners of the Weſt proffered the Parliament, to make an Army on the Sea; provided always the mony thereof coming to be wholly imployed upon the ſafe-keeping of the Sea, and no part elſewhere. The Receivers and Keepers whereof were appointed by the Parliament in this Act, which appointed that the People of the ſaid Sea-Army, ſhould have all the Lawful-Prizes ſhared between them; and the Admirals and others of the ſaid Army ſhould give aſſurance to ſave the Kings Friends and Allies, without damage to be done to them or any of them, by any way; and if they did, and that be proved, they ſhould bind them upon grievous pains thereof to make amends.

Thirdly, 4 Edv. 4. Cap. 3. The Commons of the Realm of England, granted a Subſidy called Tunnage, to the King for His Life, for the defence of the ſame Realm, and was eſpecially for the ſafeguard of the Seas; they are the words of the Act often repeated.

Which Act was revived to King Henry the 8*th*. by Act of Parliament, 6. H. 8. Cap. 14. which grants him Tunnage and Poundage during his life.

Fourthly, 1 Edw. 6. Cap. 31. 1 Mariæ Cap. 1. 18. 1 Eliz. Cap. 19. (for the grant of Tunnage.) All ſeverally recite, that Hen. 7. Hen. 8. and other of thoſe Princes Noble Progenitors, Kings of this Realm, time out of mind, have had granted unto them, and enjoyed the ſame for the time, being by Authority of Parliament (for the defence of the ſame Realm, and the keeping and ſafe-guard of the Seas for the entercourſe of Merchandiſe, ſafely to come into, and paſs out of the Realm) certain ſums of mony named Subſidies, of all manner of Goods and Merchandiſe coming in, or going out of the Realm, &c.

Some will object that in the time of Hardicanute, this Tax of Ship-mony was paid by the People.

Now ſhall ſuch a grievous inſufferable Tax as that which Hardicanute no hereitary Prince but a foreign Daniſh Tyrant impoſed upon the People, to provide Ships of War be a Preſident who died drunk amidſt his Cups, very ſhortly after, as all our Hiſtorians record, be made or deemed a juſt and lawful Preſident for Your Majeſty now to follow, God forbid.

That Preſident of Hardicanute, and all former Preſidents were before the Government of this Kingdom was ſetled by Magna Charta, and the other Statutes againſt Taxes, Tallages, Loans, Aids and Benevolences, without Common-conſent in Parliament, enacted before Tonnage and Poundage granted, therefore impertinent to the preſent caſe.

The next Preſident objected (the firſt and moſt pertinent of all others ſince that of Danegeld) is that of King John, Anno 1213, who being judicially deprived of the Crown and Kingdom at Rome by the Pope, at the earneſt ſollicitation of Stephen Langhton Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, William Biſhop of London, and the Biſhop of Ely; theſe Prelates departing from Rome, went into France, and there conſpiring with the Biſhops, and King Philip of France, againſt King John, they then ſolemnly publiſhed the Depoſition and Sentence of the Pope given againſt him at Rome; and then in the behalf of the Pope they enjoyned aſwell the King of France, as all other men, as they would obtain the remiſſion of all their ſins, that uniting themſelves together, they ſhould all go into England in an Hoſtile manner, and depoſe King John from His Crown and Kingdom, and ſubſtitute another worthy man in His ſtead by the Popes Apoſtolical Authority.

Hereupon the King of France prepared a very great and ſtrong Army, and Navy to invade both by Sea and Land to depoſe King John, and to get the Crown and Kingdom to himſelf: King John having perfect intelligence of all this, in the month of March commanded Ships excellently furniſhed to come together out of all the parts of England, ſo that he might with ſtrong hand boldly reſiſt thoſe who intended to invade England; he likewiſe raiſed and gathered together a very great Army out of England and Ireland, and the places near adjoyning. Thus Mat. Weſtmonaſterienſis, Anno 1213. p. 90. relates the ſtory; Math. Paris adds this thereunto, that the King in the month of March cauſed all the Ships out of the Ports of England to be imbreviated by this Writ, which he directed to all the Bayliffs of the Ports in theſe words,

Johannes Rex, &c.

Theſe things thus done concerning Ships, the King ſent out Letters to all the Sheriffs of this Kingdom in this form,

Johannes Rex, &c.

Theſe two Writs therefore being divulged about England, there came together in the Sea-coaſts in divers places, which the King moſt ſuſpected, to wit, to Dover, Feverſham and Ipſwich, men of different Condition and Age, fearing nothing more than the report of Culvertage: But when after a few days there wanted Victuals for ſo great a multitude, the Chief Commanders of the Wars ſet home a great Company of the unarmed vulgar, retaining only the Knights, their Servants and Free-men, with the Slingers and Archers near the Sea-coaſts: moreover John Biſhop of Norwich came out of Ireland with five hundred Soldiers, and many Horſemen to the King, and was joyfully received of him; all therefore being aſſembled to the Battel and muſtered at Dunham Downs; there were among the ſelected Soldiers and Servants, ſtrong and well-armed ſixty thouſand valiant men, who had they had one heart and mind towards their Prince and Country, there had not been a Prince under Heaven againſt whom the Kingdom of England might not have defended it ſelf. Moreover the King reſolved to join a Battle at Sea with the Enemies, that he might drown them in the Sea before they ſhould land, for he had a greater Navy than the King of France, whence he conceived greateſt ſecurity of reſiſting the Enemy. Thus Math. Paris, Hiſtor. Angliæ 1213. p. 224, 225. whoſe words we have related at large to clear and take off the edge of that prime Preſident, in anſwering which, all ſince will be cleared from this Writ to Preſs and provide Ships and Ship-mony as now.

But under Correction we humbly conceive that this Preſident makes much againſt (nothing at all for) theſe Writs and Taxes now iſſued forth.

Firſt, It was before Magna Charta the Statutes againſt Taxes and Tallages, the Petition of Right, or any Subſidies of Tonnage and Poundage to guard the Seas.

Secondly, It was only directed to Port-Towns that had Ships, and not to Countries and Places which had no Ships, as theſe Writs are now.

Thirdly, It was only to the Mariners, and Owners of Ships (not to any other Perſon) which being exempted from all Land-Service, were to ſerve the King and Kingdom at this pinch and opportunity by Sea; but this Writ is on all, as well thoſe that have no Ships as others.

Fourthly, It was only to furniſh out their Ships, not to contribute mony to hire the Kings, or others, or to build new of other or greater Burthen than theſe they had; theſe Writs now are contrary to this in all theſe reſpects at leaſt in intention, if not in execution.

Fifthly, Here was no levying of Money to be paid into King John's Exchequer, or Officers Hand, to provide or hire Ships as now; but every man was left to furniſh his own Ships at his own beſt rate with his own Proviſion and Mariners: this quite otherwiſe.

Sixthly, Though the Mariners and owners of Ships then were by this Writ to furniſh Ships out at their own proper Coſts, yet when they were thus furniſhed, the King was to pay them both Wages, Hire, and Fraught, as His Succeſſors have ever done ſince, when they preſſed any of their Subjects Ships or Carts, for War, or Carriage. Theſe were the words, Ituri in ſervitium noſtrum ad libertationes noſtras; and the conſtant practice of all Kings in like caſes, (yea of Your Majeſty, who now pays Wages and Fraught for all the Mariners and Merchants Ships you preſs;) therefore this makes nothing at all for this enforcing the Subjects to ſet out Ships to guard the Seas, and ſerve Your Majeſty at their own proper Coſts and Charges, but point-blank againſt it.

The Reader, for further ſatisfaction in this Point, may find various Arguments in that Remonſtrance which became publick in the late Printing-Age.

Lent-Aſſizes. March 1636. A Judge of Aſſize his Charge to the Grand-Jury, as to the Caſe of Ship-mony.

SIr R. B. one of the Juſtices of Aſſize for the County of York did, at the Aſſizes held at York in Lent 1636. deliver his Charge to the Grand-Jury, that it was a lawful and inſeparable Flower of the Crown, for the King to command not only the Maritime Counties, but alſo thoſe who are In-land, to find Ships for the defence of the Kingdom: And then likewiſe affirmed, that it was not His ſingle Judgment, but the Judgment of all his brethren, witneſſed by their Subſcriptions.

And then alſo ſaid, That there was a Rumor that ſome of his Brethren that had ſubſcribed, were of a contrary Judgment; but it was a baſe and unworthy thing for any to give his Hand contrary to his Heart; and then wiſhed for his own part, that his Hand might rot from his Arm that was guilty of any ſuch crime; when as he knew (with which he was afterwards charged in Parliament) that Mr. Juſtice Hutton, and Mr. Juſtice Cook, who had ſubſcribed, were of a contrary opinion, and was preſent when they were perſwaded to ſubſcribe, and did ſubſcribe for conformity only, becauſe the major number of the Judges had ſubſcribed. And the ſaid Judge of Aſſize then alſo ſaid, That in ſome Caſes the Judges were above an Act of Parliament.

Earl of Arundel ſent Ambaſſador to the Emperor about the Palatinate.

F*Erdinando* the ſecond, Emperour of Germany, being weakned in Body, reſolves to ſettle the Empire, and calls a Dyet to meet at Ratisbone the midſt of September this Year; where, after Conſultation, for Succeſſion, the French under-hand promoted Bavaria, but the Poland Ambaſſador was for the Emperors Son, already King of Hungary, to be Elected King of the Romans, by the Name of Ferdinando the third, and the Emperor afterwards dyed on the fifth of February following.

The King of Great Britain, upon the News of this Change in Germany, ſends Thomas Earl of Arundel, Earl-Marſhal of England, Ambaſſador to the New Emperor Ferdinando the third, Elected at this Imperial Dyet, to whom he preſents the Condition of His Majeſties Nephew the Palſgrave, having his Patrimony taken from him by the Emperor, and hoping for Reſtitution; but the Anſwer which the Ambaſſador received from the Emperor was, That he made no doubt in time he might be conſidered for enjoying the lower Palatinate; but for the other it much concerned the Duke of Bavaria in his preſent Intereſt and Poſſeſſion, who would hardly be induced to a Treaty diſadvantagious to himſelf; but Bavaria ſpake like a Souldier, that what he had got with ſo much hazard of his Perſon, and Expence of Treaſure won by the Sword, he would now maintain with the ſame Power in the Poſſeſſion. The Ambaſſador afterwards came away in diſdain, not taking his leave at all; for the Eyes of all the Chriſtian Princes were upon this His Embaſſy from the King of Great Britain, being in hope the Emperor would have done more in order to the Reſtauration of the Palatinate; ſo the Ambaſſador haſtened home into England to give His Majeſty an account of his Embaſſy.

This being the laſt time we ſhall have occaſion in this our ſecond Part to mention any thing concerning the Palatinate, give us leave a little to digreſs in Point of time, whereby to ſhew the Kings continued care and endeavours for the recovery of the Palatinate for the good of his Siſter and Nephews: Obſerve the Speech which His Majeſty made in Parliament in the Month of July 1641. and the Manifeſto which he then put forth, which we rather mention, that ſucceeding Parliaments may follow that Example; but that good Intention of the King and Parliament for the Reſtauration of that Family proved at that time ineffectual by the unhappy Wars that broke out in the Three Kingdoms preſently after.

His Sacred Majeſty of Great Britain, being reſolved, in caſe this His laſt endeavours by His extraordinary * Ambaſſador ſent to the Diet at Ratiſbone, for a friendly accommodation of His Nephew, the Prince-Elector-Palatine's Affairs ſhould prove fruitleſs, to have His ſaid Embaſſy, without further loſs of time, ſeconded by more powerful and effectual means, went to His Parliament on the 5th day of July * laſt, and there (after the diſpatch of ſome other Affairs) preſented the above-written Manifeſt, with theſe words.

* 1641.

'I Take this occaſion to preſent to both Houſes, that whereby I 'hope all the World ſhall ſee that there is a good underſtanding 'between Me and my People; it is concerning my Nephew, the 'Prince-Elector-Palatine, who having deſired Me, by the advice of 'the King of Denmark, to aſſiſt him in a Treaty for his Reſtauration,

'at

'at the Diet now held at Ratisbone by the Emperor: I could not but 'ſend my Ambaſſador for that purpoſe, though I much doubt that I 'ſhall not have ſo good an Iſſue of it as I wiſh: The which My Nephew fore-ſeeing, hath deſired Me, for the better countenancing 'of his juſt demands, to make a Manifeſt in My Name; which is a 'thing of that conſequence, that if I ſhould do it without the advice of My Parliament, it would not be of much force. Therefote I 'do here propoſe it unto you, that by your advice I may do it; for 'that way I think it moſt fit to be publiſhed in my Name.

The ſaid Manifeſt concerning the Reſtitution of the Electoral-Palatine's Family, having been ſeriouſly conſidered by both Houſes, they together came to His Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe on the 12*th* of July laſt, where the Speaker delivered the Opinion and Reſolution of the ſaid Houſes in this manner.

Your Majeſty in Your Royal Perſon was pleaſed to recommend this Manifeſt touching the Palatine Cauſe, to be read in full Parliament, and to be adviſed of by both Houſes.

Both the Houſes have ſeriouſly conſidered of it, and have commanded me to preſent theſe their humble Advices unto Your Sacred Majeſty, which are expreſſed in this Declaration which hath paſſed the Votes of both Houſes, and which I am commanded to read unto Your Majeſty.

Die Mercurii 7. Julii 1641.

Reſolved upon the Queſtion,

THat this Houſe doth approve of His Majeſties Pious Intentions in the behalf of His Royal Siſter, and His Nephew, the Prince-Elector-Palatine, and the reſt of the Princes of that Family, and of the publiſhing this Manifeſt to that purpoſe; and that this Houſe will be ready to give His Majeſty ſuch advice and aſſiſtance therein by Parliament, as ſhall ſtand with the Honour of His Majeſty, and the Intereſt and Affections of this Kingdom, if the preſent Treaty ſhall not ſucceed.

Die Sabbathi 10. Julii 1641.

Reſolved in like manner upon the Queſtion by the Houſe of Peers,

THat they do concur to this Vote with the Houſe of Commons.

I am likewiſe commanded to preſent the humble deſire of both the Houſes of Parliament.

That Your Majeſty will be pleaſed to recommend this Manifeſt to the Parliament of Scotland, to have the concurrence of that Kingdom.

Thus much was delivered by the Speaker of the Houſe of Peers, both Houſes then attending His Majeſty in the Banqueting-Houſe at VVhitehall: To which His Majeſty was graciouſly pleaſed to make them this Anſwer.

We take very thankfully the concurrent Advices of both the Houſes of Parliament, in ſo great and Pious a Work, declared in theſe Votes and Reſolutions, which you have read to Us.

We will alſo take care to recommend this Manifeſt unto the Parliament in Scotland, to have the concurrence of that Kingdom, which we doubt not but they will perform.

His Majeſties Manifeſt.

CHarles, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all to whom this preſent Manifeſt ſhall come greeting. To the end that the Endeavours of Our late Dear Father King James, of Bleſſed Memory, and Our own Proceedings ſince His Death, in the Cauſe of Our dear and only Siſter, Brother-in-law, and Nephews Electors and Princes Palatine of the Rhyne may not be forgotten, or pretendedly unknown wherein We have ſtudyed and laboured nothing more than Peace of Chriſtendom, and the avoiding of Innocent Blood, by ſeeking the reſtitution and re-eſtabliſhment of the Electoral-Houſe-Palatine in their ancient Rights, Dignities, and Poſſeſſions within the Empire; out of which they have been by violence, and force of Arms, and other undue Proceedings, expelled and baniſhed, contrary to the ancient Laws and Conſtitutions of the Sacred Empire: We have thought fit, for the vindication of Our own Honour, and to call to mind, and to publiſh to all the World both a Summary Relation of Our Actions and Endeavours paſt, and Our preſent Reſolutions in the ſame Cauſe.

It cannot be unknown unto all the Princes and Eſtates of Europe, and more particularly to thoſe who have had any Intereſt or Relation to the publick affairs of Germany, how both Our ſelves, and Our Father have, during theſe Twenty Years paſt, by many and ſeveral Ambaſſages, Treaties, and other Negotiations, to Our great Expence and Charges, both with the late Emperor Ferdinand, the King of Spain, and other Princes and Eſtates of the Empire, endeavoured by all friendly and treatable means to procure the reſtitution and re-eſtabliſhment of Our ſaid dear Siſter, Brother-in-law, and Nephews, in their ancient Rights and Poſſeſſions, as the only and poſſible way to ſettle a good and firm Peace in the Empire, and conſequently with all Princes intereſſed therein; without which it is impoſſible to expect or hope for a good, durable, and honeſt pacification of thoſe troubles which have already, almoſt

An. 1636. rent and conſumed, and involved all the Princes of Chriſtendom in a moſt bloody and deſtructive War.

And for a clear demonſtration of Our clear Intentions, not only Our own Pious inclination, and care of the publick Peace, hath induced Us to omit divers occaſions, whereby We might, by ſuch Power as God hath put into Our Hands, have prevented the violences and oppreſſions uſed to Our ſaid Siſter and Nephews; but We have been led on and invited thereto by divers Promiſes, Aſſurances, and reverſal Letters, both from the late Emperor, and King of Spain, and other Uſurpers of the Inheritances of the Electoral-Houſe Palatine, that they would at laſt, in contemplation of Our Mediation, hearken and incline to a juſt and honeſt Peace by the reſtitution of the Eſtates and Dignities of Our dear Siſter and Nephews, whereby We have been drawn, not only to paſs by Our own, and the publick Intereſt, and to forbear to engage Our Arms in ſo juſt a Cauſe; but alſo have procured by Our Father, and Our Authority, the withdrawing and disbanding of the Forces of Count Mansfelt out of the Palatinate, and advanced divers Truces and Ceſſations of Hoſtility or Defence, only to prepare the way of amiable compoſition, according to the hopes and promiſes to that end given Us, and particularly have cauſed the Surrender and Depoſition of ſome places of ſtrength into the Hands of the late Infanta of Spain, upon reciprocal Aſſurances of a final pacification or reſtitution.

But what effects all theſe Our Peaceable and Chriſtian endeavours have produced, and how all Our Pious Negotiations have been either delayed or deluded; thereby, and by proceſs of time to root and eſtabliſh the uſurpations of the Houſe-Palatine, and Our Patience and Piety thereby abuſed, is ſo manifeſt by the continued oppreſſion of Our ſaid dear Siſter and Nephews, that we are forced to proteſt that there hath nothing ſucceeded either to Our deſires, or hopes, but a reſolution of deſpair of ever obtaining by the ways of Juſtice, Treaty or Amity, that which hath been ſo often promiſed to, and expected of the Lovers of Chriſtian Peace.

Notwithſtanding We having lately received advice from Our dear Uncle, the King of Denmark, that at laſt, by his mediation and procurement, the preſent Emperor, and Duke of Bavaria, have condiſcended to a Treaty to be held at the Diet at Ratisbone, upon the ſixth day of May laſt paſt for the reviving and the reſetling of the controverſies of the Houſe-Palatine, as a preparation and inducement to a general Peace and Amneſtia through the whole Empire; and that he, with ſome of the Electors of the Empire, is accepted as Mediator of the ſaid Cauſe, and hath received ſtrong and pregnant aſſurances of a better inclination and diſpoſition towards the re-eſtabliſhment of the Electoral Family in their Rights and Dignities; and to that end hath procured convenient ſafe conduct from the Emperor to Our Nephew and his Brethren, freely to come in perſon, or to ſend their Deputies to that Diet at the time and place appointed, with all other clauſes requiſite for their ſafety, going, abiding, or coming from thence; and then to plead the Juſtice of their own Cauſe: And that in proſecution thereof, he hath inſtructed and diſpatched his Ambaſſadors, either to aſſiſt in Perſon, or by the Deputies of Our Nephews at the ſaid Treaty of Pacification; and hath deſired us herein to comply with him, by ſending Our Ambaſſadors qualified and inſtructed to the ſame purpoſe of procuring a good and ſetled Peace within the Empire, according to the intimation of the Princes-Electors ſignified to him by their Letters, thereby deſiring Us to aſſiſt in the preſent Aſſembly at Ratisbone.

To which end Our Nephew, the Prince-Elector-Palatine, having reſolved by Our Councel and Advice to ſend his Deputies according to the invitation and hopes intimated of a good iſſue to be expected by the amiable way of Treaty and Compoſure.

We have alſo thought fit not to be wanting to ſo good a Deſign, ſo concurrent to Our own, and the deſires of ſo many Princes, and in ſome hopes of better Fruits than hitherto all Our Endeavours have produced; have reſolved to make this Our laſt Tryal by the way of Treaties, and to ſend Our Ambaſſadors to the Emperor, and other Princes in the ſaid Diet aſſembled: And to that purpoſe have given him full power and inſtructions to contribute all Our Authority to the procurement and ſettlement of a good and bleſſed Peace by the re-eſtabliſhment and reſtitution of the Poſſeſſions and Dignities of Our ſaid dear Siſter, Nephews, and Electoral Family, without which no Peace can neither be honeſt or ſecure: Hereby exhorting and deſiring all other Kings, Princes, and States, Our Friends, Allies, and Confederates, who ſhall either be preſent at the ſaid Diet, or ſhall have their Ambaſſadors or Deputies there, that they will be aſſiſting to the juſtice of ſo good a Cauſe, and to ſo great a Bleſſing, as the reſtoring of Peace to the almoſt deſolate eſtate of Germany.

But becauſe We may have juſt cauſe to doubt, by many experiences of Our former endeavours, that the iſſue and fruit of this Meeting may not be anſwerable to Our juſt expectation, but rather that it may produce contrary effects, to the prejudice of the Juſtice and Rights of Our ſaid Nephews and their Family, (which God forbid) we are hereby forced to proteſt againſt all Acts, Sentences, Concluſions, or Determinations whatſoever, which ſhall or may be had, made, or declared, either in confirmation of the oppreſſions and uſurpations paſt, or any additions thereunto for the future, as invalid, and of no power or effect.

In which caſe (being contrary to Our deſire and expectation) We alſo further proteſt and declare, That We will not abandon neither Our own, nor the publick Intereſt, nor the Cauſe, Rights, and juſt Pretences of Our dear Siſter and Nephews, and other Princes and States involved with their oppreſſions; but that we will uſe and employ all ſuch force and power wherewith God hath enabled Us both by Our own Arms, and the help and aſſiſtance of all Our Allies and Friends, to vindicate Our own Honour, the publick Peace, and redreſs of the Injuries, Uſurpations, and Oppreſſions of Our ſaid deareſt Siſter and Nephews, and their Illuſtrious Family.

And hereby as We do profeſs to uſe all Our endeavour and power to promote a happy and deſired Peace, for the conſolation of the diſtreſſed Empire; ſo We do appeal to Almighty God, the Inſpector of the Hearts of all Princes; and to the World, the Inſpector of all Our juſt Actions, that We will be innocent, before

An. 1636.

God and the World, of all the evils that may enſue if theſe Our laſt Hopes ſhall be delayed or abuſed.

The Honourable Denſell Hollis Eſq; his Speech to the Lords concerning the ſettleing of the Queen of Bohemia, and her Electoral Family, in their Right and Inheritance.

My Lords,

July 9. 1641. ‘THe Knights, Citizens, and Burgeſſes of the Houſe of Commons have commanded me to let your Lordſhips know, that they have taken into their ſerious conſideration His Majeſties Propoſal to them of the Manifeſt; in which He is graciouſly pleaſed to declare His Pious Intentions concerning His Royal Siſter, the Prince-Palatine her Son, and the reſt of the Electoral Family.

‘They do with all humbleneſs acknowledge His Majeſties Favour in communicating unto them any part of His Royal Thoughts, and asking their advice and councel in a Buſineſs that doth ſo nearly concern him, as needs muſt the happineſs, nay the ſubſiſtence of theſe diſtreſſed Princes, of ſo glorious an extraction, their Veins being enriched with the ſame Blood, that is from ſo Royal Anceſtors, derived with glory into His Sacred Perſon.

‘And in that Relation the Houſe of Commons looks upon them with an Eye of tenderneſs, wiſhing that every drop of that Princely Blood may ever be illuſtrated with Honour and Happineſs: That His Majeſty may be Crowned with this Bleſſing, to ſee nothing but Glory in Himſelf, and in all that bow unto Him.

‘To hear then, that theſe Princes, ſo nearly allied unto the King, ſhould ſuffer that which is unworthy of them; inſtead of Honour, of Greatneſs, to find oppreſſion; inſtead of a Fortune anſwerable to their Birth and Relation, to have their ancient Patrimony torn from them, and detained by a Hand of violence, is a thing which makes our Ears to tingle, and our Hearts to riſe within us.

‘My Lords, the Loyal Subjects of England is ſo well tuned in a ſweet Harmony to the Perſon of this Prince, that He is affected with the leaſt touch upon any part of the Princely String, and anſwers it inſtantly with a Sound proportionable; if it be good and pleaſant, with joy and exultation, if harſh and diſpleaſant, with ſorrow and lamentation; but a ſorrow not womaniſh and fatuant, but accompanied with indignation, and vigorous magnanimous reſolution, to be avenged upon whatſoever dare give offence to our Royal Sovereign.

‘This then is enough to make us zealous for the redreſs of the Princes Elector's wrongs, to deſire (with impatience) to ſee him re-inveſted in his rightful Poſſeſſions, were there nothing elſe to move us to it, but our love and affection, and our duty to the King.

‘But, my Lords, there is yet another Motive, which hath a ſtrong irreſiſtable operation with us; and it is the conſideration, how much this is of importance to the good of Religion, the advancement of the Proteſtant Party, and redeeming many Souls from their Antichriſtian Bondage, which hath a double Aſpect, and relates to us, not only as we are fellow-members with them of the true Church, which obliges us to a care and defence of them, and gives us an aſſurance of a reward in Heaven: But doth more particularly concern us in point of policy and reaſon of State, by ſupporting our Allies to advance this Kingdom to the higheſt pitch of greatneſs and reputation, to make us formidable abroad to the enemies of our Church and State, and ſo enjoy peace, and ſafety, and tranquility at home.

‘For, my Lords, the Proteſtant Religion, and this Kingdom, are like Hypocrates Twins, that muſt both live and die together.

‘It is madneſs to think this State can ſubſiſt, if Religion be ſubverted; and as great a madneſs to think our Religion can continue here, if we ſuffer it to be deſtroyed and eradicated out of the Neighbour-Countries; which can no more be, (that is, our Religion and this Kingdom be preſerved) when our Neighbours of the ſame Religion and Belief with us to be conſumed, than a Fort can hold out, when all the Out-works be taken; or the Heart preſerved when a Gangrene hath ſeized on the outward parts of the Body.

‘My Lords, as the true Religion is in the Truth, the Heart of England, which gives it Life, and makes it flouriſh with ſtrength and power; ſo is England (in Politick reſpect) the Heart of the Proteſtant Religion in all the other Parts of Chriſtendom; and upon occaſion, muſt ſend out ſupply into all the Neighbouring-Countries profeſſing the ſame Religion with it; which (to be themſelves in ſafety) muſt be under the Protection of this Fort, under contribution to this Garriſon.

‘And on the other ſide, if theſe Countries be one after another invaded, and poſſeſſed by the Enemies of our Religion, that great tye of Religion between us, and thoſe bonds be diſſolved, which only can unite and ſtrengthen our mutual affections and relations, as if they get one part, their appetite will encreaſe ſoon to ſwallow up another.

‘Firſt the Palatinate, then the other parts of Germany, afterwards the Low-Countries, and then let us think in what condition England will ſtand; it will be left as a Cottage in a Vineyard, as a Lodge in a Garden of Cucumers, as a beſieged City, when all the defences are gone, it will ſoon fall to be a prey of the Enemy.

‘My Lords, this Conſideration likewiſe works with the Commons of England; and as the Wiſe Man is to have his Eyes in his Head, and look before him, ſo they do look before them, and had rather ſee this evil met half way, than ſtay till it come to them; rather ſee the eating Gangrene of the Auſtrian Ambation in Germany, than tarry till it ſeize upon the Vital Parts of this Iſland, and the death of Religion inevitably follow.

‘This buſineſs took up a ſerious debate, and after much time, and many Arguments ſpent upon the Subject, the Knights, Citizens annd Burgeſſes aſſembled in Parliament came to this reſolution which was here read: This they have commanded me to repreſent unto your Lordſhips, and deſire your Lordſhips will joyn ‘with them in a tender of the like advice unto His Majeſty in approbation of His Royal Intendments.

‘And likewiſe, that His Majeſty may be moved in the Name of both Houſes, to recommend this Buſineſs unto His Parliament of Scotland, to have the conſent and furtherance of that Kingdom; that as we be Brethren in mutual affection, in an equal tye of duty and allegiance unto the King our Sovereign; ſo we may be Brethren alſo in the ſame tender Care, and loving Zeal, for the good and ſupport of His Majeſties Kindred, and their Reſtitution, with their ancient Inheritance, and the ſafety of the Reformed Churches.

Directions for the due execution of the Office of Clark of the Market of His Majeſties Houſhold, throughout this Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales: And for the Surveying and Sealing of the conſtant Reele appointed to be uſed by all Clothiers and workers in Cloth and Yarn, and for the encreaſe of the Poors Wages labouring therein;

Reciting,

Concerning the Clark of the Market, and the conſtant Reel.

‘WHereas ſeveral Complaints have been heretofore made, as well unto King James of ever Bleſſed Memory, in His Life-time, and unto His Majeſty that now is, as unto the Lords and others of His Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy-Council, and to divers of His Majeſties Juſtices of Aſſize in their Circuits, and Juſtices of Peace of ſundry Counties in His Majeſties Realm at their Seſſions, of the great abuſes, deceipts, and falſities, frequently uſed by and among Weavers Combers, Spinſters, and other Workers and Makers of Woolen-Cloth and Yarn, by the daily falſifying their Yarn, as well in the length of the Reel-ſtaff, as in the number of the Threds, and of the differences grown among themſelves concerning a conſtant Reel for the Reeling of Yarn to be kept, and for the encreaſe of the Wages for the Poor, according to the Statutes quinto Eliz. and primo Jacobi, for remedy and reformation whereof, and for ſetling of a conſtant Courſe for the ſaid Reel, and encreaſe of the Poors Wages, it hath been upon great advice thought fit, that the ſaid Courſe of keeping of a conſtant Reel throughout all the Cloahing-Countries of this His Majeſties Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales, and the encreaſe of the Wages for the Poor, might proceed and go on for the general good of the whole Common-wealth: And in regard the Reel-ſtaff had been lately encreaſed a fifth or ſixth part longer than had been accuſtomed, all Spinſters ſhould have for the Spinning and Reeling of Six double Knots on the double Reel, or Twelve on the ſingle Reel, a Penny, which is more by Two-Pence in the Shilling than formerly they have had: And that all Labourers, and other Artificers imployed about the Trade of Cloathing, and Yarn-making, ſhould have the like encreaſe of Wages. And for eſtabliſhing the ſame, His Majeſty hath, by His

'Letters Patents, bearing date the 22*d* day of January now laſt 'paſt, for Himſelf, His Heirs and Succeſſors, willed, ordained, and 'appointed, as well for avoiding all future deceit in making of 'Cloath and Yarn, and for preſervation of Peace between Buyer 'and Seller, Workmaſter and Servant; and all Clothiers, Weavers, 'Combers, Spinſters, and other Workers Makers of Cloath 'and Yarn, either Woollen or Linnen, within this Realm of 'England, and Dominion of Wales, that there be a conſtant Reel 'provided and kept by all and every Cloathier, Weaver, Comber, 'Spinſter, and other Workers and Makers of Cloath and Yarn, 'either Woollen or Linnen, within all and every the Counties of 'this Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales, and in all Cities, 'Burroughs, and Towns-Corporate, and other places where the 'making of Cloath or Yarn, either Linnen or Woollen, is uſed, 'the ſaid Reel to be called a Cloath-Reel, or Reel-ſtaff, and to be 'of one yard about the ſingle Reel, and two yards or two ells about the double Reel, every knot containing fourſcore threds, for 'all Yarn whatſoever both Woollen and Linnen, the ſame to be 'kept and continued as a conſtant Reel between Buyer and Seller, 'Workmaſter and Servant, whereby the truth of the ſame may 'appear to all perſons trading in Cloath or Yarn; the Surveying, 'Searching, Sealing, and overſight whereof, as of the encreaſe 'of the Wages of the Poor, His Majeſty hath by His ſaid Letters 'Patents committed and appointed unto His well-beloved Servant, 'John Etherington, one of the Yeomen of His Majeſties Chamber, 'and to Henry Stracey, for the term of one and thirty years, with 'the like Fees and Allowances for the ſame their Service, as the 'Clark of the Market of our Houſhold hath for Weights and Meaſures; a Schedule whereof is hereunto annexed: and that they 'attend their ſaid Service but once a-year as the Clark of the Market doth, and that they and the ſaid Clark of the Market do travel 'and ſit together, as ſhall be moſt commodious for themſelves, and 'the good eaſe of the Commons; as by His Majeſties Letters Patents more at large appeareth.

'And whereas His Majeſty hath been informed, that many unconſcionable perſons within this His Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales, have and do uſe ſeveral Weights and Meaſures 'with the greater to buy, and with the leſſer to ſell, and do alſo 'uſe falſe and deceitful Beams and Ballances, to the great loſs and 'defrauding of His Majeſties Subjects, and eſpecially of the poorer 'ſort, who are moſt ſenſible of the ſame: And whereas the Clark 'of the Market, by the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, ought 'by his Office to inquire of the ſaid abuſes, and puniſh and reform 'the ſame, and ought alſo to ſet reaſonable and indifferent Rates 'and Prices upon Victual, and other Proviſions, chiefly in times of 'His Majeſties Progreſs, and to foreſee that the ſame be wholeſom, 'and of good condition and quality in their ſeveral ſorts; and ought 'alſo to inflict as well pecuniary as corporal puniſhment upon the 'Offenders, according to the ſeveral qualities and degrees of their 'offences: And whereas complaint hath been made unto Us, of the 'great negligence uſed in the execution of the ſaid Office, partly 'for that divers which are truſted as Deputies to execute the ſame, 'have been hitherto ignorant what their Power and Authority is,

An. 1636.

'and partly becauſe divers of them have been very careleſs and remiſs, and reſpecting only their own private gains, extort unjuſt 'Fees, and either for favour or reward ſpare the Offenders, and 'neglect the publick Service wherewith they are truſted.

'And becauſe the Clark of the Market of His Majeſties Houſhold, and His Deputies, may be encouraged to execute their Offices and Places with integrity, and may have their juſt and reaſonable Fees allowed, and may not exact unjuſt Fees or Rewards, to 'the grief or oppreſſion of His Majeſties loving Subjects; therefore His Majeſty hath thought fit to limit and expreſs the due Fees 'which the Clark of the Market, or his Deputies may require and 'take, as the ſame hath been heretofore examined and approved of, 'by the Lords, and others then Officers of the Green-Cloath, and 'ſo remain recorded in His Majeſties Compting-houſe; a Schedule 'whereof we have hereunto annexed: and whoever ſhall take 'any greater Fee or Reward than by this ſaid Schedule is expreſſed, 'upon Complaint made by any of His Majeſties loving Subjects, 'finding themſelves juſtly grieved therewith, to the Lord Steward, 'Treaſurer, or Comptroller of His Majeſties Houſhold, the Party 'offending ſhall have his deſerved puniſhment, and the Party 'wronged ſpeedy recompence for the ſame.

'And to the intent that His Majeſties Service may be the better performed, we ſtraitly charge and command the Clark of the Market, 'that he make no Deputy or Deputies from henceforth, but ſuch 'as ſhall be of ſufficiency and ability to perform the Place, and 'which ſhall not be either Vintner, Inn-holder, Victualler, or other Tradeſmen uſing the Trade of buying and ſelling: and that 'this His Majeſties Proclamation, for the better inſtructing of all 'His loving Subjects, ſhall, before the Feaſt of St. Michael the 'Arch-Angel now next coming, be proclaimed in every Market-'Town throughout this Realm of England, and Dominion of Wales, 'and be hanged up and faſtened in a Table in every Market-place by 'an Officer, where it may continue to be ſeen and read by any that 'will: And further, that it ſhall be read in every Pariſh-Church 'before the ſaid Feaſt of St. Michael the Arch-Angel next coming, 'immediately after Evening-Prayer, upon the Sunday or Holy-day, 'by the Miniſter or Clark of the Church; and ſo from thenceforth 'at every Feaſt, of the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin Mary, 'and the Feaſt of St. Michael the Arch-Angel by the ſpace of five 'years next coming, and ſhall be hanged up and preſerved in every 'Church in a Table, to be ſeen and read at all times by any that 'will; and that the defaults of Officers, Miniſters, Clarks, and 'Churchwardens in this behalf, ſhall be inquired of, and puniſhed 'by His Majeſties Juſtices of Aſſize, and Juſtices of Peace in their 'Seſſions, according to their diſcretions, as contemners of His Majeſties Royal Commandment.

'And His Majeſty doth ſtraitly will and command, That all His 'Juſtices of Aſſize, Juſtices of Peace, Sheriffs, the Clark of the 'Market, his Deputy and Deputies, and the ſaid John Ethrington 'and Henry Stracey, their Deputy or Deputies, and all Majors, 'and other Officers of Cities, Burroughs, Liberties, and Towns-'Corporate, High-Conſtables, Petty-Conſtables, Tything-men, 'and other His Majeſties Officers and Miniſters in all Places whatſoever, ‘ever, do cauſe this preſent Proclamation to be duly executed, and be from time to time aiding and aſſiſting to their utmoſt to the Clark of the Market, and his Deputies, and to the ſaid John Ethrington and Henry Stracey, their Executors, Adminiſtrators and Aſſigns, and their Deputies, in the due execution of their Offices reſpectively; and that the ſaid Clark of the Market, as well now as hereafter, for the time being, be alſo aiding, furthering, and aſſiſting unto the ſaid John Ethrington, and Henry Stracey, their Deputy and Deputies, in the due execution of their ſaid Office, as they and every of them tender His Majeſties Service herein, the Common-wealth of this Realm, and His Majeſties high diſpleaſure.

A Declaration of the Fees anciently belonging to the Clark of the Market, for the execution of his Office.

Concerning the Pope's Nuntio in England.

AT the latter end of this Year Seignior Gregorio Panzani, the Popes Nuntio in England, and Major Bret, our Engliſh Agent at Rome from the Queen, being diſcharged from their Negotiations, Seignior Gregorio Con (a Scot) was appointed by the Pope to ſucceed Panzani as his Nuntio, and Sir William Hamilton (a Scot) ſent hence Ledger to Rome.

Before this time the Congregation of propagating the Faith at Rome, having good hopes of the Converſion and Reduction of England to their obedience, conſtituted Cardinal Barbarino, Nephew and Vice-Chancellor to the late deceaſed Pope, Patron and Protector of the Engliſh and Scottiſh Nations, as Cardinal Ludovicus was of the Iriſh; who to facilitate their Deſign, erected a ſpecial Society of four Orders of Jeſuits in England, whereof the Popes Legate for the time being, reſiding in England, was chief Patron, and Cardinal Barbarino the Principal Superintendent.

Prynn, Baſtwick and Burton, June 14.

IN Trinity Term this year there came a remarkable cauſe to Hearing and Cenſure in the Star-Chamber upon the information of the Kings Attorny-General againſt John Baſtwick Doctor in Phyſick, Henry Burton Batchelor of Divinity, and William Pryn Barriſter at Law, Defendants.

The Scope of the Information againſt theſe Defendants, was for Writing and Publiſhing Seditious, Sciſmatical and Libellous Books againſt the Hirarchy of the Church, and to the Scandal of the Government.

To this Information the Defendants prepared their Anſwers, but their Councel were backward to ſign them, for fear of offending the Court of Star-Chamber, but it was ſaid on the other ſide, that their Anſwers were of that nature as their Councel thought not fit to ſign them. The Defendants did petition the Court that to ancient Preſidents they might ſign their own Anſwers with their own Hands, and declared that they would abide by the cenſure of the Court if they did not make good what was contained therein, which was refuſed by the Court, unleſs they brought their Anſwers ſigned by Councel; then they tendred to the Court a croſs Bill, wherein they ſet forth the ſubſtance contained in their Anſwers, and deſired it might be accepted, but neither was admitted of by the Court; ſo it was declared by the Court that the Anſwers of Mr. Prynn and Dr. Baſtwick not coming into Court in regular way, in due time, according to the courſe of that Court, they ſhould be proceeded againſt, pro confeſſo; yet Prynn and Baſtwick left their Anſwers ſigned with their own hand at the Office, and alſo tendred another draught thereof to the Court.

Mr. Burtons anſwer was afterwards ſigned by Mr. Holt, a Bencher of Grayes-Inn, which the Court referred to the two Chief Juſtices to conſider of, and to expunge what was contained therein as unfit to be brought into Court, or was otherwiſe ſcandalous, and they expunged the whole Anſwer except ſix lines at the beginning, and three or four at the later end; Mr. Burton demanded the juſtice of the Court not to give way to that purgation of his Anſwer by the two Chief Juſtices, for that neither he or his Councel were heard before the ſaid Judges, what they could ſay in defence of their Anſwer; but it was ordered by the Court, that if he would not ſwear the Anſwer as it was expunged, and anſwer to Interrogatories, he ſhould be proceeded againſt pro confeſſo.

Mr. Burton in his Anſwer did ſet forth the ſubſtance of his Sermon, which he Preached the fifth of November, at his Pariſh-

Church in Fryday-ſtreet, the Contents of which in part appears in the Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Speech in Star-Chamber; in which Mr. Burton charges the Arch-Biſhop.

1. That in the Epiſtle the Sunday before Eaſter, we have put out (In) and made it (At) the Name of Jeſus every Knee ſhall bow, which alteration he ſaith is directly againſt the Act of Parliament.

2. That the next Innovation, and that two places are changed in the Prayers ſet forth for the fifth of November, and ordered to be read (they ſay) by Act of Parliament. The firſt place is changed thus, From, Root out the Babiloniſh and Antichriſtian Sect, which ſay of Jeruſalem, &c. into this form of words, Root out that Babiloniſh and Antichriſtian Sect (of them) which ſay, &c. The ſecond place went thus in the old, cut off thoſe workers of Iniquity, whoſe Religion is Rebellion. But in the Book Printed 1635. It's thus altered, Cut off thoſe Workers of Iniquity who turn Religion into Rebellion.

Next that the Prayer for the Navy is left out of the late Book for the Faſt.

And in the Book entituled News from Ipſwich fol. 2 d. there is mention made of the firſt Innovation in the laſt years Faſt as injoyned to be without Sermons in London, the Suburbs and other Infected places contrary to the Orders of other Faſts in former times, they ſay, whereas Sermons are the only means to humble men, &c.

The ſecond Innovation, they ſay, is, That Wedneſday was appointed for the Faſt-day, and that this was done with this intention, by the example of this Faſt without Preaching, to ſuppreſs all the Wedneſday Lectures in London.

The third Innovation is, That the Prayer for ſeaſonable Weather was purged out of this laſt Faſt-Book, which was (ſay they) one cauſe of Shipwracks and Tempeſtuous Weather.

The forth Innovation is, That there is one very uſeful Collect left out, and a Clauſe omitted in another.

The fifth Innovation is, That in the ſixth Order for the Faſt, there is a paſſage left out concerning the abuſe of faſting in relation to merit.

The ſixth Innovation is, That the Lady Elizabeth and her Princely Children are daſhed (that's their Phraſe) out of the new Collect, whereas they were in the Collect of the former Book.

The ſeventh Innovation is, That theſe words (who art the Father of thine Elect, and of their ſeed) are changed in the Preface of that Collect, which is for the Prince and the Kings Children, and with a moſt ſpiteful Inference, That this was done by the Prelates to exclude the Kings Children out of the number of Gods Elect; and they call it an intolerable Impiety and horrid Treaſon.

In Dr. Baſtwicks Anſwer there were theſe paſſages, That the Prelates were Invaders of the Kings Prerogative-Royal, Contemners and Diſpiſers of the whole Scriptures, Advancers of Popery, Superſtition, Idolatry and Prophaneſs; alſo that they abuſed the Kings Authority to the oppreſſion of His Loyal Subjects, and therein expreſſed great Cruelty, Tyrany and Injuſtice; and in the execution of

An. 1637. of this impious performance, they ſhewed neither Wit, Honeſty nor Temperature, nor were they either ſervants of God or of the King, (as they ought to be indeed) but of the Devil, being Enemies of God and the King, and of every living thing that was good. All which the ſaid Dr. Baſtwick declared he was ready to maintain.

Mr. Prynn his Anſwer was much againſt the Hirarchy, but in more moderate and cautious expreſſions, and in the concluſion of his Anſwer ſaid, that what was contained therein, and which he then tendred to the Court, though not accepted, he would ſtand to and make it good, and abide the Cenſure of the Court, if he failed to do the ſame, might his Anſwer be but read.

All the ſaid three Defendants ſtanding at the Bar, the Court cauſed the Information to be read, and no Anſwer being put in, nor filed on Record, in the Court, the Court began to proceed to Sentence. But the Defendants before the Court ſpake, cryed out for Juſtice, that their Anſwers might be read, and that they might not be condemned unheard: nevertheleſs the Court proceeded becauſe their Anſwers were not filed on Record; and the Lords continued ſpeaking till three of the Clock in the Afternoon, whoſe Speeches we took verbatim in Characters, and writ them out afterwards at large, but lending them to a Friend to peruſe, whom we cannot call to mind, he dealt unfriendly with the Author, and never reſtored them again: wherefore he is neceſſitated to be brief in the narration of this remarkable Cauſe, which he had reduced into good order and method, containing alſo Excellent Speeches made that day in that Cauſe.

The Court proceeded to Sentence, and fined each of the Defendants, Prynn, Baſtwick and Burton, 5000 l. a-piece to the King, and adjudged the two later to ſtand in the Pillory at Weſtminſter, and there to loſe their Ears; [and that Mr. Prynn having once loſt his Ears before, by ſentence of this Court, Anno 1633] wherefore he was now ſentenced to have the remainder of his Ears cut off, and alſo it was decreed that he ſhould be ſtigmatized on both Cheeks with S. L. ſignifying a Seditious Libeller. And in June 30 the above named three Defendants loſt their Ears, the Hangman rather ſawing off the remainder of Prynn's Ears, than cutting them off: they were all likewiſe committed cloſe Priſoners, one to the Caſtle of Lanceſton in Cornwall, another to the Caſtle of Lancaſter, and a third to Carnarvan-Caſtle in Wales, and afterwards removed to remote Iſlands, where they were kept cloſe Priſoners; the Wives of Baſtwick and Burton, not being allowed after many Petitions to have acceſs unto them, nor to ſet footing in the Iſland; neither was any Friend permitted to have acceſs to Mr. Prynn.

Here followeth part of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Speech, in reference to the ſaid Innovations charged upon him by the Priſoners at the Bar; to every one of which the Arch-Biſhop gave a particular Anſwer; but for clearer ſatisfaction read the Speech at large in the Appendix.

Part of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury's Speech at the Cenſure of Prynne, Baſtwick and Burton.

My Lords,

‘I Shall not need to ſpeak of the infamous courſe of Libelling in any kind, nor of the puniſhment of it, which in ſome caſes was Capital by the Imperial Laws, as appears.

‘Nor how patiently ſome great men, very great men indeed, have born Animo civili (that's Sueton his words) Laceratam exiſtimationem, the tearing and rending of their Credit and Reputation, with gentle, nay, a generous mind.

‘But of all Libells, they are moſt odious which pretend Religion; as if that of all things did deſire to be defended by a Mouth that is like an open Sepulcher, or by a Pen that is made of a ſick and loathſom Quill.

‘For my care of this Church, the reducing of it into Order, the upholding of the External-Worſhip of God in it, and the ſetling of it to the Rules of its firſt Reformation, are the Cauſes (and the ſole Cauſes, whatever are pretended) of all this Malicious Storm, which hath lowred ſo black upon me, and ſome of my Brethren; and in the mean time, they which are the only, or the Chief Innovators of the Chriſtian world, having nothing to ſay, accuſe us of Innovation; they themſelves and their Complices in the mean time being the greateſt Innovators that the Chriſtian world hath almoſt ever known. I deny not but others have ſpread more dangerous Errors in the Church of Chriſt; but no men in any age of it have been more guilty of Innovation than they, while themſelves cry out againſt it, Quis tulerit Gracchos.

‘And a great trouble 'tis to them, that we maintain that our Calling of Biſhops is Jure Divino, by Divine Right. Of this I have ſaid enough, and in this place, in Leightons Caſe, nor will I repeat: Only this I will ſay, and abide by it, That the Calling of Biſhops is Jure Divino, by Divine Right, though not all adjuncts to their Calling. And this I ſay in as direct oppoſition to the Church of Rome, as to the Puritan humour.

‘And I ſay further, That from the Apoſtles times, in all ages, in all places, the Church of Chriſt was governed by Biſhops, and Lay-Elders never heard of, till Calvin's new-fangled deviſe at Geneva.

‘For the main ſcope of theſe Libels, is, to kindle a jealouſie in mens minds, that there are ſome great Plots in hand, dangerous Plots (ſo ſays Mr. Burton expreſly) to change the Orthodox Religion eſtabliſhed in England, and to bring in, I know not what, Romiſh Superſtition in the room of it, as if the external decent Worſhip of God could not be upheld in this Kingdom, without bringing in of Popery.

‘But to return to the buſineſs: what is their Art to make the World believe a change of Religion is endeavoured? What! why, forſooth, they ſay, there are great Innovations brought in by the Prelates, and ſuch as tend to the advancing of Popery.

‘Now that the vanity and falſhood of this may appear, I ſhall humbly deſire your Lordſhips to give me leave to recite briefly all the Innovations charged upon us, be they of leſs or greater moment, and as briefly to anſwer them. And then you ſhall clearly ſee whether any cauſe hath been given of theſe unſavoury Libels,

An. 1637.

‘and withal whether there be any ſhew of cauſe to fear a change of Religion; and I will take theſe great pretended Innovations in order, as I meet with them.

See them in the whole Speech at large.

Part of the Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Speech at the Cenſure of Prynn, Baſtwick and Burton.

‘ONe thing ſticks much in their Stomachs, and they call it an Innovation too, and that is, bowing or doing reverence at our firſt coming into the Church, or at our nearer approaches to the Holy Table, or the Altar, (call it whether you will) in which they will needs have it, that we worſhip the Holy Table, or God knows what.

‘To this I Anſwer, Firſt, That God forbid we ſhould worſhip any thing but God himſelf.

‘Secondly, That if to worſhip God when we enter into his Houſe, or approach his Altar, be an Innovation, it is a very old one.

‘For Moſes did reverence at the very Dore of the Tabernacle, Numb. 20. Hezekiah, and all that were preſent with him, when they had made an end of Offering, Bowed and Worſhipped, (2 Chron. 29.) David calls the People to it with a Venite, O come let us worſhip, and fall down, and kneel before the Lord our Maker (Pſal. 95.) And in all theſe places (I pray you mark it) 'tis bodily-worſhip.

‘Nor can they ſay, that this was Judaical-worſhip, and now not to be imitated, for long before Judaiſm began, Bethel, the Houſe of God, was a place of Reverence, (Gen. 28.) therefore certainly of, and to God.

‘And after Judaical-worſhip ended, Venite, adoremus, as far upwards as there is any track of Liturgy, was the introitus of the Prieſt all the Latine Church-over.

‘And in the daily Prayers of the Church of England this was retained at the Reformation, and that Pſalm, in which is Venite Adoremus, is commanded to begin the Morning-Service every day: And for ought I know, the Prieſt may as well leave out the Venite, as the Adoremus; the calling the people to their duty, as the duty it ſelf, when they are come.

‘Therefore even according to the Service-Book of the Church of England, the Prieſt and the People both are called upon, for external and bodily Reverence and Worſhip of God in his Church. Therefore they which do it, do not Innovate. And yet the Government is ſo moderate (God grant it be not too looſe the while) that no man is conſtrained, no man queſtioned, only religiouſly called upon, Venite adoremus, come, let us Worſhip.

‘For my own part, I take my ſelf bound to worſhip with Body, as well as in Soul, when-ever I come where God is worſhipped. And were this Kingdom ſuch as would allow no Holy-Table ſtanding in its proper place (and ſuch places ſome there are) yet I would worſhip God when I came into his houſe. And were the times ſuch, as ſhould beat down Churches, and all the curious carved work thereof, with Axes and Hammers, as in Pſalm 74. and ſuch times have been) yet would I worſhip in what place ſoever I came to pray, though there were not ſo much as a ſtone laid for Bethel. But this is the miſery, 'tis ſupertition now adays for any man to come with more reverence into a Church, than a Tin-

‘ker and his Bitch come into an Ale-houſe; the Compariſon is too ‘homely, but my juſt indignation at the profaneneſs of the times, ‘makes me ſpeak it.

‘And you my honourable Lords of the Garter, in your great ſo‘lemnities, you do your Reverence, and to Almighty God, I doubt ‘not, but it is verſus Altare, towards his Altar, as the greateſt place ‘of Gods reſidence upon Earth; I ſay the greateſt, yea greater ‘than the Pulpit, for there ’tis hoc eſt Corpus meum, this is my Body; ‘but in the Pulpit, ’tis at moſt but, hoc eſt Verbum meum, this is my ‘word. And a greater reverence (no doubt) is due to the Body, ‘than to the word of our Lord. And ſo in Relation, anſwerably ‘to the Throne where his Body is uſually preſent, than to the ‘Seat, whence his word uſeth to be proclaimed. And God hold it ‘there at his word; for, as too many men uſe the matter, ’tis hoc ‘eſt verbum Diaboli, it’s the word of the Devil, in too many places; ‘Witneſs Sedition, and the like to it. And this reverence ye do ‘when ye enter the Chappel, and when you approach nearer to of‘fer: And this is no Innovation, for you are bound to it by your ‘Order, and that’s no new thing.

‘I humbly crave pardon of your Lordſhips for this my neceſſary ‘length, and give you hearty thanks for the noble Patience, and ‘your juſt and honourable Cenſure upon theſe men, and for your ‘unanimous diſlike of them and defence of the Church, but becauſe ‘the buſineſs hath ſome reflection upon my ſelf, I ſhall forbear to ‘cenſure them, but leave them to Gods Mercy and the Kings Ju‘ſtice. See the ſpeech at large in the Appendix.

THe Report of this Cenſure, and the ſmart execution thereof flew quickly into Scotland, and the diſcourſe among the Scots were, that the Biſhops of England were the cauſe thereof, that they muſt expect to have a Star-Chamber erected in their Kingdom to ſtrengthen their Biſhops power there, beſides the High-Commiſſion which was there already erected: and about this time a ſtrange accident happened in offering an affront to a Biſhop at Edenburgh as followeth.

On the 23*d.* of July next following the ſaid Cenſure of Prynn, Baſtwick and Burton (being five Weeks and odd days) there happened a great Tumult at Edenburgh in Scotland about the in-bringing of the Service-Book or Common-Prayer; where no ſooner was the Liturgie began to be read at the great Church in Edenburgh (the Biſhop and Dean being in their Whites) but the People in the Church with great outcries and clamors threw a Stool at the Head of the Biſhop, crying a Pape, a Pape, Antichriſt, Antichriſt, ſtane him, ſtane him; and the Magiſtrates then preſent had much to do to preſerve the Biſhop from the fury of the People; but of this Tumult more fully hereafter.

Concerning which Tumult the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury makes this Memorial in his Diary on April 29. 1638. viz. The Tumult in Scotland about the Service-Book offered to be brought in, began July 23. 1637. and continued increaſing by fits, and hath now brought that Kingdom in danger; no queſtion but that there is a great concurrence between them (meaning the Scotch Covenanters) and the Puritan party in England) having a great aim there to deſtroy me in the Kings opinion, &c.

An. 1637.

Now that we are come in order of time to make mention of the Tumults and diſorders in Scotland about the Service-Book, we beg leave for a while to make a ſtep into Scotland before we proceed further at preſent in home-affairs, and accept a Summary Account of the Riſe, Progreſs, and ſeveral ſteps in that Tumult, and the Conſequences which thereupon followed.

A Summary Account of the Commotions in Scotland from July 23. 1637.

Preparations for divers years by-paſt were made for the inbringing of the Service-Book into Scotland, to have Uniformity in Divine Worſhip, and Church-Government between the two Kingdoms: formerly the Prelacy was quite or almoſt ruined in Scotland, but in latter times by degrees built up again, by all the ways and means which King James the 6th and King Charles the 1ſt could deviſe, though with great averſeneſs of the Noble-men, Gentry, and the greater part of the Miniſtry; and by this time that Work was almoſt brought to perfection, for of the fourteen Scottiſh Biſhops nine were Privy-Councellors; the Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews, Primate of Scotland, was alſo Lord Chancellor, and many of the reſt had alſo good State-employments, and gainful Offices in the Civil, and had all the Eccleſiaſtical in their own Power; for the Layicks, who were joyned with them in Commiſſion, for moſt part declined that Employment.

Since the Synod held at Perth in the Year 1618. they had no National Aſſembly, yet there remained a kind of Face or Name of Provincial Synods, Presbyteries, and Parochial Seſſions.

But of late the high Commiſſion was erected, and a Book of Canons for that Church ſet forth by the Kings Authority, and all the Subjects of Scotland were injoyn'd to ſubmit to the Epiſcopal Cenſure; and then their Conſiſtories, Claſſes, and Presbyteries, were held in the nature of Conventicles, and there remained not the ſhadow of their former Eccleſiaſtical Policy.

Moreover a Liturgy for that Church being framed, and at this time finiſhed, and ordered to be Publiſhed by Royal Authority, and to be received throughout that whole Kingdom, His Majeſty Publiſhed His Reaſons for Impoſing the ſame to this effect.

That King James, after His coming into England, promoted that work in His life time.

That His Father of Bleſſed Memory, immediately after His coming into England, comparing the decency and uniformity of Gods Worſhip here in England, obſerved (eſpecially in the Liturgy of the Church) with that diverſity and deformity in Scotland, where no ſet or publick form of Prayer was uſed, bethought Himſelf ſeriouſly how His firſt Reformation in that Kingdom might begin, at the publick Worſhip of God, and chiefly by an Unity and Uniformity in the publick Prayers and Service of the Church. Concerning which divers Conſultations were had with the Biſhops, and others of the Clergy of moſt eminent Note in that Kingdom: But thoſe deliberations received ſome oppoſition, and many intermiſſions till the Year 1616. in a general Aſſembly held at Aberdeen, His Royal Father by His Letters and vehement Inſtance of His Commiſſioners there preſent, made the neceſſity of a publick Liturgy apparent. A Book in purſuance of an Act of that Aſſembly was framed by thoſe that were deputed for that purpoſe, and was by the Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews ſent up to His Royal

Father, who punctually peruſed it, and had it reviſed by ſome of that Kingdom here in England; and after His and their Obſervations, Additions, Mutations, Expunctions, He ſent it back to be recommended to that whole Church, being for ſubſtance, frame, compoſure much about one with that which was now commended to them: Which had been then received, if the King His Father had not dyed, whilſt theſe things were in doing, before they could receive their Period. That which moved King James to haſten that Liturgy, and an High-Commiſſion-Court was to curb ſuch of His Subjects in Scotland as were inclined to Puritaniſm, and who would be medling with State Matters in their Pulpits, and ſometimes not ſpare the King Himſelf. His Majeſty that now is reſolved to purſue that Deſign, and required the ſame Service-Book tranſmitted by His Father to that Church, to be remitted to Him. Which having received (after many ſerious Conſultations had with divers of the Biſhops and Clergy of that Kingdom, here preſent in England, and after advice by Letters and Inſtructions to the reſt at home, and after many humble Remonſtrances and Advertiſements made by them, of the reaſons of ſome alterations for the removing of ſome conceived difficulties) His Majeſty was content the Book ſhould come out as now it was Printed, being fully approved by them. And that this was compoſed in ſubſtance not different from that of England, that the Roman Party might not upbraid Us with any material differences in Our Liturgies, and yet in ſome few alterations differing from it, that it might be truly reputed a Book of that Churches own compoſing, and eſtabliſhed by His Royal Authority, as King of Scotland.

King James dies whilſt the Liturgy was in framing.

King Charles I. purſues the ſame Deſign, and putteth the Liturgy in print, as now it is compoſed.

And that together with this Book His Majeſty ſent certain Inſtructions to the Biſhops of that Kingdom; that notwithſtanding He had eſtabliſhed it by His Authority, yet they ſhould proceed with all moderation, and diſpence with ſuch things contained in the Book as they ſhould find them, either not well perſwaded of them, or willing to be informed concerning them, or did hope that time and reaſon might gain to a better belief of them.

Adviſing the Biſhops to proceed with moderation.

The time appointed for the firſt reading of the Service-Book in all Churches was Eaſter-day 1637. which was publiſhed by Proclamation. At which time (as the King declareth) no ſymptoms of any conſiderable oppoſition did appear, yet upon good conſideration; and for the further tryal of Mens minds, the reading of it was delayed till the 23*d* of July next enſuing, to the end that the Lords of the Seſſion, (which in England are called the Judges of Cauſes in Term-time in Weſtminſter-Hall) and others who had any Law-buſineſs might ſee the ſucceſs of it before the riſing of the Seſſion, which always ends the firſt of Auguſt, and ſo might, at their return into the Countries, report the receiving of this Book at Edenburgh, it being ſo ordered, that the Book ſhould be read only in the Churches of Edenburgh, and Parts adjacent. And notice hereof was publiſhed in the ſeveral Pulpits the Sunday immediately before.

The Liturgy appointed to be read on Eaſter-day.

But deferred till the 23*d* of July.

Accordingly on the 23*d* of July the Service-Book was begun to be read in Edenburgh in St. Giles's Church, (commonly called the great Church) where were preſent many of the Councel, both both the Arch-biſhops, and divers other Biſhops, the Lords of the Seſſion, the Magiſtrates of Edenburgh, and a great Auditory of all ſorts of People.

No ſooner was the Book opened by the Dean of Edenburgh, but a number of the meaner ſort (many of them being Women) with clapping of their Hands, execrations and outcries, raiſed an hideous noiſe and hubbub. The Biſhop of Edenburgh, who was to Preach that day, ſtept into the Pulpit (being immediately above the Reading-place) with thoughts of appeaſing the Tumult, and preſently a Stool was thrown at his Head, but diverted by the hand of one preſent. The Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews, Lord Chancellor, and other great Perſons, having no reverence from the Multitude, but entertained with clamors and imprecations, the Provoſt, * Bailiffs, and others of the Councel of the City, came from their places, and with much ado, and in great confuſion, thruſt out of the Church thoſe People that had made the Tumult, and ſhut the Church doors againſt them. After which the Dean read the Service. But ſuch were the out-cries, rapping at the Doors, throwing in of Stones at the Windows by the Multitude without, who cry'd a Pape, a Pape, Antichriſt, pull him down, that the Bailiffs of the City were inforced again to leave their places to appeaſe their fury.

Service and Sermon being ended, the Biſhop of Edenburgh, who had Preached, repairing to his Lodging, diſtant not many paces from the Church, was invironed and near trodden to death by the People, had he not been ſuddenly reſcued by ſome who obſerved his danger, and by whom he was recovered, almoſt breathleſs, into his Lodging.

The Biſhop in great danger.

The ſame morning the Service was read in the next Church to St. Giles's, yet not without noiſe and tumult, and in the Gray-fryars Church, the Elected Biſhop of Argile beginning to read, was by the Peoples exclamations and threatnings inforced to give over, after the reading of the Confeſſion and Abſolution.

The Service-Book read in other Churches, but interrupted.

Between the two Sermons, the Provoſt and Bailiffs of Edenburgh being called by thoſe of the Kings Councels that were in Town, then aſſembled at the Lord Chancellors Lodging, undertook to do their uttermoſt for the peaceable reading of the Service in the afternoon; accordingly the Book was read in St. Gile's, and ſome other Churches; but after Evening-Prayer the Tumult was far greater than in the Morning; for the Earl of Roxborough, Lord-Privy-Seal, returning to his Lodging with the Biſhop of Edenburgh in his Coach, had his Coach and Coach-man ſo pelted with Stones, and preſſed upon by the Multitude for having the Biſhop in it, that they were brought in danger of their lives, and with much ado recovered their Lodging, and were only preſerved by the help of his Lordſhips Footmen, who with their Swords kept off the croud of People.

The Earl of Roxborough, and the Biſhop pelted with Stones.

The next day the Council cauſed a Proclamation to be made in deteſtation of this Tumult, and to diſcharge all tumultuous meetings and concourſes of People in Edenburgh upon pain of death. The Magiſtrates and Perſons in Authority diſavowed theſe diſorders, wherein none of quality had yet appeared.

A Proclamation made againſt the Tumult.

The Magiſtrates of Edenbrough endeavour to diſcover the Actors in the uproar.

After theſe things the Magiſtrates of Edenburgh were commanded to aſſemble the Council of the City, to reſolve what courſe ſhould be held for finding out the Movers and chief Actors in the Uproar, and to make report to the Privy-Council, which report they made accordingly with a deteſtation of that Tumult, and a promiſe of their beſt diligence to find out the Authors and Abettors thereof, and their beſt aſſiſtance for the quiet eſtabliſhing and reading of the Service-Book in all their Churches.

The Miniſters require protection in reading the Service-Book.

The Miniſters of the City being loth to undertake the reading of it, without ſecurity given for the ſafety of their Perſons, the Lords of the Council ordered, that the Provoſt, Bailiffs, and Town-Council of Edenburgh, ſhould adviſe concerning ſome Obligatory Act to be made for the peaceable Exerciſe of the Service-Book, to which they agreed, and promiſed, that (ſince their former Readers had refuſed to read that Book) if in the mean time the Miniſters themſelves would read it, they would take order for their ſecurity, and alſo for their ſetled Maintenance; and ſo an Act was drawn up by the Kings Advocate, to which the City-Magiſtrates aſſented, and which the Council paſſed, and entred it into the Council-Book.

Auguſt 7. 1637.

This Uproar at Edenburgh was highly diſpleaſing to the Court of England, and the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury expreſſed his thoughts of the management of this Buſineſs by the Biſhops and others in Scotland, in his Letter to the Earl of Traquair, dated Auguſt 7. 1637. in theſe words.

The Arch-biſhop of Canterburies Letter to the Lord Trequare, Dated Auguſt 7. 1637.

My Lord,

I Think you know my opinion, how I would have Church-Buſineſs carried; were I as great a Maſter of Men, as (I thank God) I am of Things; 'tis true, the Church as well there as elſewhere hath been over-born by violence, both in matter of Maintenance and Juriſdiction: But if the Church will recover in either of theſe, ſhe and her Governors muſt proceed, not as ſhe was proceeded againſt, but by a conſtant temper ſhe muſt make the World ſee ſhe had the wrong, but offer none; And ſince Law hath followed in that Kingdom, perhaps to make good that which was ill done; yet ſince a Law it is, ſuch a Reformation or Reſtitution would be ſought for, as might ſtand with the Law, and ſome expedient be found out how the Law may be by ſome juſt expoſition helped, till the State ſhall ſee cauſe to aboliſh it.

His Majeſty takes it very ill, that the buſineſs concerning the ſtabliſhment of the Service-Book hath been ſo weakly carryed, and hath great reaſon to think himſelf and his Government diſhonoured by the late Tumult in Edenburgh July 23. and therefore expects that your Lordſhip, and the reſt of the Honourable Council, ſet your ſelves to it, that the Liturgy may be eſtabliſhed orderly, and with peace, to repair what hath been done amiſs: For His Majeſty well knows the Clergy alone have not power enough to go through with a buſineſs of this nature; and therefore is not very well ſatisfied with them, either for the omiſſion in that kind, to adviſe for aſſiſtance of the Lords Council, or for the preparation

An. 1637. or way they took. For certainly the Publication a week before, that on the next Sunday the Prayers, according to the Liturgy, ſhould be read in all the Churches of Edenburgh, was upon the matter to give thoſe that were ill-affected to the Service time to communicate their thoughts, and to premeditate and provide againſt it, as it is moſt apparent they did.

Nor is His Majeſty well ſatisfied with the Clergy, that they which are in Authority were not advertized, that they might attend the countenancing of ſuch a Service, ſo much tending to the Honour of God and the King; And I am verily perſwaded, if that accident of the Marriage of your Kinſman had not carried your Lordſhip out of the City that day, ſome things would not have been altogether ſo bad, and my Lord Privy-Seal would have had the better aſſiſtance.

Neither was this the beſt Act that ever they did to ſend away their Letters apart, without acquainting the Council, that their Advertiſements might have come by the ſame Meſſenger, together with their joynt advice, which way was beſt to puniſh the offenders, at leaſt the prime and chief of them, and which to prevent the like diſorders; and after ſo long time of preparation to be to ſeek who ſhould read the Service, is more than ſtrange to me, unleſs they think ſuch a buſineſs can do it ſelf: but His Majeſty, out of His Piety and Wiſdom, gave (by the Meſſenger which the Biſhops ſent) ſuch full directions, both to the Lords of the Council, and the Lords of the Clergy, as I hope will ſettle the buſineſs from further trouble. But the Proclamation which you have now ſent up to the King I have not yet ſeen.

Of all the reſt, the weakeſt part was the interdicting of all Divine Service till His Majeſties Pleaſure was further known. And this, as alſo the giving warning of the publiſhing, His Majeſty, at the firſt reading of the Letters, and report of the Fact, checked it, and commanded me to write ſo much to my Lord of St. Andrews, which I did; and your Lordſhip, at the Council July 24. ſpake very worthily againſt the interdicting of the Service: For that were in effect as much as to diſclaime the Work, or to give way to the inſolency of the baſer Multitude, and His Majeſty hath commanded me to thank you for it in His Name; but the diſclaiming the Book as any act of theirs, but as it was His Majeſties Command, was moſt unworthy; 'tis moſt true, the King commanded a Liturgy, and it was time they had one, they did not like to admit of ours, but thought it more reputation for them (as indeed it was) to compile one of their own; yet as near as might be they have done it well. Will they now caſt down the Milk they have given, becauſe a few Milk-maids have ſcolded at them? I hope they will be better adviſed, certainly they were very ill adviſed, when they ſpake thus at the Council-Board; but, my Lord, of this there was not one word in the Letter. So I hope they have done with that.

Auguſt 7. 1637. W. Cant.

At this time the Lords of the Council, as they complained to the King of this diſorder, ſo they ſpared not to lay the greateſt blame of it upon the Biſhops, which appears from the following Letter written by the Earl of Traquair to the Marqueſs of Hamilton.

Auguſt 7. 1637.
Dr. Burnets Memoirs of Duke Hamilton.

My Noble Lord,

A*T the meeting of the Council here at* Edenburgh the 23d of this inſtant, we found ſo much appearance of trouble and ſtir like to be amongſt people of all qualities and degrees, upon the urging of this new Service-Book, that we durſt no longer forbear to acquaint His Majeſty therewith, and humbly to repreſent both our Fears and our opinions, how to prevent the danger at leaſt; our opinions of the way, we would wiſh His Majeſty ſhould keep therein, or before he determine what courſe to take for pacifying of the preſent ſtir, or eſtabliſhing of the Service-Book hereafter; wherein (all I will preſume to add to what the Council hath written) is to intreat your Lordſhip to recommend to His Majeſty, that if he be pleaſed to call to himſelf any of the Clergy, he would make choice of ſome of them of the wiſeſt and moſt calm diſpoſitions; for certainly ſome of the leading Men amongſt them are ſo violent and forward, and many times without Ground and true Judgment, that their want of right underſtanding how to compaſs buſineſs of this nature and weight, doth often breed us many difficulties, and their raſh and fooliſh expreſſions, and ſometimes attempts both in private and publick, have bred ſuch a fear and jealouſie in the Hearts of many, that I am confident, if His Majeſty were rightly informed thereof, he would blame them, and juſtly think, that from this and the like proceedings ariſes the grounds of many miſtakes amongſt us. They complain'd that the former Ages have taken from them many of their Rents, have robbed them of their Power and Juriſdiction, and even in the Church it ſelf, and form of Gods Worſhip, have brought in ſome things that require Reformation; but as the deeds of theſe times, at the leaſt the beginning thereof, were full of notour and tumultuary diſorder, ſo ſhall I never think it will prove for the good either of Gods Service or the Kings, by the ſame ways or manner of dealing to preſs to rectifie what was then done amiſs. We have a wiſe and judicious Maſter, who will nor can urge nothing in this poor Kingdom, which may not be brought to paſs to His contentment; and I am moſt confident, if he ſhall be graciouſly pleaſed to hear His faithful Servants inform Him of the truth, he ſhall direct that which is juſt and right; and with the ſame aſſurance I do promiſe Him Obedience. The Intereſt your Lordſhip hath in this poor Kingdom, but more particularly the Duty you owe to His Majeſty, and the true reſpect I know you have ever carryed to His Majeſties Honour, and the good of His Service, makes me thus bold to acquaint your Lordſhip with this buſineſs, which in good faith is by the folly and miſ-goverment of ſome of our Clergy-men, come to that height, that the like has not been ſeen in this Kingdom of a long time; but I hope your Lordſhip will take in good part my true meaning, and ever conſtruct favourably the affections of Traquair.

An. 1637.

As concerning the carriage of the Biſhops and Clergy in Scotland before theſe Tumults happened, there is a Learned Perſon of that Nation, a friend to Moderation in Epiſcopal Government, and diſliking violent Actions of the Covenanters, who hath lately written a * Hiſtory called Memoirs, wherein, among other remarkable things he hath this Paſſage.

* Memoirs of the Dukes of Hamilton, fo. 29, 30, 31.

THe People of Scotland had drunk in a deep prejudice againſt every thing that ſavoured of Popery: this the Biſhops judged was too high, and therefore took all means poſſible to leſſen it, both in Sermons and Diſcourſes, mollifying their Opinions, and commending their Perſons, not without ſome reflections on the Reformers. But this was ſo far from gaining their Deſign, that it abated nothing of the Zeal was againſt Popery, but very much heightened the rage againſt themſelves as favouring it too much.

There were alſo ſubtile Queſtions ſtarted ſome years before in Holland about Predeſtination and Grace; and Arminius his opinion, as it was condemned in a Synod at Dort, ſo was generally ill reported of in all Reformed Churches, and no where worſe than in Scotland: But moſt of the Biſhops, and their adherents, undertook openly and zealouſly the defence of theſe Tenets. Likewiſe the Scottiſh Miniſters and People had ever a great reſpect to the Lords-day, and generally the Morality of it is reckoned an Article of Faith among them: but the Biſhops not only undertook to beat down this opinion, but by their Practiſes expreſſed their neglect of that day; and after all this they declared themſelves avowed Zealots for the Liturgy and Ceremonies of England, which were held by the Zealous of Scotland all one with Popery; upon theſe Accounts it was that they loſt all their Eſteem with the People.

Neither ſtood they in better terms with the Nobility, who at that time were as conſiderable as ever Scotland ſaw them; and ſo proved both more ſenſible of Injuries, and more capable of reſenting them. They were offended with them, becauſe they ſeemed to have more Intereſt with the King than themſelves had, ſo that favours were mainly diſtributed by their recommendation: they were alſo upon all affairs, nine of them were Privy-Councellors, divers of them were of the Exchequer, Spottiſwood, Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews was made Chancellor, and Maxwell Biſhop of Roſs was fair for the Treaſury, and engaged in a high rivalry with the Earl of Traquair, then Treaſurer, which tended not a little to help forward their ruine. And beſides this they began to pretend highly to the Tyths and Impropriations, and had gotten one Learmouth a Miniſter preſented Abbot of Lindoris, and ſeemed confident to get that State of Abbots, with all the Revenue and Power belonging to it, again reſtored into the hands of Church-men, deſigning alſo, that according to the firſt Inſtitution of the Colledge of Juſtice, the half of them ſhould be Church-men.

This could not but touch many of the Nobility in the quick, who were too large ſharers in the Patrimony of the Church, not to be very ſenſible of it.

They were no leſs hateful to the Miniſtry, becauſe of their Pride, which was cryed out upon as unſupportable. Great Complaints were alſo generally made of Simoniacal Pactions with their Servants, which was imputed to the Maſters as if it had been for their advantage, at leaſt by their allowance: They alſo exacted a new Oath of Intrants, (beſides what was in the Act of Parliament for obedience to their Ordinary) in which they were obliged to obey the Articles of Perth, and ſubmit to the Liturgy and Canons: They were alſo making daily In-roads upon their Juriſdiction, of which the Miniſters were very ſenſible, and univerſally their great rigour againſt any that favoured of Puritaniſm, together with their medling in all Secular Affairs, and relinquiſhing their Dioceſſes to wait on the Court and Council, made them the Object of all Mens fury.

But that which heightned all to a Criſis, was their adviſing the King to introduce ſome Innovations in the Church by His own Authority; things had proſpered ſo ill in general Aſſemblies, that they thought of theſe no more; and in the Parliament 1633. that ſmall addition to the Prerogative, that the King might appoint what Habits He pleaſed to the Clergy, met vigorous oppoſition, notwithſtanding the King ſeemed much concerned for it, thoſe who oppoſed it being ſharply taken up, and much neglected by His Majeſty, which ſtuck deep in their Hearts, the Biſhops bearing all the blame of it.

At this time a Liturgy was drawn for Scotland, or rather the Engliſh re-printed with that Title, ſave that it had ſome Alterations, which rendred it more invideous and leſs ſatisfactory; and after long conſulting about it, and another Book of Canons, they were at length agreed to, that the one ſhould be the form of the Scottiſh Worſhip, and the other the Model of their Government, which did totally vary from their former Practiſes and Conſtitutions, and as if all things had conſpired to carry on their ruine; the Biſhops not ſatisfied with the General High Commiſſion-Court, procured Warrants from the King for ſetting up ſuch Commiſſions in their ſeveral Dioceſſes, in which, with other Aſſeſſors, Miniſters and Gentlemen, all of their own nomination, they might puniſh Offenders.

That was put in Practiſe only by the Biſhop of Galloway, who though he was a Pious and Learned Man, yet was fiery and paſſionate, and went ſo roundly to work, that it was cryed out upon as a Yoak and Bondage, which the Nation was not able to bear.

The Bailiffs of Edenburgh troubled (at leaſt ſeemingly) at the Tumult on the 23*d* of July, writ this enſuing Letter to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

Auguſt 19. 1637. A Letter from the Magiſtrates of Edenburgh, concerning the Tumult, to the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury.

Moſt Reverend Father in God, and our very good Lord,

WE regrait from our Hearts that Tumult which did fall out in our Churches, that day of in-bringing of the Service-Book, wherein now theſe of His Majeſties Council, who have laboured the tryal thereof, will give teſtimony of our Innocency ſince that time, and how, ſince the riſing of His Majeſties Council in this ferial time, we have daily concurred with our Ordnary, and our Miniſtry for ſetling of that Service-Book, as the Right Honourable the Earl of Traquair, Lord Treaſurer, with the Biſhops of Galloway and Dunblane, will bear

An. 1637. witneſs, who have ſpared neither pains nor attendance to bring that purpoſe to a good Concluſion.

And although the poverty of this City be great, (being almoſt exhauſted with publick and common works) yet we have not been wanting to offer good means, above our power, to ſuch as would undertake that Service; and in all things wherein we have been required, we have ever been ready, really to approve our ſelves obedient, and Loyal Subjects to His Majeſty in all His Royal Commandments, which we have ever vowed to obſerve to our lives end. And being infinitely obliged to your Graces Favours, we now preſume, by theſe Lines, to give your Grace that aſſurance of obedience upon our part in this purpoſe, and in all other purpoſes, wherein we may contribute to the advancement of His Majeſties Service, or can be expected of good Subjects, whereof (if His Majeſty by your Grace ſhall be pleaſed to reſt aſſured, whatſoever any other ſhall ſuggeſt) we will accept it from you as a great accumulation of favour; for all which your Grace ſhall ever find us moſt thankful Remembrancers, and moſt ready really to expreſs our thankfulneſs, when-ever we ſhall be made ſo happy, as your Grace ſhall have occaſion to uſe our Service. Thus from our Hearts wiſhing you all Happineſs, we kiſs your Graces Hands,

Edenburgh this 19*th* of
Auguſt 1637.

Your Graces moſt Affectionate and Humble Servants the Bailiffs of Edenburgh,

J. Cockrane,

Bailiffs.

Divers Miniſters and People furiouſly oppoſed the reading of the Service-Book, and preſented this following Petition to the Lords of the Council; beginning thus:

My Lords of Secret Council. Unto your Lordſhips humbly means and ſhews,

‘WE your Subjects Mr. Alexander Henderſon, Miniſter at Lenchars, Mr. John Hamilton, Miniſter at Newburne, and Mr. James Bruce, Miniſter of Kings-Barnes, that where we were required of late, by the Moderator of our Presbytery, to receive two Copies of the new Book of Common-Prayer, and declaring our ſelves willing, each of us to receive any of the ſaid Books to read, that we might know what is therein contained before we could promiſe to practiſe it; alledging, that in the matters of Gods Worſhip we were not bound to blind obedience. It was refuſed by us, and taken out of ſome of our Hands; and yet we are now charged with Letters of Horning, decreed by your Lordſhips upon a Narrative, that we have refuſed the ſaid Books out of Curioſity and Singularity. To provide each one of us two of the ſaid Books for the uſe of our Paroches, which hath made us, who were never before acquainted with any Charge from Authority, and knowing no other way ſo juſt and void of offence to have re-

‘courſe to your Lordſhips; moſt humbly entreating, that the Charge may be ſuſpended for the Reaſons following. Firſt, Becauſe this Book is neither warranted by the Authority of the General Aſſembly, which are the Repreſentative Kirk of this Kingdom, and hath ever ſince the Reformation given directions in matters of Gods Worſhip, nor by any Act of Parliament, which in things of this kind hath ever been thought neceſſary by His Majeſty, and the Eſtates. Secondly, Becauſe the Liberty of the true Kirk, and the form of Worſhip, and Religion, received at the Reformation, and univerſally practiſed ſince, were warranted by the Acts of the General Aſſemblies, and divers Acts of Parliament, eſpecially of the Parliament 1527. and the late Parliament 1633. Thirdly, The Kirk of Scotland is a free and Independent Kirk, and her own Paſtors ſhould be moſt able to diſcern and direct what doth beſt beſeem our meaſure of Reformation, and what may ſeem moſt for the good of the People. Fourthly, It is not unknown to your Lordſhips what diſputing, diviſion, and trouble hath been in this Kirk, about ſome few of the main Ceremonies contained in this Book, which being examined, as we ſhall be ready (a competent time being aſſigned by your Lordſhips) to ſhew, will be found to depart far from the form of Worſhip and Reformation of this Kirk, and in Points moſt material to do all near to the Kirk of Rome; which for Hereſies in Doctrine, Superſtition and Idolatry in Worſhip, Tyranny in Government and Wickedneſs every way, is as Antichriſtian now as when we came out of her. Fifthly, The People have been otherwiſe taught by us, and our Predeceſſors in our Places, ever ſince the Reformation, and ſo it is likely they will be found unwilling to the change when they ſhall be aſſayed, even where their Paſtors are willing. In reſpect whereof the ſaid Letters of Horning, whoſe effect and execution thereof ought to be ſuſpended ſimpliciter in time coming. Therefore we beſeech your Lordſhips, that we may have Letters direct, charging the Perſons who have cauſed this Charge againſt us to compeir perſonally, and to bring and produce the ſaid Letters of Horning, with the Execution and Indorſations thereof before your Lordſhips at a certain day, to be ſeen and conſidered of, and in the mean time to ſuſpend them, and your Lordſhips Anſwer, We humbly pray.

To which this ſhort Anſwer was given by the Biſhop of Roſs; letting the Petitioners know, That whereas they pretend ignorance of what is contained in the Book, it appears by their many Objections and Exceptions in all parts of it almoſt, that they are too well verſed in it, but have abuſed it pitifully; the Biſhop aſſerting, that not the General Aſſembly, (which conſiſts of a Multitude) but the Biſhops have the Authority to govern the Church, and are the repreſentative Church of the Kingdom. That they will never be able (do what they can) to prove what is contained in the Service-Book to be either Superſtitious or Idolatrous, but that it is one of the moſt Orthodox and perfect Liturgies in the Chriſtian Church.

Words preſcribed at the delivery of the Sacrament according to the Engliſh Liturgy.

NOw that which ſtartled the Scots moſt, as to the Service-Book in Point of Popery, was concerning the words preſcribed therein to be uſed at the receiving of the Sacrament in the very delivery of the Bread and Wine after Conſecration, wherein there was this Alteration made by way of an Index Expurgatorius, (as the Scots termed it;) for the ancient Engliſh form ſtood thus in the Liturgy, viz. The Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt which was given for thee, preſerve thy Body and Soul unto Everlaſting Life. And take and eat this in Remembrance that Chriſt dyed for thee, and feed on him in thy Heart by Faith with Thankſgiving.

The Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt which was ſhed for thee, preſerve thy Body and Soul unto Everlaſting Life. And drink this in Remembrance that Chriſts Blood was ſhed for thee, and be thankful: But the latter words, viz. And take and eat this in Remembrance that Chriſt dyed for thee, and feed on him in thine Heart by Faith with Thankſgiving, in the one; And drink this in Remembrance that Chriſts Blood was ſhed for thee, and be thankful, in the other, were left out; and the Party Receiving is only to ſay Amen. And accordingly the ſaid latter Paſſages were omitted in the Printed Service-Book; which remarkable Alteration gave the Scots occaſion of Jealouſies, that it was done to conform to the very Roman Miſſal, and order of the Maſs, as followeth.

But part of the words at delivery of the Sacrament, omitted in the Scotch Liturgy.

Viz.	The Roman Miſſal, viz.
The Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, which was given for thee, preſerve thy Body and Soul unto Everlaſting Life; to which the Party ſhall ſay Amen.	Corpus Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti cuſtodiat Animam meam in Vitam Æternam, Amen.
The like to the Blood of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt which was ſhed for thee, preſerve &c. to Life Eternal, Amen.	Sanguis Domini noſtri Jeſu Chriſti cuſtodiat Animam meam in Vitam Æternam, Amen.

Concerning Tranſubſtantiation.

Hence the Scots apprehended it was a Deſign to introduce a Tranſubſtantiation of the Bread and Wine into Chriſts very Body and Blood, and an External Receiving of them with the Mouth, to make a compleat Sacrifice of the Maſs, which theſe Expunged Clauſes do expreſly contradict; and takes away all opinion of any Tranſubſtantiation, or Corporal Eating of Chriſts Body, or drinking his Blood in the Sacrament

The Arch-biſhop of Canterbury writes a Letter to the Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews, dated September 4. 1637. and ſo much of it as concerneth the late Tumults about the Service-Book in Scotland, followeth in theſe words.

Touching

13 Caroli.

The Arch-biſhop of Canterburies Letter to the Arch-biſhop of St. Andrews.

Touching the Tumult, I can ſay no more than I have already, and for the caſting of any fault upon your Grace, and the reſt of your Brethren, as if the thing were done precipitately, I think few Men will believe that; but that which is thought here is, that though you took advice among your ſelves, yet the whole Body of the Council was not acquainted with all your determinations, nor their advice taken, nor their Power called in for aſſiſtance, till it was too late; and that after the thing was done, you conſulted apart, and ſent up to the King without calling a Council, or joyning the Lay-Lords with yon; whereas all was little enough in a Buſineſs of this nature, and ſo much oppoſed by ſome Factious Men gathered (it ſeems) purpoſely together at Edenburgh, to diſturb this Buſineſs: And indeed, my Lord, you could not in this particular have engaged the Lay-Lords too far; and if any Lord here ſpeak too much when he thought the Service might have been received throughout all that Kingdom in one day, I hope your Grace falls as much too ſhort on the other ſide; for I hope it will be ſetled in far leſs time than ſeven years. And whereas you write, that the fault is moſt in your Miniſters, I eaſily believe that to be true, but then they ſhould have been delt withal before-hand, and made plyable, eſpecially in Edenburgh, or elſe ſome others appointed in the room of ſuch as diſliked. And ſince your Grace is of opinion, that a ſharper courſe would do more good, and that you would have taken ſuch with Mr. Ramſey, (if my Lords had not altered your opinion) His Majeſty leaves you to take that courſe both with him and others as you ſhall find fitteſt for His Service, and the Churches. And for the Poſtſcript, I am ſorry as well as you for Mr. Rollock, and that is all I have to ſay of him; ſo deſiring God to bleſs you through theſe Troubles, I leave you, &c.

W. Cant,

September 4. 1637.

On September 11. the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury writ another Letter to the Earl of Traquair, wherein he takes notice, that the Puritan Party receives incouragement by the diſturbance given to the reading of the Service-Book.

Arch-Biſhop of Canterburies Letter to the Lord Traquair, September 11. 1637.

My very good Lord,

I Have received your Letter of Auguſt 20. and am very glad to read in them, that mine came ſafe to you, by your Servant: For the Buſineſs, I had ſome little Inkling given me by my Lord Strivling about the ſtay of the Service-Book; but till I read your Letter, I did not believe it poſſible that way ſhould be given to an Interdiction, eſpecially conſidering how ſtrongly you had ever oppoſed it, and withal how weak and unconſallable (at leaſt in my Judgment) the thing it ſelf was, for they could not but foreſee, that that courſe would add a great deal of heartning and encouragement to the Puritan Party: And therefore 'tis

An. 1637. no wonder, ſuch Lords, and others as were ill-affected to the Liturgy, were eaſie in giving way to that Council, which they could not but ſee would advance their own ends; but that my Lord of Roſs ſhould give the advice, and my Lord of St. Andrews follow it with ſuch ſtiffneſs, may be a wonder to any man that knows them and the Buſineſs.

My Lord St. Andrews hath lately written to me, that my Lord of Roſs was gone into his Dioceſs; but for my part, I did not think that all the reſt would have gone away, and left the Buſineſs; for they cannot but think, that the adverſe part would make uſe of the preſent time to put further difficulties upon the Work; and therefore they ſhould have been as careful to uphold it, my Lord of Roſs eſpecially, whoſe Hand hath been as much in it as the moſt. But ſince they are gone, His Majeſty takes it extreamly well from my Lord of Edenburgh, Galloway, and Dunblane, that they ſtay and attend the Buſineſs as well as they can; but he hath expreſly commanded me to give your Lordſhips thanks for ſtaying with them, and keeping them ſo well in heart; for as the Buſineſs is now foyled, if you do not ſtick cloſe to Gods and the Kings Service in it, it will certainly ſuffer more than it is fit it ſhould.

His Majeſty likewiſe takes it exceeding well from your Lordſhip, that you have dealt with the City of Edenburgh for maintenance for ſuch as ſhall take upon them to read the Liturgy; and takes it well from the City it ſelf, from whom I have received a very fair diſcreet Letter, which I have ſhewed His Majeſty, and writ the City an Anſwer by this Return, and given them His Majeſties thanks, which indeed He commanded me to do very heartily: And in truth they deſerve it, eſpecially as the Times ſtand.

As for the Miniſters of Edenburgh, I know the refuſal of Mr. Ramſey and Mr. Rollock, but that any other of them ſtuck at it, or that any Biſhops ſeem not to be forward, is more than I heard till now; but for that of Mr. Ramſey, or any of the Biſhops that would have ſomewhat amended, if that ſhould be yielded unto now (unleſs they ſhould be able to give ſuch reaſon againſt it, as I know they cannot) it would mightily diſhonour the King, who to my knowledge hath carefully look'd over, and approved every word in this Liturgy; and I doubt it would utterly deſtroy the Service it ſelf, for while one man out of a humor diſlikes one thing, and another another thing, by that time every mans diſlike were ſatisfied, I doubt there would be but little left to ſerve God with: Beſides, it is not improbable, but that ſome men would be as earneſt to have the ſelf-ſame thing kept in, which others would have ſo fain thruſt out, what e're it be; and that may make it grow up into a formal conteſtation upon ſome particulars, and quite diſtemper the Service. But whereas you write, That ſome Biſhops ſpeak plainly, that if their opinions had been craved, they would have adviſed the amending of ſome thing: Truly for that, and in that way, I would with all my heart they had ſeen it; and why my Lord of St. Andrews, and they which were truſted by the King, did not diſcreetly acquaint every Biſhop with it, (conſidering that every Biſhop muſt be uſed in their ſeveral Dioceſſes) I know no reaſon; and ſure I am there was no prohibition upon them. And ſince I hear from others, that ſome exception is taken, becauſe there is more in that Liturgy in ſome few Particulars, than is in the Liturgy in England, why did they not then admit the Liturgy of England without more ado? But by their refuſal of that, and the diſlike of this, 'tis more than manifeſt they would have neither, perhaps, yea, none at all were, they left to themſelves. But, my Lord to your ſelf only, and in your ear, a great favour you ſhould do me, if you will get my Lord of Galloway to ſet me down in brief Propoſitions, without any further Diſcourſe, all the exceptions that are taken againſt the Liturgy by Ramſey, Rollock, or any other ; and I could be content to know who the Biſhops are, who would have amended ſomething, had they been adviſed with, and what that is which they would have ſo amended, &c.

Will. Cant.

On the 25*th*, and 26*th*. there hapned ſome further diſturbances by the confluence of the People, as the Lords of the Secret-Council were ſitting two days together, with which the Magiſtrates of Edenburgh ſeemed to be much diſſatisfied; and having at laſt quieted the People, thought fit to write this enſuing Letter to the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury, dated the 26*th*. of September 1637.

A Letter from the Magiſtrates of Edenburgh, to the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury.

Moſt Reverend Father in God, and our very Good Lord.

We do receive your Graces kind Letter, and from our hearts we do render your Grace moſt hearty thanks, and as we have hitherto found your ſpecial favour in this matter, concerning the lately imprinted Service-Book, where-anent we did write to your Grace formerly, ſhewing our dutiful and obedient reſolution, not only in our ſelves, but in the greateſt and beſt part of our Inhabitants, of whom from time to time, as we have had moſt confident aſſurance, ſo now we muſt again become new Suitors at your Graces hands, to receive from us a true information of the difference of the preſent time, and of that when we did preſume to write the occaſions thereof: which is, That ſince our laſt there hath been ſuch an innumerable confluence of people from all the corners of this Kingdom, both of Clergy and Laity, and of all degrees, by occaſion of two Council-days, and ſuch things ſuggeſted to our poor ignorant people, that they have razed out what we by great and continual pains had imprinted in their minds, and diverted them altogether from their former reſolutions ; ſo that now when we were urged by our ſelves alone, we could not adventure, but were forced to ſupplicate the Lords of Council to continue us in the ſtate they had done the reſt of the Kingdom, having hitherto forborn, either to combine with them, or to countenance them in their Supplications ; yet we will not forbear to do our Maſters Service to our power, but ſhall ſtudy to imprint in their minds, what hath been taken away : in the interim we will humbly beg your Graces Favour and Interceſſion with His Majeſty, that we may be kept ſtill in His Favour, which we do eſteem our greateſt earthly felicity, and that what courſe ſhall be taken with the reſt of this Kingdom in that matter, who have preſented many ſupplications, and with whom we have in no ways combined, that the ſame and no other may be taken with us, wherein we are confident to prevail, as much as any other within the Kingdom ; and in all things ſhall endeavour nothing more, than that we may approve our ſelves moſt dutiful and obedient Subjects. Thus relying upon your Graces Favour, as our moſt aſſured refuge, we kiſs your Graces hands, and reſt,

Your Graces moſt Affectionate and Humble Servants, the Bayliffs of Edenburgh,

All things at preſent ſeemed to be quiet.

ALL Buſineſs now for a time ſeemed to be huſhed and calmed, by reaſon of the long Vacation, which in that Kingdom beginneth always on Lammas day Auguſt the firſt, and the Harveſt which drew all ſorts of People from Edenburgh, except the Citizens; ſo that little or nothing was done between the laſt of July and firſt of October, ſave that ſome Miniſters, as is before mentioned, Petitioned the Lords of the Council for ſuſpending the Letters whereby they were charged to receive the Service-Book.

A great Conflux of People at Edenburgh.

But as ſoon as Harveſt was done, the conflux of all ſorts of the Kings Subjects, Nobility, Gentry, Miniſters and Burgeſſes, from all parts of that Kingdom, came to be ſo great at Edenburgh, and after ſuch a tumultuous manner, as that a preſent inſurrection was juſtly feared, which forced the Council (then aſſembled at Edenburgh upon the day before appointed by them, viz. the 17th of October) to make three Proclamations, the firſt to give notice, that on that day nothing ſhould be treated of at the Council-Table concerning Church-buſineſs, until the Lords might ſee the times and meeting of His Majeſties Subjects more quiet and peaceable; and therefore commanded all who were come thither about any ſuch buſineſs, peaceably to repair to their own homes within twenty four hours, under the pains expreſſed in the ſaid Proclamation. A ſecond was for removing the Seſſion (which in England is called the Term) from Edenburgh to Linlithgow for fear of preſent danger, if this great concourſe of People ſhould not ſome way be diverted and divided, eſpecially conſidering that thoſe of Edenburgh were now apparently perverted and become very ill-affected to the King and Council. A third Proclamation for bringing in and burning a certain ſeditious Book newly diſperſed amongſt our Subjects there, tending to Sedition and the Diſgrace of our Eccleſiaſtical Government here in England. All which Proclamations bore date the 17th. of October 1637, and were as followeth.

Three Proclamations publiſhed.

The firſt Proclamation dated October 17. 1637.

FOrasmuch as it hath pleaſed the Kings Majeſty, upon divers good Reſpects and Conſiderations, to give Warrant and Direction to the Lords of His Majeſties Privy-Council, for diſſolving the meeting of the Councel this day, ſo far as concerneth matters of the Church. And that every one that hath come to attend this buſineſs, repair to their own dwellings, except ſuch perſons as ſhall make known to the ſaid Lords of Council juſt cauſe of ſtay, for their particular affairs: therefore the ſaid Lords according to His Majeſties Special Warrant and Direction ſent unto them, have diſſolved, and by the tenour hereof, do diſſolve the Meeting of the Council this day, in ſo far as concerns the buſineſs above written; and ordains a Macer of Councel to paſs to the Mercate Croſs of Edenburgh, and to make publication hereof; and to command every one that hath come hither to attend this buſineſs, to repair home to their own Dwellings within twenty four hours after the Publication hereof, except ſuch perſons as ſhall make known to the ſaid Lords, juſt cauſe of their further particular affairs in manner aforeſaid, under pain of Rebellion, and of putting them to the Horn, with certification to them, that if they fail they ſhall be denounced Rebels, and put to the Horn, and all their moveable Goods eſcheat to His Majeſties uſe.

The Concourſe of People being great at Edenburgh are to depart the City, fearing more Tumults, &c.

The ſecond Proclamation dated October 17. 1637.

FOrasmuch as it hath pleaſed the Kings Majeſty, upon divers great and good Conſiderations known to His Majeſty, to remove his Councel and Seſſion from the City of Edenburgh to the Burgh of Dundee: And whereas it is inconvenient at this time to remove it ſo far, His Majeſty is graciouſly pleaſed, that this next Seſſion ſhall be holden at the Burgh of Linlithgow, and the next after the Ordinary vacants at the Burgh of Dundee, and there to remain, during His Majeſties pleaſure: And therefore the ſaid Lords, according to His Majeſties ſpecial direction, ordains Macers or Officers of Armes to paſs and make publication hereof to all his Majeſties good Subjects by open Proclamation at all places needful, whereby they can pretend no ignorance thereof, but may prepare themſelves to attend at Linlithgow and Dundee accordingly.

To remove the Seſſion to Linlithgow, after to Dundee.

A third Proclamation dated October 17. 1637.

A Book Printed againſt Engliſh Popiſh Ceremonies, obtruded upon the Kirk of Scotland, called in.

FOrasmuch as the Kings Majeſty is credibly informed, that there is a certain Book entituled, A Diſpute againſt the Engliſh Popiſh Ceremonies, obtruded upon the Kirk of Scotland; and hath been ſent abroad and diſperſed in this Kingdom, purpoſely to ſtir the hearts and affections of the Subjects from their due Obedience and Allegiance: And therefore it hath pleaſed his Majeſty to give Order and Direction to his Council, that diligent inquiry and ſearch be made for the ſaid Book. And for this effect the ſaid Lords ordains Letters to be directed to make intimation and publication to all his Majeſties Subjects, that ſuch of them as have any of the ſaid Books, bring in the ſame to the Lords of his Majeſties Privy-Council, betwixt the date of his Proclamation and the   day of   and the ſaid Books being brought in, that the ſame be publickly burnt, certifying all his Majeſties Subjects, if any of thoſe Books ſhall be found, or known to have been with any of them, after the time aforeſaid, that they ſhall incur the like Cenſure and Puniſhment, as the Author may be found to deſerve, for any thing contained in that Book.

A new Tumult at Edenburgh.

UPon the publiſhing of theſe three Proclamations, and the intended removal of the Seſſion or Term from Edenburgh to Linlithgow, a new Tumult fell out in Edenburgh upon October 18. againſt the Earl of Traquair and ſome of the Biſhops, whom the People in their fury went about to have killed; (as it was apprehended) and the Biſhop of Galloway as he was peaceably paſſing along the ſtreet towards the Council-houſe, ſuddainly an inraged multitude ſurrounded him, and followed him with fearful curſing and exclamations cloſe to the Council-dore, where he was again encountred a-freſh with another multitude, who watched and lay in wait for his coming thither, and whoſe fury exceeded words; for in all probability the Biſhop had been pulled in pieces by them, if by Divine Providence he had not been defended by Francis Steward, who with much ado, got the Biſhop within the Dores of the Council-houſe, where the Lord Chief Juſtice ſtaid for him: but when he was there, that place of Higheſt Reverence within that Kingdom, was no Sanctuary for him; for they continued demanding his perſon, and threatning him with death, the report hereof, and the danger of their Lords life was brought by ſome of the Biſhops Servants preſently to the Earl of Traquair, Lord Treaſurer, and the Earl of Wigton, one of the Lords of the Council, who were then at a Lodging not far from thence; they came preſently with their followers to the relief of the Biſhop, but very hardly (for the croud of the Mutiners) could approach the Council-houſe where he was; at laſt when with much ado they got entrance, they found themſelves in no better caſe then the Biſhop was, for the peoples fury meeting with no proportionable reſiſtance, increaſed the more; the Lords thus beſet in the Council-houſe, ſent privately to the Lord

Provoſt, Bayliffs and Council of Edenburgh, (who were then aſſembled in their own Council-houſe) requiring them to come to their reſcue, and to take ſome preſent order for their ſafety: they, by one Sir Thomas Thompſon, who indeed was an eye witneſs of the truth of it returned this Anſwer, that they were in the ſame, if not a worſe caſe themſelves, if the Lords without, did not preſently pacifie the inraged multitude; that the whole ſtreets were peſtered with diſorderly people; that their Council-houſe was beſet without and thronged within, with their own threatning Citizens, who had vowed to kill all within the Houſe, unleſs they did preſently ſubſcribe to a Paper preſented to them, which for fear of their lives they were forced to do: which Paper contained theſe three particulars.

Firſt, That they ſhould joyn with them in oppoſition to the Service-Book, and in petitioning us for that purpoſe.

Secondly, That by their Authority they ſhould preſently reſtore unto their Places and Pulpits, Mr. Ramſey and Rollock their two ſilenced Miniſters.

Thirdly, That they ſhould reſtore unto his place one Henderſon, a ſilenced Reader. No better anſwer being returned, the Lord Treaſurer and the Earl of Wigton with their Followers, reſolved to go up to the Town Council-houſe, and to uſe the uttermoſt of their Authority, or (if that found no reſpect) their beſt perſwaſions for ſetling the preſent Sedition: when they came thither, they found the Magiſtrates very much diſcompoſed, and greatly perplexed; as much doubting whether ever they ſhould eſcape from the place with their lives, yet they preſently entred into conſultation with them, about what was fitteſt to be done in ſuch an exigent; and finding now that the publick divulging of that Paper, which the Magiſtrates and Council of the City had ſubſcribed, and that the open proclamation of it throughout all their turbulent Troops, and at the Croſs, had a little aſſwaged their furious rage, the Lords begun to adviſe with the Magiſtrates what was beſt to be done for the ſafety of the Biſhop of Galloway? whom they had left beſieged in the Council-houſe, it was thought fit by all, that the Lords ſhould return to our Council-houſe, and contain themſelves therein till the Magiſtrates might try what they could do for calming the Commotion in the Streets: but no ſooner had the Lords preſented themſelves to the Streets, but they were received with ſuch violence, as they were forced to retire, untill ſuch time as two of the Bayliffs, with their Sergeants and Officers, and ſuch others as they got to attend them, accompanying the Lords, and repeating to the Multitude what had been yielded to in the Paper exhibited to them, a little way was made at firſt; but preſently when they entred upon the Great-Street, the Barbarous Multitude run moſt inragedly upon them; their out-crys were horrible and confuſed, but were (as much as in ſuch a confuſion could be diſtinguiſhed) God defend all thoſe who will defend God's Cauſe, and God confound the Service-Book, and all the maintainers of it. The Lords being in preſent and eminent danger, aſſured the People that they would repreſent their grievances to His Majeſty; for when they perceived that the People refuſed to obey any Commandment which was laid upon them in the Kings Name, and that they ſlighted, ſlighted their requiring of them to retire unto their own Houſes, and to behave themſelves as quiet and good Subjects, under pain of His Majeſties higheſt diſpleaſure, they were glad then to take themſelves to entreaties and plauſible perſwaſions, but all in vain; for the People ſtill increaſed their fury, and that to ſuch a height, as that the Lord Treaſurer was thrown down, his Hat, Cloak, and White-Staff pulled from him, ſo that if by the ſtrength of ſome about him, he had not been pulled up preſently again upon his Feet, he had undoubtedly been trod to death; and in that poſture without Hat or Cloak, like a notorious Malefector, was he carried by the Croud to the Council-houſe-dore, where the Biſhop of Galloway and others of the Council were impriſoned in great fear, expecting the Lords return for their relief.

Not long after the Provoſt and Bayliffs came thither to them, told them they had uſed their uttermoſt power and perſwaſions with the beſt, ableſt, and of the prime eſteem of all their Citizens, for the appeaſing of the preſent Tumult, and ſecuring their Lordſhips perſons, but could find no concurrence nor obedience. Whereupon the Lords reſolved to ſend for ſome of the Nobility and Gentry, and others who were now frequently aſſembled for aſſiſting the Petition againſt the Service-Book, to trie what help they would or could contribute for quieting the inraged People, and what aſſiſtance they might expect from them in freeing them from the preſent danger. They being ſent for, came to the Lords, and declared unto them how much they were unſatiſfied with the preſent mutiny, offered their Perſons and Powers for ſecuring them from all violence, which the Lords in the Council-houſe accepting of, with much ado (being guarded by them whom the People would not offend) the Lord Treaſurer got to the Palace at Haly-Rood-Houſe, and the Biſhop of Galloway to his Lodging: but the Lord Provoſt was again ſet upon, as he was entring his own Houſe, and was ſo preſſed upon by the Multitude that they crouded with him into his own Yard, railing upon him and throwing Stones at his Windows, until ſome of his Servants diſcharging a Piece, which had nothing but Powder in it, they retired for fear.

This Morning Storm being a little blown over, the Council in the Afternoon met at the Palace at Haly-Rood-Houſe, and commanded a Proclamation preſently to be made at the Croſs of Edenburgh, the tenour whereof here followeth.

At Haly-Rood-Houſe the 18*th*. of October 1637.

A Proclamation requiring the Multitude to keep the peace.

Foraſmuch as a number of the Lords of His Majeſties Privy-Council, as likewiſe the Town Council of Edenburgh, being this day conveened in their ſeveral Judicatories, for His Majeſties ſpecial affairs and ſervice, they were moſt rudely interrupted in the Courſe of their proceedings, by a tumultuos gathering of the promiſcuous and vulgar Multitude, by whom His Majeſties Council and Servants in an open way was ſhamefully environed; which being a matter very diſgraceful to His Majeſties Authority and Lawfull Government, and which in the conſequence thereof may produce dangerous effects, if the like be not prevented in the time to come: therefore the Lords of the Secret Council, according to the duty of their place and charge incumbent to them, ordains a Macer of Council to paſs to the Mercate-Croſs of Edenburgh, and there by open Proclamation to diſcharge all publick Gatherings and Convocations of His Majeſties Subjects, within the City of Edenburgh, and upon the Streets thereof; as likewiſe all private meetings tending to faction and tumult; and in His Majeſties Name and Authority, to command all His Majeſties Lieges and Inhabitants within the ſaid City, to contain themſelves in peace and quietneſs: and for that effect to keep their Houſes, except when their lawful buſineſs doth otherwiſe call them, under all higheſt pain and charge, that by rigour of Law can be inflicted upon the contraveeners of the premiſes in manner above expreſſed.

Notwithſtanding this Proclamation, the next Council-day the People of Edenburgh ſent their Commiſſioners publickly to the Council-Table, to require that their Miniſters and Reader might be reſtored to them, and that they might have aſſurance for the performance of what was lately promiſed to them by their Magiſtrates, meaning thoſe three things before mentioned, which they were enforced to agree unto by the former Tumult.

After theſe Tumults there were preſented to the Lord Chancellor and Council two Petitions; one in name of all the Men, Women, Children and Servants of Edenburgh, only againſt the Service-Book: And another in the name of the Noblemen, Gentry, Miniſters and Burgeſſes againſt the Service-Book, and Book of Canons: that to the Lord Chancellor was as followeth.

My Lord Chancellor.

The Women and Childrens Petition to the Council, againſt the Service-book.

Unto your Lordſhip humbly ſhews,

'WE Men, Women, and Children, and Servants, Indwellers 'within the Burgh of Edenburgh; That whereas we being urged with this Book of Service, and having conſidered the 'ſame, we find many things therein ſo far different from that form 'of Gods publick worſhip, univerſally received and profeſſed within this Kindom; and we Burgeſſes being at our entry and admiſſion deeply ſworn for the maintenance thereof, that now 'makes our hearts to tremble, and our weak Conſciences will not 'ſuffer us to imbrace and practice this urged ſervice: We have 'this long time paſt winked at ſome former alterations, being put 'in hope that no further Innovations ſhould follow; but now we 'being oppreſſed with our juſt fears, to ſee our ſelves deprived 'of that liberty in ſerving God, which ever hath been approved 'by Church and Kingdom, in place whereof we are now like to 'be conſtrained to imbrace another, which hath neither been agitated nor received either by General Aſſembly or Parliament: in 'ſuch extremity we are moſt humbly to ſupplicate your Lordſhip, 'to conſider our preſent eſtate, that this buſineſs is a matter of ſo ‘great weight and conſequence, as ſhould not appear to be a needleſs noiſe of ſimple Women; but it is the abſolute deſire of our hearts for preſervation of True Religion amongſt us, which is dearer to us than either Eſtate or Life: and therefore we do crave, that as the reſt of the Kingdom, ſo we may have a time to adviſe, and that your Lordſhips may find out ſome way, whereby we may be delivered from the fear of this and all other Innovations of this kind, and have the happineſs to enjoy the True Religion, as it hath been by the great mercy of God reformed in this Land, and authoriſed by His Majeſty, who may long and proſperouſly reign over us. And your Lordſhips anſwer.

The Petition to the Council follows of the Noble-men, Gentry, Miniſters, Burgeſſes, againſt the Service-Book, and Book of Canons.

My Lords of Secret Council.

October 1637. A Petition of the Noble-men, &c. againſt the Service-Book.

Unto your Lordſhips humbly ſhew,

‘WE Noble-men, Barons, Miniſters, Burgeſſes, and Commons; That whereas we were in humble and quiet manner, attending a gracious Anſwer of our former ſupplications againſt the Service-Book impoſed upon us, and ready to ſhew the great inconveniences, which upon the introduction thereof muſt enſue; we are without any known deſert, far beyond our expectation, ſurprized and charged by publick Proclamation to depart out of the Town within twenty four hours thereafter under pain of Rebellion; by which peremptory and unuſual charge, our fears of a more ſevere and ſtrict courſe of proceeding are augmented, and courſe of our ſupplication interrupted. Wherefore we are conſtrained, out of the deep grief of our hearts, humbly to remonſtrate; That whereas the Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops of this Realm, being intruſted by His Majeſty with the Government of the affairs of the Church of Scotland, have drawn up, and ſet forth, and cauſed to be drawn up and ſet forth and injoyned upon the Subjects two Books; in the one whereof, called the Book of Common-Prayer, not only are ſown the ſeeds of divers Superſtitions, Idolatry and Falſe-doctrine, contrary to the true Religion eſtabliſhed within this Realm by divers Acts of Parliament; but alſo the Service-Book of England is abuſed, eſpecially in the matter of Communion, by Additions, Subſtractions, interchanging of Words and Sentences, falſifying of Titles, and miſplacing of Collects, to the diſadvantage of Reformation, as the Romiſh Maſs is, in the more ſubſtantial points, made up therein, as we offer to inſtruct in time and place convenient, quite contrary unto, and for reverſing the gracious intentions of the Bleſſed Reformers of Religion in England. In the other Book called, Canons and Conſtitutions for the Government of the Church of Scotland, they have ordained, that whoſoever ſhall affirm that the form of Worſhip inſerted in the Book of Common Prayer and adminiſtration of the Sacraments, (whereof heretofore, heretofore and now we moſt juſtly complain) doth contain any thing repugnant to the Scriptures, or are Corrupt, Superſtitious or unlawful in the Service and Worſhip of God, ſhall be excommunicated and not be reſtored, but by the Biſhop of the place, or Arch-Biſhop of the Province, after his repentance, and publick revocation of this his wicked error; beſides a hundred Canons more, many of them tending to the reviving and foſtering of aboliſhed Superſtitions, and Errors, and to the overthrow of our Church-diſcipline, eſtabliſhed by Acts of Parliament, opening a Door for what further Invention of Religion they pleaſe to make, and ſtopping the way, which Law before did allow unto us, for ſuppreſſing of Error and Superſtition, and ordaining that where in any of the Canons there is no penalty expreſly ſet down, the puniſhment ſhall be arbitrary, as the Biſhop ſhall think fitteſt. All which Canons were never ſeen or allowed in any General Aſſembly, but are impoſed contrary to order of Law appointed in this Realm for eſtabliſhing Conſtitutions Eccleſiaſtical; unto which two Books, the foreſaid Prelates have under truſt, procured His Majeſties Royal-hand and Letters Patents, for preſſing the ſame upon his Loyal Subjects, and are the contrivers and deviſers of the ſame, as doth clearly appear by the Frontiſpiece of the Book of Common Prayer, and have begun to urge the acceptance of the ſame, not only by Injunctions given in Provincial Aſſemblies, but alſo by open Proclamation and charge of Horning, whereby we are driven in ſuch ſtraits, as we muſt either by proceſs of Excommunication and Horning, ſuffer the ruine of our Eſtates and Fortunes, or elſe by breach of our Covenant with God, and forſaking the way of True Religion, fall under the wrath of God, which unto us is more grievous than death. Wherefore we being perſwaded, that theſe their proceedings are contrary to our Gracious Soveraign his pious intentions, who out of his Zeal and Princely Care of the preſervation of True Religion eſtabliſhed in this his ancient Kingdom, hath ratified the ſame in his Highneſs Parliament 1633. And ſo His Majeſty to be highly wronged by the ſaid Prelates, who have ſo far abuſed their Credit with ſo good a King, as thus to enſnare His Subjects, rend our Church, undermine Religion in Doctrine, Sacraments and Diſcipline, move diſcontent between the King and His Subjects, and diſcord between Subject and Subject, contrary to ſeveral Acts of Parliament. We out of bound duty to God, our King, and Native Country complain of the foreſaid Prelates, humbly craving, that this matter may be put to tryal, and theſe our Parties taken order with according to the Laws of the Realm: and they be not ſuffered to ſit any more as Judges, until the Cauſe be tried and decided according to juſtice. And if this ſhall ſeem to be to you a matter of higher importance than you will condeſcend unto, before His Majeſty be acquainted therewith, then we humbly ſupplicate, That this our grievance and complaint may be fully repreſented to His Majeſty, that from the influence of his gracious Soveraignty and Juſtice, theſe wrongs may be redreſſed, and we have the happineſs to enjoy the Religion, as it hath been reformed in this Land.

An. 1637.

Theſe Petitions were ſent up to the King by the Secret-Council; but the King finding no diſavowing of the late Tumults, reſolved to delay the Anſwering of their Petitions; but in the mean time commanded His Privy Council to ſignifie to His Subjects His averſeneſs from Popery, and deteſtation of Superſtition: and ſo accordingly the Council cauſed the enſuing Proclamation to be made at Linlithgow, dated December the 7*th.* 1637. being as followeth.

At Linlithgow December 7. 1637.

The Kings Declaration againſt theſe Barbarous Tumults, and that His Majeſty abhorreth all Superſtition of Popery.

FOraſmuch as the King's Majeſty having ſeen the Petition preſented to the Lords of His Privy Council, and by them ſent up to His Majeſty concerning the Service-Book, determined to have taken the ſame into Conſideration, and to have given His Gracious Anſwer there-anent with all convenience; like as His Majeſty by His Letter to His Council, of the date of the 9th. of October laſt, did ſignifie His Gracious Reſolution to the effect aforeſaid: but ſince that time His Majeſty finding (far contrary to his expectation) that ſuch diſorderly, tumultuous and barbarous Inſolencies have been committed within the City of Edenburgh upon the 18th. day of October laſt, to the great contempt of His Majeſties Royal Authority, by abuſing His Majeſties Councellors and Officers of State, with others bearing Charge and Authority under His Majeſty within the ſaid City; His Majeſty in a juſt reſentment of that foul indignity (wherein His Majeſties Honour did ſo much ſuffer) hath been moved to delay the ſignification of His Majeſties gracious intentions, in giving to His Subjects ſuch ſatisfactory Anſwers to their Petitions, as in equity might be expected from ſo Juſt and Religious a Prince: but yet His Majeſty being unwilling that His Loyal and Faithful Subjects ſhould be poſſeſſed with groundleſs and unneceſſary doubts and fears, His Majeſty is pleaſed out of His Goodneſs to declare, like as by theſe preſents he declareth, That as he abhorreth all ſuperſtition of Popery, ſo he will be moſt careful, that nothing be allowed within His Majeſties Dominions, but that which ſhall tend to the advancement of True Religion, as it is preſently profeſſed within His moſt ancient Kingdom of Scotland, and that nothing is or was intended to be done therein, againſt the laudable Laws of this His Majeſties Native Kingdom; and ordaineth publication to be made thereof in form as aforeſaid.

April 1637.

Having given the Reader the trouble with an account of the Scotiſh Affairs, from the twenty third of July to the month of December, we ſhall now revert to England, and give an account of affairs there as we left them in order of time.

At this time it was endeavoured to block up the paſſage of thoſe voluntary Exiles that were willing to go to another part of the World: where, as they ſaid, they might not meet with ſuch diſturbance as they had here in England from the Eccleſiaſtical Courts. Here followeth the Proclamation prohibiting their Exportation.

April 30. A Proclamation againſt the diſorderly Tranſporting His Majeſties Subjects to the Plantations within the parts of America.

The King being informed, that great numbers of His Subjects were yearly tranſported into thoſe parts of America, which have been granted by Patent to ſeveral Perſons, and there ſettle themſelves, ſome of them with their Families, and whole Eſtates, amongſt whom were many idle and refractory humors, whoſe only or principal end is to live without the reach of Authority; did command His Officers, and Miniſters of the Ports, not to ſuffer any Perſons, being Subſidy-Men, or of their value, to paſs to any of thoſe Plantations without a Licence from His Majeſties Commiſſioners for Plantations firſt obtained; nor any under the Degree of Subſidy-men, without a Certificate from two Juſtices of Peace where they lived, that they have taken the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and a Teſtimony from the Miniſter of the Pariſh of their Conformity to the Orders and Diſcipline of the Church of England.

May 1. 1638. Order of the Council.

THe Privy-Council made another Order for Reaſons importing the State beſt known to themſelves, ‘That the Lord Treaſurer of England ſhall take ſpeedy and effectual courſe for the ſtay of eight Ships now in the River of Thames, prepared to go for New-England, and ſhall likewiſe give Order for the putting on Land all the Paſſengers and Proviſions therein intended for that Voyage. And ſome days after His Majeſty, and the Board, taking into conſideration the frequent reſort into New-England of divers Perſons ill-affected to the Religion eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, and to the good and peaceable Government of this State, howbeit, upon the humble Petition of the Merchants, Paſſengers, and owners of the Ships now bound for New-England, and upon the Reaſons by them repreſented to the Board, His Majeſty was then graciouſly pleaſed to free them from the late Reſtraint to proceed in their intended Voyage. Neverthelеſs His Majeſty knowing the Factious diſpoſition of a great part of the People of that Plantation, and how unfit and unworthy they are of any ſupport or countenance from hence in reſpect of the great diſorders and want of Government among them, whereof ſundry and great Complaints have been preſented to the Board, and made appear to be true, by thoſe that being well-affected both for Religion and Government, have ſuffered much loſs in their Eſtates by the unruly Factious Party, did think fit and Order, That Mr. Attorney-General ſhall forthwith draw up a Proclamation expreſſing His Majeſties Royal Pleaſure to prohibit all Merchants, Maſters, and Owners of Ships, henceforward to ſet forth any Ship or Ships with Paſſengers for New-England, till they have firſt obtained ſpecial Licence on that behalf, from ſuch of the Lords of His Majeſties moſt Honourable Privy-Council, as are appointed for the Buſineſſes of Forreign Plantations by ſpecial Commiſſion.

According to this Order of the Council a Proclamation iſſued forth.

And upon the ſame Grounds and Reaſons the Paſſage to the Summer-Iſlands was barred by this Order of the Council.

A Warrant to the Lord Admiral to ſtop unconformable Miniſters from going beyond Sea.

‘WHereas it is obſerved, That ſuch Miniſters who are unconformable to the Diſcipline and Ceremonies of the Church, have and do frequently tranſport themſelves to the Summer-Iſlands, and other His Majeſties Plantations abroad, where they take liberty to nouriſh and preſerve their factious and Schiſmatical humors, to the ſeducing and abuſing of His Majeſties Subjects, and the hindrance of that good Conformity and Unity in the Church, which His Majeſty is careful and deſirous to eſtabliſh throughout His Dominions: We are therefore in His Majeſties Name, and by His expreſs Command, to pray and require your Lordſhip, to take preſent and ſtrict order that no Clergy-man be henceforth ſuffered to go over into the Summer-Iſlands, but ſuch only as ſhall have approbation on that behalf from Our very good Lords, the Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury his Grace, and the Lord Biſhop of London. And for all ſuch of them as are already gone thither without ſuch approbation, that you cauſe them forthwith to be remanded back hither.

Non-conformiſts ſell their Eſtates.

The ſevere Cenſures in Star-Chamber, and the greatneſs of the Fines, and the rigorous Proceedings to impoſe Ceremonies, the ſuſpending and ſilencing Multitudes of Miniſters, for not reading in the Church the Book for Sports to be exerciſed on the Lords day, cauſed many of the Nation, both Miniſters and others, to ſell their Eſtates, and to ſet Sail for New-England, (a late Plantation in America) where they hold a Plantation by Patent from the King.

At this time there was a great diſcourſe, that the Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury his Chaplain had Licenſed a Book containing Paſſages tending to Popery, which got ſo great ground and credit in the Report, as the State thought fit to purge themſelves from owning any ſuch Paſſages in the Book; and the Chaplain being well befriended, did acquit himſelf, as by the following Proclamation doth appear.

A Proclamation for calling in a Book, entituled an Introduction to a Devout Life; and that the ſame be publickly burnt.

May 14.

WHereas a Book, entituled An Introduction to a Devout Life, was lately printed by Nicholas Oakes of London, and many of them publiſhed and diſperſed throughout the Realm, the Copy of which Book being brought to the Chaplain of the Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury for Licenſe and Allowance, was by him, upon diligent peruſal, in ſundry places expunged and purged of divers Paſſages therein tending to Popery: Nevertheleſs the ſame Book, after it was ſo amended and allowed to be printed, was corrupted and falſified by the Tranſlator and Stationer, who between them inſerted again the ſame Popiſh and unſound Paſſages: And the Stationer is now apprehended, and the Tranſlator ſought for to be proceeded againſt according to Juſtice.

His Majeſty, out of His Pious and conſtant care, to uphold and maintain the Religion profeſſed in the Church of England in its purity, without error or corruption, doth therefore hereby declare His Royal Will and Pleaſure to be, and doth ſtraitly Charge and Command all Perſons, of what degree, quality, or condition ſoever, to whoſe hands any of the ſaid Books are, or ſhall come, that without delay they deliver or ſend them to the Biſhop, or Chancellor of the Dioceſs, whom His Majeſty requireth, to cauſe the ſame to be publickly burnt, as ſuch of them as have been already ſeized on, have been by His Majeſties expreſs Command: And to this His Majeſties Royal Pleaſure, he requireth all His Loving Subjects to yield all due conformity and obedience, as they will avoid the Cenſure of high Contempt.

Concerning Goldſmiths Shops in Cheapſide.

AT this time great care was taken about the repair of St. Pauls, and that nothing ſhould ſtand in the way, which might hinder the beauty of the Church; which occaſioned the pulling down of St. Gregories Church, to the great grief, trouble and charge of the Inhabitants, and Cheapſide leading into Pauls Church-yard, being very glorious by the ſhew of Goldſmiths Shops: for the Honour of the City, as well as for the Church, theſe following Orders were made by the Council-Board, for removing of certain Shops, which did eclipſe the glory of that Place.

A Letter from the Lords of the Council to the Lord Major and Aldermen of London.

Shops in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet that are not Goldſmiths to be ſhut up.

WHereas by Our Letters of the 15th of July, and laſt of January 1635. We did not only take notice of the preſent remiſneſs and backwardneſs in the then Lord Major and Aldermen in ſeeing Our directions, by His Majeſties expreſs Command, forthwith put in execution, by bringing the Goldſmiths, living diſperſed in the City, to ſeat themſelves either in Cheapſide or Lombard-ſtreet, for which purpoſe We required that all other Tradeſmen ſhould be removed, and give place unto them; but if they ſhould obſtinately refuſe, and remain refractory, then to take ſecurity of them to perform the ſame by a certain day, or in default of giving ſuch ſecurity, to commit them to priſon until they conform themſelves. Notwithſtanding all which His Majeſty hath been informed, that there are yet a great number of Houſes of other ſeveral Trades, that live both in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet, contrary to His Majeſties Command, and Our ſaid Directions, which neglect being both inexcuſable, and very worthy of blame; We muſt let your Lordſhip, &c. know, that if ſpeedy and effectual care be not taken by you, in ſeeing the ſame duly performed, His Majeſty will not paſs it by, without calling you to an account for it. And in the mean while We are by His Majeſties Command to require and charge you, forthwith to cauſe all ſuch Shops as are not Goldſmiths, and have been taken or opened either in Cheapſide or Lombard-ſtreet ſince Our ſaid Letters, to be preſently ſhut up and not permitted to be opened, till further order from this this Board; whereof your Lordſhip, &c. may not fail. And ſo, &c. Dated the 24th of May 1637. And Signed by,

Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury,	Earl of Dorſet,
Lord Keeper,	Lord Viſcount Wimbledon,
Lord Treaſurer,	Lord Cottington,
Lord Privy-Seal,	Mr. Comptroller,
Lord Great Chamberlain,	Mr. Secretary Cooke.

And the 7*th* of July following this further Order was made, in the inner Star-Chamber.

Star-Chamber, July 7. 1637.

Shops in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet which are not Goldſmiths to be ſhut up.

Whereas their Lordſhips did this day take notice, that contrary to the Orders and Directions of their Lordſhips, divers Tradeſmen which are not Goldſmiths, do contemptuouſly open again their Shops, both in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet, though they kept them for a while ſhut; their Lordſhips greatly blaming the Lord Major and Aldermen of the City of London, that they have ſo negligently performed his Majeſties Commands, and the ſtrict Directions of the Board, by Letters of the 24th of May laſt, and before, concerning the ſhutting up of all ſuch Houſes and Shops in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet as aforeſaid, and that ſome of their Lordſhips have been Eye-witneſſes (very lately) of their diſobedience in this particular, did think fit and order, that if the Alderman or his Deputy ſhall not forthwith cauſe to be ſhut up every ſuch Shop ſtanding within his Ward in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet, which are not Goldſmiths; upon knowledge thereof the ſaid Alderman, or his Deputy, ſhall be committed to Priſon by Warrant from the Board.

And their Lordſhips did command, That this Order ſhould be ſent to the Lord Major, to the end, that notice might be given to whom it appertained.

Another Letter from the Lords of the Council, directed to the Lord Major of London; Dated the 12*th* of January 1637.

To put in execution former Directions touching ſhutting up of ſuch Houſes and Shops in Cheapſide, &c. as are not Goldſmiths.

By ſeveral Letters and Orders of this Board, and particularly that of the 24th of May, and the 7th of July laſt, we took notice how negligently the then Lord Major and Aldermen had performed His Majeſties Commands, and the ſtrict Directions of this Board, concerning the Shutting up of all ſuch Houſes and Shops in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet as were not Goldſmiths; and did Order, That if the Aldermen of the ſaid Wards, or their Deputies, ſhould not forthwith cauſe to be ſhut up every ſuch Shop ſtanding within their Wards in Cheapſide and Lombard-ſtreet, which are not Goldſmiths; the ſaid Aldermen, or his Deputy neglecting ſo to do, ſhould be committed to Priſon

Priſon by Warrant from the Board. Yet nevertheleſs, as we are informed, there are at the leaſt 24 Houſes and Shops that are not inhabited by Goldſmiths, but in ſome of them are one Grove, and one Widow Hill Stationers, one Dover a Milliner, and one Brown a Bandſeller, one Sanders a Drugſter, and one Medcalfe a Cook, one Edwards *a Girdler, do, by connivance, ſtill inhabit there, having ſome part of their Shops ſhut, and the reſt open; which contempt of theirs, and diſreſpect, and neglect of the Aldermen, or their Deputies of thoſe Wards, as we cannot but take notice of; ſo we muſt hereby pray and require your Lordſhip (without delay) to accquaint the ſaid Aldermen and their Deputies therewith, and that if they do not preſently put our former Directions in that particular in execution; we ſhall then give ſuch further Order, as ſhall teach them to know, that the Commands of this Board ought not to be ſlighted. And hereof we ſhall expect to receive a particular account from your Lordſhip, who we hope will have a better care to ſee His Majeſties Commands performed on this behalf, than your Predeceſſors have had. Panzani, the Popes Nuntio, his Letter to one of His Majeſties principal Secretaries of State.

Moſt Excellent Sir, Patron moſt Honoured,

May 31. 1637. A Letter from the Popes Nuntio.

I Would have retained my ſelf from writing to your moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip, for fear of being to you ſome impediment, I knowing your many Occupations: but I have heard from many Perſons, and in particular by Letters of Seignior Franciſco, ſometimes my Secretary, the Honourable Mention that other-whiles your moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip is wont to make of my Perſon; and having alſo oftentimes underſtood from the moſt famous Seignior Cavaliere Hamilton, and from Father John the Benedictine, how much your moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip ſtraineth in favouring of me, I have been forced to commit this rude incivility, taking in hand my Pen to give you trouble. I aſſure your moſt famous Lordſhip, that I live ſo much obliged unto you, that I ſhall never be able to pretend to give ſatisfaction for one or the leaſt particle of that which I owe; ſeeing that during my abode in London, moſt rare were thoſe days in which I did not receive from your moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhip ſome Grace in the behalf and favour of the Poor Catholicks, &c.

I muſt alſo congratulate my ſelf with your moſt famous Lordſhip, concerning the moſt Noble Manners and Behaviours of your Lordſhips Sons, the which, with their ſingular Modeſty, and other moſt Laudable Vertues, have gained ſuch an opinion amongſt them that have known them in this Court, that I could never be able to expreſs it, and the Lord Cardinal Barbarino, in particular, cannot ſatiate himſelf in praiſing them. It grieves grieves me not to have had the fortune to meet with them in this City, becauſe willingly I would have atteſted my devotion towards your moſt famous Lordſhip; to the which, and to all your moſt Illuſtrious Family, I reſt, deſiring Eternal Felicity. In the mean while I humbly intreat you to favour me with ſome Commandment, and I kiſs your Hands;

Your moſt Illuſtrious Lordſhips
moſt devout, and moſt obliged Servant,

Trin'-Term.
A Judge refuſing to take bail upon a Habeas Corpus.

SIr R. B. being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, and duly ſworn in Trinity-Term 1637. deferred to diſcharge or bail Alexander Jennings, Priſoner in the Fleet, brought by Habeas Corpus to the Bar of the ſaid Court; the return of his Commitment being, that he was committed by two ſeveral Warrants from the Lords of the Council, dated the fifth of November 1636. the firſt being read only in Court expreſſing no cauſe, the other for not paying Meſſengers Fees; and until he ſhould bring a Certificate, that he had paid his Aſſeſſment for Ship-money in the County of Bucks, they therefore remitted him. And in Michaelmas-Term after, the ſaid Jennings being brought by another Habeas Corpus before him as aforeſaid, and the ſame returned; yet he the ſaid Sir R. B. refuſed to diſcharge or bail him, but remitted him. And in Eaſter-Term, after ſeveral Rules were given for His Majeſties Councel, to ſhew cauſe why the ſaid Jennings ſhould not be bailed; a fourth Rule was made for the ſaid Jennings, to let His Majeſties Attorney-General have notice thereof, and notice was given accordingly; and the ſaid Jennings by another Habeas Corpus brought to the Bar in Trinity-Term after, and the ſame return; with this addition of a new Commitment of the fourth of May, ſuggeſting he the ſaid Jennings had uſed divers ſcandalous words in derogation and diſparagement of His Majeſties Government: he the ſaid Jennings, after ſeveral Rules in the end of the ſaid Trinity-Term, was again remitted to Priſon; and he the ſaid Sir R. B. did on the fifth of June laſt, defer to grant His Majeſties Writs of Habeas Corpus for William Pargiter, and Samuel Danvers Eſquires, Priſoners in the Gatehouſe, and in the Fleet; and afterwards having granted the ſaid Writ of Habeas Corpus, the ſaid Pargiter and Danvers were on the eighth of June laſt brought to the Bar of the ſaid Court, where the returns of their Commitments were ſeveral Warrants from the Lords of the Council, not expreſſing any cauſe; yet he the ſaid Sir R. B. then ſitting in the ſaid Court, deferred to bail the ſaid Pargiter and Danvers, and the eighteenth of June laſt made a Rule for a new Return to be received, which were returned the 25*th* of June laſt in hæc verba.

Alexander Jennings and Samuel Danvers their Caſe.

June 25.

‘Whereas His Majeſty finding that His Subjects of Scotland ‘have in a Rebellious and hoſtile manner aſſembled themſelves ‘together, and intend, not only to ſhake off their obedience ‘unto His Majeſty, but alſo as Enemies, to invade and infeſt ‘this His Kingdom of England, to the danger of His Royal Perſon, &c.

For prevention whereof, His Majeſty hath, by the Advice of His Council-Board, given ſpecial commandment to all the Lord Lieutenants of the Counties of this Realm, appointed for their Rendezvouz, in their ſeveral and reſpective Counties, there to be conducted and drawn together into a Body for this Service. And whereas His Majeſty, according to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, and the conſtant cuſtom of His Predeceſſors, Kings and Queens of this Realm, hath power for the defence of this Kingdom, and reſiſting the force of the Enemies thereof, to grant forth Commiſſions under His great Seal to ſuch fit Perſons as he ſhall make choice of, to array and arm the Subjects of this Kingdom, and to compel thoſe who are of able Bodies, and of able Eſtates, to arm themſelves; and ſuch as ſhould not be of able Bodies, but of ability in Eſtate, to aſſeſs them according to their Eſtates, to contribute towards the Charge of arraying others being able of Body, and not able in Eſtate to arm themſelves; and ſuch Perſons as ſhould be contrariant to commit to Priſon, there to remain until the King ſhould take further order therein.

And whereas the Earl of Exeter, by vertue of His Majeſties Commiſſion to him directed, for the arraying and arming of a certain number of Perſons in the County of Northampton, hath aſſeſt William Pargiter, being a Man unfit of Body for that Service, but being of Eſtate and Ability to contribute amongſt others, to pay the Sum of Five Shillings towards the arraying and arming of others of able Bodies, and wanting ability to array and arm themſelves.

And whereas We have received information from the ſaid Earl, That the ſaid William Pargiter hath not only, in a wilful and diſobedient manner refuſed to pay the ſaid Money aſſeſſed upon him towards ſo important a Service, to the diſturbance and hindrance of the neceſſary defence of this Kingdom; but alſo by his ill example hath miſled many others, and, as we have juſt cauſe to believe, hath practiſed to ſeduce others from that ready obedience which they owe, and would otherwiſe have yielded to His Majeſties juſt command, for the publick defence of His Perſon and Kingdom, which we purpoſe with all convenient ſpeed to enquire further and examine.

Theſe are therefore to will and require you to take into your Cuſtody the Perſons of the ſaid William Pargiter and Samuel Danvers, and them ſafely to keep Priſoners till further order from this Board, or until by due courſe of Law they ſhall be delivered. Yet he the ſaid Sir R. B. being deſired to bail the ſaid Pargiter and Danvers, remitted them, where they remained Priſoners till the ninth of November laſt, or thereabouts; although the ſaid Jennings, Pargiter and Danvers, on all and every the ſaid Returns, were clearly bailable by Law; and the Councel of the ſaid Jennings, Pargiter and Danvers, offered in Court very ſufficient Bail. And he the ſaid Sir R. B. being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-bench, denyed to grant His Majeſties Writs of Habeas Corpus to very many others His Majeſties Subjects; and when he had granted the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus to very many His Majeſties Subjects, and on the return no cauſe appeared, or ſuch only as was clearly bailable by Law; yet he remanded them, where they remained Priſoners very long: Which ſaid deferring to grant the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus, and refuſals and delays to diſcharge Priſoners, or ſuffer them to be bailed, are deſtructive to the fundamental Laws of this Realm, and contrary to former reſolutions in Parliament, and to the Petition of Right; which ſaid Reſolutions and Petition of Right were well known to him the ſaid Sir R. B. and were reſolved on and Enacted when he was the Kings Serjeant at Law, and Attendant in the Lords Houſe in Parliament.

Sir John Banks Knight, His Majeſties Attorney-General, Plaintiff, the Right Reverend Father in God John Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, Walter Walker, Tho. Lund, Cadwalader Powel, Richard Williams, William Catlin Clerk, Ed. Lake, Jo. Moſteyn, and George Walker, Defendants.

Proceedings upon the firſt Bill againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln.

Camera Stellat' 11 die Julij 13 Car' Regis. Proceedings againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln upon the firſt Bill.

P*Rigeons* Credit coming in queſtion, being a material Witneſs for the Biſhop, the Kings Attorney-General let fall the firſt Bill, fearing a defect of Teſtimony, and preferred a ſecond Bill againſt the Biſhop for Tampering with the Kings Witneſſes, and upon that account the Cauſe came on the 11*th* of July, which held nine days debate in Hearing; and great was the Coneourſe of People every day to the Court of Star-Chamber to hear this great Cauſe, the Biſhop being at that time much pityed by the People, who then caſt out Speeches that that Biſhop was proſecuted becauſe the State wanted Money to go to war againſt the Scots, and that it was fit he ſhould bleed in his Purſe by the Cenſure of the Court of Star-Chamber to pay a round Fine to the King of 10 or 12000 l.

This being a remarkable Cauſe, we will treſpaſs upon the Readers Patience to caſt his Eye upon Mr. Attorney-Generals Reply, and ſeveral of the Speeches made that day in Court at the paſſing of the Cenſure for the brief of that Bill and Anſwer is miſlaid, which we had once more at large.

The Information doth charge the ſaid Biſhop with a Practice unduly to gain the ſight and peruſal of certain Examinations taken by the Lords of His Majeſties Privy-Council, and commanded by them to be kept ſecret from the view of all Men, to the end unlawfully and corruptly to procure Witneſſes, directions and inſtructions for Witneſſes to make Proofs to contradict and weaken the ſaid Examinations: And for practiſing and corruptly tampering with Witneſſes to retract their former Teſtimonies, and to vary from the ſame upon their ſecond Examination: And for tampering with, and ſolliciting other Witneſſes, produced, and to be examined for His Majeſty, not to depoſe againſt the ſaid Lord Biſhop, but to conceal their knowledge, and ſay they did not remember; and for Perjury in an Affidavit made by the Defendant Catlin in this Court, and ſubordination thereof: And for other offences, as by the ſaid Complainants Information more at large it doth and may appear.

Upon full and deliberate Hearing whereof it plainly and evidently appeared to this Honourable Court, that there being another Cauſe formerly depending in this Court, between His Majeſties Attorney-General Plaintiff, and the ſaid Lord Biſhop of Lincoln Defendant, for publiſhing falſe News and Tales, to the ſcandal of His Majeſties Government, and for revealing of Counſels of State contrary to His Oath of a Privy-Councellor; one John Prigeon Gent. was in that Cauſe examined as a Witneſs for the Defendant, and by an Order made in Hillary-Term 10 Car. Regis, liberty was given to the Plaintiff to examine the Credit of the ſaid Prigeon upon certain exceptions, which were delivered into this Court: And liberty given to the Defendant alſo to examine Witneſſes to uphold and maintain his Credit; in one of which Exceptions was (amongſt other things) contained, That the ſaid Prigeon being by one Elizabeth Hodgſon, upon her Oath, accuſed to have begotten a Baſtard-Child on her Body: And being by the two next Juſtices of the Peace adjudged the reputed Father; and appealing from them to the next Quarter-Seſſions held in the ninth Year of His Majeſties Reign; to miſlead the Court of Quarter-Seſſions, and to free himſelf from that accuſation, did at ſeveral times, and by ſeveral Perſons and means, after he was ſo accuſed, labour to corrupt the ſaid Elizabeth Hodgſon, and for Money to procure her to lay the ſaid Baſtard-Child on ſome other Father, and to ſwear that ſome other, and not the ſaid Prigeon had begotten the ſaid Baſtard; and that he did labour, ſome Witneſſes that could have teſtified againſt him, touching the ſaid Baſtard at the ſaid Quarter-Seſſions, to ſuppreſs their Teſtimonies, and drew or endeavoured to draw others to equivocate upon their Oaths, when they did appear.

Mr. Gardiner, Recorder of London, made a long and witty defence for the Biſhop for ſeveral days together, much of which is repeated by ſome of the Lords in their Speeches, which (for brevity ſake) we omit; referring the Reader to the Decretal Order of the Court, which the Regiſter hath exactly drawn up, and which is mentioned at large in the Appendix; and alſo to thoſe Repetitions which ſome of the Lords do make of the Defence.

As to the firſt Bill depending againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln in the Court of Star-Chamber, it was occaſioned by the Examinations taken by ſome of the Privy-Council, of Sir John Lamb, and Dr. Sibthorp, who (amongſt divers other things) teſtified againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln, that the ſaid Biſhop did give them great diſcouragement in their Proceedings in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts againſt the Puritans; and that the Biſhop asked Sir John Lamb, what kind of People thoſe Puritans were of whom he complained, and whether they did pay the Loan-Money? to which Sir John replyed, They did conform upon that account, and paid their Money; but nevertheleſs they were Puritans, not conformable to the Church: to which the Biſhop replyed, If they pay their Monies ſo readily to the King, the Puritans are the Kings beſt Subjects, and I am ſure, (ſaid the Biſhop) the Puritans will carry all at laſt. Theſe Examinations were Sealed up, and Mr. Trumbel, Clerk of the Council, was required to keep them ſecret, and permit none to ſee them; but a diſcovery thereof was made to the Biſhop, which, amongſt other Matters of State, was the occaſion of the firſt Bill in this Court againſt the Biſhop, as the Information did ſet forth.

Sir John Banks Knight, His Majeſties Attorney-General, his Reply in the Caſe againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln.

Sir Jo. Banks his Reply in the Cauſe againſt the Biſhop of Lincoln.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

YOur Lordſhips have heard a Defence made by the Defendants Councel, that conſiſts more of obſervation than of Proof, and in examination of his Defence, I ſhall make it appear plainly, that they very much fail in their own Obſervations. In their Obſervations they have been curious in diſtinction of Times, Place, and other Circumſtances, to deſcant upon the Particulars of Witneſſes, and Men that were no Parties to the Suit; but for the main ſubſtantial Parts of the Defence they have omitted. I ſhall deſire to obſerve to your Lordſhips, that (with a great ſcandal on His Majeſties Proceedings in this Court) they have told you Stories and Tales that ſhould be ground of this Suit, viz. That it was through malice and hatred between Sir John Mounſon, Mr. Amcocks, and Prigeon; whereas it ſhall appear unto your Lordſhips, that the Suit was upon moſt juſt Grounds, for the vindicating of publick Juſtice, and that Sir John Mounſon hath done nothing in this Cauſe, but according to the Duty of his Place, and clearing his own Reputation. It will be neceſſary, ſince theſe things have been ſtirred, not for your Lordſhips Information (who knows it well) but for the ſatisfaction of the World, to clear and juſtifie His Majeſties Proceedings, that I give you ſome Information of the true Ground of this Suit, and of the neceſſity of it.

Michaelmas 4 Car. an Information was exhibited againſt my Lord Biſhop by my Predeceſſor, and that was for the contriving and publiſhing divers falſe Tales and News, to the ſcandal of His Majeſties Government, and for revealing ſome things contrary to the Duty of his Place, and Oath, as a Privy-Councellor. This Cauſe came to Iſſue, and in the examination of Witneſſes, another Iſſue happened, a collateral matter by it ſelf touching the Credit of Prigeon: Upon examination of this it fell out, (which we could, not diſcover before Publication in the firſt Cauſe) that there had been ſuch tampering, ſeducing, and labouring of the Kings Witneſſes, as never was in any Cauſe: There hath been ſuch Preparations, ſuch Inſtructions, ſuch Limitations to his own Witneſſes, to direct them how far they ſhould ſwear, to what to give anſwer, and to what not. My Lords, theſe Proceedings (if they might be ſuffered) tend totally to the ſubverſion of all Juſtice: For the Proceedings in this Court, as in all other Courts, is by examination of Witneſſes returned in Parchment not viva voce; therefore if any be inſtructed what to ſwear to, and it ſo returned in Writing, whether through threats, or for fear, or favour, or affection, it is impoſſible you ſhould give a juſt Sentence, though you intend it never ſo clear. My Lords, this appearing after Publication in the firſt Cauſe, it was time (for Example ſake) to bring this Cauſe and theſe Miſdemeanours to a publick Sentence, to be a terror to all others for the like. So as (my Lords) this Cauſe is not grounded upon the fabulous Story between Sir Jo. Mounſon, Mr. Amcooks, and Prigeon, but upon theſe juſt Grounds and Proceedings; and herein we have great cauſe to bleſs God, and magnifie His Majeſties Juſtice, that we live not under a Cobweb-Law, that taketh ſmall Flies, and lets great ones paſs. This Preſence doth tell us, that Honourable Perſons who do deſerve well have His Majeſties Favour, and their own Merits do receive a double Honour; and this perſon (how great ſoever) if he deſerve ill, he muſt receive a Sentence according to his juſt demerit.

My Lords, I ſhall come now to the particular Charges, and therein I ſhall begin with the firſt Charge, which is concerning the tampering with the four Witneſſes, who depoſed about this Baſtard-Child; wherein the ſtate of the Queſtion ſtandeth thus.

In February 10 Car. there was an Order for the examinotion of Prigeons Credit: Among other things there fell out a Queſtion concerning a Baſtard-Child, whether John Prigeon was the reputed Father yea or no? There was for the Proof of the Fact produced before the Juſtices Dr. Topham and Dr. Farmery; and before the Juſtices at publick Seſſions ſeveral Witneſſes, four of them, Lunn, Wetherel, Anne Smith, and Tub, depoſed directly, that this Prigeon was the Father of this Child; ſome by confeſſion from him, ſome by confeſſion from her ſelf being the Mother of the Child, who were preſent at the time of her delivery.

Theſe Examinations thus taken, for the truth of it that he was the Father of the Baſtard-Child, the Juſtices did certifie it in publick Seſſions accordingly. But now my Lord of Lincoln conceiveth with himſelf, that he cannot ſupport the Credit of Prigeon (which concerned him ſo much) unleſs he could get theſe four Witneſſes to vary from their former Teſtimony, and by his Agents hath laboured as you have heard. To this they have ſeemed to make ſome Anſwer: 1. The Order made 2. Maij 9 Car. and that was before Sir John Bowles, Serjeant Callis, and others; and that Order was to acquit Prigeon of the Baſtard-Child, and to lay it upon one Booth. To that I ſhall give a clear Anſwer: Firſt of all, Dr. Topham and Farmery that were the Men that took the Examinations concerning this Baſtard-Child, were not preſent at the making of this Order. Secondly, The Witneſſes, thoſe four of them that ſhould give the Teſtimony for the Proof, no one of them were preſent; and it is proved that Wetherel was hired to be abſent: And in the laſt place, this Order 2. Maij was contraried by the Order 3. Octob. when all the other Juſtices ſave Sir John Bowles were preſent at the Seſſions. And for the Order that was confirmed by the Court of Kings-Bench, it was upon the Regality of the Order, but not in reſpect of the Fact. And (my Lords) there is another Ground of it; for at that time Prigeon had ſubmitted to keep the Baſtard-Child, and given Bond to diſcharge the Pariſh, and maintain the Child. This was proved by two Witneſſes: But the offence is not concerning this Baſtard-Child; for ſuppoſe a Man had a Baſtard-Child, will that make his Teſtimony wholly void? The Charge is, that after ſuch time, as this was fully depoſed by four Witneſſes, there muſt be a labouring with them, and giving of

Money

An. 1637. Money to make a Retraction. 1. For Wetherels Retraction, your Lordſhips have heard he was examined at the Seſſions 1. Octob. that he did confeſs there John Prigeon intreated him not to appear at the Seſſions, and that he ſhould anſwer to no more Queſtions than the Court asked him; this was his depoſition at the Seſſions. Being examined in the ſecond Cauſe, there he doth mince his Depoſition, 160. Int. he ſaith Prigeon did not draw him by Bribes or Rewards to equivocate, &c. And that it was for Bribes and Rewards it appeareth by George Walkers Examination; for he ſweareth, that this Money was to be paid to a Butcher by 6 d. in a Joynt; ſo it was not given as a Bribe, but by 6 d. in a Joynt of Meat. George Walker ſweareth, that Owen and Powel ſhewed Wetherel a Dictionary, and ſhewed him the meaning of the word Equivocation and Subornation, and this Diſcourſe was related to Elizabeth Smith. To which the Recorder replyed, Mr. Attorney miſtakes himſelf; I will not (ſaith the Attorney) touch upon any thing in my Reply that will not plainly appear in the Books.

To take off this Charge concerning Wetherel, they have read Wetherels Depoſition, (againſt whom all this Proof is) to the 2, 3, 4, and 5 Int. to which Interrogatories his Depoſition is a plain Negative pregnant, made upon a leading Int. thus: Whether did Powel at the time and place aforeſaid requeſt you to write your Name to any Note at all? (to ſhew that it is leading) Witherel anſwereth Int. 5. That the ſaid Powel did not in January aforeſaid, at the place aforeſaid, requeſt him to write his Anſwer to any Note, or to any Note to ſuch effect; ſo he ſweareth he did not at that time and place ſhew ſuch a Note. The Depoſition of Walker is, That by the direction of Owen and Powel he tendered the Note, as by the direction of the Lord Biſhop. Another thing upon the examination of Wetherel, he was not examined till the 16*th* of May 13. and at that time he had Copies of Walkers Examinations, and ſo prepared himſelf.

This is the Anſwer I give to the Depoſition of Wetherel.

They had next George Walker, a Defendant, who hath confeſſed againſt himſelf ſufficient matter, for which I hope your Lordſhips will Sentence him. It is proved he was imployed to tamper with Alice Smith, and he muſt be the Man to give an account to my Lord Biſhop of the Proceedings. They ſay it was a lawful and juſtifiable thing to ask a Witneſs a Queſtion, and that Wetherel was but ask'd the Queſtion, and nothing more: My Lords, here is more than asking the Queſtion, it appeareth in the Proof that there was a Note delivered by Powel to Walker to ſubſcribe, there was ſhewing to Wetherel a Dictionary to expound the words Equivocation and Subornation; ſo it was not an asking for bare information, but a tendring of Notes to avoid equivocation in the Cauſe.

In the next place they have inſiſted upon the Depoſition of Lunn and Alice Smith; wherein they ſay, that what they have ſaid was but an Explanation of what they had formerly ſworn, and no retractation, and that it was lawful for a Witneſs to explain himſelf; but it will appear to be a plain Retractation. 1. Alice Smith did depoſe formerly, that Prigeon ſent for her, deſiring her to ſee if ſhe could get the Woman lay the Child upon any other. That was her Depoſition at the Seſſions. But in the ſecond Cauſe ſhe ſweareth it was to get her to lay the Child upon any other that ſhe reputed to be the Father of it, and not upon himſelf. And ſo for Anne Tub her Depoſition at the Seſſions, that Prigeon had offered her 20 s. to get her lay the Child upon any other but upon him; but her Depoſition in the ſecond Cauſe to lay the Child upon ſome that were the true Father: ſo here is a Depoſition that a Bribe ſhould be given to lay the Child upon any other but upon Prigeon, and now to depoſe to lay the Child upon the true Father, is a croſſing of the former Depoſition, and far from an Explanation.

They have taken ſome Exceptions to George Walker, to ſhew how improbable a thing it was, that he ſhould be a fit perſon to negotiate in this buſineſs, and they told your Lordſhips ſome Reaſons, George Walker and Prigeon were not kind, and therefore unlikely George Walker ſhould be imployed for ſupporting the Credit of Prigeon. 1. In this Particular they have not read that there was any difference between them two. 2. George Walker might be very well made choice of to be imployed, for he was a Proctor in my Lord Biſhops Court. 3. Suppoſe there were differences between them two, this was an Imployment for the Biſhop of Lincoln; for this was a Service for my Lord Biſhop, who was much engaged to maintain the Credit of Prigeon, for it appears out of his own mouth by 3 Witneſſes, that it had coſt him 1200 l. and 1000 l. to maintain his Credit; for Prigeon at this time had taken the Child upon him, but the Service that was to be done was for the Biſhop, and therefore George Walker a fit man for it. But they ſay here was only a Queſtion asked of Alice Smith, whether ſhe had ſaid ſo? here was no tampering with her to alter her Depoſition: Look upon the Depoſition of Alice Smith to Int. 29, 31. and there it will appear unto your Lordſhips, it was not a bare asking of a Queſtion; did not he ſay it was to lay the Child upon any other that was the true Father? but the very queſtion asked, they endeavoured to have proved in the ſecond Cauſe. The queſtion was, whether that Alice Smith could depoſe that Prigeon ſaid unto her, get the Woman to lay the Child upon the true Father? George Walker brought word to the Biſhop they could get nothing from her as yet.

E. Smith Int. 29. ſaith, Alice Smith did then and there ſeriouſly affirm, that Prigeon offered her 5 l. to lay the Baſtard-Child upon any other, and not upon him: and then this Deponent asked her, if ſhe were not miſtaken, for he meant it was to lay the Child upon any other that was the right Father; ſhe anſwered again, no, ſhe was not miſtaken, the 5 l. was to procure her to lay it upon any other, and not upon him; and ſaid further, that the Woman had acknowledged Prigeon had twice the uſe of her Body againſt the Church-wall; that George Walker, in the preſence of Powel and Owen, and others, related unto them the ſubſtance and effect of the whole Diſcourſe with Alice Smith at Morton; and one of them deſired to write his Letter to the Biſhop to give him ſatisfaction, and told this Deponent it was deſired by Owen and Powel to give his Lordſhip an account of their Journey; in which Letter was expreſſed, that they could gain nothing out of Alice Smith.

An. 1637.

My Lords, to confirm this we read George Walker Int. 17. who proveth the like preſſing of Alice Smith; and in the end the conſequence was, Alice Smith did vary from what ſhe had formerly ſworn.

Next place they have given ſome Anſwer unto Robert Richardſon, to the 35. Int. (which being read was to this effect) ſaith, John Prigeon the elder did acquaint this Deponent to come and ſpeak with the Biſhop of Lincoln before his Examination, and accordingly his Lordſhip did in his little Parlour ſpeak with this Deponent, and did then and there acquaint him, that he had ſeen the Copy of the Examinations taken at the Seſſions, and did ask this Deponent who drew up the ſame; this Deponent anſwered his Lordſhip, that he did it as Clark of the Peace: the Biſhop ſaid, he was miſtaken in the Penning of the Depoſition, for that he ſhould have ſaid, to lay the Child upon the right Father, and not otherwiſe. The Biſhop ask'd how he would interpret the Record; he ſaid he could think no otherwiſe of it than as the Witneſs had ſworn. And this Deponent further ſaith he verily believeth his Lordſhip would have had him to have altered the Record, that it might not trench upon Prigeons Credit, for he would have had him given it a right Father.

My Lords, your Lordſhips may obſerve firſt of all, that my Lord Biſhop ſent for Richardſon to come to him and ſpeak with him, before he ſhould be examined; then my Lord asked who drew the Depoſition of Anne Tub and Alice Smith; he told him they were drawn up in open Court; he ſaid he thought the Deponent was deceiv'd, for it ſhould be upon the right Father; ſo here was a Retractation, which was the Point in iſſue. 3. He asketh him how he would interpret the Record, and wiſhed him to be tender of Prigeons Credit.

My Lords, this is of great conſequence; for if my Lord Biſhop could have gained the razing of this Record, to lay the Baſtard-Child upon any other that was the right Father, then he had gained the Cauſe; for the tampering with Witneſſes was the Ground of the Cauſe.

The next Objection they made, was touching the fetching away of this ſame Alice Smith. They have told your Lordſhips, that ſhe was brought to Huntington, and not finding the Commiſſioners there, they brought her up to London, and here ſhe was examined, and if the Kings Council would have examined her, they might have exhibited Interr.; and they have told your Lordſhips, that the Charge was, that ſhe was ſhifted from place to place, that ſhe might not be examined as a Witneſs for the King. They have utterly miſtaken this Charge of the Information; for the Charge is, that they did ſhift her away from place to place, that ſhe ſhould not be examined as a Witneſs at the Commiſſion. 2. Of purpoſe to cauſe her to vary and retract her Teſtimony, by working with her during the time of the execution of the Commiſſion, that ſhe ſhould have been examined for the King: For this Commiſſion was executed at Bedford but twelve Miles from Huntington, where they were with Alice Smith; and if they had not an end in it, they might as well have brought her to Bedford, being but twelve Miles, as to London, being 50 Miles. 9. Martij the Commiſſion miſſion was executed at Bedford: 13. Martij executed at Leiceſter: 21. Martij adjourned and executed at Lincoln: 7. Aprilis executed at Huntington; and the very day that ſhe was examined at London, this Alice Smith they ſent unto her, and profered her Money, told her ſhe ſhould never want; ſhe went away in poor Habit, glad to borrow her Maids Cloaths, returneth again Gentlewoman-like, and lendeth Money.

They ſay, when ſhe was at London, ſhe continued there keeping an Ale-houſe at Whittingtons-Cat till the Sickneſs in Michaelmas-Term, and then was forced to go into the Country; and all that time they might have examined her for the King, living in ſo open a manner. I agree, ſhe might have lived openly at Whittingtons-Cat, and be known to the Juſtices of the Peace for keeping of an Ale-houſe, or perhaps for her good Behaviour; but how the Proſecutor of the Cauſe ſhould come to find her, I know not: when ſhe was with her Husband, all his Goods had like to have been taken in Execution, and ſhe had not 40 s. to redeem them; yet ſhe had Means enough to furniſh an Ale-houſe, and to live afterwards Gentlewoman-like. But (my Lords) they have preſſed us how we bring theſe Charges home upon my Lord Biſhop, nothing fixeth upon him they ſay; God forbid he ſhould be charged, unleſs he be an Actor or a Procurer.

1. Obſerve theſe Retractations, and theſe variations in the Depoſitions, they were procured to maintain the Credit of Prigeon: It appeareth by three Witneſſes that have been read, out of my Lord Biſhops own mouth, that the mantaining of the Credit of Prigeon hath coſt my Lord Biſhop 1200 l. and another ſpeaketh of 1000 l. If this Charge come not home to my Lord Biſhop, why ſhould he conclude himſelf of expending 1200 l. to maintain his Credit; for it did concern my Lord Biſhop, for he was his Principal Witneſs in the firſt Cauſe.

Owen and Powel were the Servants of the Biſhop; and when in their Journey they could not prevail any thing with Alice Smith, then the account of this muſt be given to my Lord Biſhop, and Walker muſt write a Letter accordingly: Cui bono, ſay they, who ſhould receive benefit but Prigeon? Prigeon was the Principal Witneſs in the firſt Cauſe, my Lord Biſhop did maintain his Credit; it was no advantage to Prigeon, for the Baſtard-Child was ſubmitted unto. And then your Lordſhips have heard what a tampering hath been with Richardſon, and that by my Lord himſelf, who ſent for him to come and ſpeak with him before he was examined; and if he had prevailed with Richardſon upon this, there had been an end of the buſineſs, for the Retractation of Anne Tub, and Alice Smith, and Wetherel, had been as he would have it; then for the leading Interr' exhibited by himſelf in this Cauſe; ſo as I ſay theſe things things trench upon the Biſhop, and upon Cadwallader Powel, and George Walker, that were imployed about Alice Smith: he procured VVetherel to ſubſcribe a Note, would have the meaning of the words Equivocation and Subornation to be expounded; and this is the Man muſt give an account of the Proceedings with Alice Smith to the Biſhop; and all this appeareth upon his own Examination.

Theſe are the things upon the firſt Charge.

An. 1637.

I ſhall proceed to the ſecond Charge, my Lord Biſhop of Lincolns ſcandal of the publick Juſtices of the Seſſions, in ſaying the Order 3. Octob. was a Pocket-Order, made in an Inne or an Ale-houſe, and before any Witneſſes were examined. Your Lordſhips may remember, that upon this Charge we made Proof, 1. That the matter of the Order was reſolved by the whole Court. 2. That what Sir Jo. Mounſon did was at the open Seſſions, and at the deſire of the other Juſtices. 3. That my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln had notice of the due making of this Order, and was ſatisfied it was juſtly and duly made; yet when Sir John Mounſon was gone into the Country, he queſtioned it, that it was not made legally, but was a Pocket-Order made in an Inne or an Ale-houſe; proved by three Witneſſes.

That which hath been ſaid againſt this Charge, That the Biſhop had reaſon to queſtion this Order 3. Octob. for J. S. told him Sir Jo. Mounſon pulled it out of his Pocket upon the Bench; it appeareth by Dr. Farmery, VVilliam Parkinſon, and Mr. Dalliſon, that my Lord Biſhop was informed the Order was duly made, yet he doth publiſh it to be made in an Inne or an Ale-houſe.

Next place they ſay Parkinſon was a ſingle Witneſs,; he was no ſingle Witneſs, neither for the tampering, nor for the ſcandal: for it appears by VVilliam Amcocks, the Biſhop would have had the Order 3. Octob. impeached; and that if he were examined, he ſhould ſay nothing: Richardſon ſaid, that the Biſhop would have had him accuſe Sir Jo. Mounſon for the undue making of the Order; ſo as I ſay for the ſcandal, and for the tampering in this kind, Parkinſon was not a ſingle Witneſs; nor in the affirming that the Biſhop ſaid it had coſt him 1000 l. to maintain the Credit of Prigeon, for Sir Thomas Mounſon and Smith both ſwear the Biſhop ſaid it had coſt him 1200 l. and Parkinſon ſpeaketh of 1000 l and ſaith further, that the Biſhop threatned to bring him into the Star-Chamber, becauſe he would not comply with the Biſhop; but they ſay againſt Parkinſon he was prepared by an Affidavit. For that, I muſt remember unto your Lordſhips that this Affidavit was made by Perkinſon upon occaſion of the abuſe offered by my Lord Biſhop at the execution of the Commiſſion; at which time the ſecond Suit was not thought of, for it was doubted whether we ſhould proceed upon the Affidavit according to many Preſidents, or by way of Information, which was the cauſe of this Information. They ſay this Report might be raiſed by Prigeon: beſides, no time appears when this ſcandal was raiſed; they are miſtaken in this, for it appeareth by Perkinſon 43. Int. that the Biſhop ſaid 20. Martij 10 Car. it was a Pocket-Order, and made before Witneſſes were examined: and then Richardſon Int. 78. to the ſame purpoſe; and E. Smith Int. 78. that this ſcandalous Report was publiſhed in March 10. They ſay here was only a breach of a Promiſe; the Biſhop only made a Promiſe to Sir Jo. Mounſon, that his Order ſhould not be examined after he was gone into the Country; and will your Lordſhips puniſh a Man for the breach of a Promiſe: The breach of the Promiſe was not the thing, as the betraying of the Truth in the Kings Cauſe, and it was the policy of the Biſhop to ſend away Sir Jo. Mounſon, and afterwards draw it into queſtion in his abſence.

I do not remember any more they have ſaid concerning this Charge. But now it appeareth upon this Charge, 1. That the Biſhop hath publiſhed that this Order was made in an Inne or an Ale-houſe, before any Witueſſes were examined, to the ſcandal of publick Juſtice. That is the firſt offence in this ſecond Charge. 2. It is ſcandalous againſt his own knowledge, proved by three Witneſſes. 3. His endeavour to ſuborn Parkinſon, 1. To ſend for him before he was examined, and would have had him ſay the Order 3. Octob. was made in an Inne or an Ale-houſe. 2. To affirm to Perkinſon, that ſome of the Juſtices had confeſſed as much, and did threaten him, that if he did not agree with the Juſtices, he ſhould be queſtioned in the Star-Chamber; and when he could not prevail with him, then he did direct him, if he were examined he ſhould anſwer only to the bare Interr'; ſo in theſe Particulars my Lord Biſhop is concerned in this Charge. Lunn, he is concerned in this alſo, for he was imployed to ſpeak with Parkinſon, and kept him from the Church, leſt he ſhould meet with Kilvert who was an Informer: And Int. 5, he wiſhed Parkinſon to anſwer to no more than to the bare Int. and he ſhould be well paid for his pains. So as I ſhall leave this ſecond Charge, which doth reflect upon my Lord Biſhop and Lunn. And whereas they have pretended, that Sir Jo. Mounſon ſhould be an Enemy to Prigeon, there was no Proof at all of that in the Books; for in truth he was the beſt means to releaſe Prigeon, to get the Order in the Kings-Bench.

The third Charge is concerning the Affidavit of Catlin 11. Maij 11 Car. made a ſcandalous Affidavit, which was, that Parkinſon told him, he came to ſwear againſt the Biſhop, and that Sir Jo. Mounſon had promiſed him 100 l. for it, and he would ſwear home, and feather his Neſt by ſwearing againſt my Lord Biſhop. 1. Your Lordſhips have obſerved what manner of Perſon he was that made the Affidavit, he appeareth by the Sentence in the High Commiſſion to be a common Swearer, a common Bail, &c. ſo infamous, as I ſhall not need to repeat the thing in the Sentence; and for any thing ſaid to ſupport his Credit, nothing will ſway with your Lordſhips Judgments.

That that Affidavit is falſe, appeareth by Parkinſons Oath; and that it was contrived in an Inne in the preſence of VValker and Moſtein is plainly proved.

In this the Defendants Councel firſt make Objection againſt the Sentence, that this Sentence was after ſuch time as he was examined; and though he be convicted of a ſcandal ſubſequent, that doth no way blemiſh his Teſtimony: 1. I ſay, by the Sentence it doth appear it was for offences done three or four years before his Depoſition taken; ſo the Sentence was for matter of offence done before his Depoſition, and the Sentence is but Declaratory of what he was then: But they have read five Miniſters, that Catlin is a Man of good Credit, and one that preacheth well, and maketh a Conſcience of an Oath. 1. Theſe Witneſſes are but ſuch Witneſſes as we produce upon our Law-wager, or for Compurgators; they ſwear only as in common Charity: every Man is bound to think another Man honeſt, unleſs they did know the contrary, and ſome of theſe Witneſſes live a great way off, ſome 40 Miles. The main part of their defence hath been to diſcredit Parkinſon, and that they

An. 1637. have done two ways: 1. They ſay he was a diſguiſed Perſon, and came in a Miniſters Habit, and called himſelf by the name of Parſon VVatſon, to entrap Catlin, and therefore a Witneſs not to be believed. 2. They do pretend that Parkinſon's Depoſition was taken to fortifie his Affidavit.

For the firſt, this great Matter that he ſhould be a diſguiſed Perſon, and forſwear his Name, and call'd himſelf by the Name of Parſon VVatſon, and Catlin not to know him, the matter was thus.

When Parkinſon did ſee what an Affidavit Catlin made againſt him, he did ſay, that this Catlin did not know him; to that end and purpoſe, going wth Mr. Culverwell a Gentleman of 400 l. per Annum, went purpoſely into Catlins company to ſee if he did know him. We ſhall prove unto your Lotdſhips, that Parkinſon did not come in any diſguiſed Habit; true, he was in a black Suit, but in no Miniſters habit, nor Coat upon it, but in a black Suit proper for a Juſtice of Peace's Clark: Your Lordſhips will rather believe that which is judicially ſworn, than extrajudicially ſpoken. I ſhall deſire to read two or three Witneſſes to prove, that Perkinſon did not come in any ſuch diſguiſed Habit; which being read, Mr. Attorney proceeded, ſaying, 1. I ſhall obſerve, that the two Witneſſes, Booth and his Wife, ſwear he did not come in any Miniſters Habit. 2. It appeareth for half an hour together Catlin did not know Parkinſon, till Mr. Culverwells laughing at Parſon VVatſons profer to Preach at Catlins Church next day.

In this third Charge I ſhall obſerve, how it trencheth upon theſe Defendants, (1.) You find Catlin guilty of Perjury in making of a falſe Affidavit againſt Parkinſon; and that he hath been formerly indited of Perjury, your Lordſhips have heard by the Sentence in the High Commiſſion. Walker and Moſtein were preſent at the contriving of the Affidavit. It was all one to Catlin whether to ſwear againſt Sir. Jo. Mounſon, or Doctor Farmery.

My Lord Biſhop of Lincoln (it ſhould ſeem) did take this as a courteſie done unto him, for he did intend to give Catlin a Living of fourſcore pounds per Annum, but that he was adviſed by Walker to ſtay this Living till this Cauſe was heard. My Lord Biſhop writ his Letter unto Richardſon on Catlins behalf, that if any Indictment were at Seſſions againſt Catlin for a Common Barrator, he ſhould ſtay the ſame, and Powel his own Servant carried the Letter. Beſides Witneſſes ſwear Catlin did boaſt of his Favour from the Biſhop: he brought Gold home with him, beſides three pound given him to bear his charges.

I ſhall now proceed unto the fourth Charge, which ſtandeth thus: 20 Martii 10 Caroli, a Commiſſion was executed at Lincoln, and this was to examine him touching the credit of Prigeon; divers Witneſſes were there produced on the Kings part. My Lord Biſhop, and other the Defendants did draw from the Kings Witneſſes what they had depoſed, and threatned ſome of them after they were examined on the Kings part; this is the Charge.

Lancelot Harpham to the 94*th Inter.* ſaith, upon this Deponents Relation my Lord Biſhop willed Lun to Call for Pen, Ink and Paper, and wiſhed this Deponent to write down the ſubſtance of what he had ſworn, which this Deponent by his Lordſhips perſwaſions did; but when his Lordſhip had read the ſame he liked it not, but wiſhed the ſaid Lunn to write down the Subſtance of this Deponents Relation, which he did accordingly, and then this Deponent ſubſcribed his Name thereunto; then the Attorney-General ſaid, here was the offence of the Biſhop to draw from Harpham the ſubſtance of what he had ſworn, the Charge being for tampering with Harpham, and other the Kings witneſſes. Bates ſaith he was ſent with a meſſage from the Biſhop to Edward Smith. Theſe things are laid as crimes upon my Lord Biſhop in this fourth Charge. (1.) In ſending for Edward Smith before he was examined, and conveying him out at the back-dore that my Lord Biſhop ſhould inſtruct him what to depoſe, ſending for him after examination, queſtioning him what he had depoſed, and told him he had ſworn maliciouſly. Next place was this Meſſage intended for Edward Smith. (3.) The threatning of Edward Smith the Kings Witneſs, that he would ſit upon his Skirts. (4.) My Lord Biſhops ſending for Harpham after he was examined, making him ſet down the ſubſtance of his Depoſition. (5.) William Amcock ſweareth that Powell ſhewed him an Interrogatory ready drawn to ſwear unto, and wiſhed him to be careful what he ſwore, when he was examined for the King; For Lunn, he ſaid, he never plaid the Knave but in this buſineſs.

As to the executing of the Commiſſion at Lincoln in March, 10 Caroli, wherein Kilvert was imployed to attend for the King: my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln called him baſe Fellow, ſawcy Fellow, baſe Raſcal, proved by three Witneſſes. The Charge is likewiſe againſt Lunn, who called him baſe Fellow, and told him if the buſineſs were over, he ſhould know he was a man. Theſe imperious Speeches from the Biſhop muſt needs diſhearten the Witneſſes that did come for the King.

Laſtly, As to the Charge for undue getting of Copies, to the intent to make a Counter-proof of the Kings Witneſſes. Your Lordſhips may remember how Allen gave Information to the King againſt the Biſhop, for the contriving of falſe News and Tales ſcandalous to the Kings Government. The Referrees that took the examination of Dr. Jo. Lamb, Dr. Sibthorpe and others, they did truſt Sir William Beecher in this examination; they gave him a Charge that the Examinations ſhould be kept ſecret, accordingly he ſealed them up, and when his waiting month was done, he delivered them over to Mr. Trumbell; yet by undue means my Lord Biſhop got Copies thereof. (1.) It appeareth by Sir William Beecher, Inter. 5. that he was moved by ſeveral perſons at Court, to let the Lord Biſhop underſtand the effect of theſe Examinations; and that my Lord Biſhop made uſe of thoſe Examinations, it appeareth by the proof that hath been read; and that the Seal was broken off, and Copies delivered to his Steward. Now whether theſe be not ſtrong preſumptions, that my Lord Biſhop had the ſight of them, I muſt leave to your Lordſhips.

My Lords, I have done with the particular Charges, and your Lordſhips have heard in the proſecution of this Cauſe, and in the proof of it a heap of Offences, all tending to the ſubverſion of publick Juſtice; a labouring, tampering, ſuborning, ſeducing and ſending away of the Kings Witneſſes to ſuppreſs the truth, to ſwear againſt the truth, and to cauſe Witneſſes to make a Retractation;

tion; a ſcandal raiſed againſt the proceedings of the Juſtices at the Seſſions, and in particular an aſperſion caſt on the perſon of Sir John Mounſon, as though he had made the Order in an Inn or an Alehouſe, before any Witneſſes were examined. I hope your Lordſhips will clear him in his Reputation, that he hath done nothing in this Cauſe but what becometh a Perſon in his place, and what at other times hath been done by him and other Juſtices in a publick manner. My Lords, theſe Offences, if they were committed by an ordinary Perſon are great Crimes in themſelves, but being done by my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, who is Pralatus, to be a Guide, a Light, a Judge among the Kings People, and to have a ſuperintendent Cure of Souls within his Dioceſs, theſe things conſidered in his Perſon muſt needs aggravate his Offences, for him that ſhould be a Light, to become Darkneſs, and a Guide to lead men into Error, a Judge to overturn the Courſe of Juſtice, in ſuborning of Witneſſes, &c. Theſe things if they be not remedied will draw upon this Nation, that Infamy that was upon the people of Greece, that they would buy and ſell teſtimony, Dare mutuum Teſtimonium: But what followed upon that, but the ſubverſion and ruine of the Common-wealth? For him that hath this ſuperintendent Cure of ſouls, to do any thing for the deſtroying of mens ſouls, it is an high Offence. Fleta lib. 5. cap. who writ in the time of E. 2. Si Perjurus, &c. That the Man-ſlayer killeth the body, but the ſuborner killeth his own ſoul, and the ſoul of him that ſweareth.

(1.) Againſt my Lord Biſhop I pray Judgement, that he may be deeply fined, and receive a declaratory ſentence of this Court, as unworthy of any Eccleſiaſtical Dignity or Sacred Orders, and to be recommended to the High-Commiſſion for that purpoſe; Paſ. 34. Eliz. in a Suit in the Star-Chamber againſt the Biſhop of St. Davids for contriving and publiſhing of a forged Will, he was here fined and referred to the High Commiſſion for further proceedings.

10. Jac. John ——— Biſhop of Down was convented before the High Commiſſion, and was there degraded for ſuborning of Witneſſes.

Third place, I deſire not only a Reparation of the Credit of Sir Jo. Mounſon, but damages for the ſcandal; and though he be neither Party nor Relator, yet damages have been given by this Court to a third Perſon.

Mich. 31. Eliz. Three Gentlemen that were no parties had 300*l.* damages given them as in the caſe of the Kings Attorney againſt Price, damages were given to a Sheriff that was no party.

Mr. Attorney-General having ended his Reply, the Court proceeded to paſs their Cenſure; ——— and the Lord Cottington firſt begun and ſpake to this effect.

The

The Lord Cottington's Speech.

My Lords,

Concerning the Biſhop of Lincoln.

‘THe buſineſs we are now met about, to put a Period unto which hath taken up ſo much time already in this Court, that I intend to be very ſhort in what I have to ſay. If we go to the Well-head, and look at the Original, (from whence theſe foul Streams have iſſued) it is very ſmall, and the inconveniences my Lord hath faln into, are rather of his own ſeeking, than any ways properly offered unto him out of the former Paſſages, which touched his reputation in this Court: However that Maxime ſtands true, Quiſq; eſt fabricator ſuæ fortunæ. I am ſure in this, that through the whole Paſſage and Current of it, he hath ſought and wrought his own overthrow; and I am ſorry that ſo great a Perſon, ſo wiſe, and ſo well-experienced a Man, and one who hath ſate here himſelf, ſhould now come to be Cenſured for ſo foul Crimes, ſo far unbeſeeming his Function, and thoſe Dignities he hath been graced withal in this Common-wealth. I find (all the way) ſeveral undue practiſes, many hainous attempts, and foul faults in his Agents, countenanced (nay maintained and ſet on) by his inſtigation, for which I hold both him and them worthy the Cenſure of this Court.

‘I promiſe brevity, therefore I omit the relating of any thing concerning the truth of the matter, which concerned Alice Smith and Elizabeth Hodgſon. If that Prigeon had been free from the getting of the Baſtard, and that he had ſuffered that way innocently; it had been better for my Lord of Lincoln to have adviſed him to a patient undergoing that affliction, and have ſtopt the publick defamations, which might grow thereupon, with as little noiſe as he might, Quam queat minimo: But theſe ſtirs which follow after, and the great Expences which my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln was at to preſerve Prigeons Reputation, plainly ſhewed there was ſomewhat more in it than ordinary, when, rather than that ſhould be tainted, my Lord would abſolutely overthrow his own.

‘Prigeon was to be a Witneſs for my Lord Biſhop, and a main perſon he was, on whom he depended for the clearing himſelf of thoſe Charges, which your Lordſhips know he was taxed withal, by the firſt Bill. In the mean time a Baſtard is laid unto him by Elizabeth Hodgſon, which in my Lords Eſtimation was much diſabling to Prigeons Teſtimony; and therefore my Lord Biſhop what doth he? He not only labours to ſuppreſs a Truth, and to conceal a fault in his Witneſs, but he will have him diſcharged of it, Quo jure quave injuria, it matters not.

‘Hereupon the Proceedings of the Juſtices of the Peace muſt be either made none, or put out of order, ſo that they ſtand inſtead of none. A new Father muſt be found, and becauſe there was a Commiſſion to be ſate upon, and Witneſſes to be examined, ſome muſt be abſented till the Commiſſion was over: others are deterred and threatned, and Sir John Mounſon and Dr. Farmary 'muſt be held for to act nothing that muſt ſtand in this Cauſe, '(though in the publick Seſſions) but their Orders in that Cauſe 'are Pocket-Orders.

'Owen and Powel, two Servants to my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, 'they ſet their Wits to work to convey Alice Smith out of the way, 'and that with Rewards of no ſmall value. Letters are written, 'and much ado there is; the ſeveral Miſdemeanours of Lunn and 'Walker are apparent enough; and Catlin he comes not behind the 'reſt, nor muſt I let him paſs, although he hath better luck in the car'riage of his knavery than any of the reſt; and for the procuring, 'gaining, and keeping of Depoſitions from the cuſtody of the 'Council-Table, and the Clarks there, it's plain enough, I will 'make my word good, and go to Cenſure.

'Cadwallader Powel I fine at 200 l. Owen I fine at as much; George 'Walker and Catlin at 300 l. a-piece.

'Lunn, (who is an Agent in all the Buſineſs) I hold him unfit 'for to be an Officer any more, (he now being a Proctor-Regiſter) 'I fine him at 300 l. And for my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, I fine 'him at 10000 l. to the King, and to be Impriſoned in the Tower 'during His Majeſties Pleaſure, and to be ſuſpended from all his Ec'cleſiaſtical Functions, both ab Officio & Beneficio; and I refer him 'over to the High Commiſſion-Court to Cenſure him as they think 'fit concerning his Degrees, and to repair Sir John Mounſons Re'putation, to pay him for the injury done to him, in particular '1000 Marks.

Sir John Finch his Speech.

My Lords,

'THis Cauſe hath held us already nine days. I find in it ſix 'Charges.

'1. The firſt and main is for tampering with Witneſſes, to re'tract their Teſtimonies, or to vary from the ſame.

'2. For ſeducing them not to depoſe at all.

'3. For undue practiſing to gain a ſight of ſome Examinations 'kept in the Council-Chamber by the Clarks of the Council.

'4. For preparing and inſtructing Witneſſes by the ſaid Exami'nations.

'5. Perjury in Catlin in an Affidavit, and ſubornation thereof.

'6. Other undue Proceedings, whereby to cauſe Witneſſes to ſay, 'that they did not remember, or the like.

'I will only inſiſt upon two things.

'Firſt, How this trenched upon my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln.

'Secondly, How far, and in what manner he purſued it.

'I queſtion not whether the Child gotten upon the Body of E'lizabeth Hodgſon be Prigeon's, yea or no; however the Juſtices of the 'Peace at the Seſſions, Doctor Topham and Doctor Farmary give up, 'that it is laid to him: Yet legally Prigeon is free, for by a Statute '18 Eliz. though the Order be, yet an Appeal may be made. Now 'in the ſecond place, what is this to my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, 'utrum pater ſit necne?

‘The Biſhop is taxed for ſcandalous words in matter of State, ‘contrary to his Duty as a Subject to his Sovereign, contrary to his ‘Oath as a Privy-Councellor. Now Prigeon being a Witneſs, ‘muſt juſtifie that no ſuch fault ſlipt from my Lord Biſhop, his Teſtimony, which ſeems to be ſuſpected, and why? not for the having a Child fathered upon him, but for that he goes about in ‘publico to ſuborn Witneſſes, and to wreſt the Truth by unlawful ‘courſes, and it is to be thought that he, who was of ſuch an evil ‘Conſcience, as that he would cauſe others, by any way of bribes, ‘gifts, threats, or the like, to forſwear themſelves, and hazard ‘their Souls, might himſelf eaſily be tampered withal to do unjuſt ‘Acts, and to take that falſe Oath alſo by himſelf, being led to it ‘by Hopes and Rewards, which he by all means ſought to procure ‘in others, for his own ſafety.

‘Now if my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln had uſed other means, and ‘gone the right way to maintain the Credit of his Witneſſes in a ‘fair manner, it had been commendable; but whether he did ſo or ‘no it is to be inquired after.

‘By the way, my Lord, give me leave to ſay what I think, it is ‘not always neceſſary in this Court to have a Truth proved by two ‘or three Witneſſes: Men will be wary in Bribery, and Extortion, ‘and the like, to do it in publick, or to have many acquainted ‘with thoſe works of darkneſs. And ſingularis Teſtis many times ‘ſhall move and induce me verily to believe an Act done, when ‘more Proofs are ſhunned.

‘But to come to ſome of the Particulars, I find here, that Wetherel ‘hath been often tampered withal, by two of the Biſhops Servants, ‘Owen and Powel, and there was a Note ſhewed to George Walker ‘to enquire of Wetherel, whether Prigeon had done any thing with ‘him or no?

‘But to take off this, (Mr. Recorder ſaith) George Walker is ſingularis Teſtis. Now its plain VVetherel ſwears punctually, that he ‘met with Prigeon, and was adviſed to ſpeak ſparingly, and no more ‘than he needs muſt.

‘For Alice Smith, ſhe depoſeth that Prigeon wiſh'd her to win Elizabeth Hodgſon to lay it to ſome body elſe, and he would give her 20 s. ‘and ſo doth Anne Dove; now Alice muſt afterwards equivocate, ‘and ſay, ſhe was profered Money to get her to lay it on the right ‘Father, which to induce her to is no hurt.

‘And I find, that Alice Smith is carried away on Horſe-back by ‘Powel, and abſented till the Commiſſion was ſet, and was paſt, at ‘Lincoln, and then brought back again by Powel. And I find ſhe ‘went out poor and needy, ſhe returns well clad, Gentlewoman-‘like, and able to lend 8 l. at a time, who was (before Owen and ‘Powel tampered with her) ſo poor, that her Goods were diſtrained upon for Rent.

‘George VValker, he ſaith he could do no good with them, and ſo ‘writes to the Biſhop. Now for Richardſon, the Biſhop told him, ‘that he knew the Orders that were made at the Seſſions, and Richardſon is tampered withal to ſuppreſs that Order, and told, that if ‘he would, he might do the Biſhop good Service.

‘Now for Lunn, I find him run through with the Biſhop in all ‘the Caſe, he teacheth to ſmother and to equivocate; ſo that I find

An. 1637. 'Powel, Owen and VValker, guilty of the firſt Charge; Lunn I ſhall Sentence, but not for that Charge.

'Now my Lord himſelf, out of his own mouth, profeſs'd to two Witneſſes, videlicet, to Sir John Mounſon, and one Edward Smith, that to defend Prigeons Credit it had coſt him 1000 l. if not 1200 l.

'My Lord Biſhop excepts againſt ſome Witneſſes, as Bates I hold him faulty, and for Mr. Kilverts miſdemeanours, (though he did provoke my Lord) yet he ſhould have forborn. It was not ſo much to affront my Lord Biſhop, as to animate his Witneſſes for the King, which the preſence of ſo great a Perſon might have daunted.

'And your Lordſhips know, that in the Circuit, if a great Man have a Cauſe at the Bar, he is not to ſit on the Bench, his nod or frown, nay his bare Preſence, (by way of obſervation) may do much with inferior Perſons. I diſcommend my Lord for his paſſion, and commend Kilvert for the zealous proſecution of his Cauſe. I muſt clear Sir John Mounſon, and for Pattiſon diſguiſing of himſelf in the Habit of a Miniſter, (true it is, a ſhift they had to find out what might be;) But the matter was apparent to all they know he was a counterfeit.

'And for Catlins Teſtimony, I weigh it not; but I find my Lord tampering with Smith, with Edward Smith. He muſt be brought in by Mr. Moſteon, and at the back door too, and after that he had taken his Oath, was told he had ſworn maliciouſly, and was adviſed before-hand what to ſay, and the Biſhop chid him, and ask'd why he would be ſworn and not acquaint him, and let him know before; and there is many Proofs of my Lord Biſhops dehorting and terryfying others.

'For Walker, I ſhall not Cenſure him, being not the manner of this Court to Cenſure, when he is not charged with any particular, but in general.

'For Lunn, I find him threatning Mr. Kilvert, and I find him tampering divers ways, and getting the Writings from the Clarks.

'I agree with my Lord Cottington, and fine him 1000 Marks. I clear Moſteon. Catlin I leave with a non liquet; and do cenſure Lunn to be diſabled, (by way of his profeſſion) either to be Regiſter or Proctor any more.

'For Cadwallader Powel and Owen, I agree with my Lord Cottington.

'And for my Lord Biſhop, I cenſure him 10000 l. Fine to the Kings Majeſty, to be ſuſpended ab omni officio & beneficio, during His Majeſties Pleaſure, and likewiſe to be Impriſoned in the Tower during the Kings Pleaſure, (as my Lord Cottington ſaid before;) alſo for to repair the Credit of Sir John Mounſon, I fine him 1000 Marks to him; and ſure, My Lords, his Perſon doth not diminiſh, but rather aggravate his faults: for to be faulty in ſcandalizing his Maſter, and then ſuborningly to boulſter up his fault, by ſuch groſs and unbeſeeming manner, is worſe in him than it had been in another Man.

'For as Mr. Attorney well noted, for him that is ſet to have a care of Souls, to be corrupter of them; for him that is ſet as a Light

13 Caroli.

‘on a Hill, to hide the Truth; I call to mind his Greatneſs, his Place and his Dignity: but had he lived a private ignorant Man, I ſhould have gone very deep with him; but he that hath knowledge to rectifie himſelf, and hath ſat in the place to direct Conſciences, to wreſt and wrong Conſciences, I muſt go as deep full in every thing as my Lord Cottington, and I ſhall here crave your excuſe, and end.

Sir John Bamſton his Speech.

‘I Believe, my Lords, that the Lord Biſhop is guilty of three of the Charges, and I conceive he had a ſight of the Writings from the Council-Chamber.

‘I find him procuring ſome to abſent, to deter others, and all to ſupport Prigeons Credit. Alice Smith firſt depoſeth, that Prigeon offered her 5 l. to prevail with Elizabeth Hodgson to lay the Child to any other Man.

‘Now my Lord Biſhop he muſt intermeddle to ſupport his Credit. I diſallow of his tampering with Wetherel; to wiſh a Witneſs to keep away, or to wiſh him to ſay leſs than he knows, is not juſtifiable; it not ſo much concerned him, but it ſeems he thought it did, and therefore he muſt ſpend 1000 l. or 1200 l. to make that good: So Sir John Mounſon and Alice Smith depoſeth, Alice Smith is fetched, and carried, and maintained, enriched by the Biſhops Servants. I find many ſhifts in my Lord Biſhop to effect his deſire; it's plain ſhe went away poor, returns rich. VVetherel muſt muſt be tampered withal, is alſo plain by ſeveral Confeſſions.

‘Now to the ſecond Charge, the ſlander is laid on the Juſtices: Sir John Mounſon ſat openly in Court, the Order apparently made, yet the Biſhop ſtrives to ſuppreſs it. He uſeth all the ways he can, either by fair incitements, or by foul menaces and threats, to have them in the Star-Chamber, &c.

‘Now, my Lords, however he prevailed not, yet he attempted, he endeavoured ſubornation of Perjury: And wiſely did Mr. Attorney to lay the Charge in that manner he did, for undue and unjuſt undertaking to ſuborn Witneſſes, it's a Crime equal, (though he effect it not) yet it's maleficium condemnationis, and is cenſurable.

‘I find my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln much too blame in tampering, perſwading, threatning, and directing of Witneſſes. A foul fault in any, but in him moſt groſs, who hath Curam Animarum, throughout all his Dioceſs. To deſtroy Souls is moſt odious, and to be ſeverely puniſhed.

‘To proceed therefore to Cenſure, I meddle not with Bates his Teſtimony, but I ſhall fine Powel 300 l. I clear Moſtein: And for Lunn I ſhall fine him 1000 Marks, and to be diſabled alſo from his Function. And for my Lord of Lincoln, I hold him not fit to have the cure of Souls, and therefore I do Cenſure him to be ſuſpended tam ab Officio, quam a Beneficio, and agree for the Fine of 10000 l. and Impriſonment during the Kings Pleaſure. And for Sir John Mounſon, I find he hath done nothing but as he ought, and there-

An. 1637. 'fore I hold it fit his Credit ſhould be repaired, and to that end 'I ſhall agree with my Lord Cottington to give him 1000 Marks.

Mr. Secretary Windebanke his Speech.

'IT's needleſs for me to relate the Buſineſs, or to declare the name 'of the Crime for which this great Perſon is Cenſured here in 'this Court. To free your Lordſhips from any further trouble, '(having ſeriouſly conſidered the matter) I do find not only my 'Lord Biſhop himſelf, but alſo his Agents faulty; and therefore 'for the Fines, Puniſhments, and Impriſonments both to him and 'them, I agree in all with my Lord Cottington; and for Sir John 'Mounſon alſo.

Sir Thomas Germine's Speech.

'I Agree with my Lord Cottington.

The Earl of Lindſey his Speech.

'I Do agree with my Lord Cottington in omnibus.

The Earl of Arundel's Speech.

My Lords,

'THe Cauſe is great, the Perſons eminent, the Proſecutors '(as in relation to the King) to be reſpected. The Perſon 'that now is on the Stage to be Cenſured, one of the grave Biſhops 'of the Realm, one who himſelf hath born ſway, and hath ſat in 'a high Office under two Famous Kings, and now comes to be 'Cenſured for undue Proceedings in matter of Juſtice. He who 'had the protection of Equity, now hath turned to be a ſubverter 'of Right, and an oppreſſor of the Truth, by concealing her from 'that ſhe delights in, the Light: unduly menacing, deterring, and 'debarring Witneſſes in a Cauſe of ſuch a nature, as concerned ſo 'great a Perſon as the greateſt we have to do withal (under God) 'on Earth. I proteſt I ſpeak it with grief, I am ſorry for his Perſon, 'much more for his Profeſſion, no Child being more reverent to a 'Mother, than I am tender of the Church, and of that Coat: But 'upon ſuch blemiſhes to forbear Cenſure, were to allow of them: 'I do therefore agree with my Lord Cottington in the Fine, Impri'ſonment, and in all the reſt.

The Earl of Mancheſters Speech.

My Lords,

‘I Cannot but admire to ſee, that a Man of that eminency for Parts and fortune to overſhoot himſelf ſo far, and to be tranſported in ſo ignoble a way, as my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln hath been, that he would undo his own to maintain the Credit of another Man.

‘Give me leave a little to unfold the occurrences, that it may appear how this came about, and what occaſioned this his ſo groſs an Error.

‘About the fourth Year of His now Majeſties Reign, a Bill was exhibited into this Court againſt my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, the Complaint was about matter of State: Now Prigeon was a main Witneſs for the clearing my Lord from being held guilty of what was thus alledged.

‘The Bill was ſlow-paced, and ſlept from 4 till almoſt 8 Car. Regis, and now a Provocation begets an Information November the 8th; and in February following the Baſtard is born, here is a touch upon Prigeons Credit, this matters not to the Biſhop for ought we ſee; but in May following it muſt be laid on another Father, and one Boone is found out for the ſame purpoſe, and it muſt be fathered on him. The Juſtices of Aſſize publickly ordered, and ſet it down, that it is laid upon Prigeon, and hereupon he is thought to be diſabled of his Teſtimony for the Biſhop of Lincoln, if he have occaſion to uſe him, for his clearing in caſe of thoſe accuſations and informations laid againſt him.

‘Whereupon this Prigeon muſt be ſet upright, and made an honeſt Man, and be rectified, (though it be by indirect and unlawful means;) nay moſt unconſcionable Courſes, by wreſting the Conſciences, and falſifying Oaths for the ſame.

‘Now, my Lords, your Lordſhips well know, that every Mans State, every Mans Credit, his Poſſeſſions and Livelihood much depends upon Oaths; for if not upon the Jurors, yet the Witneſſes in any Caſe of Evidence, (be it for matter of Title, or matter of Fact) if they be by ſiniſter Courſes, and by Bribes and Threats, (be it for fear or for love) if they be cauſed to ſwear againſt their Conſciences, and that tye be takenaway whereby they ſtand obliged before God and Men to give Right to the Truth, no Man is ſure of any thing he enjoys, nor can expect to get any thing that is unjuſtly detained and with-held from him in the Proceeding of any Court whatſoever.

‘And I find my Lord Biſhop much too blame, and indeed no more than an Abetter in many Paſſages of this Cauſe tending this way.

‘There be ſix faults he is charged withal, and I find him faulty in three great ones.

‘For his tampering with Witneſſes it's plain enough, and I am ſorry it breaks out ſo in all the way as the Cauſe goes. 1. In withdrawing Witneſſes, and abſenting them out of the way.

An. 1637.

‘2. In preparing, fitting, and diſpoſing Witneſſes to his own ends. ‘3. In deterring them before they are to take Oath, and threatning ‘them after. 4. In ſifting out unlawfully (by indirect and ſiniſter ‘Courſes) what Evidence and Proof was given, ſo to be better ‘enabled to have croſs Oaths and Proofs againſt the Evidence that ‘was before. 5. To cauſe Witneſſes to ſpeak leſs than they know, ‘and to conceal the Truth, or at leaſt to vary from that which they ‘had formerly ſworn. 6. Getting the Copies out from the Clarks ‘of the Star-Chamber, and keeping them a long time from that place, ‘where they ought to be and reſide.

‘Now for a Man of Art, of a prompt and ingenious Wit, a well-‘experienced Man, who hath been a Judge, and well knew the ‘Inconveniences of theſe defaults, and the groſneſs of them, to ‘run into them ſo violently, and ſo foul, I cannot but admire, and ‘much pity him.

‘Nay, he doth take upon him to defend, and to patronize Catlin ‘too, although it be abſolutely to overthrow and undo himſelf. ‘But as it is ſaid, Nemo Læditur niſi a ſeipſo, if my Lordſhip had ‘not been over-buſie for to do thoſe Men good, he had never done ‘himſelf this harm.

‘Now for Kilverts affront to him, I muſt needs ſay it may ſeem ‘over-much in the place where it was done, being in the chief place ‘of the Dioceſs, and to his own Perſon: But being it was in ſuch ‘a Cauſe, where Witneſſes were to be heard and examined for the ‘King, and my Lord being a great Man in that place, I paſs it by, as ‘his zeal and earneſtneſs in proſecution of the Cauſe, which might ‘elſe have ſuffered, had he not uſed the better courage, and put the ‘better face upon it.

‘For the getting the Writings from the Council-Chamber it's ‘plain enough, and they were abſent long enough, and whether ‘he had uſed or peruſed them it matters not; ſurely he would not ‘have them gotten from their due ſtation, and place of abode, only ‘to lie by him, but that he would make uſe of them. And I ‘muſt needs commend Sir William Beechers diſcretion and ingenuity ‘for his courage in that Particular.

‘Your Lordſhips have heard already by the two Lord-Chief-Juſtices, what the nature of theſe Crimes are, (though it be not ‘ſubornation of Perjury) yet it is manifeſt injury to the witneſſing ‘of a Truth; and I ſuppoſe both they that do prevail, and they that ‘are over-ruled and won to ſuch diſhoneſt Courſes, are much faulty; and therefore I ſhall agree with my Lord Cottington for ‘the Fine upon the two Servants of my Lord Biſhop, Owen and ‘Powel.

‘And alſo I fine Lunn in 1000 Marks; I clear Moſtein, and I muſt ‘not let Catlin eſcape, (if I can legally do it) but he hath better ‘fortune than the reſt, though I think not a whit leſs culpable.

‘And for my Lord Biſhop, I muſt, for his Fine, Impriſonment, ‘and ſuſpenſion from his Dignities, Offices, and Benefices, agree ‘with my Lord Cottington, and ſo in all the reſt.

The

The Lord Treaſurer his Speech.

My Lords,

‘THis Cauſe hath held a great time, your Lordſhips have had much patience and great attention, and applied your ſelves to give ear to the defences that have been made therein, which have been very well performed by the Counſel on my Lord Biſhops behalf.

‘The Cauſe is great, a great Man that is this day ſentenced, and in a matter of very high nature for me (my Lords) to run over the ſeveral Charges, and to explain how and wherein I find my Lord Biſhop and his Agents culpable, and very well deſerving the Cenſure of this Court for their Crimes, it were bootleſs, nay altogether needleſs to inſiſt upon the tampering with Alice Smith and Wetherel, with the undue Practiſes of Lunn, Owen and Powel, theſe things have been copiouſly ſet out before, and for me to repeat, or to make any relation of my obſervations in the occurrences and paſſages of the Cauſe, it were but Actum agere.

‘The buſineſs falls out very unhappily, and all the way carries with it a reliſh. My Lord Biſhops encouraging and ſetting on the ſeveral Agents, that were uſed for the clearing and juſtifying Prigeons reputation; ſo that in the proſecution of the matter, probable ſurmiſes come to be violent and forcible inſtigations; and whereas my Lord Biſhop ſtrives to ſuppreſs a fault, which is like to redound to Prigeons diſeſteem; my Lord utterly overthrows his own Credit, and labouring to take a ſtain out of anothers Face, opens ſeveral Scars and Ulcers in his own.

‘My Lord Biſhop might better have let the Truth have been bolted out, than ſo ſmother it, as to injure his own reputation, and cauſe himſelf to undergo far heavier and fouler aſperſions, than the Crimes in his Witneſſes could ever have brought upon them or him.

‘I much pity him, and I am heartily ſorry that he was ſo overled with deſire, as ſo hotly to purſue a thing that might with a great deal of more diſcretion have been let alone.

‘And truly I conceive it is now apparent to him, and he himſelf is ſorry for his own intemperate proſecutions; and I hold no Cenſure can be ſo heavy to him, as that your Lordſhips ſhould hold him Cenſurable, and that he ſhould now incur the diſlike and condemnation of this Court, wherein he hath ſate as eminent in Place and Dignity, as the reſt that now are to paſs Sentence upon him.

‘What Cenſure therefore my Lord Cottington before me hath given, both for Lunn, Owen, and Powel, both in number, rate and weight I agree unto; and ſo I do alſo for the Fine upon my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, his Impriſonment during the Kings Pleaſure, and the reſt.

An. 1637.

The Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury his Speech.

‘Sorry I am (my Lords) that ſuch a Man as my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln for profeſſion; and ſorry that he, being ſo wiſe, ſo diſcreet and underſtanding a Man every way, ſhould come to ſtand culpable of ſuch faults as ſhould deſerve the Cenſure of this Court, and in this nature, that it ſhould fall out that by being over-active and over-doing Buſineſſes of other Mens, to do his own, nay even thereby alſo to undo himſelf.

‘We have Adverſaries too too many amongſt our ſelves, but this days work opens a way for the Romaniſts to take advantage by it, to ſee ſo eminent a Perſon as a Biſhop, and ſo eminent a Biſhop as he, to become thus cenſurable in a thing of ſo high a nature in this high Court, it opens way I ſay to them of rejoycing, which I would to God had not been at all, or at leaſt not by him.

‘When I look upon and conſider his excellent Parts, both of Nature, and atchieved unto by Study and Art; when I think upon his Wiſdom, Learning, agility of Memory, and the experience that accompanies him with all thoſe endowments, it puts me to ſtand; that after he had been overtaken in one error in the firſt Cauſe, he ſhould not have recalled himſelf, and made a ſtand, but that he hath now run into a far worſe, and more deſperate a one in this Cauſe, by obnoxious and criminal ways, even to a very precipitation and downfall of himſelf and his Credit. What though there was ſome queſtion made, and ſome Proofs on foot, whereby his Loyalty to the King his Maſter ſeemed to be in deſpute, and his diſcretion might have ſome ways come to tryal in matter of words, diſcovering his affection in ſome matter of State? muſt he ſeek unlawful means to procure his Actions and Words to be lawful, and leave the courſe of a good Conſcience to bolſter up a fancy of innocency in another Man, and make himſelf plainly faulty, for to make another Man ſeem free from ſhame? I could wiſh heartily from my heart (however this Cauſe be, let it be as it is) that his deportment in paſſion had been like to that of St. Sicelia. I read it in a very good Author, and it is not impertinent, nor unworthy whatſoever patience, when a great ſtir there was, and all the Stream and Current run quite againſt her to bear her down in a moſt furious and violent manner, ſhe mildly in the heat of theſe Storms, and when thoſe Billows ſeem'd to overwhelm her, and hide her from all hopes of being admitted hearing her to plead her innocency, much leſs to gain ſucceſs to her deſires, it being told her there were many Witneſſes againſt her, but none that did, or would be, or ſeen to appear for her, or in her behalf. She uſed the ſaying of holy Job, Teſtis meus eſt in Cœlis, my Witneſs is above: and ſo it fell out, for (as the Story ſaith) when the matter came to be ſcanned, the Witneſſes that were againſt her, (by what means, or from whence, or how, I know not) but they were ſo daunted and ſtruck with ſuch an amazement, that it was their general Vote, Nos nihil habemus contra Ciceliam, I have it in St. Auguſtine, a Father of the Church, whoſe Authority there 'is no doubt off, he being held learned amongſt the beſt of that 'time) lib. 1. contra hæreticum donatum. It had been better with 'my Lord Biſhop if he had had ſuch a Cauſe: I am ſure if the 'circumſtances of his behaviour had been more temperate and 'mixt with more patience, the event could not have been ſo un'lucky, and his Cenſure ſo ſharp, as it is now like to be.

'I may be bold to ſay it, my Lords, for it's no untruth; I have 'been five ſeveral times upon my knees to the King my Maſter in 'his behalf, I delivered for him ſeveral Petitions my ſelf into the 'Kings own Hand, and I then did that (which had I known what 'now I do) I ſhould not have done. I ſent him under my own 'Hand the Kings Anſwer upon every Petition. And after all thoſe 'five ſeveral Services, I muſt tell you, my Lords, I was but courſly 'dealt withal, nay very ill requited; yet was I overcome to move 'again at Chriſtmas laſt, and I have it under his own Hand, or (if 'his Secretary writ the Letter) his own Hand and Name is un'derſcribed, that he had better and more hopes by my once moving 'the King, than he had formerly had, by the ſolicitation and means 'of all the friends he had at Court.

'And no longer ago than at Chriſtmas laſt I moved the King my 'Maſter again in his behalf; and then (had he ſolicited that which 'was intented for his good, and proſecuted the ſame with ſubmiſ'ſion) it had in all likelyhood gone better with him than he could 'have expected, nay I think, as the caſe ſtood, better than he then 'deſired.

'But a croſs Buſineſs came juſt in the way at the very time, (of 'which your Lordſhips, or the moſt part of you, I am ſure, are 'privy to) and had not I then interpoſed my ſelf, (the King being 'then ſo exaſperated againſt him) he had faln. But to let paſs my 'deſires, and the earneſtneſs I uſed, and the tenderneſs I had, leſt 'my publick aſperſion ſhould have been opened, and ſuch as could 'not have been wiped away, but needs muſt have left a ſtain to my 'Coat.

'I muſt needs ſay thus much for His Majeſty, he was very inclina'ble to have had a fair reconcilement, as may appear by His often 'asking what Lincoln did, doth he ſeek to repair my Credit? Hath he 'any ſhew of ſorrowfulneſs for his fault? And, my Lords, I may ſafe'ly ſay (becauſe I truly ſpeak it) who ever penned his Petitions '(howſoever they ſeemed to be his Friends, or whoever adviſed 'him to let them paſs in that form) they did him (though que'ſtionleſs he is able to Pen them himſelf) an injury, yet if he did 'it by advice they were not therein his Friends, for in them all 'there is not one word tending to ſubmiſſion and confeſſion, or ſo 'much as an acknowledgement of a fault, whereby any ſhew of 'Recantation in that nature might be made to his Majeſty, as both 'in duty he ought, and in wiſdom might have made proffer of, and 'with more ſafety and aſſurance have performed, inſomuch as that 'by his ſtiff and ſtubborn behaviour, there was no way but to have 'the buſineſs fully ript up, heard, and decided.

'Yet there were not wanting divers ill diſpoſed perſons, who 'bruited it forth, and very boldly gave out, that my Lord Biſhop 'of Lincoln had not made any fault, or done or ſpoken ought, but 'that which he could ſtand unto, and needed not to be aſhamed of, An. 1637. ‘only that he was rich and muſt be let blood, he might well ſpare it, and the King wanted 10000 or 12000 l. and ſo he ſhould have little ſaid to him, if it was once condeſcended unto, and either given by him, or gotten from him. But howſoever theſe Reports go, the King is juſt as he is honourable; and though he was inclined to mercy (for ſo the Biſhop of Lincoln had found it, if he had ſought it ſeaſonably) yet now you ſee, there is cauſe, and juſt cauſe of cenſure, and in a very high nature of deſert in him to be ſentenced by this Court.

‘Now for the nature of the cauſe, the ſeveral charges of the proofs, and the defences alſo that have been by the Lord Biſhops Council, hath fully and amply been opened by the two Lords Chief Juſtices, and if I ſhould attempt any thing this way, it were but needleſs labour to my ſelf, and would breed a tedious troubleſomneſs to your Lordſhips, dictum dicere would be all, when I had ſaid all.

‘I leave to meddle with the manner of the proceedings, and muſt give Mr. Attorney a great and large Commendation, and Mr. Sollicitor alſo for their wiſe ſtating of the Cauſe, and for their wiſdom, wit, temper, and patience in the proſecuting of the ſame.

‘The matter is ill, and howſoever it perhaps be not ſubornation of Perjury, yet to tamper with Witneſſes, to threaten, deter, afright, corrupt or to ſilence, or abſent thoſe that are to witneſs a truth, and to give evidence in a Court of Juſtice are ejuſdem naturæ, a very foul Crime and a moſt odious and deteſtable Fault, in any man of what condition ſoever he be: and if theſe things be ſuffered and may go unpuniſhable, no ſtate can ſtand, and it deſtroys the intereſt of meum & tuum, and no man is ſure of what he holds, or can ſay whether he hath an eſtate or no.

‘It's a point that ruins all right, and is the utter Enemy and Subverter of all Juſtice, and muſt needs overthrow any State, where it is not weeded out and prevented by ſevere Animadverſion and corrections when it happens to be found out.

‘Eirſt, It deſtroys Maximum Mandatum the great Commandment given by the great Lawgiver, God himſelf, Thou ſhalt not bear falſe witneſs; In the fifth of Leviticus, if a man know a truth he is not to conceal it; nay, he is to witneſs it.

‘In the 23*d*. of Exodus, a man is not in any caſe to bear unjuſt witneſs, and ſo in the ninth of Deuteronomy, it is in Criminalibus, and he that did bear falſe witneſs was to ſuffer per legem Talionis that ſame puniſhment and loſs, which by his falſe Teſtimony the other Party had undergone.

‘In all the time that paſſes from the Creation of the World until the Law, I do not find that the Holy Ghoſt once made mention of any, that attempted in this way. I find no ſhadow nor overture of any ſuch Crime; the corruption of nature had not then grown to the height, and ſo over-flowed the Banks, as to break out ſo outragiouſly, and produce any ſuch ill diſpoſed perſons.

‘Inſomuch as I find not any tract, no veſtigium of the like preſident for obove 3000 years, and the Fathers of the Church upon that place, where it is ſaid, out of the mouth of two or three Witneſſes ſhall every thing be juſtified; they deſcant upon it, why two or three Witneſſes in matters of conſequence? Becauſe, ſay they, ‘ſo many ſhould not be ſubject to be tampered withal, being they might be of ſeveral tempers, ſeveral conditions, and ſo the truth might be had by ſome of them, if not by all.

‘And for a long time I read of none, but of the devilliſh practice and leading piece of impiety ſet on foot by Jeſabel, for what cauſe, and how proſecuted, you all well know, and what ſhe was, how ſhe ſped, and what end ſhe made is recorded to poſterity. Yet (my Lords) I pray you obſerve and note with me, how warily the Holy Ghoſt goeth about in the ſetting out of this Fact, and the paſſages therein in the 21ſt. verſe, as if the Spirit of God was unwilling to diſplay and diſcover the heinouſneſs of this Monſter hatched by this vile Woman; as if he would not have it ſeen, he ſhadows it forth in a low ſtream, that there came in two Sons of Belial and ſaid, &c. As if the Original of this odious practice was not rooted in humane nature, but took his birth from Hell, it came in with two Sons of Belial in the Devils name.

1 Kings ca.21.

‘Well, afterwards ſuch a Tutor could not want apt Scholars, and, as Saint Paul ſaith in another caſe, when I come to ſpeak of it after the manner of men, I find it then practiſed, and that (with a witneſs) it outfaced the God of truth, though truth it ſelf muſt not be trodden under foot; but this engine fetched from Hell, muſt be planted to defeat the Counſels of God Almighty. They found out and hired falſe-witneſſes againſt Chriſt himſelf, who they were you know, Mark 14. 55. The Chief Prieſts and the Elders, and all the whole Councel ſought falſe witneſs againſt Jeſus to put him to death; and after Chriſt Stephen had the ſame meaſure, Acts 6.11. Then they ſuborned men, who ſaid we have heard him ſpeak blaſphemous words againſt God and againſt Moſes.

‘Thus amongſt thoſe ſtiff-necked and hard-hearted Jews, the fault was in uſe when ſin and iniquity grew ripe, and, as the Prophet ſaith, Faith and truth could ſcarce be found amongſt mortal men; but the ſubverſion and deſtruction of their City follows, and there comes in the Government of a Warlike Nation and People, the Romans; amongſt whom I find ſome Laws made againſt falſe witneſſes, and thoſe very ſevere ones.

‘Beſides other Laws, in the Law of the twelve Tables there is a ſtrict Law confirmed againſt it; and theſe twelve Tables were not made by any mean advice or perſons, but by the perſons of a powerful Council and the Decemviri: That he that was found faulty in this notorious Crime, he was to be thrown down a ſteep high Rock, to have his Bones ſhivered all to pieces, e Monte Tarpeio, or e Saxo Tarpeio; afterwards the Law-givers purſued this fault with baniſhment and confiſcation of Goods, Confiſcatio bonorum fiat & puniatur uti pro Crimine falſi.

‘Within thoſe times was a heavy and moſt ſevere puniſhment, whereby their Poſterity alſo was branded with the fault of them that went before them.

‘In the ninty fifth Council I find a courſe ſet down for the prevention of this Crime, and a puniſhment ſet for the Offendors therein.

‘And in later times Bartolus often meets with it, and goes very preciſely and exactly in the caſe, that if ſo be it be found in any man, ſo much as an overture of tampering with Witneſſes, it is Cenſurable; reus eſt, he is guilty, though he effect not his purpoſe, if he menace, threaten, or deter a Witneſs. And ſo, my Lords, ſhall I do, though he but barely attempt to ſmother, deter, or hinder any Witneſs, when he is to give his Teſtimony; be it by words, looks or actions, promiſes or threats, it comes much to one in my opinion upon the matter.

An. 1637.

'Now, my Lords, to come unto the Laws of the Church, if we peruſe the Canon and Eccleſiaſtical Law, there we ſhall often in every age, have ſomewhat or other ſtill eſtabliſhed againſt it.

'In the Canon Law the ſecond part of the Decretals, if any man ſhall be a ſuborner of Witneſſes, Etiamſi inſtigatus aut compulſus a Domino, if he bring a falſe teſtimony (though he be even enforced to it by his Superior Lord, Governor or his Maſter) deliver him over to Excommunication, & ſic maneat uſque ad exitum vitæ, and ſo he muſt ſtand and remain in that ſtate and caſe during term of life. A grievous thing, and a moſt heavy burthen, the ſentence of Excommunication is to an Offender, though now in theſe looſer times it be ſlighted and little ſet by; yet in caſes of this nature when the offence is ſo high and tranſcendent, and of condition tending to the ruine and condemnation of the ſoul, the party at that time, and for that preſent, even Dallying, Mocking and abuſing of God to his very face, to be left void of the Communion of Saints, to be bereaved of the benefit of being a member of Chriſts Flock, and cut off from that holy body the Church, I think that no man is in a worſe and a more miſerable eſtate, and more to be pitied, if he be inſenſible of it himſelf.

'To come to the firſt Council of Macedon, the ſeventeenth Canon, Si ſit ille inter falſos juratores, reus eſto. And what is he guilty of? Of no ſmall matter. Ranked and ranged in the degree and place of a Murtherer & cum homicidis.

'Nay, he is worſe than a manſlayer, for he that kills a man deſtroys but one, and that but the body neither, for he cannot any ways infringe the union of his ſoul that it had with his Maker. But he that goes about to ſuborn and procure falſe witneſſes; he at one time deſtroys two Souls, both his own, and the ſoul of him that he ſo in that kind intermedles withal; and unleſs he be rejoyned again by the renewing of Faith and ſerious and hearty repentance, he ſets both their ſouls and God at odds.

'Afterwards you find it in the Weſtern parts of England, and in France, in the ſeventeenth Council of Agatha you have a tamperer with Witneſſes adjudged to death (even in the time of Alexicus, who was no better than a Barbarous Goth) this Crime was diſallowed, made horrid, and held ſeverely to be puniſhed.

'You may find it in St. Auguſtin, who lived about ſome 400 years after Chriſt; and indeed he moſt excellently ſets it out in his 28*th Sermon, de Nativitate Domini*, either he had it out of that Council, or the Council out of him, being much what both at one time and in one age.

'Some parts of Greece I find did affect and patronize Lying, but Tully wittily guirds them for it, ſaying, they were not wiſe to countenance folly; yet I find that Ariſtotle in his Rethoricks concerning the Interrogatories to Witneſſes, gives admirable rules, and ſuch as (though ſhort) comprehends the moſt-what of the ‘moſt ſetled and the wittieſt, and the ſafeſt ways uſed now adays in that kind, lib. 2. Rhet. you may read the ways of prevention herein by him ſet down.

‘And to come into our own Country about the year 1224, in the Reign of King H. 3. and your Lordſhips know, that it was a troubleſome time; yet I read that Stephen Langley, my Predeceſſor, (then Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury) called a Council to be held at Oxford: the main buſineſs was for the reformation of two points; the one was concerning Marriage, the other concerning Exheriditation, &c. where I find a foul penance inflicted and ſet out for him, that ſhall either bear falſe witneſs by himſelf, or procure it in another.

‘For he that is a tamperer this way, he is guilty of no ſmall Crime doing, doing (at the ſame time) wrong to three of the greateſt Perſons in the World, viz. 1. To God. 2. To the King. 3. To the Innocents.

‘Firſt, He manifeſtly wrongs God by a notorious contempt, by a very ſlighting and vilifying his Omniſcience, Omnipreſence and Omnipotency.

‘He robs God of that which is his very eſſence, for God is truth, (and who dare thus out-face Gods truth!) and wittingly deviſeth and practiſeth to lay it aſide and keep it from the Light; I find him in very nature to be abhorred and held unfit for humane ſociety. Ariſtotle himſelf in that glimmering he had of Divine Learning, deciphers ſuch a one, and ſets him out by theſe very Characters: he muſt be one qui pietatem non curat, a man that matters not at all for Piety; he muſt either deny the Deity, or elſe think he can eſcape the reach of the Celeſtial Powers, ſuch a one qui putat ſe latere Deo, he is able to ſkulk on the one ſide, and abſent himſelf from the hand of God at his pleaſure.

‘Secondly, In the next place, another great Perſon (unto whom he doth injury) is the King, whom he plainly cheateth to his Face, and wrongs in the very Seat of Juſtice, even forcing his Officers, the grave and learned Judges, will they nill they, to do Injuſtice: for if the Witneſſes be ſuborned and give in falſe evidence the Jurors cannot come near the truth, and the Judges muſt needs Enact, Order, and Sentence what otherwiſe they neither would, nor ought to have done.

‘Laſt of all, the third Perſon that is wronged in conſpectu Dei, is a perſon of no ſmall eſteem, the Innocent (one many times little enough eſteemed, God knows, in the eye of the world, but gracious and great in the ſight of God,) and he is alſo moſt ſhamefully wronged and abuſed; nay, perhaps undone by the indirect practiſes of thoſe falſe Witneſſes. Some-times his Perſon is traduced, his Fame and Credit either ſtained or elſe quite taken away, or ſo ſhaken that it's a ſhy matter to deal with him: another while his Eſtate, his Birth-right is wreſted from him, or elſe withdrawn, and for a time with-held from him: one while his Goods, another while his Lands, a third time himſelf is at ſtake; ſo Life, Lands, Goods, and All are in danger: well though ſuch Witneſſes be againſt him, his plea is never a whit the worſe in Foro Cœli, his Inheritance is laid up amongſt the Saints, Teſtimonium ejus eſt in Cœlis, doubtleſs there is a reward for the Righteous, An. 1637. 'verily there is a God that judgeth the Earth, for there is nothing hid which ſhall not be revealed.

'And thus, my Lords, have I ſaid what I thought fit, though not ſo much as the Crimes deſerve, for my time being ſcanted, I have laid it out (though roughly) yet ſo as it may eaſily be ſeen of what a vile nature this cankered and peſtilent Weed is, and from whence it had its original, and how odious and deteſtable it hath been to all ages, how dangerous the effects be that proceed from it, and therefore how carefully it ought to be lookt unto, and ſuppreſt in all Common-wealths.

'I ſhall make my word good in my brevity concerning the laſt thing I am to perform, and ſhall paſs over the Sentence very ſpeedily; to make any repetitions were but Actum agere (as my Lord of London ſaid) therefore I will be ſhort.

'I find much tampering and ſtriving by my Lord Biſhops Agents for to ſuppreſs and decline a truth.

'I wonder that Lake ſhould be ſent to the Univerſity of Cambridge preſently to take the Degree of Doctor, and that they would let him paſs.

'I cannot commend Moſteon (though otherwiſe a very civil and deſerving man, and I think very true and truſty to His Maſter) yet to be preſent when a Blank is put up, and an Affidavit to be made to a Blank by his privity and in his preſence, this is not honeſt; he might have done well to have diſallowed the proceedings, or at leaſt not been preſent, and have countenanced the ſame. And Walter Walker, though he be a Solliciter, and muſt and ought to follow the Cauſes he undertakes, with as much skill, induſtry, and advice as he may, yet he might have been aſhamed of this blank Affidavit, and he ought indeed to have ſuppreſt it.

'If Walker had been a good Servant it had gone better with the Biſhop, than now it is like to do: and if Walker do eſcape ſetencing it's more by hap than skill, more by luck than honeſty. I find him to be a very arrant honeſt man in all the buſineſs, and my Lord Biſhop is a very miſerable man, thus to defend Pridgeons good name, with the loſs of his own.

'Catlin, he muſt have a Living given him, and well he deſerved it, but as yet he had not plaid his part to the full, and therefore ſtay your hand (my Lord ſaith Walker) till the buſineſs be done. A manifeſt plain proof that there was ſome uſe to be made of this cunning and crafty Fellow, to countenance the buſineſs in hand. And I can ſay no leſs, than that I find Catlin to be a very lewd man, a very Incendiary, and truly to be parallel'd with that Catlin of Rome, againſt whom ſo many learned and eloquent Orations were writ, by Cicero that famous Orator.

'For Lunn, let him go on in Gods Name, to be put off from the place and offices that he hath; and for Powel I could go deeper than any before me hath yet done, who proſecutes an unjuſt act ſo long, ſo oft, and never repents of it.

'For Kelverts affronting of my Lord Biſhop in that manner he did, I muſt ſet that, and the Biſhops offering to be preſent at the examination of the Witneſſes, both in one diſtance, and they may very well the one of them quit the other; and I muſt commend Kelvert, or any man elſe that ſhall go on in the Kings buſineſs, 'and concerning ſo great a matter; for if he had gone on piningly, faintly, and cowardly have put his head in a hole; if he had by my Lords preſence, and by the terms he uſed, gone ſheepiſhly on in his buſineſs, the matter might have failed. Some of your Lordſhips have condemned him for his bold carriage toward a Biſhop in his own Dioceſs, but I cannot, for my Lord and his paſſions were more to be condemned. A temper would better have befitted him, and indeed he ought not to have given any ſuch occaſion, and therefore it may be ſaid, Etiamſi ego dignus ſum hac contumelia, indignus tamen qui fecerit, I paſs that by as to be excuſed, by reaſon of the weightineſs of the matter.

'For the gaining of Papers from the Council Table, I find my Lord Biſhop had them long enough in his cuſtody, and they were returned unſealed; and I do find that he proceeds to counterproofs directly, according as he was informed by theſe Papers, which in my mind ſhews apparently that he both had them and peruſed them.

'For Sir John Mounſon, the King is wounded through his ſides, I have known him a long time, and I never knew nor heard any thing of him but good, and therefore do hold one thouſand Marks little enough for reparation of his Credit, who did nothing but that which was his duty, and belonged to his place.

'Now for my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, truly I am heartily ſorry to do that which I muſt do, both by reaſon he is of my own Coat, and alſo by reaſon of the place he hath in former time ſuſtained in this Court amongſt your Lordſhips, and in this Common-wealth, but I muſt not forbear to do that which my Conſcience leads me unto, and leſs I muſt not do than for to diſcharge that as I ought to do.

'Wherefore I ſhall agree with my Lord Cottington and the reſt that have gone before me in the fine of 10000 l. to His Majeſty; and likewiſe for his impriſonment in the Tower during the Kings pleaſure, as alſo to be ſuſpended from the exerciſing of his Eccleſiaſtical Function, tam a Beneficiis, quam Officiis, and to be referred over to be proceeded againſt in the High Commiſſion Court, as the merit of his offence ſhall deſerve.

The Lord Keeper his Speech.

'THis Cauſe, my Lords, is a Cauſe of great conſequence, and it is a very foul matter, though I muſt needs ſay the defences that hath been made in it, hath been very fair by Mr. Recorder, and the Councel on my Lord of Lincoln's behalf.

'Moſtein I muſt acquit, for Catlin I came reſolved to Cenſure him for Perjury; but ſeing the Court lets him paſs, I ſhall not ſentence him, though he is a very notorious Actor, and had a hand in that Blank Affidavit, and help'd Smith, and countenanced and directed him what to ſwear, and what to let alone.

'All my Lords actions (for which he is much to be blamed) are ſubſequent to that Affidavit; I muſt do my duty, and diſcharge my Conſcience, and ſhew my love to the common good, (what 'ever

An. 1637. ‘ever my private wiſhes are) that things had not faln out thus with ‘my Lord as they do.

‘I ſhall divide all into two parts, ſome things I hold faulty, and ‘ſome I ſhall not Cenſure; I ſhall not Cenſure Mr. Kilvert for his ‘unmannerlineſs, though the affront was great to a Man of his ‘Place in the Country, where he was Biſhop of the Dioceſs, and ‘in the chief Seat of his Juriſdiction. Mr. Kilvert might have ‘forborn him ſomewhat in that reſpect; but the cauſe being of that ‘high nature, and concerning them it did, he had ſomewhat the ‘more reaſon to be the more confident and bolder in the proſecution ‘thereof than ordinary, and for that concerning Sir William Beecher ‘I find no proof of it.

‘I find that Lunn, Tubb, and Wetherel, were tampered with-‘al, but I cannot find my Lord Biſhop faulty with them: For ‘George Walker, I find him Cenſurable; and ſo is my Lord alſo ‘himſelf in other matters, as will appear when I ſhall come at ‘them.

‘I find by the Proof of two Witneſſes, that my Lord confeſs'd ‘himſelf, that it coſt him 1000 l. or 1200 l. to bolſter up Prigeons ‘Reputation, and to do this he falls into error concerning the Order ‘made by Sir John Mounſon; that muſt be ſuppreſt, and I know ‘not how ſo much Money ſhould be expended, but upon ſuch cour-‘ſes as were uſed with Smith and Catlin.

‘Catlin told Smith he ſhould be made by it; ſo that the Order ‘muſt be to undermine the Witneſſes, and get them to vary from ‘what they had formerly ſworn before the Juſtices at the publick ‘Seſſions. I know that Men in Caſes of this nature do not bluntly ‘promiſe this or that; but I find Walker goes about by Queſtions at ‘firſt a-far off, and then comes cloſe to inſtruct Smith what to ‘ſwear; and Rewards are not behind, neither do I conceive in ſuch ‘Caſes, that there are ever two Witneſſes to be expected, but as ‘my Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas explained it, ſingu-‘laris Teſtis, ſhall induce me to believe a Truth in ſome Caſes, ‘and it muſt of neceſſity, when Circumſtances concur with the ‘ſame.

‘So that whatſoever Mr. Recorder ſaid, the return of that Order ‘made by the Juſtices was coram non Judice, it matters not with me. ‘The Witneſſes knew nothing of the queſtionableneſs of the Pro-‘ceedings, but went on the way their Conſciences at that time led ‘them: Now for my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln to ſeek to diſhearten ‘them, to terrifie them by Threats, and ſeek otherwiſe after by ‘Rewards and Promiſes to ſubvert, (or at leaſt) to divert the Cur-‘rent of Juſtice, I know not how to excuſe them, but that he is ‘much too blame to give ſuch ill Names and diſgraceful Titles to an ‘Order made in Court, as to call it a Pocket Order, thereby bringing ‘an Odium and defamation upon the Juſtices, who proceeded as ‘they ought, and in open Court, as appears by Doctor Farmary, ‘and by Aſcot, who had both of them a hand in it, (as I take it) ‘as well as Sir John Mounſon, and therefore their Credits muſt be re-‘paired alſo.

‘For Alice Smith, ſhe was tampered withal by Owen and Powel to ‘ſalve up Prigeons Credit; and after that ſhe had taken one Oath ‘before the Juſtices, then (for the preſent the Commiſſion to be 'ſat at Lincoln) ſhe is taken and withdrawn out of the way, and 'hath Rewards given her, (as is apparent) either to deny, or alter, 'and vary from what ſhe had ſworn before. She had 5 l. offered her 'to perſwade Elizabeth Hodgſon to lay the Child to another Father; 'and then afterwards it was given her to perſwade her to lay it to 'the right Father; and yet here is no falſe Oath, but may be true, as 'I can inſtance that a Depoſition may be made by a Party that may 'ſwear two things that are contrary, and yet the Depoſitions of 'both of them may be true.

'And yet an Attainder hath been upon the like; now upon an 'Attainder the puniſhment is great, he loſeth his Freehold, and 'Goods, all are forfeited to the King, his Houſes are to be razed 'down, Meadows plowed up, and Woods to be felled, and he him'ſelf to be impriſoned or baniſhed, his Wife and Children to be 'turned out of all.

Fitz-Herb. Natura brevium lib. 10.

'So in another Caſe, one hath a hold from an Abbot, and a Rent 'is due, as Foſter in Fee he holds jure Rectoriæ, and it's ſworn he 'had Common, time out of mind: And if the words jure Rectoriæ 'be not expreſt, all may be true.

'In this Caſe of Alice Smith it may be queſtioned what Money 'was promiſed, 5 l. to what end? to ſwear that ſhe was moved to 'get the Child laid to another: Well, afterwards ſhe muſt ſwear 'that it was to lay the Child to the right Father, Mr. Valentine and 'Mr. Powel ſhewed her the Interrogatories, ſhe muſt ſwear againſt 'the firſt Order, and Mr. Valentine ſaid his Heart trembled at the 'Queſtions.

'There is much cunning in this way of tampering with a Witneſs, for my Lord Biſhop asks them leading Queſtions, by which 'they have Inſtructions what, and how far to ſwear.

And Prigeon tells Richardſon, that if he could get the Order al'tered, he might do the Biſhop ſpecial Service.

'Now it may be, ſaid he, may not a Man meddle, nor queſtion 'with a Witneſs? yes, but with certain limitations, for elſe, if the 'Witneſſes be made and corrupted, the Jurors and Judges both of 'them may be abuſed; and if that Witneſſes may be led and in'ſtructed by Queſtions, or the like, it comes all to one as Suborna'tion.

'A Sollicitor may warn Witneſſes to come in, he may incite them, 'and enforce them, and one as well as the other: but for a ſtranger to 'labour a Juror or a Witneſs, is not ſo allowable. But a Sollicitor muſt 'not inſtruct a Witneſs, nor threaten him, nor carry Letters to him, to 'induce him this way, or that; yet he may diſcourſe with him, 'and ask him what he can ſay to this or that Point, and ſo he may 'know whether he be fit to be uſed in the Cauſe or no: by which 'means this Court is freed from the labour of asking many idle 'queſtions of the Witneſſes to no end, if they can ſay nothing to 'them, and ſo ſpend good time to no end nor purpoſe; yet he may 'not perſwade him, or threaten him to ſay more or leſs, than he of 'himſelf was inclined unto, and was by his Conſcience before-hand 'bound to deliver as truth.

'The term in Law is called Embracery of a Jury, Amplexus, to 'curry favour, when one hugs them, and houſes them in their Arms 'to procure reſpect unduly to their own ends; you have it men‘tioned 13 H. 4. & 16. when there is a leading of a Jury 22 H. 6. whereupon it hath been ordered, that in Caſes which have any relation to great Perſons, who uſually are on the Bench, they are upon Tryals to abſent themſelves, and not to be in preſence of the Bar.

An. 1637.

‘And as my Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Common-Pleas well inſiſted upon in this Caſe, the countenance of a great Man, and one that is powerful in the Country to do a poor Witneſs harm in another way upon any other occaſion, when it ſhall come to his turn, and occaſion be offered for him to do it; the very looks I ſay of ſuch a Man is able to put the Witneſs off from what he was reſolved to ſpeak, and daſh him out of countenance, that he will either, for fear that ſuch a Man ſhall take diſlike at him, or for hopes of much favour with him, and to gain his good will, ſpeak ſparingly of the matter in hand, at leaſt if he do not altogether decline another way in his words to that which he in his Conſcience knows to be the very truth.

‘So that in the Point it is plain, that when a Man ſhall alter the Teſtimony of a Witneſs, and cauſe him to decline from the truth, whether it be by threats, promiſes, or rewards, it hath ever been much diſallowed, and he that attempts the ſame is cenſurable, though perhaps he effects it not.

‘Now, my Lord, to come to the Cenſure, for I have been ſomewhat the more bold upon your patience, than I would otherwiſe, becauſe I would have it appear how far one may, and wherein one may not tamper, or meddle with Witneſſes, which thing is the main matter in this Caſe we have had ſo long in hand; for had not my Lord Biſhop moved this way, I ſhould not have found matter in this Bill to have ſentenced him at all.

‘But for to juſtifie Prigeons Credit, and to make him ſtand upright, and to clear the reputation of him, and others, ſo much Money is ſpent, and theſe unjuſt and undue undertakings have been made by my Lord of Lincolns Servants, and his Agents, to tamper, ſeduce, and withdraw the Witneſſes aſide againſt the Laws of God and Man, and to the very overthrow of my Lord himſelf.

‘For Cadwallader Powel it’s plain all the way what he did, and in what undue courſes he ſought to ſuppreſs the truth; I ſhall agree with your Lordſhips for him in his Fine, and do Cenſure him at 300 l. Fine; and for Owen, I ſhall alſo agree with you in his Fine of 300 l. alſo for Lunn, I could go deeper, and ſet him a greater puniſhment than your Lordſhips have, but do agree with you in his Fine of 1000 Marks, and to be diſabled from being in any Office or Practice hereafter in his Profeſſion, or in any other Court.

‘Now for my Lord Biſhop of Lincoln, truly I am heartily ſorry for him; but ex ſe cadit, he is the cauſe of his own overthrow, Et ruit Roma viribus ſuis, no Man hurts him but himſelf. I think of him as a great Perſon, and more to be pitied for that he is a Church-man, and in ſo eminent a Rank as a Biſhop, and none of the meaneſt of that Dignity: and as my Lord of Canterbury ſpoke, that it was the more grief to him to paſs Sentence in ſo deep a manner upon him, by reaſon he was of the ſame Coat; ſo, my Lords, I cannot but be ſenſible of his precedency to me in that place I 'now undergo by the favour, and at the Pleaſure of the Kings Majeſty, my honoured Maſter.

'For a Man of his Wiſdom, of that Experience, and having 'ſeen the various Changes of Times, and of ſeveral Mens Fortunes, lived in that eminency, and ſo well-literated, to ſeek his 'own overthrow, to ſupport and maintain the reputation of another, is a thing not to be ſo much as dreamed on, or could be once 'thought upon, that ſuch weakneſs ſhould ever faſten and take 'place in a Perſon ſo well-guarded and accompanied with Vertues 'and commendable Qualities, as my Lord Biſhop was ever eſteemed to have.

'And for a Church-man, whoſe Profeſſion is to ſupport Mens 'Conſciences in the right way, and for to reduce them into it when 'they ſhall chance to err, for him to be a ſeducer of the Conſcience, 'is a fouler and worſe ſtain in him than in another.

'But when to that Sacred Calling (the Profeſſors whereof are 'ever to be had in reſpect) ſhall be added another Charge, and 'care by the favour of the King, to become a Judge, and a Judge 'of that great Court of Chancery, where Equity and Conſcience 'give the very denomination of the Court; to be advanced to this 'eminency is a thing of great conſequence, and to be admitted to 'this Place is a ſign of great Truſt repoſed and placed in that Servant by his Maſter. Now I cannot, my Lords, but be heartily 'ſorry, and very much pity, that a Church-man, and Biſhop, and 'one that hath been a Prelate, and eminently Dignified for the 'ſpace of this 16 or 17 years at leaſt together, ſhould ſo groſly be 'overſeen in the countenancing and cheriſhing ſuch foul Crimes: 'Nay, a Man that had born the great Seal of England before two 'ſuch great Kings, and been highly graced with ſo many large Teſtimonies, and remarkable Favours from them both, to uncaſe 'himſelf of all thoſe, and that at once, and for ſo ſmall a matter, 'ſo little really in it ſelf concerning him, I cannot but wonder how 'he ſhould fall into ſuch an error, and more pity his misfortunes 'to ſee him ſo much his own Enemy.

'But as it hath been obſerved by you all, he hath overthrown 'himſelf: And therefore I muſt do my duty, and proceed to his 'Cenſure alſo, as I have in the reſt; vincat veritas & fiat juſtitia.

'I ſhall agree with my Lord Cottington for his Fine to the King 'in 10000 l. and ſo I do alſo with my Lord Cottington for his Impriſonment in the Tower during His Majeſties Pleaſure.

'And withal to be ſuſpended from all his Eccleſiaſtical Dignities, 'Offices, and Functions, and in all with my Lord Cottington, ab 'Officiis & Beneficiis, and to be referred to the High Commiſſion 'for the reſt.

This Biſhop of Lincoln, (once a great Miniſter of State) wreſtled through theſe difficulties and cloſe Impriſonments; was at laſt ſet at liberty out of the Tower, and called by the Kings Writ to ſit in the Houſe of Peers, and after that was advanced by the King, and reſtored to all his Eccleſiaſtical Dignities and Functions.

An. 1637.

July 1637.

THe Licenſing of all new Books was at this time in the power of the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury and his Subſtitutes and Dependents, who uſed that ſtrictneſs, that nothing could paſs the Preſs without his or their Approbation, but the Authors, Printers, and Stationers muſt run a hazard of ruine. But leſt the Printers (being thus reſtrained) ſhould fall to the re-printing of old Books of Divinity formerly Licenſed, this Decree was made in the Star-Chamber, That no perſon ſhall preſume to print any Book or Pamphlet whatſoever, unleſs the ſame be firſt licenſed, with all the Titles, Epiſtles, and Prefaces therewith imprinted, by the Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of London for the time being, or by their appointment; and within the limits of either Univerſity by the Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor thereof; upon pain that every Printer ſo offending ſhall for ever thereafter be diſabled to exerciſe the Art of Printing, and ſhall ſuffer ſuch farther puniſhment, as by this Court, or the high Commiſſion, ſhall be thought fitting, that before any Books imported from Forreign Parts ſhall be expoſed to ſale, a true Catalogue thereof ſhall be preſented to the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of London. And that no Officers of the Cuſtom ſhall deliver any Forreign Books out of their Hands and Cuſtody, before thoſe Biſhops ſhall have appointed one of their Chaplains, or ſome other Learned Man, with the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of Stationers, or one of them, to be preſent at the opening of the Packs and Fardels, and to view the ſame. And thoſe that diſobey this Injunction, are to be Cenſured in this, or the High Commiſſion-Court, as the ſeveral Cauſes ſhall require. And if in this Search there happen to be found any Schiſmatical or offenſive Books, they ſhall be brought to the aforeſaid Biſhops, or the High Commiſſion-Office, that the Offenders may be puniſhed. That no Perſon whatſoever ſhall imprint in the Parts beyond the Seas, or import from thence, any Engliſh Books, or whereof the greater part is Engliſh, whether formerly Printed or not. And that no Books whatſoever ſhall be re-printed, though formerly Licenſed, without a new Licenſe firſt obtained, upon pain of like Cenſure and Puniſhment. And that if any Perſon whatſoever, that is not an allowed Printer, ſhall preſume to ſet up a Preſs for Printing, or work at any ſuch Preſs, or Set and Compoſe Letters for the ſame, he ſhall be ſet in the Pillory, and Whipt through the City of London.

After the making of this Decree Mr. Fox his Acts and Monuments, (called the Book of Martyrs) Biſhop Jewels Works, and ſome parts of Dr. Willets, with others, formerly publiſhed by Authority, were denyed new Licenſes; as alſo the Practice of Piety, which had been re-printed 36 times.

Auguſt 18. Complaint that the Biſhops in England kept Courts in their own Names, without a Patent from the King.

AT this time the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, exerciſing their Power ſeverely againſt the Puritans, fell under the weight of a general envy and diſlike, and were ſpoken againſt by many, as an incroachment upon the Kings Prerogative contrary to Law, becauſe they were held in the Biſhops Names, and without a Patent under the Great Seal of England. And in regard of divers late Pamphlets publiſhed to that purpoſe, the King was pleaſed by Proclamation to declare the Right, and vindicate the Proceedings of the Eccleſiaſtical Courts and Officers. That the Judges being required to give their Opinions, had certified, that Proceſs may iſſue out of Eccleſiaſtical Courts in the Name of the Biſhops. That a Patent under the Great Seal is not neceſſary for the keeping of Eccleſiaſtical Courts, the enabling of Citations, Examinations, Suſpenſions, and other Cenſures of the Church. That it is not neceſſary that Proceſſes Eccleſiaſtical, Inſtitutions, or Inductions to Benefices, or correction of Eccleſiaſtical Offences in thoſe Courts, be in the Kings Name, or under his Seal, or that the Seals of their Office have the Kings Arms. And that the Statute of the firſt of Edward the Sixth, that enacted the contrary, is not now in force. That Biſhops, Arch-deacons, and other Eccleſiaſtical Officers, may keep their Viſitations without Commiſſion under the Great Seal of England.

The King, by Proclamation, vindicates the Right of the Biſhops in ſo doing. The Judges Opinions therein.

IN the Year 1632. the Lord Weſton, being then High Treaſurer of England, ſent for the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of Vintners, and demanded of them, in the vent and conſumption of Wines, one Peny a Quart, which is 4 l. per Tunn, which they utterly refuſed, alledging it would be the utter undoing of the retailing Vintners.

The Company of Vintners Caſe as to the payment of 3000 l. per Annum into the Exchequer, for Licenſe to have liberty to dreſs and ſell Victuals in Taverns, and Wines above the Rates propoſed.

Whereupon a Decree was made in the Star-Chamber, That the Retailers of Wines ought not to ſell or dreſs Victuals in their Houſes, which (time out of mind) they were accuſtomed to do; and this was done without any Information or Bill, or any called to defend or juſtifie their trade or uſage of it.

In Anno 1634. His Majeſty queſtioned the Vintners, and Retailers of Wine, for the breach of the ſaid Decree; but to evade their Cenſure they yielded to lend His Majeſty 6000 Pounds; whereupon His Majeſty did, by His Order, give way to the Retailers of Wines to dreſs and ſell Victuals till December next following; at which time his Majeſty promiſed to ſettle it ſo as he thought fit for him to Sign, that was to have the Vintners relying upon that Temporary Licenſe, that ſo His Majeſty, by His Declaration, might continue or diſcontinue their power of dreſſing Meat as he ſhould find convenient.

But in Anno 1635. the Retailers of Wines were again queſtioned for breach of the former Decree, and the Lord Cottington then propounded to them to yield to pay ſomewhat on their vent of Wines to His Majeſty, which the Retailing Vintners utterly refuſed to do.

Again, in Anno 1636 many Retailers of Wines were by information in Maſter Attorney's Name queſtioned in Star-Chamber for breach of the ſaid Decree, and ſo far proceeded againſt, as that they were ſerved with Proceſs of that Court to hear Judgment.

But while things were thus depending Richard Kilvert repaired to Alderman Abel, (the Maſter of the Company, and a meer ſtranger to Mr. Kilvert) and told him, that His Majeſty commanded him to proſecute the Vintners in the Star-Chamber for ſelling above the price, and breach of the Decree for dreſſing of Meat.

An. 1637.

In October Anno 1637. at Vintners-Hall London, William Abel Alderman being then Maſter of that Company, imparted to the Company, That Mr. Richard Kilvert had been lately with him, and acquainted him with the former Paſſages.

At this Court the Company of Vintners taking their Buſineſs into their ſerious Conſiderations, and weighing how they might hazard the utter undoing of ſuch as had tranſgreſſed the Decree, if they ſhould be brought to a Sentence in Star-Chamber; they ſubmitted to the payment of 40 s. per Tunn, 4 l. being demanded; and ſo they, (the Company of Vintners) together with the French and Spaniſh Merchants, contracted by Indenture Quadrupartite with His Majeſty, to pay Him 40 s. per Tunn on all ſuch Wines as they bought and vented, foreſeeing what great hindrance it would be to them, if ſtrangers ſhould come in and ſearch their Cellars, and know the Particulars of what they had bought and ſold; the Company therefore, to prevent many Inconveniences, deſired rather to Farm the Duty from His Majeſty; and His Majeſty declaring, That he would not contract with the generality of the Company for the ſame, but with ſome particular Members, the Company did deſire Alderman Abel, and Edward Kinnaſton, Robert Shaw, Ralph Moor, George Hubbart, and Michael Gardiner, &c. Free-men of their Company, to perform the Contract with His Majeſty for the ſame Duty, who took it to Farm at 3000 l. per Ann. for eight years.

November 22. 1637. Concerning the Tradeſmen and Artificers within three Miles of the City of London, not yet admitted into the new Corporation.

Whereas, upon the earneſt and frequent Complaints of the Inhabitants of the Places, as well within the City of London, exempt from the Freedom thereof, as without the ſaid City, and within three Miles of the ſame, for the great grievance by them ſuſtained, through the Intruſion of Aliens and Foreigners into theſe Places; the King, by His Letters Patents under the Great Seal, Dated the ſecond of June, in the twelfth Year of His Majeſties Reign, did Incorporate ſuch Tradeſmen and Artificers Inhabiting the ſame Places, as had ſerved Apprentiſhips for the ſpace of ſeven Years into a Body Corporate and Politick; and did erect a ſetled Government for the more orderly diſpoſing of Tradeſmen there for time to come, prohibiting all Perſons, after the Feaſt of All-Saints then next enſuing, to uſe, or exerciſe any Trade, Myſtery, &c. unleſs he or they be admitted into the Freedom of the ſaid Corporation: According to which the King did reſolve, in all reſpects, to have proceeded againſt thoſe Offenders, intending to have excluded them from the Benefit of the ſaid Freedom, and from the Exerciſe of Trade within the Places aforeſaid.

But foraſmuch as the King is given to underſtand, that partly by reaſon of the Infection, and out of a miſ-underſtanding of the Kings Intention, People did, for a time, put off their Admiſſion into the ſaid Freedom; nevertheleſs, when the time limited was expired, Multitudes of People reſorted to be Admitted; but coming ſo thick, the Governor, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants of the ſaid Corporation, for fear of Admitting ſuch as were incapable thereof, were enforced to deſiſt; therefore the King doth now declare His Pleaſure, That the Governor, Wardens, and Aſſiſtants ſhall, and may proceed without delay to admit into the ſaid Freedom all ſorts of Tradeſmen and Artificers, as well Brewers, Weavers, Brick-makers, as others, &c.

December 20. 1637. A Proclamation on reſtraining the with-drawing his Majeſties Subjects from the Church of England, and giving ſcandal in reſorting to Maſſes.

THe Kings Majeſty finding of late, that ſome of His Natural-born Subjects have abuſed His Majeſties Princely Goodneſs, through the eaſe which they enjoy under His Gracious and Mild Government, by withdrawing ſundry of His Subjects to the Roman Superſtition, and to forſake the Church of England; and likewiſe by reſorting to Maſſes and Service, Celebrated according to the Rites of the Church of Rome, expreſly contrary to the Law of this Realm; for prevention whereof, for the time to come, and for preſervation of Religion, as it is eſtabliſhed in the Church of England, which His Majeſty is reſolved conſtantly to maintain; the King therefore hath thought fit to ſet forth this Declaration of His Royal Will and Pleaſure; and doth expreſly command all Perſons, Clerks and Laicks, that they from henceforth forbear to attempt, to withdraw any the Kings Subjects from the Religion that is now profeſſed. And the King doth Declare, That if any of the Roman Party ſhall, from henceforth, give ſcandal, by Celebrating or hearing of any Maſs or Maſſes, that then His Majeſty will cauſe to be put in execution againſt ſuch Contumacious Perſons, thoſe Penalties, which by the Laws are inflicted.

December 28. Concerning Writs iſſued out for payment of Ship-money.

THe Charge of Sir William Ruſſel Knight and Baronet, Treaſurer of His Majeſties Navy, touching the Monies by him received of the ſeveral Sheriffs here under-named, and by them Levied by vertue of His Majeſties Writs Iſſued out of the High Court of Chancery in the 13*th* Year of His Majeſties Reign; for and towards the ſetting forth, and furniſhing of divers Ships for the defence of this Realm, and paid over by them the ſaid Sheriffs unto the ſaid Sir William Ruſſel, by vertue of a ſpecial Commiſſion under the Great Seal, Dated the 28*th* of December in the ſaid thirteenth Year of His Majeſties Reign, Annoq; Dom. 1637. and by Order from the Board to be expended and diſburſed in and about the ſaid Service.

December 28. 1637. Touching the Corporation of Soap-makers of London.

Whereas the Kings moſt Excellent Majeſty, for the better prevention and reformation of ſuch Falſities and Deceits, as might be attempted and practiſed in the making of Soap within the Kingdom, and for the Regulation of that Trade in a juſt and orderly way, did, by Letters Patents under the Great Seal, Dated the 22d of May laſt, with the Advice of his Privy-Council, Incorporate Edward Bromfeild, then Lord Major of the City of London, and divers other Perſons Soap-makers in that City, by the Name of the Governor, Aſſiſtants, and Commonalty of the Society of Soap-makers of London; and hath thereby granted to them and their Succeſſors Power and Priviledge to make Seizure of all ſuch Soap, as ſhall be corruptly, or unduly made, with Inhibition to all other Perſons whatſoever to uſe, or exerciſe that Art, or Myſtery of Soap-making, unleſs they ſhall be made Free of, and allowed by the ſaid Society.

And his Majeſty, by an Indenture of the ſame Date, made between his Majeſty and the ſaid Company, hath provided, that Good and Merchantable Soap, of ſeveral ſorts, ſhall be made ſufficient for the uſe and expence of the Kingdom, and by them ſold at moderate Prices; ſome at three-pence half-peny the pound; and the Soap made of Oyl-Olive, &c. at four-pence half-peny the pound. And therefore the King commands all Perſons whatſoever, other than ſuch as are or ſhall be Free of the ſaid Society, that they do not from henceforth preſume to uſe or exerciſe the Art or Myſtery of Soap-making, to make any manner of Soap whatſoever without the allowance of the ſaid Society. And his Majeſty doth alſo prohibit the Importation, from Foreign Parts, of any hard or ſoft Soap, upon pain of Forfeiture, or if any Pot-Aſhes be Imported, that the ſame be brought only to the Port of London, and there to be ſold by the Importers to the ſaid Society of Soap-makers of London, and to no other Perſons. And to the end alſo that the Soap made by that Company may not be ſold by Retail, or in Groſs, at any exceſſive Prices; his Majeſty doth Charge and Command, That the Major, Bailiff, or other Chief Officer, with the Aſſiſtance of Two Juſtices of the Peace, in every City, Burrough, or Town, do limit ſuch Rates as they, in their Judgments ſhall think reaſonable; Conſideration being had, as well of the ſetled Prices paid to the ſaid Society, as of the Charge of Carriage, and other Caſualties. And his Majeſty doth Authorize the Governor, Aſſiſtants, and Commonalty of the ſaid Society, and their Deputies and Officers, with the Aſſiſtance of the Conſtable, to enter into any Houſes, Cellars, Shops, or other Places, and alſo into any Ships, Barques, or other Veſſels, to ſearch for, ſeize, take and carry away all ſuch Soap, as ſhall be found to be unduly made, not under the Rule, Government, or Allowance of the ſaid Society.

And whereas his Majeſty did heretofore Incorporate divers Perſons into one Body-Politick, by the Name of Governor, Aſſiſtants, and Fellows of the Society of Soapers of Weſtminſter; which Grant being afterwards ſtrengthned, as well with ſundry of his Majeſties Proclamations, as the Decrees and Orders of his High Court of Star-Chamber, and otherwiſe; the ſaid Society of Soapers hath ſince reſigned and ſurrendred into His Majeſties hands, who hath Cancelled and Vacated the ſame, and all Proclamations, Orders, and Decrees, touching the ſaid Society of the Soapers of Weſtminſter that are no longer to be in force, or put in execution. Nevertheleſs His Majeſties Will and Pleaſure is, That neither Sir Richard Weſton Knight, nor the ſeveral Soap-makers of Briſtol, Bridgewater, Exeter, Somerſet, Dorſet, Devon, and Cornwel, nor any of them reſpectively, ſhall be reſtrained or impeached hereby, in the making and venting ſuch ſorts and proportions of Soap yearly, as they reſpectively are allowed to make and ſell in the particular Counties and Places, to them reſpectively Aſſigned.

February. Lord Chancellor of Ireland committed to Priſon.

A*Dam* Lord Viſcount Loftus, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, being in the Month of February required by the Lord Deputy to yield up unto him the Great Seal of the Realm of Ireland, he refuſed to do the ſame without particular Warrant from the King firſt obtained, whereupon he was committed to Priſon in Dublin-Caſtle for not obeying the Lord Deputies Commands.

Feb. 9. That the Book for Sports be read in Churches, and Certificates that the ſame is done.

THe Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury having, in his Metropolitical Viſitation, given Inſtructions to proceed againſt ſuch Miniſters as did not read His Majeſties Declaration publickly in the Church concerning Lawful Sports on the Lords-day, was imitated by other Biſhops in their reſpective Viſitations, who likewiſe required the Church-wardens upon Oath to repreſent, whether the Kings Declaration for Sports hath been read and publiſhed in the Church by the Miniſter? whereupon many were queſtioned if they could not produce a Certificate that they had read the ſame in the Church; the form of which Certificate was as followeth.

Theſe are to Certifie, That T. G. Maſter of Arts, and Curate of Hitchin in Hartfordſhire, within the Archdeaconry of Huntington, according to the Injunction at the Viſitation there holden, did diſtinctly and treatably read, upon the 29th of April, being Sunday at Morning-Prayer, after the reading of the firſt Leſſon appointed for the day, moſt of the Pariſhioners being preſent, the Book Entituled, The Kings Majeſties Declaration to His Subjects concerning Lawful Sports to be uſed.

William Lindall D. D.

Beſides the Church-wardens Hands, &c. was put to the ſame.

Mr. Lawrence Snelling, Miniſter of the Church of Pauls Cray in the County of Kent, was Articled againſt in the High Commiſſion, for not reading the ſaid Book; and being called before them in Court, he Pleaded in his own defence the Law of God, and the Law of the Realm, the Authorities of Councils, Fathers, and late VVriters of all ſorts.

That the Declaration it ſelf appeared not to be His Majeſties, though Publiſhed in His Name, it being not Enrolled in any Court, nor Publiſhed under His Great Seal, as all Proclamations and Briefs to be read in Churches are; that there was no Command at all of the Kings, it ſhould be read by any in Churches, much leſs by Miniſters; no puniſhment threatned, nor preſcribed for not reading it, no Authority given to Arch-biſhops, Biſhops, High-Commiſſioners, or any other Perſons to queſtion, ſuſpend, or puniſh any Miniſter for not reading it; and being a meer Civil, not Eccleſiaſtical Declaration, not enjoyned by any Eccleſiaſtical Canon or Authority, but Temporal only, he pleaded that no Eccleſiaſtical Judges could take cognizance of it, much leſs inflict any Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure for it, eſpecially in the High Commiſſion, it being no offence within the Statute of 1 Eliz. Ch. 1. or the Kings Commiſſion Eccleſiaſtical, whereby the High-Commiſſioners ſit, and ſo not queſtionable by them.

All which Particulars being put in his Anſwer, the High Commiſſion-Court (the Lord Arch-biſhop of Canterbury being then preſent) ordered the Anſwer not to be accepted, till matters unfit therein were expunged; which being done, they afterwards proceeded to Cenſure, as followeth.

Officium Dominorum con' Laurent' Snelling Cleric' Rectorem de Paulſcrai in Com' Cant', Dr. Ryves.

The Cauſe is to be informed in, and finally Sentenced out of the ſaid Mr. Snellings Anſwer, and he is to appear this day to hear and receive the final Order and Judgment of the Court; at which day and place the ſaid Laurence Snelling being publickly called for, appeared perſonally, in whoſe preſence the Articles in this Cauſe exhibited againſt him, with his Anſwers made thereunto, were publickly read; and then Mr Dr. Ryves, His Majeſties Advocate preſſed and enforced the Proofs againſt the ſaid Mr. Snelling, according as they appeared out of his Anſwers; and after that the ſaid Mr. Snelling was heard what he could ſay in his own defence; and after a mature and deliberate hearing of this Cauſe, it appeared to the Court,

That the ſaid Mr. Snelling was here charged, for that he being a Miniſter in Holy Orders of Prieſthood, conſtituted by the Authority of the Church for theſe twenty years laſt paſt and upwards, Rector of Pauls Cray aforeſaid, for all that time and upwards, was within theſe four or five years laſt paſt made acquainted, that a certain Book Entituled, The Kings Majeſties Declaration for Lawful Recreations after Evening-Prayer on Sundays and Holidays, was come forth, and commanded by His Majeſty to be read by all Miniſters in their reſpective Pariſh-Churches, and preſented to Mr. Dr. Wood, Chancellor of Rocheſter, his Ordinary, on the 20*th* of November 1633. for refuſing to read and publiſh the ſame in his Pariſh-Church of Pauls-Cray.

That upon the ſaid Preſentment he was by his ſaid Ordinary perſonally moniſhed to read the ſame within three weeks following; that on the 11th of December 1634. aforeſaid, he the ſaid Laurence Snelling being again Convented before his ſaid Ordinary, was primo, ſecundo, & tertio, perſonally and judicially moniſhed in Court to read and publiſh the ſaid Book in manner aforeſaid, which he refuſing, was ſuſpended ab Officio & Beneficio, and hath ſo continued until this preſent, and doth ſo ſtill continue unreleaſed; that on the third of April 1635. the ſaid Laurence Snelling being preſent in Court before his Ordinary, was 10, 20, and 30 Judicially admoniſhed to read and publiſh the ſaid Book for Lawful Recreations as aforeſaid, but did again utterly refuſe to publiſh or read the ſame, and was thereupon then excommunicated by his ſaid Ordinary, and hath ſo continued ever ſince, and doth ſo continue ſtill excommunicated; that within the time articulate the ſaid Mr. Snelling hath divers times omitted to read the Letany, and ſome other parts of Divine Service, and to wear the Surplice: and further, that he hath not bowed his Body, nor made any corporal obeyſance at the reading, or hearing read the Bleſſed Name of our Saviour Jeſus.

All which the Premiſſes appearing to be true in ſubſtance and in effect, out of the ſaid Mr. Snellings Anſwers, the Court proceeded to the giving of their Sentence in this Cauſe, and for the preſent did order, That unleſs the ſaid Mr. Snelling ſhall conform himſelf to the aforeſaid requiſitions of his Ordinary, and read and publiſh the ſaid Book for Lawful Recreations, &c. and do all due obeyſance and reverence, at the Bleſſed Name of our Saviour Jeſus, betwixt this and the ſecond Court-day of the next Term, he ſhould be ex nunc, prout ex tunc, deprived of his Rectory of Pauls-Cray aforeſaid, but pay no Coſts of Suit in caſe he be deprived; and to this end and purpoſe he the ſaid Mr. Snelling being preſent in Court, was Judicially admoniſhed to read and publiſh the ſaid Book, and to make Corporal Reverence at the Name of our Saviour Jeſus, ſub pœna juris, & deprivationis; and to the end that he may ſafely repair to his Church to practiſe, and certifie of his Conformity in the Premiſſes, (in caſe he ſhall be willing to conform accordingly) it was by the Court referred to the aforeſaid Ordinary Mr. Dr. Wood to abſolve the ſaid Mr. Snelling from the Sentence of Excommunication, under which he now ſtands, in caſe he ſhall come and deſire it of his ſaid Ordinary, and take his Oath de parendo in juri, & ſtando mandatis Eccleſiæ, &c. according to the form in this caſe provided. But Mr. Snelling refuſing to read the Book of Sports, &c. was deprived of his Living, and continued an Excommunicate Perſon, &c.

I found it had not been done in very many Places of the Dioceſs; having therefore about 60 Books at hand, I cauſed them to be propoſed to ſuch Perſons as I had moſt doubt of, but many of them refuſed to Publiſh the ſame, and were ſuſpended for their refuſal; yet divers of them preſently promiſed Conformity, and ſo were abſolved; ſo that now in the whole Dioceſs (conſiſting of about 1500 Clergy-men) there are not paſſing twice fifteen Excommunicated or Suſpended; whereof ſome ſo ſtand for Contumacy, in not appearing at the Viſitation and Synod, and ſtill refuſe to ſubmit, and others for obſtinate denying to Publiſh the Kings Declaration.

Touching St. Gregories Church. Feb. 11.

WHereas the Board was now acquainted, that notwithſtanding His Majeſties Pleaſure ſignified by the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Cottington, to the Pariſhioners of St. Gregories, That the Church ſhould be taken down and removed, being a great impediment to the Work now in hand, for the perfecting and fully repairing of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, the ſaid Pariſhioners had not as yet done the ſame, nor taken any order for the doing thereof. It was thereupon reſolved and ordered, according to His Majeſties expreſs Will and Pleaſure, as alſo now again declared, That the ſaid Church ſhall be taken down and removed by the laſt of March next.

And the ſaid Pariſhioners are hereby ſtraitly required and enjoyned to cauſe the ſame to be done and performed accordingly, as they will anſwer the contrary at their perils; His Majeſty expecting a dutiful and effectual account thereof from them by the time before limited.

This Order not being obeyed, produced another Order, following.

The laſt of February 1637. this Buſineſs came again before the Lords of the Council, which produced this further Order.

Touching St. Gregories Church. Feb. 28.

Order to pull down the Church of St. Gregories.

THis day two of the Petty Canons of the Cathedral Church of St Paul, and the Church-Wardens of the Pariſh of St. Gregories, did, by command from their Lordſhips, attend the Board, and were heard concerning the Petition formerly preſented in the Name of the ſaid Pariſhioners, wherein, upon pretence of diſability to undergo the Charge thereof, they were humble Suitors, that they might be freed from taking down and removing of the Pariſh-Church, which by former Orders of the Board they were in his Majeſties Name, and according to his expreſs Command, required and directed to do, by the laſt of March next. Their Lordſhips finding no cauſe to vary in any particular from their ſaid former Orders, did now again ratifie and confirm the ſame, and did require, that as well the Church-Wardens now preſent, as ſuch others of the chief Pariſhioners, (unto whom the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Cottington had already ſignified his Majeſties Pleaſure on that behalf) ſhould, by the time limited as aforeſaid, cauſe the ſaid Church to be taken down and removed. And concerning the difficulty by them made, of finding out and procuring a fit place for the erecting of a new Church within the ſaid Pariſh, and their diſability for the preſent to undergo the charge of building the ſame; the former (as their Lordſhips did now well remember) was already recommended to the Lord Treaſurer, and the Lord Cottington, unto whoſe directions therein their Lordſhips do now again refer them. And for the latter, in caſe their diſability for the preſent be ſuch, as that they are unable to erect a new Church; their Lordſhips leave it to their Election, whether they will build the ſame, or be aſſigned to any one or more Pariſhes in ſuch manner as the Lord Biſhop of London, Lord Treaſurer, ſhall think fit and direct, and ſo remain and continue until a new Church ſhall be by them erected. And do recommend it to his Lordſhip, to take effectual order upon ſuch Election by them made as aforeſaid, for their accommodation therein accordingly.

Feb. 13. Star-Chamber.

INformation was preferred in Star-Chamber by the Kings Attorney-General, againſt John Lilburne and John Warton, for the unlawful Printing and Publiſhing of Libellous and Seditious Books, Entituled News from Ipſwich, &c. they were brought up to the Office, and there refuſed to take an Oath to anſwer Interrogatories, ſaying it was the Oath ex Officio, and that no free-born Engliſh man ought to take it, not being bound by the Law to accuſe himſelf, (whence ever after he was called Free-born John) his offence was aggravated, in that he printed theſe Libellous and Seditious Books, contrary to a Decree in Star-Chamber, prohibiting printing without Licenſe: which Decree was made this Year in the Month of July, and was to this effect.

July 1637. A Decree of Star-Chamber againſt Printing without Licenſe.

'THat none ſhall preſume to Print any Book or Pamphlet 'whatſoever, unleſs the ſame be firſt Licenſed with all the 'Titles, Epiſtles, and Prefaces therewith imprinted, by the Lord 'Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of London for the time 'being, or by their appointment; and within the Limits of either 'Univerſity, by the Chancellor or Vice-Chancellor thereof, upon 'pain that every Printer ſo offending ſhall for ever thereafter be diſabled to exerciſe the Art of Printing, and ſhall ſuffer ſuch further 'puniſhment, as by this Court, or the High-Commiſſion, ſhall be 'thought fitting; that before any Books Imported from Forreign 'Parts ſhall be expoſed to ſale, a true Catalogue thereof ſhall be 'preſented to the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, or the Biſhop of London: And that no Officers of the Cuſtom ſhall deliver any For-

‘reign Books out of their Hands and Cuſtody, before thoſe Biſhops ſhall have appointed one of their Chaplains, or ſome other Learned Man, with the Maſter and Wardens of the Company of Stationers, or one of them, to be preſent at the opening of the Pack and Fardels, and to view the ſame. And thoſe that diſobey this Injunction, are to be Cenſured in this or the High-Commiſſion Court, as the ſeveral Cauſes ſhall require. And if in this Search there happen to be found any ſchiſmatical or offenſive Books, they ſhall be brought to the aforeſaid Biſhops, or the High-Commiſſion Office, that the Offenders may be puniſhed. That no Perſon whatſoever ſhall Imprint in the Parts beyond the Sea, or Import from thence, any Engliſh Books, or whereof the greater part is Engliſh, whether formerly Printed or not. And that no Books whatſoever ſhall be re-printed, though formerly Licenſed, without a new Licenſe firſt obtained, upon pain of like Cenſure and Puniſhment. And that if any Perſon whatſoever that is not an allowed Printer ſhall preſume to ſet up a Preſs for Printing, or work at any ſuch Preſs, or Set and Compoſe Letters for the ſame, he ſhall be ſet in the Pillory, and whipt through the City of London.

The 13*th* of February the ſaid Lilburne and Warton were brought to the Bar at the Court of Star-Chamber, and the Court proceeded to Sentence, which you have here in the very words, as they were entred in the Regiſters Book, written out by Mr. Arthur himſelf, the Deputy Regiſter, who was an able and friendly Man in his Place.

But before they proceeded to Sentence this enſuing Order was read.

In Camera Stellat' coram Concilio ibidem 9. die Febr. Anno 13 Car' Regis.

John Lilburne and Warton brought to the Bar.

‘UPon Information this day to this Honourable Court, by Sir John Banks Knight, His Majeſties Attorney-General, That John Lilburne and John Warton, who are now at the Bar of this Court, were the 24*th* of January laſt ordered to be examined upon Interrogatories touching their unlawful printing, publiſhing, and diſperſing of Libellous and Seditious Books, contrary to the Decree of this Court, which was verified by Affidavit; and being brought up to the Office to appear and be examined accordingly, the ſaid Lilburne refuſed to appear, and both of them denied to take an Oath to make anſwer to Interrogatories, as appears by Certificate of Mr. Goad: It was humbly pray'd that their Appearance may be Recorded, they being now preſent in Court, and that they may now have their Oaths tendred unto them; which if they ſhall refuſe to take, that then this Court will proceed to a Cenſure againſt them for their high Contempt therein, as hath been uſed in like Caſes, which the Court held fit. And hath therefore ordered, That their Appearance ſhall be Recorded, as is deſired. And for that the ſaid Delinquents do now again moſt contemptuouſly refuſe to take their Oaths now tendred to them in 'open Court. Their Lordſhips have further ordered, That the 'ſaid Lilburne and Warton ſhall be remanded to the Priſon of the 'Fleet, there to remain cloſe Priſoners until they conform them'ſelves in obedience to take their Oaths, and be examined; 'and that unleſs they do take their Oaths, and yield to be exami'ned by Monday-night next, their Lordſhips will, on the laſt ſitting 'of this Term, proceed to Cenſure againſt them for their contempts 'therein, as is deſired.

Hereupon the Court proceeded to Sentence.

In Camera Stellata coram Concilio ibidem 13 die Febr' Anno decimo tertio Car' Regis.

The Decree and Sentence in Star-Chamber againſt Jo. Lilburne, as it is on Record.

'WHereas, upon Information to this Court the ninth of this 'inſtant February, by Sir John Banks Knight, His Maje'ſties Attorney-General, That John Lilburne and John Warton '(then preſent at the Bar) were the 24*th* of January laſt ordered to be 'examined upon Interrogatories touching their unlawful printing, 'importing, publiſhing, and diſperſing of Libellous and Seditious 'Books, contrary to the Decree of this Court, which was verified 'by Affidavit; and being brought up to the Office to appear and be 'examined, the ſaid Lilburne refuſed to appear, and both of them 'denied to take an Oath to make ſome anſwer to Interrogatories, 'as appeared by the Certificate of Mr. Goad, Deputy Clark of this 'Court: The Court did on that day order, That their Appearan'ces ſhould be Recorded, they being preſent in Court as aforeſaid; 'And that in reſpect the ſaid Delinquents did then again con'temptuouſly refuſe to take their Oaths tendred to them in open 'Court, they ſhould be remanded to the Priſon of the Fleet, there 'to remain cloſe Priſoners, until they conformed themſelves in obe'dience to take their Oaths and be examined; and that unleſs they 'did take their Oaths, and yield to be examined by Monday-night 'then next following, and now laſt paſt, their Lordſhips would on 'this ſitting-day proceed to a Cenſure againſt them for their con'tempts therein. Now this day the ſaid Lilburne and Warton being 'again brought to the Bar, His Majeſties ſaid Attorney informed 'this Honourable Court, that they ſtill continued in their former 'obſtinacy, and contemptuouſly refuſed to take their Oaths, to 'make true anſwer to the Interrogatories, although they had been 'ſent for, and their Oaths aſſented to be given unto them by Mr. 'Goad, Deputy-Clark of this Court, who now certified the ſame in 'Court: And therefore His Majeſties ſaid Attorney humbly pleaded 'on His Majeſties behalf, That their Lordſhips would now proceed 'to Cenſure againſt the ſaid Delinquents, for their great contempts 'and diſobedience therein. Whereupon their Lordſhips endeavou'red, by fair perſwaſions, to draw them to conformity and obedi'ence, and withal offered, that if they yet would ſubmit and take 'their Oaths, their Lordſhips would accept thereof, and not pro'ceed to Cenſure againſt them. But ſuch was the inſufferable diſ'obedience and contempt of the ſaid Delinquents, that they ſtill 'perſiſted in their former obſtinacy, and wilfully refuſed to take

An. 1637.

'their Oaths. In reſpect whereof the whole Court did, with an 'unanimous conſent, declare and adjudge the ſaid Lilburne and
'Warton guilty of a very high contempt and offence of dangerous
'conſequence and evil example, and worthy to undergo very ſharp,
'ſevere, and exemplary Cenſure, which might deter others from
'the like preſumptuous boldneſs in refuſing to take a legal Oath;
'without which many great and exorbitant offences, to the prejudice
'and danger of His Majeſty, His Kingdoms, and Loving Subjects,
'might go away undiſcovered, and unpuniſhed. And therefore
'their Lordſhips have now ordered, adjudged and decreed,
'That the ſaid Lilburne and Warton ſhall be remanded to the Fleet,
'there to remain until they conform themſelves in obedience to
'the Orders of this Court, and that they ſhall pay Five Hundred 'Pounds a-piece for their ſeveral Fines to His Majeſties uſe; and
'before their enlargements out of the Fleet, become bound with 'good Sureties for their good behaviour. And to the end that 'others may be the more deterred from daring to offend in the like 'kind hereafter, the Court hath further ordered and decreed, That
'the ſaid John Lilburne ſhall be whipt through the Streets, from the 'Priſon of the Fleet unto the Pillory, to be erected at ſuch time, and
'in ſuch * place as this Court ſhall hold fit and direct; and that both
'he and the ſaid Warton ſhall be both of them ſet in the ſaid Pillory,
'and from thence be returned to the Fleet, there to remain according 'to this Decree.

* The Pillory was placed between Weſtminſter-Hall-Gate and the Star-Chamber.

And the following Year in Eaſter-Term, falling on the 18*th* of April was this Sentence executed with the utmoſt rigour on Lilburne, who was ſmartly whipt from the Fleet to Weſtminſter.

Whilſt he was whipt at the Cart, and ſtood in the Pillory, he uttered many bold Speeches againſt the Tyranny of Biſhops, &c. and when his Head was in the hole of the Pillory, he ſcattered ſundry Copies of Pamphlets, (ſaid to be ſeditious) and toſſed them among the People, taking them out of his Pocket; whereupon the Court of Star-Chamber (then ſitting being informed) immediately ordered Lilburne to be gagged during the reſidue of the time he was to ſtand in the Pillory, which was done accordingly; and when he could not ſpeak, he ſtamped with his Feet, thereby intimating to the Beholders, he would ſtill ſpeak were his Mouth at liberty; and the Court of Star-Chamber that day made alſo this following Order.

April 8. 1638. John Lilburne uttered ſcandalous Speeches in the Pillory.

'WHereas John Lilburne, Priſoner in the Fleet, by Sentence in 'Star-Chamber, did this day ſuffer condign Puniſhment for 'his ſeveral offences, by whipping at a Cart, and ſtanding in the 'Pillory, and (as their Lordſhips were this day informed) during 'the time that his Body was under the ſaid Execution, audaciouſly
'and wickedly, not only uttered ſundry ſcandalous and ſeditious
'Speeches, but likewiſe ſcattered ſundry Copies of Seditious Books
'amongſt the People that beheld the ſaid Execution, for which
'very thing, amongſt other offences of like nature, he had been 'Cenſured in the ſaid Court by the aforeſaid Sentence. It was
'thereupon ordered by their Lordſhips, That the ſaid Lilburne
'ſhould be laid alone with Irons on his Hands and Legs in the

'Wards of the Fleet, where the baſeſt and meaneſt ſort of Priſoners are uſed to be put, and that the Warden of the Fleet take 'ſpecial care to hinder the reſort of any Perſon whatſoever unto 'him, and particularly that he be not ſupplied with any Hand, and 'that he take ſpecial notice of all Letters, Writings, and Books 'brought unto him, and ſeize and deliver the ſame unto their Lordſhips; And take notice from time to time who they be that reſort to the ſaid Priſon to viſit the ſaid Lilburne, or to ſpeak with 'him, and inform the Board. And it was laſtly ordered, That 'hereafter all Perſons that ſhall be produced to receive Corporal 'Puniſhment according to Sentence of that Court, or by order of 'the Board, ſhall have their Garments ſearched before they be 'brought forth, and neither Writing nor other thing ſuffered to be 'about them, and their Hands likewiſe to be bound during the time 'they are under Puniſhment, whereof (together with the other 'Premiſſes) the ſaid Warden of the Fleet is hereby required to take 'notice, and to have ſpecial care, that this their Lordſhips Order 'be accordingly obſerved.

And on the ſaid 18*th* of April it was further ordered by the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber,

John Lilburne to be examined touching his Speeches in the Pillory, and diſperſing Libellous Books.

'THat His Majeſties Attorney and Sollicitor-General ſhould be 'hereby prayed and required, to take ſtrict examination of 'John Lilburne Priſoner in the Fleet, touching the demeanour and 'Speeches of him the ſaid Lilburne during the time of his whipping 'and ſtanding in the Pillory this day, according to ſentence of His 'Majeſties Court of Star-Chamber, particularly, whether the ſaid 'Lilburne did at that time utter any Speeches tending to Sedition, or 'to the diſhonour of the ſaid Court of Star-chamber, or any Member 'of the ſaid Court? and whether he did throw about and diſperſe 'at the ſame time any Seditious Pamphlets and Books, either of 'that ſort for which he was formerly Cenſured, or any other of 'like nature? What the Speeches were, and who heard them? 'what the ſaid Books were, and whence and of whom the ſaid 'Lilburne had them? and what other material Circumſtances they 'ſhall think fit to examine, either the ſaid Lilburne upon, or any 'other Perſon by whom they ſhall think good to inform themſelves for the better finding out the truth: And thereupon to 'make Certificate to the Board what they find, together with their 'opinions.

Lilburne having for ſome time endured cloſe Impriſonment, lying with double Irons on his Feet and Hands in the Inner-Wards of the Priſon, there happened a Fire in the Priſon of the Fleet, near to the place where he was a Priſoner, which gave a jealouſie that Lilburne, in his fury and anguiſh of pain, was deſperate, and had ſet the Fleet-Priſon on fire, not regarding himſelf to be burnt with it; whereupon the Inhabitants without the Fleet, (the Street then being not five or ſix yards over from the Priſon-door) and the Priſoners within all cryed, Releaſe Lilburne, or we ſhall all be burnt; and thereupon they run head-long, and made the Warden remove him out of his Hold, and the Fire was quenched, and he remained a Pri-a Priſoner in a place where he had ſome more Air. He continued in Priſon till November the third 1640. when the firſt long Parliament begun, and then he was releaſed.

We beg of the Reader further pardon for a little digreſſion. This very John Lilburne, after he had ſerved the Parliament in the War many years, was impriſoned by them for ſpeaking and publiſhing things againſt them, as Vſurpers, and Enemies to Magna Charta, &c. which offended thoſe times; whereupon he was baniſhed the Kingdom on pain of death if he did return: but return he did, in defiance of thoſe then in Power, and was thereupon ſent to Newgate, and Arraigned at the Seſſions-Houſe in the Old-Bayly for his Life, and was there publickly acquitted by a Jury of Life and Death, notwithſtanding the Law made to baniſh him; which for Joy occaſioned a great Acclamation of the People then preſent. He writ many Books againſt thoſe then in Power and Authority, and ſome particular Members thereof; inſomuch as it was ſaid by Henry Martin in favour of him, That if there were none living but himſelf, John would be againſt Lilburne, and Lilburne againſt John. At laſt he dyed a Quaker, and was buried in the Church-yard near Bedlam; 4000 Citizens and others accompanying his Corps to the Grave.

Pardon digreſſion a little more to what followeth.

When the Impeachment of the Houſe of Commons on John Lilburnes behalf went up to the Houſe of Peers againſt thoſe his Judges in Star-Chamber, it was thus urged by thoſe that managed the ſame.

THat Impriſonment is a Man buried alive, is made Corpus immobile Legis, the immoveable Subject of the Law. There is an end when Life is taken away, but in this no end. Nondum tibi cedit in gratiam, to put a Man out of his pain was accounted a Favour by the Romans.

Cloſe Impriſonment was never uſed to the Primitive Chriſtians by any Tyrant; for then that heavy Charge in Scripture, I was in Priſon, and ye viſited me not, might be anſwered; but a Cloſe Impriſonment may preſume a Famiſhment, and ſo Death. The Romans had four Puniſhments, Lapidatio, Combuſtio, Decollatio, and Strangulatio, but never famiſhing to death. This Man might have been ſo, as it was ſworn.

Three years Impriſonment till the Parliament releaſed him, and might otherwiſe have been for ever.

Whipping was painful and ſhameful, Flagellation for Slaves. In the Eleventh of Elizabeth, one Cartwright brought a Slave from Ruſſia, and would ſcourge him, for which he was queſtioned; and it was reſolved, That England was too pure an Air for Slaves to breath in. And indeed it was often reſolved, even in Star-Chamber, That no Gentleman was to be whipt for any offence whatſoever; and his whipping was too ſevere. The Manager further ſaith,

That John Lilburne was a Free Citizen of London, diſcended from an ancient Family in the North, a Town in Northumberland, ſtill bearing the Name of Lilburne, or rather Le-Iſle-borne, by reaſon of the Water * that runs about it. The Arms belonging to the Family are three Water-budgets, an ancient bearing of Arms.

* Called the Bourne.

Now

13 Caroli.

Now as to his whipping, obſerve the diſtance, from the Fleet to Weſtminſter is about a Mile, that he had 500 Blows (one ſwears a great many more) with a terrible Corded-whip with knots upon it.

Among the Romans no Malefactor had above 40 Stripes, and with three Thongs; and St. Paul received but 39 Stripes, which was but 13 Blows. And it is worth the obſervation, that not long ſince, at Orleans in France, a Prieſt was ſentenced to be whipt for Fornication with a poor Maid, telling her, that St. Francis would come and lye with her ſuch a night, at which time he feigned himſelf to be St. Francis, and was taken in Bed with her. The Kings Advocates preſſed the Judges, that he might receive 14 Blows with a three Corded-whip; but the Judges would not Sentence him to more than 13 Blows, becauſe Ampliandi ſunt favores; but if our Arithmetick be right, (not to ſport with his pain) Lilburne had by this Numeration, three times Five Hundred Stripes in 500 Blows. The Manager further urged,

That this Puniſhment of the Pillory was firſt invented for Mountebanks and Cheats, that having gotten upon Banks and Fourms to abuſe the People, were exalted in the ſame kind to be ſet upon the Pillory, an open ſhame to the Multitude.

Now Gagging is barbarous, and beaſtly; for Man differs from Beaſts both Ratione and Oratione.

So that to ſum up his Sufferings, by Impriſonment he was made a dead Trunk; by whipping, a Rogue; by Pillory, a Cheat; and by Gagging, a Beaſt. They had better have hanged him outright, &c.

Here followeth an Order of the Houſe of Peers made upon John Lilburne's Appeal to them Anno 1640. againſt his Cenſure in Star-Chamber, and his Impriſonment, &c. which the Reader is deſired to take in good part, although it be a digreſſion in point of time.

John Lilburne.

Whereas the Cauſe of John Lilburne Gent. came this day to a Hearing at the Bar, by his Councel, being tranſmitted from the Houſe of Commons, concerning a Sentence pronounced againſt him in the Star-Chamber, Feb. 17. Anno 13 Car. Regis, and after an Examination of the whole Proceedings, and a due conſideration of the ſaid Sentence, it is this day adjudged, ordered, and determined by the Lords in Parliament Aſſembled, That the ſaid Sentence, and all Proceedings thereupon, ſhall forthwith be for ever totally vacuated, obliterated, and taken off the File in all Courts where they are yet remaining, as illegal, and moſt unjuſt, againſt the liberty of the Subject, and the Law of Land, and Magna Charta, and unfit to continue upon Record; and that the ſaid Lilburne ſhall be for ever abſolutely freed, and totally diſcharged from the ſaid Sentence, and all Proceedings thereupon as fully and amply, as though never any ſuch thing had been. And that all Eſtreats and Proceſs in the Court of Exchequer for levying of any Fine (if any ſuch be) ſhall be wholly cancelled and made void, any thing to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding.

'Whereas

Mr. Powels Sermon referred to be examined, and to be certified. March 4.

Paſſages in a Sermon, that Taxes ought to be paid, be they never ſo unjuſt and cruel.

‘WHereas Richard Powel Clark hath attended this Board in the Cuſtody of a Meſſenger, at which time the Letter ſent by you Sir Richard Samuel was read at the Board, as alſo the Teſtimonies returned in this Cauſe; and upon hearing him, we do find, that perceiving ſome People in the Pariſh unſatisfied, by reaſon of the diſtreſs made for the Ship-money, he took occaſion, upon the Text mentioned in the Teſtiment, viz. Give to Cæſar the things that be Cæſars, and unto God the things which are Gods, to tell them that Subjects ought to pay the Taxes laid on them by their Kings, although they were cruel and unjuſt, inſtancing in Saul; and that ſuch Kings were ſometimes given to a Nation by God in his wrath, for the Peoples ſins; and that if we had ſuch a King, we ought notwithſtanding to ſubmit unto him; or words to that effect: but bleſſed be God he hath given us a Gracious King, ſuch as no Age can parallel, whom God long continue over us; ſhall not we then be obedient unto him? which words are wholly omitted in all the Teſtimonies, and do clearly interpret the former Paſſages, and do juſtifie him in what he delivered to the People. And the Meſſenger, who went for the ſaid Powel, doth teſtifie, that ſundry of the Pariſhioners did bear witneſs of the adding of theſe laſt words, which if it prove true, argues very little ſincerity in the accuſation, and in the Teſtimonies. Upon conſideration therefore of the Premiſſes, we have thought fit to intreat you Sir Richard Samuel, and you Mr. Doctor Clark, and Mr. Doctor Sibthorpe, or any two of you, to examine the truth hereof, as well by examination of ſuch Witneſſes as you ſhall think fit, as by the Notes of his Sermon; for which purpoſe we ſend you back the ſaid Notes ſealed up, together with all the other Papers preſented unto us. And do pray and require you to certifie to us, how you find the truth of the Caſe to ſtand, together with your Opinions of the ſame, to the end, that if he have been thus vexed and put to charge without juſt cauſe, we may think how to give him a due reparation of the ſame, and from whom the ſame ſhall come. And ſo we bid, &c.

March 11.

AT this time News came from Scotland, That the Kings Proclamation, Dated the 19*th* of February, publiſhed at Striveling the beginning of March, wherein His Majeſty declares, That he ordained the Book of Common-Prayer to be compiled for edification of the Kings Subjects in Scotland, and to maintain the true Religion already profeſſed there.

Archibald the Kings Fool.

And it ſo happened, that on the 11*th* of the ſaid March, that Archibald, the Kings Fool, ſaid to his Grace the Arch-biſhop of Canterbury, as he was going to the Council-Table, Whea's feule now? doth not your Grace hear the News from Striveling about the Liturgy? with other words of reflection; this was preſently complained of to the Council, which produced this enſuing Order.

Archibald the Kings Fool baniſhed the Kings Court.

It is this day ordered by His Majeſty, with the Advice of the Board, That Archibald Armeſtrong, the Kings Fool, for certain ſcandalous words of a high nature, ſpoken by him againſt the Lord Arch-Biſhop of Canterbury his Grace, and proved to be uttered by him by two Witneſſes, ſhall have his Coat pulled over his head, and be diſcharged of the Kings Service, and baniſhed the Court; for which the Lord Chamberlain of the Kings Houſhold is prayed and required to give order to be executed. And immediately the ſame was put in execution.

Mr. Claypoole to be proceeded againſt in the Star-Chamber.

Whereas John Claypoole Gent. was ſent for by Warrant for his miſdemeanours to His Majeſties Service in the Collection of the Ship-Money: It was this day thought fit and ordered, That Mr. Attorney-General ſhall examine him, and thereupon proceed againſt him in Star-Chamber, as he ſhall think beſt and fitteſt for His Majeſties Service; for which purpoſe the Informations againſt the ſaid Claypoole are to be ſent herewith to His Majeſties ſaid Attorney.

A Diſcourſe concerning the High Court of Star-Chamber.

Upon occaſion of the Exemplary Puniſhment of Mr. Prynn, about his Hiſtrio-Maſtix Anno 1633. and of his loſing his Ears the ſecond time Anno 1637. it will not be unſeaſonable to deliver ſomething of the Nature and Prerogative of that Court which inflicted it, viz. the High Court of Star-Chamber, being an Abſtract of a Treatiſe written by a Perſon well acquainted with the Proceedings of the ſame.

There is little mention made of this Court, either in Reports, or Treatiſes of the Law, except now and then diſperſedly in ſome one or two Cauſes, in an Age where it is mentioned rather, as it ſeemeth, to manifeſt to Poſterity that there was ſuch a Court, than to enlighten the World with the lawful Power, Authority, and Juriſdiction thereof.

An. 1637.

Only Sir Thomas Smith, in his Common-wealth hath glanced upon it, and Mr. Lambert, the ancient Antiquary, treateth of the Power and Juriſdiction of it; and the reaſon probably why the Learned of the Laws did, in their Reports, forbear to make mention thereof was, becauſe it intrenched in thoſe days, as of late time, too much upon the Common Law of England; and the abuſe in the exerciſe of the Juriſdiction of the Court, might induce the Sages of the Law to paſs it over in ſilence, as an Uſurpation of Monarchy upon the Common Law of England, in the prejudice of the liberty of the Subject, granted by the Great Charter.

And without peradventure, thoſe good Laws made in Edw. the 3d's time, to preſerve the Liberty of the Subject, were chiefly grounded upon the unlimited Power which this Court did then take to it ſelf.

The Reaſon of the name of the Court.

In our Ancient Year-Books it is called Camera Stellata, not becauſe the Chamber where the Court is kept is adorned with Stars, but becauſe it is the Seat of the Great Court, and the Name is given according to the Nature of the Judges thereof; Denominatio being a præſtantiori, and majus dignum trahit ad ſe minus. And it may be ſo fitly called, becauſe the Stars (in the common opinion) have no light, but that which is caſt upon them from the Sun by reflection, it being a repreſentative Body; and as King James was pleaſed to ſay when he ſate there in His Royal Perſon, Repreſentation muſt needs ceaſe when the Perſon is preſent.

So in the preſence of His Majeſty, which is the Sun of Honour and Glory, the ſhining of thoſe Stars is put out, not having any power to pronounce any Sentence in this Court, (for the Judgment is the Kings only) but by way of advice to deliver their opinions, which His Wiſdom alloweth or diſalloweth, increaſeth or abateth at His Royal Pleaſure; which was performed by King James, even like unto Solomons Wiſdom, in the great Caſe of the Counteſs of Exeter againſt Sir Thomas Lake, wherein His Majeſty ſate five continued days in a Chair of State, elevated above the Table, about which his Lords ſate, and after a long and patient Hearing, and the Opinions particularly of His Great Council, He pronounced a Sentence more Accurately, Eloquently, Judicially, Grave, and Honourably, more Juſt, to the ſatisfaction of all Hearers, and all the Lovers of Juſtice, than all the Records extant in this Kingdom can declare to have been done by any of His Royal Progenitors.

There is no Man will deny, that in all Monarchies the King is the Fountain of all Juſtice, to whom is the firſt Refuge for thoſe that are diſtreſſed, and the laſt to whom Appeals are to be made.

And Bracton, Father of our Laws, (who writ in the Reign of King Henry the 3d) doth agree it to be the Law of England.

And Britton, (who writ in Edward the firſt's time) beginneth his Treatiſe to the ſame purpoſe, and concludeth writing in the Kings Name: We will that Our own Juriſdiction be above all Juriſdictions, in all Caſes Real and Perſonal. Admitting then the King to be Supreme Judge of all, and ſitting in His Throne of Majeſty with His Wiſe Men and Sages, diſtributing Juſtice in His Royal Perſon, or by His Council hath found himſelf and them over-charged, and hath therefore committed His Pleas of the Crown to certain Judges, Matters of Common Right to other Juſtices, and to others the Affairs of His Revenue; all which, before they were diſtributed to others, were more properly determinable before Himſelf and His Council.

This Court not founded in Henry the 7th's time.

And therefore it is plain, that this Court was not founded by Act of Parliament in Hen. the 7th's time. And it was ſolemnly adjudged by the Chief-Juſtices of England, Sir Edward Cooke, and the Lord Hobert, attended by the Kings Learned Council, in the Caſe between the Earl of Northumberland, and Sir Stephen Proctor, publiſhed in open Court, that the Statute of 3 Hen. 7. extendeth not any way to this Court: But the Lords Authorized by the Act, may at all times in all places determine of the Matters therein ſpecified, 28 Aſſ. Pag. 52. Coram nobis & Concilio, is reſolved to be Coram Rege in Camera, which hath been ſo often affirmed by the Reverend Judge Sir Edward Cooke.

In the Ancient Laws of England we read of three Councils, Commune Concilium, Magnum Concilium, & Privatum Concilium.

For the firſt. In all our Writs founded upon any Ancient Statute-Law, the Writ beginneth, Cum per Commune Concilium Regis noſtri proviſum; by which it plainly appeareth, that Commune Concilium is the Aſſembly of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons in Parliament.

This Court is Magnum Concilium Angliæ.

And that there is Magnum Concilium Angliæ, it appears by the Statutes 32 E. 3. Cap. 18. That falſe Informers ſhall be brought before the Chancellor, Treaſurer, and Great Council, to find Sureties to endure pœnam talionis, if their Suggeſtions were falſe. And all the Statutes made after that Act of 37. as well of Richard the ſecond of Complaints before the Council, as of 13 H. 4. Cap. 7. for certifying Riots to the King and His Council, is intended His Great Council, which is the Court of Star-Chamber, afterwards by expreſs Name called the Kings Council in the Star-Chamber, 19 H. 7. Cap. 18. In the Stat. 33 H. 8. Cap. 1. For falſe Tokens. 4, & 5 of Philip and Mary, for ſecret contracting with young Maidens, and divers ſubſequent Acts of Parliament.

The third, which is Privatum Concilium, or the Council of State, mentioned in the Acts of Eliz. 1. It hath been queſtioned, whether it were all one with the Great Council? Surely there is none of the Privy-Council but is alſo of the Great Council; but perhaps ſome may be of the Great Council, which are not of the Privy-Council.

It was a glorious ſight upon a Star-day, when the Knights of the Garter appear with the Stars on their Garments, and the Judges in their Scarlet; and in that poſture they have ſate ſometimes from nine in the morning till five in the afternoon, before every one had done ſpeaking their minds in the Cauſe that was before them.

And it was uſual for thoſe that came to be Auditors at the Sentence given in weighty Cauſes, to be there by three in the morning, to get convenient places and ſtanding.

The Warden of the Fleet or his Deputy (then by name Mr. In-

An. 1637. gram) in thoſe days was conſtantly attending in Court to receive their Lordſhips commands, as there was occaſion.

For the Dignity of this Court I find it's ſaid, that ſince the great Roman Senate, ſo famous to all Ages, as that they were called pro Jure miraculum Orbis, there hath no Court come ſo near them in State, Honour and Judicature; the Judges of this Court being ſurely, in Honour, State, and Learning, for Underſtanding, Juſtice, Piety, and Mercy, equal, and in many of them exceeding the Roman Senate, by ſo much as Chriſtian Knowledge exceedeth Humane Learning.

This Court not equalled in any [illegible]

Nor hath this Court at any time wanted a Cicero or Hortenſius, to make a defence for ſuch as are there accuſed; nor is there any Bar of Pleading which affordeth ſo large a ſcope to exerciſe a good Orator, the uſual Subject being the Defence of Honour and Honeſty. But Chancellor Elſmore affecting Matter rather than Words, tyed the ſame to Laconical brevity; an Honour to a Court of Juſtice, to be ſway'd rather by ponderous Reaſons, than fluent and deceitful Speech.

It is not the leaſt Honour and Dignity to this Court, that the Sentences and Judgments of the ſame are not the opinion of any private perſon, but the Judgment of many Noble, Wiſe, and Learned Men conjoyned together; ſo that it is a Topick Rule for aſſurance of Truth.

This Court is Magnum Con- [illegible]

Another manifeſtation of the Dignity of it is, That the Proceedings are tam lento pede, without precipitation, but giving time to the Defendant to defend or excuſe himſelf, both in producing Teſtimony, and in making defence at the Bar. And that it taketh hold in Judgment only of direct Proofs, ſpeaking Circumſtances, or more than probable Preſumptions, and theſe not ſingle but double; which cauſeth the Judgment thereof to be eſteemed worthily, like the Laws of the Medes and Perſians, irrevocable. Beſides the Reaſons of the Sentence being ſuccinctly collected and knit together, and ſagely delivered, by grave, learned and notable Perſonages, whoſe very Countenances add weight to their words, and who tye themſelves to Certainty, and not to conjectural Proofs.

The Lord Chancellor or Keeper (for their Places by Act of Parliament are all one) have divers Priviledges of Sovereignty belonging to them, as the Supreme Judge there, which ſurely doth belong in his abſence to him, who holdeth the Supreme Place in that Council.

There is no doubt, but the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal is the Supreme Director of this High Court: For whereas any other Lord of the Preſence ſpeaketh not in the Court, unleſs his Head be uncovered, the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper ſpeaketh with his Head covered, as a Perſon to whom all the reſt owe a kind of Reſpect, or Reverence. And all Dukes and Marqueſſes, Earls, Barons, and Council of State in the Kingdom, attend the Hour and Occaſion of this great Lords going to ſit in this High Court: And at his own diſcretion he commandeth the Chief-Juſtice, or any other Judge, to ſit there at his pleaſure.

Beſides, this great Lord is the Mouth of the Court, to give Rule or Order, and hath a great Prerogative in that ſence, above all other Courts at Weſtminſter: For in other Courts, if the Opinions be equally divided, two one way, and two another way, there is no Judgment entred: But in this Court, if the Preſence be equally divided, the Lord Chancellor, or the Lord Keepers Voice, ſwayeth it one way or other.

It ſeemeth to be an Imitation of the High Court of Parliament; for there, in equality of Voices, the Speakers Voice is predominant. If the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper Condemn or Fine the Defendant or Plaintiff, then hath it ever been undoubted; for that in things indifferent the beſt for the Kings profit is to be taken, but where his Voice in equality acquitteth, yet the preheminence of his Judgment, weigheth down the Kings Profit, and the Perſon ſhall ſtand acquitted. For ſo Sir Stephen Proctor was acquitted by the Voice of Chancellor Elſmore; and ſo it was reſolved by the Judges upon Reference made to them, and their Opinions, after deliberate hearing, and view of former Preſidents, was publiſhed in open Court.

This Court for the moſt part is repleniſhed with Dukes, Marqueſſes, Earls, Barons, alſo with Reverend Arch-Biſhops and Prelates, grave Councellors of State, learned Judges, ſuch a Compoſition for Juſtice, Religion, and Government, as may be well and truly ſaid, (whilſt ſo great a Preſence kept within their Bounds) Mercy and Truth were met together.

Their number in the Reign of Hen. 7. and H. 8. have been near 40 at one time, and 30 in the Reign of Eliz. oft-times, but ſince much leſſened. In King Charles His time there hath been 24 and 26 at a time, as in the Caſes of Mr. Chambers, Sir James Bagg, the Biſhop of Lincoln, and others.

Arch-Biſhop Whitgift did conſtantly in this Court maintain the Liberty of the Free-Charter, that none ought to be fined but ſalvo Contenimento: he ſeldom gave any Sentence, but therein did mitigate in ſomething the Acrimony of thoſe that ſpake before him; but the ſlaviſh Puniſhment of Whipping, &c. was not heard to come from the Noble Spirits in thoſe times ſitting in that Honourable Preſence.

When once this Court began to ſwell big, and was delighted with Blood, which ſprung out of the Ears and Shoulders of the Puniſhed, and nothing would ſatisfie the revenge of ſome Clergy-men but cropt Ears, ſlit Noſes, branded Faces, whipt Backs, gag'd Mouths, and withal to be thrown into Dungeons, and ſome to be Baniſhed, not only from their Native Country to remote Iſlands, but by Order of that Court to be ſeparated from Wife and Children, who were by their Order not permitted to come near the Priſon, where their Husbands lay in miſery; Then began the Engliſh Nation to lay to heart the ſlaviſh condition they were like to come unto, if this Court continued in its greatneſs.

Concerning Ship-money.

THe Caſe of Ship-money was this year brought upon the Stage by Mr. Hampdens refuſal to pay the Tax laid upon him (living in Buckinghamſhire, an Inland County) towards the finding of a Ship of ſo many Tun at Sea: and this buſineſs coming to be argued before all the Judges of England in the Exchequer Chamber, Oliver St. John of Lincolns Inn Eſq; of Council with Mr. Hampden firſt argued, of which the Author gives the Reader a large Account, himſelf being then preſent, and took the Argument in Characters; yet begs the Readers pardon for any miſtakes, for it is not poſſible for a ſingle Pen to be ſo circumſpect, in mentioning ſo many Authorities of Books and Records, but that ſomething may be miſrecited or omitted, when his hand with continual writing might ſometimes grow feeble, and thereby diſinable him. —— Yet to the beſt of his knowledge he hath not wilfully miſrecited any thing.

13 Caroli.

Mr. St. John's Argument.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

P*Aſc.* 13 Carol' a Scire fac iſſued to the Sheriff of Buckingham, reciting That whereas ſeveral ſums of mony mentioned in a Schedule to that Writ annexed, by a Writ under the Great Seal of England, dated 4 Auguſt, 11 Car. Ceſſed upon ſeveral Perſons for providing a Ship of War were not paid, and that upon a Certiorare dated 9 Martii, 13 Car. theſe ſums and the ſeveral Perſons upon whom they were aſſeſſed, were certified into the Chancery, and from thence by Mittimus dated 5 Maii laſt were ſent into the Exchequer, that Proceſs might be thence iſſued againſt theſe Defaulters.

Thereupon the Sheriff is commanded, quod ſcire faceret, to thoſe ſeveral Perſons to appear in the Exchequer, Octob. Trin. 13 Car. to ſhew cauſe why they ſhould not pay thoſe ſums of money aſſeſſed upon them; the Sheriff returned quod ſcire fecit, John Hampden Eſq; who was aſſeſſed at twenty Shillings, and hath not paid it; Mr. Hampden hath appeared and hath demanded Oyer of the Scire fac' of the Schedule, the Writ dated 4 Auguſt., the Certiorare, and the Mittimus and of their ſeveral returns, and hath thereupon demurred in Law.

The Writ dated 4 Auguſt. 11 Car. becauſe it is the ground of the iſſuing forth of the Scire fac' and ſo by neceſſary conſequence, as that which firſt occaſioned any proceſs againſt him, it will be the ſubject from whence will be fetched all that ſhall be ſaid either for or againſt my Client; I will endeavour by breaking it into parts, more clearly to preſent it to your Lordſhips view.

The thing Commanded is, that this County ſhall provide a Ship of War of 450 Tun, with 180 Men, Guns, Gunpowder, double Tackling, Victuals, and all other things neceſſary, and to bring her to Portſmouth by the firſt of March following, and from that time to provide her of Victuals, Mariners-wages, and all other neceſſaries for 26 Weeks; for the effecting of this there is power given to aſſeſs each Perſon in the County Secund. Stat. & facultates, and to bring theſe Seſſes by diſtreſs, & quos rebelles invenerint to impriſon their Perſons.

My Lords, If the Writ had ſtayed here, and gone no further, the Command, though full in words, yet had been void in Law, becauſe as yet it appears not for what end this Ship was to be provided 42 aſſ. Pl. a Commiſſion to ſeize mens goods notoriouſly ſuſpected of Fellons before Conviction adjudged void, becauſe therefore the Command without Cauſe ſhewen, and that ſufficient in Law too would be void; in the ſecond place therefore they are there ſet down to be theſe, pro defenſione Regni, Tuitione maris, ſecuritate ſubditor. & ſalva conductione Navium, both outward and inward, the Sea being infeſted with Pirates, and more Shipping being daily prepared ad Regnum Gravandum, theſe are the ends.

In the third place the Legality of it, that every man ſecundum ſtatum & facultates ſhould be hereto Seſſed, is thus inforced.

Firſt, From cuſtom and continued uſe in theſe words, that the Sea per gentem anglicanam ab olim defendi conſuevit; and ſecondly, this uſe proved to be from a common ground of equity, in theſe words, Onus defenſionis quod omnes tangit, per omnes debet ſupportari, and the rule of equity backt by the Common-Law in theſe words, prout per legem & conſuetudinem Regni Angliæ fieri conſuevit: the argument ſtands thus, all have benefit by defence of the Realm, and therefore by the Law the Charge ought to be born by all.

Thence it is further inforced that every man even by his allegiance is bound to contribute to this charge, the Command being in fide & legeancia quibus nobis tenemini: of theſe parts the Writs conſiſt, which all being put together, in brief declare the ſcope and end of the iſſuing forth thereof, to be the defence and ſafety of the Kingdom; a thing ſo neceſſary, that it muſt needs be legal, for it is too near and too narrow a conceit of the Wiſdom and Policy of the Law, to think that whilſt the care thereof ſhould be confined only to the preſervation of the general members of the body politique, from the wrongs and preſſures that might be offered from other to the fellow members, that in the mean time it ſhould leave the whole to the violence and will of Enemies, ſo that whilſt each Subject conſidered as a part of the whole hath a known and ſure eſtate in Lands, and real Property in his Goods, not to be impeached by any whatſoever within the Realm; yet conſidered all together, and as they make up the unum Compoſitum, they ſhould have in them only precariam poſſeſſionem, or Tenancy at Will, in regard of Foreigners.

My Lords, This cannot be, for the Law is ſo careful herein, that even afar off it foreſees and prevents all damages in this kind, and that is the reaſon that an Alien, though a friend, hath not Capacity to purchaſe any Land within the Realm: and if the Law be ſo quick-ſighted, as that to prevent but poſſibilities of danger, it keeps ſuch ſtrangers from having any Land within the Realm which deſire to come by it peaceably, and for valuable conſideration; by this we may eaſily ſee the great care it hath to prevent apparent dangers, which uſually proceed from open force and violence; which further appears by the greatneſs of the puniſhment which the Law inflicts upon Offenders in this kind, which is High-treaſon of all other the greateſt, 13 Eliz. Dy. 298. Story conſpired beyond Sea with a Foreign State to invade the Realm, and though nothing was attempted yet it is adjudged High-treaſon: and 21 E. 3. fol. 23. and 45 E. 3. 25. a man killed a Captain that was going with twenty men at Arms to the King in his Wars, and adjudged to be High-Treaſon, and ſo by ſome opinions in Print, it is to burn or ſink any of the Kings Ships. By the greatneſs of the puniſhment for breach of the negative part of the Law we might underſtand the peremptorineſs and force of the affirmative part; ſo that, my Lords, in this caſe the queſtion is not de Re, for by the Law the ſafety of the Realm is to be provided, for ſalus Populi Suprema Lex; neither is the queſtion de Perſonis, either in reſpect of the Perſons, who are to bear the charge of it, or of the Perſons whom the Law hath intruſted with the care and power of this Common defence. For the firſt, that is, the perſons that are to bear this Charge, that in the Writ quod omnes tangit per omnes debet ſupportari, the reaſons in the Writ are weighty and agreeable to the Rule both of the Common and Civil Law, Qui ſentit commodum ſentire debet & onus; ſo that I conceive the burthen lies upon all in reſpect of our bona naturæ, our Lives and Perſons be equally as dear to one as to another; in reſpect of our bona fortunæ, ſo ſecundum ſtatum & facultates, becauſe the greater the ſtate and means of Livelihood, the greater the benefit by the defence; the Law in this Caſe of defence againſt the Invaſions of living Enemies, being the ſame with that againſt the Invaſions of our Soil and Ground, by the Inundations and out-rages of the Sea and Freſh Water; for by the Law, as appears by the Commiſſions of Sewers, as well before the Statute of 28 H. 8. as ſince, to the repairing of a Banck or Cauſey, River, or other Sewer, all are chargeable that have thereby defenſionem, commodum, vel ſalvationem, qualitercunque; all that have defence muſt be ſeſſed, the Aſſeſſes muſt be equally diſtributed, and therefore laid upon every Man within the level pro rata portionis Tenuræ ſuæ, ſeu pro quantitate commune paſturæ vel piſcariæ, the more Land, Common, or Benefit each Man hath, the greater Benefit: And according to the proportion the Aſſeſs muſt be ſet: So that, my Lords, in the ſecond place the queſtion will not be whether my Client by Law be exempted from the Charge of the defence of the Realm; for with other His Majeſties Subjects he ought to bear the common Burthen, and more or leſs may be thereof laid upon him proportionable to his Eſtate and Means of Livelihood.

Neither thirdly, is there any queſtion to be made but the Law hath intruſted the Perſon of His Royal Majeſty with the care of this Defence: the Defence and Protection which we have in our Bodies, Lands and Goods againſt any within the Realm, we know it is from him; for all Juriſdiction Legal, both Eccleſiaſtical and Civil, which defends us in them is wholly in His Majeſty; the ſame it is in caſe of Forreign Defence, even by the Jus Gentium, as appears in the Text by the Peoples deſiring that they might be like all Nations, by having one that might judge them, and go out before them, and fight their Battles.

That the King (and that legally) calleth the Kingdom Regnum noſtrum, and every City and great Town Civitatem & Villam noſtram, quoad proprietatem, it cannot be, becauſe that it is in the ſeveral Land-owners; it muſt be ſo therefore principally in this reſpect, quoad protectionem & defenſionem: neither hath the Law inveſted the Crown with this height of Sovereignty, only as an Honorarium for the greater Splendor of it; but likewiſe as a Duty of the Crown, or pars Miniſterii for the good and ſafety of the Realm, which in many of the ancient Commiſſions of the Sewers before the Statute of 23 H. 8. is thus expreſſed, That the King ratione Regiæ Dignitatis & per Juramentum eſt aſtrictus ad providendum Salvationi Regni circumquaq; So that both in Honour, and by his Oath, he is bound to provide for the ſafety of the Realm, and that circumquaque.

My Lords, by the Law the King is Pater familiæ, who by the Law of Oeconomicks is not only to keep peace at home, but to protect his Wife and Children, and whole Families from injuries from abroad.

It is his vigilance and watchfulneſs that diſcovers who are our friends and foes, and that after ſuch diſcovery firſt warns us of them, for He only hath power to make War and Peace.

Neither hath the Law only intruſted the care of the defence to His Majeſty, but it hath likewiſe, ſecondly, put the Armatam poteſtat' and means of defence wholly in His Hands; for when the Enemy is by Him diſcovered, and declared, it is not in the power of the Subject to order the way and means of defence, either by Sea or by Land, according as they ſhall think fit; for no Man, without Commiſſion or ſpecial Licenſe from His Majeſty, can ſet forth any Ships to Sea for that purpoſe; neither can any Man, without ſuch Commiſſion or Licenſe, unleſs upon ſudden coming of Enemies erect a Fort, Caſtle or Bulwark, though upon his own ground; neither, but upon ſome ſuch emergent cauſe, is it lawful for any Subject, without ſpecial Commiſſion, to arm or draw together any Troops or Companies of Souldiers, or to make any general Collections of Money of any of His Majeſties Subjects, though with their conſent.

Neither in the third place is His Majeſty armed only with this Primitive Prerogative Power of Generaliſſimo, and Commander in Chief, that none can advance towards the Enemy until He gives the Signal, nor in other manner than according to His direction; but likewiſe with all other Powers requiſite for the full execution of all things incident to ſo high a Place, as well in times of eminent danger, as of actual War. The Sheriff of each County, who is but His Majeſties Miniſter, he hath the poſſe Comitatus; and therefore it muſt needs follow, that the poſſe Regni is in Himſelf.

My Lords, not to burn day-light longer, it muſt needs be granted, that in this buſineſs of defence the Suprema poteſtas is inherent in His Majeſty, as part of His Crown and Kingly Dignity.

So that as the care and proviſion of the Law of England extends in the firſt place to Forreign Defence, and ſecondly lays the burthen upon all, and for ought I have to ſay againſt it, it maketh the quantity of each Mans Eſtate the Rule whereby this burthen is to be equally apportioned upon each perſon; ſo likewiſe hath it in the third place made His Majeſty the ſole Judge of dangers from Forreigners, and when and how the ſame are to be prevented, and to come nearer, hath given him power, by Writ under the Great Seal of England, to command the Inhabitants of each County to provide Shipping for the defence of the Kingdom, and may by Law compel the doing thereof.

So that, my Lords, as I ſtill conceive the queſtion will not be de perſona, in whom the Suprema poteſtas of giving the Authorities or Powers to the Sheriff, which are mentioned in this Writ, doth lie, for that it is in the King; but the queſtion is only de modo, by what Medium or Method this Supreme Power, which is in His Majeſty doth infuſe and let out it ſelf into this particular; and whether or no in this Cauſe ſuch of them have been uſed, as have rightly accommodated, and applyed this Power unto this Writ in the intended way of defence for the Law of England, for the applying of that Supreme Power which it hath ſetled in His Majeſty to the particular cauſes and occaſions that fall out, hath ſet down Methods and known Rules; which are neceſſary to be obſerved.

In His Majeſty there is a two-fold Power, voluntas, or poteſtas interna, or naturalis; externa, or legalis, which by all the Judges of England, 2 R. 3. fo. 11. is expreſſed per voluntatem Regis in Camera, and voluntatem Regis per Legem.

My Lords, the Forms and Rules of Law are not obſerved; this Supreme Power not working per Media, it remains ſtill in Himſelf as voluntas Regis interna, and operates not to the good and relief of the Subject that ſtandeth in need.

To inſtance,

His Majeſty is the Fountain of Bounty; but a Grant of Lands without Letters Patents transfers no Eſtate out of the King to the Patentee, nor by Letters Patents, but by ſuch words as the Law hath preſcribed.

His Majeſty is the Fountain of Juſtice; and though all Juſtice which is done within the Realm flows from this Fountain, yet it muſt run in certain and known Channels: an Aſſiſe in the Kings-Bench, or an Appeal of Death in the Common-Pleas, are Coram non Judice, though the Writ be His Majeſties Command; and ſo of the ſeveral Juriſdictions of each Court. The Juſtice whereby all Felons and Traitors are put to death, proceeds from His Majeſty; but if a Writ of Execution of a Traytor or Felon be awarded by His Majeſty, without Appeal or Indictment preceding, an Appeal of Death will lye by the Heir againſt the Executioner, if the Proceſs be Legal, and in a right Court; yet I conceive, that His Majeſty alone, without aſſiſtance of the Judges of the Court, cannot give Judgment: I know that King John, H. 3. and other Kings have ſitten in the Kings-Bench, and in the Exchequer; but for ought appears they were aſſiſted by their Judges. This I ground upon the Book-Caſe of 2 R. 3. fo. 10, & 11.

Where the Party is to make Fine and Ranſome at the Kings Will and Pleaſure, this Fine, by the opinion of the Judges of England, muſt be ſet by the Judges before whom the Party was convicted, and cannot be ſet by the King: the words of the Book are thus; In terminis, & non per Regem per ſe in Camera ſua nec aliter coram ſe niſi per Juſtitiarios ſuos; & hac eſt voluntas Regis, ſcilicet per Juſtitiarios ſuos & per Legem ſuam to do it.

And as without the aſſiſtance of His Judges, who are His ſetled Councel at Law, His Majeſty applies not the Law and Juſtice in many Caſes unto His Subjects; ſo likewiſe in other Caſes: neither is this ſufficient to do it without the aſſiſtance of His great Council in Parliament; if an erroneous Judgment was given before the Statute of 27 Eliz. in the Kings-Bench, the King could not relieve His grieved Subjects any way but by a Writ of Error in Parliament; neither can He out of Parliament alter the old Laws, nor make new, or make any Naturalizations or Legitimations, nor do ſome other things; and yet is the Parliament His Majeſties Court too, as well as other His Courts of Juſtice: It's His Majeſty that gives Life and Being to that, for He only Summons, Continues, and Diſſolves it, and He by His Le volt enlivens all the Actions of it; and after the diſſolution of it, by ſupporting His Courts of Juſtice, He keeps them ſtill alive, by putting them in execution: And although

An. 1637. though in the Writ of Waſt. and ſome other Writs, it is called Commune Concilium Regni, in reſpect that the whole Kingdom is repreſentatively there; and ſecondly, that the whole Kingdom have acceſs thither in all things that concern them, other Courts affording relief but in ſpecial Cauſes: And thirdly, in reſpect that the whole Kingdom is intereſted in, and receive benefit by the Laws and things there paſſed; yet it is Concilium Regni no otherwiſe than the Common Law is Lex Terræ, that is per Modum Regis whoſe it is; if I may ſo term it in a great part, even in point of Intereſt, as He is the Head of the Common-Wealth, and whoſe it is wholly in truſt for the good of the whole body of the Realm; for He alone is truſted with the execution of it. The Parliament is the Kings-Court, and therefore in the Summons the King calls it Parliamentum noſtrum; ſo the Returns of the Knights and Burgeſſes, Quod ſint ad Parliamentum Domini Regis, Fleta lib. 2. Cap. 2. Habet Rex Curiam ſuam in Concilio ſuo in Parliamentis ſuis; and therefore the Pleadings there which anciently were uſual to begin for the moſt part Queritur Domino Regi, Petitions by private Perſons, Supplicavit Domino Regi; though for relief againſt others, Inquiſitions and Venire facias retornable there ſometimes coram Domino Rege in Parliamento ſuo, and ſometimes coram Rege & Concilio ſuo, as appears by infinite Preſidents in the Parliament Pleas of E. 1. and E. 2. time, both in the Tower, and many Caſes adjourned into the Kings-Bench.

The Patents paſt by authority of Parliament, and likewiſe the Acts of Parliament had anciently ſo much of the Kings Name and Stile in them, that, as it appears in the Princes Caſe in the 8*th* Report, it was a hard matter otherwiſe than by Circumſtances to know whether they had any thing of the Parliament in them or not; and from thoſe times, even until now, the alteration is nothing in ſubſtance, for the Acts for the moſt part are thus; It is Enacted by Our Sovereign Lord the King, with the Aſſent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons; the King both then and ſtill is the Pars Agens, the reſt are but Conſentientes. My Lords, to apply all to the Caſe in queſtion by the Caſes before cited, it appears, that what was done in Parliament by the Law-Phraſe and Dialect, is ſaid to be done by the King; for as the Civilians ſay of the Senate, that it is Pars Corporis Cæſaris, ſo we of the Parliament, that it is Pars Corporis Regis; the Maxime of Juſtinian, Quod principi placet Legis vim habet. It is agreed by Mr. Bracton, and all the Civilians; and yet both he and many of them ſay, That thoſe muſt paſs the Senate though done in the Senate, yet they be Placita Principis; ſo is it, although when we ſpeak ut Vulgus, we ſay Fines are ſaid to be ſet, and other things to be done by the Kings Court, yet the Law ſaith, that they be done and ſet by the King; by the ſame reaſon therefore, though when we ſpeak ut Vulgus we ſay ſuch a thing is done by the Parliament, yet in the Legal Account theſe are done by the King, the Medium or way of doing of them with aſſiſtance or conſent of His great Council in Parliament.

The ſecond thing which I obſerve is this, by the Caſes before cited it appears, that without the aſſiſtance in Parliament, His Majeſty cannot in many Caſes communicate either His Juſtice or Power unto His Subjects.

Hence thirdly it neceſſarily follows, as I conceive, that the Kingly Dignity doth moſt operate and manifeſt it ſelf there, which was the opinion of all the Judges of England declared in a Parliament 34 H. 8. as appears by Crompton Juriſd. fol. 10. who by the Kings Commandment meeting together about Point of Priviledge of Parliament, the King afterwards in declaring their opinion doth it in part of the Caſe in theſe words: 'Further We be informed by 'Our Judges, that we at no time ſtand ſo highly in Our Eſtate-'Royal as in time of Parliament, wherein We as Head, and you as 'Members, are conjoyned and knit together into one Body-Politick; which His Declaration of it ſhews likewiſe that it was the Kings own Opinion, That He at no time ſtood ſo highly in His Eſtate-Royal, as in time of Parliament; It appears not by the Record, that this Writ which giveth power to ſell and alter the property of the Defendants Goods, iſſued from His Majeſty ſitting in this His Eſtate-Royal in Parliament; and therefore cannot be intended by your Lordſhips and the Court ſo to do; if therefore it hath iſſued from His Majeſty in the Chancery, or otherwiſe than in Parliament, where he ſtands in that height of Sovereignty and perfection, that He hath not ſo much as a Poſſe Nocere; the queſtion is, whether it be erroneouſly iſſued yea or no? My Lords, I have now put the Caſe, which although in this particular Caſe it concerns the Defendant only, yet in conſequence, as that appears, it concerns both His Majeſty and the whole State, and that in matters of the higheſt nature poſſible: His Majeſty is concerned in the way and manner of execution of the higheſt and greateſt truſt which the Law hath repoſed in Him, the ſafety and the preſervation of the Kingdom; the Subject is concerned in that wherein he is moſt tender, in the property of what he hath.

My Lords, the greatneſs and weight of the Caſe puts me into this Dilemma, not to argue it were to deny that full Submiſſion to the command of ſome of your Lordſhips as is fitting; neither ſhould I do my Clyent that ſervice which he expects: If I proceed, the caſe is too weghty and too great for me to argue; but I know the ſafeſt way is obedience, and that the Court cannot expect much from me. Having therefore already put the Caſe, I will go on in the next place to ſtate it, and afterwards to argue it; the Queſtion being concerning the validity of the Command in the Writs, which extends ſo far as to the altering of the property of the Subjects Goods, without their conſent; and yet this being for a thing ſo neceſſary as the defence of the Kingdom both at Land and Sea, for the ends of the iſſuing forth of the Writ, as by that appears, are pro defenſione Regni, tuitione Maris, Securitat' ſubditor' ſalva Conductione Navium both outward and inward. In the ſtating of this great Queſtion I will in the firſt place endeavour to preſent your Lordſhips theſe known and undoubted ways and means, whereby the Law hath provided for the defence of the Realm both at Land and Sea without the way in the Writ; the firſt whereof is by Tenures of Land: The Services which grow due hereby are of two ſorts.

Services in kind, which tend immediately to Action in times of War; ſome whereof are for Land-Service, and ſome for Sea-Service.

An. 1637.

The firſt, ſuch as ſupply His Majeſty with Money for that purpoſe.

The ſecond way is thoſe many Prerogatives which the Law hath ſetled in the Crown, and made peculiar unto it for the defence of the Kingdom in general.

The third is the particular ſupplies of Money for the defence of the Sea alone in time of danger, both ordinary and extraordinary, the thing principally intended in the Writ.

Theſe, my Lords, will be the materials whereupon I ſhall afterwards ſtate the Queſtion.

In that of Tenures I ſhall begin with the Services in kind, and which tend immediately to Action in time of War.

The Kings of this Realm, as they are the Head of the Common-Wealth in general, ſo are they the Head and Root from whence all Tenures ſpring; for, as our Books agree, all the Land within the Realm is either held mediately or immediately of the Crown: as therefore the Law hath appropriated the defence of the Kingdom to the Kings thereof, ſo hath it, as one of the principal ways for the effecting thereof, intruſted them with the reſervations of ſuch Services as might ſerve for that purpoſe.

Amongſt which, intending firſt to ſpeak of Land-Service, I will begin with the Tenures by Knights-Service, every Man that holds by this Service from a whole Knights-Fee to any part of it, ought to find a Man competently armed for the Wars: Neither doth the finding of Arms ſatisfie this Tenure; for he that holds by a whole Knights Fee, ought to be forty days in the Service, and he that holds by the Moiety of a Knights Fee, twenty days, and ſo in proportion.

By the Books of the Knights Fee of Henry 2. E. 1. and H. 6. time in the Exchequer, it appears, that there were many Thouſand Knights Fees held of the Crown; and in the Red Book it is ſaid, That it was in ore omnium: That in the Conquerors time there were 30000 held of Him, ſome ſince have computed them to 60002, which perhaps may be with addition of thoſe that are held of common Perſons, which are not of thoſe upon which I ſhall inſiſt.

But it may be objected, that in reſpect that theſe Services are reſerved by the King, that therefore they were not Inſtituted only for the defence of the Realm, but may be exacted for Forreign Wars, or other-where for His Majeſties peculiar Service, as He ſhall think fit, which may be inforced both from the name which our old Books and Deeds ſtile this Service by, when due to the Crown, that is Forinſecum Servitium: And ſecondly from the uſe thereof; it having been performed in Normandy, Gaſcoigne, Tholouſe, and Ireland, as appears by the Red Book, and many Caſes put together in the Inſtitutes in the Chapter of Eſcuage.

To the firſt Objection of the Name, the Anſwer is clear; for anciently when thoſe that held immediately of the Crown by this Service, did enfeoff others of the Land ſo held, deſiring to free themſelves of the burthen of this Service, beſides the Services which they reſerved to themſelves; they likewiſe commonly in the Conveyance made proviſion for their own Acquittal againſt the King, and the Feoffee took the whole Burthen therefore upon himſelf: And therefore in the Book of Knights Fees of H. 2. time in ſo many Hundred Certificates of thoſe that held immediately of the King, William London of Wiltſhire certifies thus: Quod nullum Militem habeo feoffatum, ſed debeo defendere Feodum meum per Servitium Corporis mei; of this nature are three or four others: All the reſt after certifies by how many Knights Fees he holds, then likewiſe he certifies that defendit, &c. againſt the King, by ſuch and ſuch Milites Feoffatos; and in theſe Deeds of Feoffment, after the reſervation to the Feoffer, was this Clauſe, & faciend' inde, ſometimes forinſecum Servitium, ſometimes Regale Servitium. Bracton lib. 2. fo. 36, 37. and Fleta lib. 3. Cap. 14. ſay that it is called Regale Servitium, quia eſt Servitium Domini Regis; and by them Regale Servitium, and Servitium Domini Regis, are all but one and the ſame thing; to that therefore I ſhall need give no further anſwer.

By the ſame Authors it is called Forinſecum Servitium, quia capitur foris, ſive extra Servitium, quod ſit Domino Capitali; and that is the meaning of the word, and that is called Forinſecum, in regard that the Service is to be done foris, that is, out of the Kingdom, is cleared to your Lordſhips by theſe Caſes, P. 49. H. 3. Com' P. 31. E. 1. Ro. 32. Dor. Com' Hill' 33 E. 1. Ro. 52. Dor. ſo. Cornage, which we know is to wind a Horn within the Realm; in all thoſe three Caſes is called Servitium Forinſecum Domini Regis Cornagii; and Caſtle-Gard within the County of Northumberland, at the Caſtle of Bamburgh called Forinſecum Servitium Domini Regis.

To the ſecond part of this Objection, that this Service hath been often performed beyond Sea.

For the preſent I ſhall give anſwer thereunto but in part, by telling your Lordſhips, without making proof of it as yet, that Eſcuage, which is all the penalty that lies upon the Tenant for his default, cannot be aſſeſſed but in Parliament; which if it be ſo proved that the King cannot command this Service otherwiſe than for the good and defence of the Realm, in regard that if it be otherwiſe, no Eſcuage can be aſſeſſed without conſent in Parliament, which likewiſe by intendment according to the good that the Kingdom is likely to receive by the Service, will proportionably leſſen or encreaſe the Eſcuage. My Lords, that this Service was inſtituted for the defence of the Realm, appears by the care which the Law hath always taken for the encreaſe and preſervation of theſe Services; ſo that if the Lord purchaſe part of the Land, yet the whole Service remains; which being entire, and to be done by the Body of a Man, in that of being a Steward or Bailiff, or other private Service, makes an extinguiſhment of the whole.

The Authorities in point are many in this the Statute of Mortmain, 7 E. 1. They miſchief by conveying Land to Houſes of Religion, is there expreſſed to be quod Servitia quæ ex hujuſmodi feodis debentur, & quæ ad defenſionem Regni ab initio proviſa fuerunt, indebite ſubtrahuntur; and beſides the Declaration, that they are for defence of the Realm, that Statute likewiſe provides for the increaſe of them; for if the Lord enter not within the year and day after the Feoffment, the King is to enter; and as the words of the Statute

An. 1637. are, Alios inde Feoffavimus per certa Servitia nobis inde ad defenſionem Regni noſtri facienda, the words are obſervable per Servitia nobis inde facienda; for though the Service be to be done to the King, yet it muſt be ſo done to the King as it be ad defenſionem Regni.

This explains the Charter of H. 1. Enrolled in the Red Book in the Chequer, and cited in Matthew Paris, in the firſt Leaſe of H. 1. Reign, where the King frees Knights-Service Land from all Geldes and Taxes, that being eaſed of this Burthen, apti & parati ſint ad Servitium meum, & ad defenſionem Regni mei: In the Black Book in the Chequer fo. 3. Scutage defined, ut imminente in Regnum hoſtium machinatione, it is then due: So Bracton in his ſecond Book fo. 36, 37.

That they are ſo propter exercitum, & patriæ tuitionem, and to be performed certis temporibus cum caſus & neceſſitas evenerit, Britton fo. 162. 6. les Fees de Chartre fuerunt purveus al defenſe de noſtre Realme.

Inſt. pl. 103. Co. Preface to the ninth Report.

For the further clearing of what is ſaid already, and what I am to add, it is obſervable, that thoſe Services are not created ex proviſione hominis, but ex proviſione Legis; for as it is in 33 H. 6, 7. & 6 Report fo. 7. Wheelers Caſe, and in the 9*th* Report fo. 123. Lawes Caſe; if the King grants Lands without reſerving any Service at all, or abſq; aliquo inde reddendo, the Patentee ſhall hold the Land by Knights-Service in Capite; the Books of 24 E. 3. 65. Stamf. Prerog. fo. 10. Inſtit. pl. 73. ſaid, That the firſt Kings of this Realm had all the Lands of it in their own Hands; which appears likewiſe by this, that all the Land within the Kingdom is held mediately or immediately of the Crown; in the transferring of thoſe Lands to the ſeveral Inhabitants, we ſee by the Caſes before cited, that the care and proviſion of Law was, that all ſhould by Tenure of the Crown be made liable to the defence of the Kingdom: I ſhall therefore ſhew briefly how the Kings of this Realm have executed the truſt for the defence both at Land and Sea.

And firſt a little further to proſecute the Land-Service; becauſe, the Tenures by Knights-Service tye the Tenant only to forty days Service, and that to the defence of the Realm only in the general; they therefore reſerved divers other Tenures for particular, and certain Services as grand Serjeances; ſome whereof, as in the Inſtitutes fo. 106. is obſerved, were for Service of Honour in time of Peace, and ſome for Military Service; of which laſt ſort, as appears in the Book of Serjeances in the Chequer, and many Rolls of them in the Tally-Office; ſome whereof were to carry the Kings Banner, ſome to ſummon the Tenants ad exercitum, ſome to be of the Vauntgard, ſome of the Rear, ſome to ſerve in Wales, ſome in Scotland, ſome infra quatuor Maria, ſome infra quatuor portus Angliæ; of theſe are Services of all ſorts neceſſary for an Army, and in reſpect of the multitude of theſe Military Serjeances over the others as forgetting them, Britton. fo. 164. in his definition of grand Serjeancy ſaith, That they are pur defence del' Relme; & Fleta lib. 3. Cap. 16. Magnæ Serjanciæ Regem tantum reſpiciunt & patriæ defenſionem;

nem. Beſides, the grand Serjances of this nature likewiſe are the Tenures by Cornage to give warning of the Enemies coming into the Kingdom, and the Tenures by Caſtle-Guard; theſe by Lit. 111. were to defend the Caſtles when the Enemy enters the Realm, which in ancient times were Forts and Bulwarks of the Realm; whereof, as Mr. Cambden Pag. 815. obſerves, there were 1115 in H. 2d's time, whereof a great part, and eſpecially ſuch as were upon the Sea-Coaſts, and Frontiers of Scotland and Wales, the Places of greateſt danger, were the Kings; and beſides thoſe Grand Serjeances, which were to be performed by the Bodies of Men, there are Petty Serjeances for the finding of Armor of all ſorts for the Wars.

My Lords, that the former Kings did execute this power of Tenures for the defence of the Realm, according to the Truſt by the Law repoſed in them, appears further in this, that in the Places of greateſt danger there were ever moſt of them.

All along the Sea-Coaſts of Kent and Suſſex, neareſt of all others to France, are the five Ports, who beſides their Sea-Service have all Juriſdiction within themſelves, that the Inhabitants for weakning of thoſe Ports might not be compelled to travel out of them, for any matters of Juſtice, and divers other Priviledges, both to invite the People to live there, and to incourage them to the defence of thoſe Places; and Dover-Caſtle, the Key of the Kingdom, as of greateſt Conſequence, ſo hath it 200 Tenures by Caſtle Guard, wanting very few, beſides divers Tenures for repairing of the Caſtle; which appears by the Record called the Quire of Dover, remaining in the Chequer; which that it is of Record, and determines the Services of the five Ports, as Domeſday doth the Tenures of Ancient Demeſne, appears Int. Coram 27 E. 1. Rot. 35. and by another Record added to that Quire of Dover, 20 E. 4. it likewiſe appears, that in times of War the King is to maintain in that Caſtle 1000 Foot and 100 Horſe for the defence of it.

Next to come to the Borders of Scotland, there we find the Franchiſe of the Biſhoprick of Durham inſtituted likewiſe for the defence of thoſe parts, which William the Conqueror, as Malmesbury fo. 157. obſerves, firſt made a County Palat. and Walker Biſhop thereof ducem, pariter & Epiſcopum ut refrænaret rebellionem gentes gladio & reformaret mores eloquio.

And beſides this in all the Counties of Cumberland, Northumberland, and Weſtmoreland, are more Tenures for the defence of the Realm than any of the Inland Counties, and thoſe likewiſe moſt proper for Borders Coram pat. 31. E. 1. Ro. 32. Dor. It's there found by Inquiſition returned into the Chequer that every Lord of a Town within the County of Northumberland held by Cornage; when the Scots entred the Realm Mr. Cambden in his Brit. Pag. 794. and 799. mentioning the great number of Petty Baronies and Caſtles all along thoſe Marches, which Britton fol. 87. and inſtitutes fol. 73. ſay were inſtituted for the defence of the Realm, obſerves herein likewiſe the Policy of the Law, and likewiſe the many Serjeances there in the advancing of the Kings Army to be of the Vauntguard, and in the retreat, in the Rear, thoſe People beſt knowing the ways and paſſages of the Country.

An. 1637.

Whence, my Lords, when we come to the Marches of Wales, there we find another County Palat. I mean that of Cheſter and the Earl of Cheſter and his Barons to oppoſe the Welch Invaſions.

Upon thoſe Marches, beſides the like ſervices, as upon the Borders of Scotland, there were likewiſe many Lords Marchers of ſeveral Baronies, who had adminiſtration of all Juſtice within themſelves, ſecundum Legem Marchiæ; and for their ſervices to be done againſt the Welch they had two ſpecial priviledges, that is the third peny of all Spoiles in War as was adjudged in Parliament, 20 E. 1. B. R. Ro. 123. in that great caſe between the Earls of Gloceſter and Hereford, and in the Parliament Book 20 E. 1.

And ſecondly, all the Priſoners that they took in the Wars per Conſuetudinem Marchiæ belonged to the takers of them.

Trin. 25 E. 1. Ro. 28. Coram Roger de Knownell in partibus Mountgomeriæ, in guerra Walliæ 23 E. 1. had taken three Welch Priſoners; and becauſe by the Kings Command they were releaſed of their Impriſonment, it's there adjudged that the King ſhould pay him forty pounds in recompence, and ſo it was adjudged Coram Hill. 25. E. 1. Ro. 11. Dor.

My Lords, His Majeſty is in the actual poſſeſſion of theſe military ſervices, by taking the profits of Wards, Marriages, Releaſes, Licenſes, and forfeitures for alienation, and Primer Seiſin as fruits of them.

That the profits of Wards and Marriages are to be ſpent in Wars for the defence of the Realm as well as for bringing up the Ward, the Books are 35 H. 6. 41. Britton 162.

That the Lords receive the profits becauſe he is not able to do the ſervice if the Kings Ward was within age when the Tenants were ſummoned ad exercitum, he paid no eſcuage, as is adjudged M. 20. E. 1. R. 9 & 20 Co'ia & M. 28. E. 1. Bra. irrott. ſo it is for Releifs and Licenſes and forfeitures of Alienation of the Kings Tenant, without his conſent might be altered, and for primer ſeiſin the King was to receive the profits till the Tenant by his homage had aſſured the King of his ſervice, the Summons always commanding him to be at the place of the Randevows in fide & homagio quibus nobis tenemini, all theſe being but fruits that fall from theſe Military Services.

My Lords, Now to come to Sea-ſervice, the care of the execution of this truſt by Tenures was extended likewiſe to the defence of the Sea.

The Town of Lewes in Suſſex holds by this Service quod ſi Rex ad Mare Cuſtodiendum ſuos mittere voluiſſet, they paid ſo much money, Et hos habebant qui in manibus Arma Cuſtodiebant, this, my Lords, is in Domeſday: in Colcheſter every Houſe to pay ſix-pence per Annum, ad Victum ſoldar' Regis ad expeditionem terræ vel Maris Warwick: Si Rex per Mare contra Hoſtes ſuos ibat, the Town was to find four Botſwains; Saliſbury then to pay ſo much mony ad Paſcendum Buſtecorlos Domini Regis, which as Florentius explains the word be Miniſtros Nauticos; Gloceſter and others ſuch a weight of Iron, ad Claves Navium Regis, others to find Horſes to carry Armor and Weapons to the Ships.

My Lords, Of this Nature are many in that Book, which particularly to mention to gain time I will omit.

That the Tenures of this kind after the Conquerors time continued in uſe, and were well-known appears by the Regiſter fol. 2. where, amongſt other Services, is this of ſhipping alſo inſtanced in theſe words, Quod clamat tenere de nobis per liber' Servit' inveniendi nobis quinq; Naves pro omni Servitio. In the Iter Roll of Eſſex, 13 E. 1. Ro. 7. it's preſented that the Town of Malden tenet per Serjantiam inveniendi unam Navem, quandocunque Rex neceſſe habuerit perſonaliter ire, vel mittere propter negotia Regni, and from the time that they came to the place of Rendezvous to ſtay in the Service forty days, ſumptibus propriis; and being there preſented that they made default at the Welch war, they plead they had no Summons.

So, my Lords, In the Books of Serjances of E. 1. Tyme in Kent, the Town of Killingborn is to find one Ship; and in the County of Berks, Fulk Caudry holds the Mannor of Padworth per Serjantiam inveniendi ſervientem, to perform Sea-ſervice, Bra. p. octavo E. 2. Rot. 40. Will. Dyer in the County of Suſſex to find a certain proportion of Cordage.

Iter Cantiæ 21 E. 1. Rot. 46. Solomon de Campis holds per Serjantiam tenendi Caput Dom. Regis when he is at Sea, ſive neceſſe fuerit, and ſo Rot. 30. another in the ſame Iter Roll.

The five Ports and their Members are to find fifty ſeven Ships, and in every Ship twenty men, and a Maſter, Armatos & bene ariatos; from the time they come to the Randezvouz, they are to continue in the Service 15 days at their own Charge, and afterwards as long as the King pleaſeth; but after the 15 days the King is to pay the Maſter and Conſtable 6 d. a day, and the reſt 3 d. a day for their Wages: This Service appears by the Records of the Quier of Dover before-mentioned, and the Patent-Roll of 7 H. 7. pars.

Both which Records imply, that this Service of theirs cannot be exacted otherwiſe than for the defence of the Sea; for it cannot be demanded above once in a year, nor then neither, niſi neceſſe fuerit, Parliament' Pet' 1 E. 3. Rot. 4. The Barons of the Ports in conſideration of their Sea-ſervice, pray a confirmation of their liberties pro Salvatione dict. Navigii & Regni; commonly when the Land-ſervice was ſummoned, theſe likewiſe were ſummoned to the ſame Service at Sea, as appears in the cloſe Rolls, 28 E. 1. M. 15. 31 E. 1. and 34 E. 1. M. 15, 16. in all which years the Land-ſervice was ſummoned for Scotland, and the Summons both for the one and the other run in the ſame words, commanding them to be at the place cum toto Servitio veſtro quod nobis debetis, which ſhews it to be a Service by Tenure.

That theſe Services of theirs are for the defence of the Realm; and likewiſe that there are many of like nature beſides theſe, which by a ſuperficial reading of two or three Iter Rolls I have cited, appears by the Parliament Roll of 13 E. 1. pars 1. Numero 11. where is declared in theſe words, That the five Ports, and other great Towns and Havens, are infranchiſed pur eſtre gard & mure inter nous & aliens; if it fall out that they ſhall endeavour noſtre terr' enter, & aſſay terr', & ſunt tenus a ceo faire. My Lords, a fuller Declaration than this there cannot be, That both the Ports, and many of

An. 1637. the Havens and Sea-Towns are bound to the Service of Shipping for the extraordinary defence of the Realm, as well as the ordinary.

I have now done with the Services in kind; and becauſe theſe which immediately tend to Action alone were not ſufficient to defend the Realm, and this in the frame and firſt conſtitution of the Common-wealth being foreſeen, and that the Land, or fundus Regni, the moſt viſible and conſtant ſupplier of our wants, was beſt able to ſupply this likewiſe; therefore beſides them there were divers other Tenures created for that purpoſe. Thoſe which next I am to ſpeak of are ſuch as ſupply His Majeſty with Money for that purpoſe.

In the Black Book in the Chequer, lib. 1. Cap. 7. it's ſaid, that in Primitivo Regni ſtatu ad ſtipendia & donativa Militum, & alia neceſſaria ex Caſtellis, and other Lands, in quibus Agricultura non excercebatur pecunia numerata ſucceſſebat; it might from hence be colorably inferred, that in reſpect, ex proviſione Legis upon the Kings paſſing of Lands, a Tenure for Knights-Service for the defence of the Realm was to be reſerved, that in Caſe upon ſuch Grants Rents only without any ſuch Tenure were reſerved, that yet this Money ſhould be imployed for Souldiers Wages, or other neceſſary Affairs of the Common-Wealth, ad Stipendia Militum, & alia neceſſaria: But not to preſs this further;

It's plain, that all Men within the Kingdom were not equally inheritable, either to the Freedom of Body, or propriety of Lands or Goods, but that there were three degrees and ranks each differing from other in all theſe; firſt, Villanies; 2. Free-holders, either by Knight-Service or Free Soccage; 3. Tenants of Antient Demeſne, and that held by Burgage within Cities and Burrough-Towns.

Firſt, for the Villain, we know that as to his Lord he had Freedom in neither; in reſpect of his Body he could not ire quo voluit, but the Lord at his will might impriſon him; in reſpect of his Lands and his Goods, he might tax him de haught & de baſe.

2. The Free-holders, the greateſt part of the Realm always had an abſolute Freedom in both.

3. The third, and that is the Tenants in Ancient Demeſne, and Burgers, they had an abſolute Freedom in their Perſons, but qualified in the other of propriety, not taxable at will, or as Villains, but for the defence, and other neceſſary affairs of the Realm they might be taxed without conſent in Parliament.

My Lords, that theſe had a divided eſtate from other free Tenants, is clear: and firſt for Tenants in Ancient Demeſne, if it be queſtioned whether ſuch Land be Ancient Demeſne yea or not, the iſſue is in theſe words, whether it be Ancient Demeſne or Frank-Fee: By this it appeareth they have not a frank and free Eſtate as the others have, as all our Books agree; they have no Vote in Parliament, for they have no Voice in election of Knights, nor pay to the expences of the Knights that ſerve in Parliament, nor Subſides granted in Parliament. N. B. 79. and 14. it is often diſputed in our Books, whether Acts of Parliament extend to them, unleſs they be ſpecially named; neither can they ſue at Common Law for any thing that concerns the Free-hold, but only by a Writ of Right cloſe within themſelves; and therefore Bracton, fol. 209. calls them Villanos privilegiatos.

The ſame it is of Burgeſſes within Cities and Burroughs, and therefore the Statute of Merton makes it a diſparagement for the Lord to Marry his Warde Villanis, & aliis ſicut Burgenſibus. N. B. 7. and other Books no Aſſiſes will lie for ſuch Lands, but they are impleadable without Original Writ by a Bill of freſh force; and as a Chattel they may deviſe their Land, by the Statute 1 E. 2. de Militibus for ſuch Land; and for Ancient Demeſne no Man is compellable to take the Order of Knighthood. Much more might be brought in proof of this which I omit.

My Lords, all our Books agree, that the Tenants in Ancient Demeſne were to Plow and Manure the Kings Lands, being His Demeſnes; in a Manuſcript that I have ſeen the Author ſaith, That he hath an ancient Manuſcript which ſaith, that the Corn, and other Victuals ariſing hereby, was to ſtore the Kings Gariſons, and Caſtles; and conſidering the number of thoſe Mannors, there being above a Thouſand of them in the Kings Hand at the Conqueſt, it appears by Domeſday, and that thoſe Mannors for the moſt part are great, and that the greateſt part of the Soccage Tenures till H. 2's time, as appears by the Black Book lib. 1. Cap. 23. were to find Victuals of all ſorts in kind for the Proviſion of the Kings Houſe, and were in his time turned into Rents.

Although this may ſeem probable, yet becauſe I have not ſeen the Manuſcript, I'le inſiſt no more upon it.

That for which theſe and the Tenures of Burgage in the Kings Cities and Burroughs, were mentioned in the raiſing of Money for the neceſſary Affairs of the State, that theſe were anciently talliable without their conſent in Parliament, is ſo plain and frequent in the Chequer Rolls, the Parliament Rolls, and the Patent Rolls, as that I intend to cite nothing in proof thereof; It will be admitted by them that are to argue of the other ſide: That which I ſhall endeavour to prove is, that theſe were not talliable at the Kings Will and Pleaſure, but only for the defence, and other neceſſities of State. N. B. fo. 15. 49 E. 3. 22. they be not talliable de haut & baſſe, as Villains are; and therefore Bracton fo. 209. calls them Villanos Privilegiatos lib. Parliament. fo. 112. taliare & rationabile auxilium dare pro neceſſitate. N. B. 14 E. They are taxable pro grand Caſe, Rot. Parliament. 6 E. 3. Commiſſions to tax Cities and Burroughs, and Ancient Demeſnes upon Petitions of the Commons revoked, and Writs in due form to be ſet, and for the time to come the King ſhall not aſſeſs tallage forſq; in ſuch manner come a d'eſtre fait en temps de ſes Anceſtors, & come il devera per reaſon: The occaſion not requiring it, I ſhall ſay nothing of it when theſe Talliages are diſuſed.

My Lords, I have now done with the Tenures, the firſt way whereby the Law hath provided for the ſafety of the Realm, which of themſelves not enabling the King entruſted therewith all ſufficiently to do it; the Law therefore, beſides the Honours, Mannors, Caſtles, and other conſtant Revenues of the Crown, for the ſupportation of the ordinary Charges thereof, hath appointed unto it divers Prerogatives for the extraordinary, and for this of the defence of the Realm, as one of the chiefeſt of them: theſe Prerogatives they have an influence into the Eſtates of all the Subjects in the Realm, and are ſo many, that to gain time I will omit to mention any of them; that which I ſhall inſiſt upon, will be to prove, that the things coming to the Crown by this Prerogative way, are to be imployed for the defence, and other publick Affairs of the Realm. In His Majeſty there is a double Capacity, Natural and Politick; all His Prerogatives are Jure Coronæ, and of all ſuch things He is ſeiſed Jure Coronæ; and therefore, as in other Corporations, ſuch things are patrimonia & bona publica, to be imployed for the common good; ſo likewiſe by the ſame reaſon here, the reaſon why the King hath Treaſure-trove, and Gold and Silver-Mines in the Earth, in the Caſe of Mines is declared to be, becauſe the King is hereby to defend the Kingdom; and in Inſtitutes in the Title of Soccage, fo. 28. 131. the reaſon of many of the reſt, quia Theſaurus Regis eſt fundamentum belli, & firmamentum pacis. This I conceive to be the reaſon, that by the Stat. of 14 E. 3. Cap. 1. Eſcheats, Wardſhips, Cuſtoms, and Profits ariſing of the Realm of England, ſhould be declared to be ſpent for the ſafe-guard of the Realm, more than the Profits of the Kings Mannors and Lands, and of the difference made in the Co'ia M. 3. R. 2. London, between Rectas præventiones Regni, which, by the advice of the Lords of the Council, were to be ſpent in the Houſhold, and the other Profits of the Crown to be ſpent circa ſolutionem & defenſionem Regni, in the Parliament Roll of 6 R. 2. N. 42. The Commons Petition, That the King will live of His Revenues, and that Wards, Marriages, Releaſes, Eſcheats, Forfeitures, and other Profits of the Crown, may be kept to be ſpent upon the Wars for defence of the Kingdom; which ſheweth, that there was always a difference made between the Profits ariſing of the Kings Mannors and Lands, and that which roſe by the Prerogative in caſual and accidental ways. My Lords, I have now done with theſe.

Stat. 14 E. 3. Cap. 1.

Parliament Roll 6 R. 2. Numero 42.

The third way that the Law hath provided for defence, is ſupplies of Money. Nota.

Bract. lib. 3. Cap. 13. fo. 129.

The third way whereby the Law hath provided for the defence of the Kingdom, is particular ſupplies of Money for the defence of the Sea alone in times of danger, both ordinary and extraordinary; for beſides the Supplies of Money before-mentioned, which are to be imployed for the good and defence of the Realm in general, as in the other Caſes where the Law putteth the King to any particular Charge for the protection of the Subject, it always enables Him thereto, yields Him particular ſupplies of Money for the maintenance of the Charge; ſo here, the Courts of Juſtice for the preſervation of us in our Rights are ſupported at His Charge, and that is the reaſon why He hath all Fines and Amerciaments, the Goods of Out-lawed Men in Perſonal Actions, Bract. lib. 3. Cap. 13. fo. 129. and Fines for purchaſing of Original Writs, & pro licentia concordandi, which in ſuppoſition of Law are paid, for not proceeding, and for troubling without cauſe, the Kings Juſtices who are maintained in their Places at the Kings Charge: theſe they are the vectigal' Juditiarium.

The defence of the Realm extends it ſelf to many Particulars.

1. Of the Church and of Religion; and therefore in the Summons of Parliament the cauſe of the Calling of the Parliament is always declared to be pro defenſione Eccleſiæ Angliæ in particular, as well as totius Regni.

His Majeſty therefore hath the Temporalities of all Biſhopricks, ſede vacante, a Prerogative, and that which Patrons have not, with an Addition of the Firſt Fruits and Tenths of them, and all other Eccleſiaſtical Promotions and Benefices in H. the 8*th*'s time, and likewiſe the Tyths of all Lands which lie not within any Pariſh.

2. For defence of Land alone, beſides theſe Military Services before-mentioned, the Profits of Wards and Marriages, which, as I have read, no other Chriſtian Prince hath as a Fruit of them, are received for that purpoſe.

Ro. Scoc. 10 E. 3. m. 16.

So it is for the Sea in Rot. Scoc. 10 E. 3. m. 16. It is ſaid that the King and His Anceſtors Domini Maris Anglicani & defenſores contra Hoſtium invaſiones ante hac tempora extiterunt; for the ſupporting of this Charge therefore, they have not only had the Grand Cuſtom of the Mark and Demy-Mark upon the Wooll, Wool-fells, and Leather, and the Priſage, that is, one Tunn of Wine before the Maſt, and one behind of every tenth Tunn, which were even due by the Common Law, as appears by the Book of my Lord Dyer, 1 El. 165. and Sir John Davis's Reports fo. 8, & 9. and implied by Magna Charta Ca. 30. that Merchants may Trade per rectas & antiquas Conſuetudines; but likewiſe divers other things were afterwards granted by Act of Parliament in addition to them.

Petty Cuſtome 31 E. 1. Stat. 27 E. 3. Cap. 26.

As firſt, the Petty Cuſtom began 31 E. 1 and made perpetual by the Statute 27 E. 3. Cap. 26. and likewiſe divers Aids and Subſidies, which are an encreaſe of Cuſtoms upon the Staple Commodities of Woolls, Wool-fells, and Leather, and Tunnage, and encreaſe upon Wines, and Poundage, and encreaſe upon all other things imported or exported, either by Denizens or Aliens: That which in this kind was taken by His Majeſty 11*th* of His Reign, when this Writ went out, was 300000 Pounds and upwards.

The Aids and Subſidies, and likewiſe the Tunnage and Poundage anciently granted upon particular occaſions only, and afterwards to the late King and Queens for their Lives by Act of Parliament; and and being now granted to His Majeſty; and likewiſe the new Impoſition, which altogether make up the afore-mentioned Sum of 300000 l. of the Legality hereof I intend not to ſpeak; for in caſe His Majeſty may impoſe upon Merchandiſe what Himſelf pleaſeth, there will be the leſs cauſe to Tax the In-land Counties; and in caſe he cannot ſo do, it will be ſtrongly preſumed, that He can much leſs Tax them. The proving of theſe Two things herein will ſerve my turn.

1. That His Majeſty de facto takes them, and that this judicially appeared to your Lordſhips and the Court.

And 2. That theſe and the Ancient Cuſtoms are for the defence of the Sea.

For the firſt, it was declared by His Majeſty in the laſt Parliament, and annext to the Petition of Right, as part of it, that His Majeſty took them, and could not be without them; whereof He likewiſe deſired the Judges to take notice, and that they might ſo do, it is Enrolled both in this, and other the Courts of Weſtminſter-Hall.

For the ſecond, that the grant of Cuſtom is principally for the protection of Merchants at Sea againſt the Enemies of the Realm, and Pirates, the common Enemies of all Nations, is Sir John Davis's Reports fo. 9, 12. And that theſe, and likewiſe the Impoſitions are for that purpoſe, was held by many of the Judges in the Argument of Balles his Caſe 7 Jac. in the Chequer, in the Caſe of Impoſitions upon Currands; and likewiſe by the Kings Council, when the ſame Caſe afterwards came to be debated in Parliament, and was one of the main Reaſons urged by them for the maintenance of that Judgment. That the Aids and Subſidies, and likewiſe the Tunnage and Poundage, before they were granted for Life, were not only for the Protection of Merchants, and the ordinary defence of the Sea, but alſo for the defence thereof in times of extraordinary dangers, and of Invaſion from Enemies, appears by the ſeveral grants of them in the Parliament Rolls.

My Lords, either by the Grant it ſelf of them, or by the Declaration of the Calling of the Parliament, it appears that thoſe were all granted upon extraordinary occaſions; and when they came to be granted for life, as appears by the Rolls, and likewiſe by the Printed Statutes of 13 Ed. 4. Cap. 3. 13. and they were not only granted for the ordinary defence of the Realm, and principally of the Sea; but likewiſe that the Kings might always have in readineſs a Stock of Money in their Hands to withſtand an Invaſion, as is declared by the very words of thoſe Statutes.

My Lords, His Majeſty is in poſſeſſion of them, and was pleaſed by His Proclamation Printed 1626. declaring the cauſe of the diſſolution of the laſt Parliament, as appears by Pag. 17. to declare that they were always granted to His Progenitors for the guarding of the Seas, and the ſafety and defence of the Realm; and in the 18*th* Page is graciouſly pleaſed in theſe words to declare, That He doth and muſt ſtill purſue theſe ends, and undergo that Charge for which it was firſt granted to the Crown; and Page 44. that he receives it for the guarding of the Seas, and defence of the Realm.

Proclamation 1626. Pag. 17, & 18.

My Lords, I have now done with the ways which I firſt propounded, whereby the Law hath provided for the defence of the Realm; I ſhall add this only, that by the Statute of Wincheſter, which was made in the 13*th* year of E. 1. every Man ſecundum ſtatum & facultates; for the words of the Statute are, according to the quantity of his Lands and Goods is to find Horſe and Armour for the defence of the Realm: For that that Statute in this particular extends not only to the keping of the Sea, but likewiſe to the defence againſt Forreigners, is declared in the Parliament Roll of 3 R. 2. N. 36. and by the Stat. of 5 H. 4. in the Parliament Roll N. 24. not printed, juxta quantitatem terrarum & bonorum againſt Invaſions, each Man is to find Armour, and by the Statute 1 E. 1. Cap. 5.

Par. 3 R. 2. N. 36. Stat. 5 H. 4. Parl. Roll N. 24. 4, & 5 P. & Mar. Cap. 2. 1 Jac. 24.

Theſe Men, upon ſudden coming of ſtrange Enemies into the Realm, may be compelled to march out of their Counties where they live; whether they may be compelled ſo to do without Wages, I ſhall have occaſion afterwards to ſpeak, how far the Statutes of Winchester, and 5 H. 4. for Arms, upon the Statute of 4, & 5. P. & M. Cap. 2. and 1 Jac. Cap. 25. are in force, I ſhall not ſpeak. Firſt, my Lords, I ſhall now proceed to the ſtating of the Queſtion.

Bracton, in the beginning of his Book ſays, That in Rege neceſſaria ſunt hæc duo Arma ſcilicet, & Leges, quibus utrumq; tempus Bellor' & Pacis recte poſſit gubernari; and Glanvil in the beginning of his Book, Regiam Majeſtatem Armis contra Gentes ſibi Regnoq; inſurgentes oportet eſſe decoratum; His Majeſty, as He is Lord of Sea and Land, ſo by that which hath been ſaid it appears, that He is armed with Power for the defence of both. My Lords, the reaſons in the Writ, as they are weighty, ſo from theſe known ſupplies, whereby the Law hath provided for the ſafety of the Realm, they will all of them be confeſſed, and yet thereby receive anſwer; and that the Law hath fore-ſeen, and provided the ſupplies accordingly, without the way in the Writ. 1. The command in the Writ being in fide & legiantia quibus nobis Tenemini, it's thence inferred, that each Subjects Allegiance binds him to contribute to the defence of the Realm. In the old Cuſtomes of Normandy Cap. 43. Allegiance binds ad Conſilij & Auxilij Adjuramentum; this, although it be principally performed by the Parliamentary, both Advices, and Aids, yet beſides theſe extraordinary, by that which hath been ſaid, we ſee both by the Tenures in kind, and pecuniary Supplies, that without the aſſiſtance thereof our Perſons, Lands, and Goods, by His Majeſties command alone, are made contributory thereunto, and that in a large proportion. 2. If the Rule whereby this Contribution muſt be regulated be, as in the Writ, Secundum Statum & facultates, that likewiſe is ſatisfied, and that both for Sea and Land.

1. For Land, in caſe either the Statutes of Winchester, or 5*H.* 4. be a-foot, then in words in that of finding Arms juxta quantitatem terrarum & bonorum: So ſecondly in reſpect of the Tenures by Knights-Service in the Wars, Marriages, and Reliefs, thoſe I confeſs concern the Tenant only; but thoſe others are Tenures in Capite and Grand Serjeanty, theſe concern all others in reſpect of the Licenſes of Alienation, and of the Wardſhips of Lands held of other Lords, and that all the Tenants Land is hereby become wardable; and thirdly, in reſpect of the Prerogative before-mentioned; for the greater the Subjects Eſtate is, the greater influence they have into it, and proportionably raiſe more profit out of it.

In reſpect of the Sea, this is ſo by reaſon of the Cuſtomes, Aids, Subſidies, Tunnage, and Poundage, before-mentioned; for the Charge of theſe is not born by the Merchants alone, but by each Subject within the Kingdom, and that Secundum Statum & facultates.

For firſt in reſpect of the Exporte, the greater the Eſtate, the more Wooll and Wool-fells, and Leather, Lead, and other ſtaple Commodities it exports; if that be done by the owner, he bears the immediate Charge, if by the Merchant, according to that proportion is his abatement in Price unto the owner. So it is for Goods.

Goods imported, for the greater the Eſtate and means of Livelihood, the more each Perſon buys of thoſe, and at a dearer rate. This is cleared by the Petition of the Commons in the Parliament Roll, 22 E. 3. N. 41. that the Merchants had granted to the King 40 s. upon a Sack of Wooll en Charge du people, & nemy des Marchants; and by the Statute of 36 E. 3. Cap. 11. that no Subſidy or Charge be granted to the King by the Merchants upon Wooll, without Aſſent in Parliament.

Par. Roll 22 E. 3. N. 22.

Stat. 36 E. 3. Cap. 11.

3. Hence likewiſe that other ground of Equity in the Writ, Quod omnes tangit per omnes debet ſupportari, receives anſwer; for as all have benefit by the defence, ſo the Compenſatio publica, we ſee it come from all: the fuller Anſwer, is the Parliament Summons of 23 E. 1. proviſion againſt the French, who intended linguam Anglicanam omnino debere, Clo. 23 E. 1. M. 14. Dor. Lex juſtiſſima provida circumſpectio ſacrorum principum ſtabilita ſtatuit, & quod omnes tangit ab omnibus approbatur. The Charge, as it muſt be born by all, ſo muſt it be approved by all.

4. If His Majeſty be entruſted with the defence of the Realm, as in the great Caſe between the Earls of Hereford and Glouceſter: It's ſaid, that incumbit Domino Regi ſalvatio Populi ſibi Comiſſ. and that per Juramentum eſt aſtrictus ad providendum ſalvationem Regni circumquaq; becauſe no Man goeth to War at his own Charge; we ſee by that which is already ſaid, that the Law hath provided the Stipendia Miniſterij: with that they do not bind His Majeſty to the defence and ſafety of the Kingdom only in point of care and vigilancy, but even in point of Charge too, I ſhall endeavour to prove to your Lordſhips and the Court. Allegiance, we know, is an Act of Reciprocation, for as it binds the Subjects to Tribute and Subjection, ſo therefore muſt it the King to the Charge of Protection, by the expence of thoſe; Rex ad Tutelam Legis, corporum & bonorum, erectus: the ſupplies He hath for that purpoſe ties Him to the ſupportation of the Laws, the execution of Juſtice, 20 E. 1. In the Caſe before-mentioned, between the Earls of Glouceſter and Hereford, it is ſaid, That Dominus Rex eſt omnibus & ſingulis de Regno ſuo Juſtitiæ debitor; which that he is ſo even in point of Charge appears by His Majeſties ſupportation of the Courts of Juſtice, and the Salaries, not only to your Lordſhips, and other the Inferior Miniſters of Juſtice, and anciently to the Sheriffs, but likewiſe many other ways, 4 H. 7. Cap. 12. The King ſhall not let for any favour of Charge, but that He ſhall ſee His Laws fully executed, Pa. 23 E. 1. Rot. 12. Exchequer. A Clark that attended a Commiſſion of grievances, recovered Salary from the King, although the Commiſſion was for the Relief of that Country.

Forteſcue Cap. 13.

This I conceive to be the Reaſon of the Declaration in the Statute of 14 E. 3. Cap. 1. and other Statutes, that Aids, though granted in Parliament for defence, ſhall not be brought into example, that it might not be conceived that the Commons were to bear that Charge which principally belonged unto the King, Pat. 48 H. 3. M. 8. it recited, That whereas a late Parliament in Articulo neceſſitatis pro defenſione Regni contra Hoſtilem Adventum Alienigenarum; the Commons granted him a large Subſidy, ultra quam retroactis temporibus facere conſueverunt. Now the King eorum indempnitate proſpicere volens, grants, that non cedat in prejudicium, nec in poſterum non trahatur in Conſuetudinem, in Wiſemans Caſe. In 2 Report fo. 15. it is reſolved, that a Covenant to ſtand ſeiſed to the uſe of Queen Eliz. in conſideration that She is the Head of the Common Wealth, and hath the care of repelling Forreign Hoſtility, is not good, becauſe, ſaith the Book, the King is bound to do that ex Officio.

Cam. 315. One Reaſon why the King is to have Royal Mines, alleadged by all that argue for the King, is, becauſe He is at His own Charge to provide for the defence of the Realm, which he cannot do without Money. In the Earl of Devonſhires Caſe, Co. 11. 91. 6. Inſt. fo. 28. & 131. Theſaurus Regis is called Nervus Belli. For the practiſe, the proof of the particular Charges the ſeveral Kings have been at for the defence of all ſorts, would be ſo tedious, that I'le omit the citing of any thing in this kind: Sir John Davies's Reports fo. 12. many Authorities; and in the Treatiſe de Regalibus, p. 81. Principes totam Navigationem pro vectigalibus præſtare coguntur.

But becauſe His Majeſty, in the before-mentioned Proclamation, Pag. 18. & 44. is pleaſed graciouſly to profeſs, That He holds Himſelf obliged to undergo the Charge of the defence of the Realm, and of the Sea in particular, I ſhall ſpare any further Proof in this.

5. If that in the Writ, That the Sea per gentem Anglicanam ab olim defendi conſuevit, be not anſwered by the Scotch Roll of 10 E. 3. before cited, which ſays, That the King and His Anceſtors, Maris Anglicani defenſores antehac extiterunt, nor by what is now ſaid, if it be admitted; yet that even the Charge of this defence is born per gentem Anglicanam is before proved.

The Sixth, and one of the main things whereupon I ſhall ſtate my Queſtion, is this; His Majeſty is in the actual Poſſeſſion, not only of the Services in kind for the defence of the Land, by taking of the benefit of the Wardſhips, Marriages, Reliefs, Fines, and Licences for Alienation and primer Seiſin, and of the Prerogatives before-mentioned, but likewiſe of the Service of the five Ports, unleſs they be releaſed ſince 7 H. 7. for then their Service was ſummoned. And of the Tunnage and Poundage, and other Duties for the defence of the Sea,

It appears not by any part of the Writ, nor by any thing in the Record, that either the Service of the Cinque-Ports was ſummoned, or that any Money at all of His Majeſties was expended either for this Service, or at any other time for the defence of the Sea.

My Lords, I deſire to be underſtood, I do not affirm that none was expended; only this appears not to your Lordſhip and the Court.

All that can be inferred from the Writ, as to this purpoſe, is, That the Ship for Buckinghamſhire is commanded to be at Portſmouth by ſuch a day, ad proficiſcendum exinde cum Navibus Dom' Regis & Navibus aliorum fidelium ſubditorum ſuorum; by this it appears not to the Court, that though the Ships are the Kings, that they are to be ſet forth at the Kings Charge, for the Charge may be born by the Subject for ought appears.

Neither, ſecondly, doth it appear how many theſe Ships were, whereby the Charge, in caſe it were born by the King, might in any proportion appear to be anſwerable to the Supply before-mentioned.

Theſe other Ships aliorum fidelium ſubditorum Domini Regis, as in truth they were not thoſe of the Cinque-Ports, ſo neither can they be ſo intended, unleſs it had been ſo expreſſed.

The Services of the five Ports, and Tunnage and Poundage, and other Duties, are the ordinary, the ſetled and known ways, by Law appointed for the defence of the Seas: The way in the Writ by Seſſing and altering the property of the Subjects Goods without their conſent, as in the Writ, muſt needs be granted to be a way more unuſual and extraordinary; againſt the Legality of it, I ſhall therefore thus frame the Argument by way of admiſſion. Firſt, That in caſe the Services of the Ports had been ſummoned, and the Money coming by the before-mentioned ways had been expended upon the defence, and they had not been ſufficient; that though in this Caſe the Writ had been legal, that yet as now it is not. Reylies Caſe in the 10*th* Report fo. 139. and Trin. 18 E. 2. B. R. Ro. 174. adjudged; That ſo long as he that is bound by Tenure or Preſcription is able to do it, the whole Level cannot be Seſſed to the Reparation of a Wall or Bank.

It's a Maxime, Lex non facit ſaltum, nor that we are to run to extraordinary, where the ordinary means will ſerve the turn. Theſe Rules are often put in our Books, I intend to inſtance but in one or two Caſes.

The Common Law is the common reliever of Perſons wronged, that in Chancery is extraordinary, and therefore no Man can Sue there when he hath remedy at the Common Law: The ordinary Tryal for Life is by Indictment, and a Jury, when therefore this may be done, and that the Sheriff with the poſſe Comitatus is able to keep the Peace, it cannot be done by Martial Law, nor by Judgment of the King and Peers in Parliament without Indictment, as was adjudged in the Caſe of the Earl of March, Trin. 28 E. 3. B. R. Ro. 21.

My Lords, the reaſon of this Maxime of Law, as I conceive, is this; Actions extraordinary, as extra ordinem, and done only in times of neceſſity, are not tyed to any Rules of Laws, and therefore not to be brought into example; nor have any warrant, but only that of neceſſity, nor Rule to guide them, but what, pro hic & nunc, ſhall ſerve for the bringing of them about: The ſame Power then that may once do them, in omitting of the ordinary, may by the ſame Rule always do them; and ſo by conſequence how far ſuch Power is tyed at any time, or in any thing to any Rules of Law, I ſhall humbly ſubmit to your Lordſhips conſideration.

My Lords, I have now done with the ſtating of the Queſtion: Theſe things whereupon I ſhall ſpend all the reſt of my time, are theſe five.

1. Admitting that the ordinary means before-mentioned had been all uſed, and that they had not been ſufficient, whether in this Caſe His Majeſty, without conſent in Parliament, may, in this Caſe of extraordinary defence, alter the property of the Subjects Goods for the doing thereof.

2. In the next place I ſhall endeavour to anſwer to ſome Objections which may be made to the contrary.

3. In the third place, for qualifying of this I ſhall admit, that in ſome Caſes the property of the Subjects Goods, for the defence of

An. 1637. the Realm, may be altered without conſent in Parliament; and I ſhall ſhew what they be in particular, and compare them and the preſent occaſion together.

4. In the fourth place, becauſe of ſome Preſidents of the matter of Fact, and likewiſe Legal Authorities that may ſeem to prove a Legality in this Particular of Shipping for the defence at Sea, whatever it be in the general; I ſhall therefore endeavour an anſwer to ſuch of them as I have met withal.

And ſhall conclude in the laſt place with the Authorities in Point.

From the firſt, That to the altering of the property of the Subjects Goods, though for the defence of the Realm, that a Parliamentary aſſiſtance is neceſſary.

In this it muſt be granted in the firſt place, that the Law ties no Man, and much leſs the King, to impoſſibilities.

And ſecondly, that the Kingdom muſt be defended.

As therefore the Law hath put this great Truſt upon His Majeſty; ſo when the Supplies, which by the ways before-mentioned it hath put into his Hands, are ſpent, therein it hath provided other ways for a new Supply, which is the firſt thing that I ſhall preſent to your Lordſhips, and this is the Aids and Subſidies in Parliament.

That amongſt the ardua Regni negotia, for which Parliaments are called, this of the Defence is not only one of them, but even the chief, is cleared by this, that of all the reſt none is named particularly in the Summons, but only this; for all the Summons to Parliament ſhew the cauſe of the calling of them to be pro quibuſdam arduis negotiis nos & defenſionem Regni noſtri Angliæ & Eccleſiæ Anglicanæ concernentibus. And in concluſion, the Party ſummoned is commanded to be there ſicut honorem noſtrum, & ſalvationem, & defenſionem Regni & Eccleſiæ diligit.

And in all the ancient Summons of Parliament, when Aid was demanded, the particular cauſe of Defence, and againſt what Enemy in ſpecial was mentioned.

My Lords, to gain time, I'le inſtance but in one or two of each Kings Reign, Clauſ. 23 E. 1. m. 4. Dorſ. That the French, ad expugnationem Regni noſtri clam ſe maxima & Bellatorum copioſa multitudine Regnum jam invaſit, & Linguam Anglicanam omnino delere proponit.

Clanſ. 3 E. 2. M. 3. Dor. and 7 E. 2. M. 8. Dor. That the Scots had entred, burnt, and deſtroyed the Marches, and put them to a Tribute.

Clanſ. 1 E. 3. pars 2. M. 6. and 22 E. 3. M. 32. Dorſ. That the Scotch and French had invaded the Realm.

Clauſ. 7 H. 4. M. 29. Dorſ. That the French were with a great Fleet quaſi in ore Thameſiæ to invade the Kingdom, and the King to go in Perſon.

After this Kings Reign the form of the Summons was as now.

That theſe ardua defenſionem Regni concernentia, are the Aids and means of Defence, and not the way and manner of doing it, as their Counſel therein, is clear.

In the Parliament Roll 6 R. 2. pars 2. N. 9.

And that theſe Ardua circa defenſionem were the Aids, is expreſt in words in ſome of the Summons, Clauſ. 7 E. 2. M. 8. Dorſ. The cauſe of the Parliament to withſtand the Scots, and that in tam arduis debitis extendere manus adjutrices opportuna auxilia faciendo.

Clauſ. 31. E. 3. M. 21. Dorſ. That Summons circa neceſſariam defenſionem Regni, quum ad dictum negotium expediendum auxilium neceſſario habere oportet.

Clauſ. 5 R 2. M. 2. Dorſ. The King being to make a Voyage pro defenſione Regni & gravamine inimicorum Regni, which could not be done without borrowing great Sums of Money, therefore the Parliament called to adviſe about the Aſſurance.

So that, My Lords, it's clear that the Law hath provided this Parliamentary way for the ſupplying of the Kings wants for the extraordinary defence, and hath likewiſe put the Power of uſing it into His Majeſties own Hands; for He may call Parliaments when, and ſo often as He pleaſe.

My Lords, the Parliament, as it is beſt qualified, and fitted to make this Supply for ſome of each Rank, and that through all the Parts of the Kingdom being there met, His Majeſty having declared the danger, they beſt knowing the Eſtates of all Men within the Realm, are fitteſt, by comparing the danger and Mens Eſtates together, to proportion the Aid accordingly.

And ſecondly, as they are fitteſt for the preſervation of that fundamental propriety which the Subject hath in his Lands and Goods, becauſe each Subjects Vote is included in whatſoever is there done; ſo that it cannot be done otherwiſe, I ſhall endeavour to prove to your Lordſhips both by Reaſon and Authority.

My firſt Reaſon is this, That the Parliament by the Law is appointed as the ordinary means for ſupply upon extraordinary occaſions, when the ordinary Supplies will not do it: If this in the Writ therefore may, without reſorting to that, be uſed, the ſame Argument will hold as before in reſorting to the extraordinary, by of the ordinary, and the ſame inconvenience follow.

My ſecond Reaſon is taken from the Actions of former Kings in this of the defence.

The Aids demanded by them, and granted in Parliament, even for this purpoſe of the defence, and that in times of imminent danger, are ſo frequent, that I'le ſpare the citing of any of them: It's rare in a Subject, and more in a Prince, to ask and take that of gift, which he may and ought to have of right, and that without ſo much as a Salvo, or Declaration of his Right.

An. 1637.

The ſecond way was Loans and Benevolences demanded by them, with promiſe of re-payment both for the ordinary and extraordinary defence of the Realm, and that as well of all the Subjects equally by Commiſſion, as of ſome few.

Pat. 48 H. 3. M. 16. A Commiſſion to the Earl of Leiceſter, and other, contrahendi mutuum in nomine noſtro de denarijs & victualibus, and other things in munitionem Navium ponendis & nautarum ſtipendiis contra hoſtilem adventum alienigenarum in Regnum noſtrum, ad defenſionem & tuitionem ejuſdem Regni, and promiſeth re-payment.

Viſus Compit' in the Clerk, 26 E. 1. Rot. 100. The King borrows of the Merchants 28966 l. pro defenſione Regni, and promiſeth re-payment.

H. 31 E. 1. Rot. 4, &c. and Trin. 31 E. 1. Rot. 41. Divers Sums borrowed pro defenſione, and payment promiſed.

Bract. Irret. H. 34 E. 1. R. 82. 10000 l. paid by the King at one time for Money borrowed; this I confeſs is only pro Arduis Regni negotiis.

Bra. M. 11 E. 2. Ro. 1. The Scots having entred the Kingdom, diverſa homicidia, incendia & deprædationes perpetrantes: The King being in Perſon to go againſt them, writes to His Council to provide Money, and they diverſas vias pro denariis providendis exquirentes, reſolveth to borrow.

P. 12 E. 2. Co'ia, for the ſame cauſe a Loan upon all Merchant-ſtrangers.

Ro. Scot. 1 E. 3. M. 3. The Scots having entred the Realm, beſieged divers Caſtles, and threatned a Conqueſt of England, and quia creſcit ſumptuum multitudo in tantum quod Theſaur' noſtrum ad ſuſtentationem exercitus noſtri nequaquam ſufficit, he borrows.

Claſ. 14 E. 3. M. 8. The King had borrowed 3333 l. pro ſalvatione & defenſione Regni, & vult promptam ſolutionem fieri prout decet, and now aſſigns it to be paid out of the Cuſtoms.

Walſingham P. 179. 44 E. 3. The King ſiniſtro uſus conſilio magnas ſummas pecuniæ of all ſorts, mutuo petijt, aſſerens quod in defenſionem Eccleſiæ & Regni illas expenderet; but the People would not lend.

Clauſ. 5 R. 2. M. 12. Dorſ. The King, pro defenſione Regni, being to make a Voyage at Sea, deſires to borrow Money, and a Parliament called to give aſſurance.

7 H. 4. Rot. Franc. Money borrowed pro defenſione, volens promptam & ſecuram ſolutionem fieri.

Rot. Parliament. 11 H. 6. N. 13. 100000 l. borrowed pro defenſione, and ſpent, and the Parliament orders pro ſecuritate.

Rot. Parliament. 15 H. 6. N. 3. 100000 l. borowed pro defenſione by the King.

Stat. 11 H. 7. Cap. 10. It appears that a Benevolence had been deſired by H. 7. for the defence of the Realm, and wherein He went in Perſon.

The known Commiſſion to Cardinal Wolſey for the Benevolence in March 16 H. 8. It was to withſtand infeſtiſſimos Hoſtes of France and Scotland, who intended to invade the Realm, and that the Kings Coffers were now empty; and therefore they have power Communicandi candi & inducendi; perſuadend' & practicand' cum ſubditis Regis ſuper amicabili pecuniarum conceſſione.

Secunda pars Pat. 37. H. 8. Cum pro ſuſtentatione ingentis oneris noſtrorum operatuum quos in præſenti tam per mare quam per terram conficere, & in promptu habere cogimur ad reſiſtendum; &c. Propellendum hoſtem noſtrum Francorum Regem, in defenſionem, tutelam & ſecuritatem dilectorum ſubditorum noſtrorum; quorum ille dampnum & interitum omnibus vijs & modis molitur, ſtatut' & ex conſenſu, & ſententia Concilij noſtri decrevimus aliquam opem de dictis ſubditis noſtris petere, & eand' cum eorum benevolentia recipere; pro eorum cujuſlibet facultate miniſtrand' nihil dubitantes quin ſponte & liberalit' quiſq; pro ſua partitione & facultate elargiturus ſit; eoq; magis; & citius, quod id totum conſumat' & cedet in ſuam ipſorum defenſionem & tuitionem; and the power is given to levy it as a Benevolence only.

By the Statute of 35 H. 8. Cap. 12. it appears that for the defence H. 8. had borrowed divers Sums of Money.

The third way was by anticipating their Rents.

Tr. 29 E. 1. Ro. 58. in the Exchequer Writs to all the Sheriffs of England, pro conſervatione Regni ejuſq; incolarum ſalvatione & inimicorum depreſſione: That all the Profits ariſing of their Counties, and and the Rents of all the Kings Tenants due at Michaelmas be paid at Midſummer, and allowance promiſed in the next half years Rent; and that this ad tam ardua negotia neceſſaria alias in conſuetudinem non trahatur.

My Lords, that not one or two, but ſo many Kings, and of ſuch Power and Wiſdom, as in many of them were, and that in a matter of ſuch conſequence, and in times of neceſſity ſhould ſo far deſcend from their greatneſs, or ſo far prejudice their Right, as to borrow that of the Subject, who without being beholding to them they might take of right, and bind themſelves to re-payment, and all without any Salvo of the Right, your Lordſhips will conceive that it can hardly be imagined.

My third Reaſon is taken from the incertainty of the way intended in the Writ, for the Law delighting in certainty, to the end that the Subject might be ſure of ſomewhat that he might call his own, hath made all thoſe things which the King challengeth as peculiar to himſelf from the Subject, either certain in themſelves, or elſe reducible to a certainty, either by the Judges, Jury, or Parliament, or by ſome other way than by His Majeſty Himſelf, as indifferent between the King and His People.

In this I intend not ſuch things as are common to the King with the Subject, of which nature are the Aids for marrying the Kings eldeſt Daughter, or Knighting his eldeſt Son, for theſe are due to every common Perſon that is Lord, as well as to the King, as appears by the Statute of Weſtm' 3 E. 1. Cap. 35. N. 82. and are not due by any ſpecial Prerogative, but by Tenure; and yet the Common Law, for avoiding exceſs therein, calls it Rationabile auxilium; and yet even this by the Statute of Weſtm' 13 E. 2. Cap. 35. is put into certainty, and the cauſe of the making of the Statute, as therein is expreſſed, was becauſe the People were grieved by paying more than was requiſite, and thereby that which was reaſonable became an unreaſonable Aid.

An. 1637. This Statute was general, and named not the King particularly; but the Statute of 25 E. 3. Cap. 11. is only in caſe of the King; and N. B. fo. 82. gives the reaſon of the making of that Statute, becauſe the King before did diſtrain for more than was fit; and therefore, by reaſon of the exceſs, was reſtrained to a certainty as well as the Subject: Neither are the Taxes and Tallages upon Cities and Burroughs or Ancient Demeſne againſt this.

In reſpect of the baſeneſs of their Tenures before-mentioned; and ſecondly, becauſe the Subject that is Lord of ſuch Burroughs or Mannors of Ancient Demeſne have them as well as the King, as appears by the Caſe of New Salisbury 33 E. 1. in the Parliament Book, and in the Parliament Roll 8 E. 2. for the Burrough of Cirenceſter.

And Bra. Trin. 33 E. 1. Ro. 22. and N. B. 79.

Thoſe things which are peculiar to the King, either they be certain in themſelves, as are Treaſure-trove, Deodands, Wrecks, and the like, where the King is to have the thing it ſelf; and ſo if it be in Money, as the Demy-Mark, when a Writ of Right; the Tenant prayeth that the Seiſin may be inquired; Fines pro licentia concord'; The tenth part of the Land compriſed in the Writ of Covenant, and the Poſt-fine one half ſo much more, and Fines for purchaſing Original Writs 2 s. 8 d. where the thing demanded is under 40 l. or 10 s. where 100 l. and ſo in proportion. Or elſe it is reducible to a certainty, as in all Caſes where the Party is to be amerced, though he be in miſericordia Domini Regis, yet the Jury muſt affirm the Amerciament; and when he is to make Fine and Ranſome ad voluntatem Domini Regis, yet this Fine muſt be ſet by the Judges, when the Tenant by Knights-Service makes default in the Summons; ad exercitum, he is to pay Eſcuage for the default as a Penalty: this cannot be ſet but in Parliament, as I ſhall prove hereafter.

My Lords, to apply all to the thing in queſtion, there is a cauſe of raiſing Money for the defence of the Realm, non definitur in lege; what will ſerve the turn if His Majeſty, as in the Writ, may without Parliament levy 20 s. upon the Plaintiffs goods; I ſhall humbly ſubmit it, why by the ſame reaſon of Law it might not have been 20 l. and ſo in infinitum, whereby it could come to paſs, that if the Subject hath any thing at all left him, he is not beholding to the Law for it but it is left intirely to the goodneſs and mercy of the King.

My Lords, I am now come into the ſecond kind of Proofs, and that is by Authority: The Caſes which in the firſt place I ſhall inſiſt upon, will be to prove it by Induction; for if I ſhall prove that His Majeſty without Parliament cannot tax His People for ſetting forth of Land-Forces for the defence, for making and maintaining of Forts and Caſtles for defence, for Victuals for a defenſive Army, for maintenance of Priſoners taken in a defenſive War, nor Pledges and Hoſtages given by Forreign States for the keeping of Peace; if it be ſo in all theſe Particulars of a defenſive War, I ſhall then offer it to your Lordſhips, whether it can be done at all.

Before I proceed to theſe Particulars, I ſhall obſerve thus much, my Lords, in general, That if thoſe that hold by Ancient Demeſne, and Burgage, which are but baſe Tenures, cannot be taxed, niſi ſur grand Cauſe, and that have many Priviledges in point of Juriſdiction, eaſe and profit in conſideration thereof, as they have much leſs, then can the Tenants by Knights-Service and Soccage that are free Tenants,and that have no Priviledges in ſupport of that Charge, be taxed.

And as they are not taxable ſur grand Cauſe in the general, ſo neither in particular, for this of the defence, as is proved by that of Eſcuage; for if His Majeſty, without conſent in Parliament, cannot tax His own Tenant, nor proportion the Fine according to His Pleaſure, when the Tenant holds the Land ad exercitum, for the defence of the Kingdom, much leſs can He do it where there's no Tenure for that purpoſe.

That Eſcuage cannot be ſet without Parliament, is firſt the Statute of Rumny Mede 17. Johannis in expreſs words; Nullum ſcutagium vel auxilium ponam in Regno noſtro niſi per Commune Concilium Regni noſtri; which though it be not Printed, yet it is of Record, and Inrolled in the Red Book of the Chequer, and cited in Matthew Paris Pag. 343. And that as well before the confirmation of it, 9 H. 3. as ſince, it hath been by the Judges reported to be a Statute, and in force, appears by the Book of 5 H. 3. Mordaum 53. where it is pleaded and called by the name of M. Charta, and allowed; and M. 19 E. 1. Finiente 20. incipiente B. R. Rot. 56. in the Caſe of Rulfe de Tony it's pleaded by the name of M. Chart. Johannis Regis de Rumny mede, and allowed.

In theBook of Knights-Fees of E. 1. time,there's aWrit cited,which went to the Sheriff of Hereford, thus; Datum eſt nobis intelligi, quod plures ſunt qui tenent per ſervitia Militaria de nobis qui contradic' ſolvere ſcutagia de Feodis ſuis, & quia ſcutagia nobis ſunt conceſſa per Commune Concilium Regni noſtri: Therefore he is commanded to levy them, Co'ia M. 5 E. 2. Ro. 4. Dorſ. Many Proceſſes iſſued for the levying of Eſcuage in E. 1. time, ſeperſeded and quite releaſed the reaſon entred in the Roll; Quia dictum ſervitium non fuit communiter factum; that is, as I conceive, becauſe it was not done per Commune Concilium Regni.

The Books are expreſs, 13 H. 4. 5. Banke N. B. 83. E. B. Inſtit. ſec. 97. My Lords, that thoſe that hold in Soccage or Fee-Farme, or not by ſo many Knights-Fees as they were diſtrained for, were always diſcharged, as appears by infinite Preſidents, I ſhall make no uſe of it as the manner of entring theſe diſcharges upon the Rolls; 'tis obſervable that he is diſtrained, ac ſi teneret per ſervitium militare, whereas he holds the Land in Soccage, pro quibus ſervitium aliquod Regi exercitibus ſuis facere non debet, and in ſome Rolls that ratione alicujus Authoritatis, he ought not to be diſtrained: Therefore, quia Dominus Rex non vult illum in hac parte injurari, prout juſtum eſt, the diſtreſſes are releaſed amongſt divers Preſidents; for this I ſhall cite but one or two, Br. Tr. 34 E. 1. Ro. 20. the Abbot of Abbington, and John Arden the Iter Roll of Suſſex, 7 E. 1. Rot. 107. of Gilbert Gifford. My Lords, if the King might have raiſed Money, and Seſſed Men for finding Souldiers for their Armies, this manner of Entry, as I humbly conceive, would never have been ſuffered.

An. 1637.

I am now come to the firſt Particular that I have inſtanced, that is the charging of the Subject for finding of Souldiers to go out of their Counties for the defence of the Realm. My Lords, in that I ſhall in the firſt place admit theſe three things.

Firſt, that every Man after the Statute of Wincheſter, ſecundum ſtatum & facultates, was to find all manner of Arms, as well for the defence of the Realm againſt Forreigners, as for the Peace; and that I have before proved by that of 3 R. 2. N 36. and after by the Statute of 5 H. 4.

That upon ſudden coming of ſtrange Enemies, theſe are compelled to travel out of their own Counties, is the Statute of 1 E. 3. Cap. 5. and ſo for the appeaſing of any notable Rebellion, when the King, for the doing thereof, was in Perſon, as appears by the Statute of 11 H. 1. Cap. 1. and Cap. 18.

Thirdly, I ſhall admit, that ſo long as they remain at home, and go not out of their Counties, that they are to have no Wages, and that the Maritime Shires for Borders upon Scotland and Wales, were not to be at the Kings Charge, ſo long as they remained at home in their own Counties for the preſervation of them; but that they were in that caſe themſelves to bear the Charge againſt Forreign Invaſions, as of making of Hue and Cry, aſſiſting the Sheriff when he took the poſſe Comitatus, and all other things concerning the keeping of the Peace.

But that the Subject is taxable either for Wages or Victuals, or otherwiſe for ſending of Souldiers out of their Counties, though for the defence of the Kingdom, or that any are compelled to do it at their own Charge, I ſhall humbly deny.

The Statute of 1 E. 3. ſays, That in this caſe it ſhall be done, as uſually hath been done in times paſt, for the defence of the Realm. My Lords, I will not deny, but that before E. 3d's time Commiſſions have iſſued out of the Chancery for that purpoſe; againſt which matters of Fact, not only to ballance them, but to weigh them down, it's as clear, that whole Armies, ſome of them of 30000 at the leaſt, over and above thoſe that were ſummoned by their Tenures, have been maintained at the Kings Charge, from the time they have departed out of their Counties, during the whole time of their Service, and that not only with Promiſes of payment, but that were paid, Ex Theſauro Regis, out of the Chequer; and many times upon fail of payment for Victuals, Wages, and other things, upon Suit for them in the Chequer, full payment hath been made, of which ſort in moſt Kings Years there are many Caſes.

My Lords, this is the Anſwer which I give the Commiſſions to the County, That de facto the King was at the Charge uſually for defenſive War.

By the Statute of 19 H. 8. Cap. 1. thoſe that have Annuities of the King muſt attend Him when the King in Perſon goes for the defence of the Realm, or againſt Rebels: But there is a ſpecial Proviſo, that they ſhall have Wages of the King, from the time they ſet out, till they come to the King, allowing twenty Miles a day, and afterwards as long as they ſhall remain in the Service.

Privy Seals ſent to the Gentry to attend the King, &c.

Upon a Rebellion in the North, 28 H. 8. againſt whom the King intended to go in Perſon, Privy Seals were ſent to moſt of the Gentry of England to attend the King with the beſt Retinue they could make, and likewiſe to bring the Bills of their Expences, and payment promiſed, as appears by many of thoſe Privy-Seals remaining in the Pallace Treaſury.

And beſides the Indentures themſelves, whereof I have ſeen many: It appears by the Statute of 2, and 3 E. 6. Cap. 2. that the retainer of Souldiers at the Kings Charge was as well for defenſive as offenſive War. And by Stat. 3 H. 8. c. 5.

My Lords, in the next place I ſhall endeavour the proof hereof by clear Authority, the Stat. of 25 E. 3. Cap. 8. is, That none ſhall be compelled to find but ſuch as hold by ſuch Service, if it be not by Grant in Parliament: That this was not Introductivum Novæ Legis, appears by the Petition whereupon the Statute was made, that it was encounter le droit del' Realm.

That the Common Law was ſo before the Statute, and likewiſe in caſe of a defenſive War, appears by the Authorities following.

P. 26 E. 1. Rot. 35. Dor. The Scots entring the Borders, a Commiſſion iſſued Reignaldo de Gray to preſs Souldiers in Lancaſhire and Cheſhire; he certifies by his Letter Inrolled there, que ſans deniers preſtes, he could not procure them to march out of thoſe Parts; and therefore order taken in the Chequer to ſend Money: That the Scots had now invaded the Kingdom, appears by Bra. Irret. M. 26 E. 1. in Sacc', where Commiſſions are Inrolled for many Thouſands to be levyed for this War at the Kings Wages, Bra. Tr. 32 E. 1. Tr. 31 E. 1. Rot. 18. Ca'ia de Wardens of the Marches de Cumberland and Weſtmorland writ to the Barons of the Chequer; That whereas the Scots lay near the Marches with a great Army, and that the People of the County would not march out of their Counties without Wages and Victuals, that they would provide for both.

Secunda Pars Pat. 10 E. 2. M. 26. and 9 E. 2. in Parliament, a Grant to find one Souldier for 60 days, at the Charge of the Town, againſt an Invaſion of the Scots; now the King grants quod hujuſmodi conceſſio non cedat in prejudicium nec trahatur in conſequentiem in futuro.

At the time when this Aide was granted, the Scots had entred the Realm, and waſted the Biſhoprick of Durham, as appears M. 14 E 2. B. R. Rot. 60.

Rot. Scoc. 12, & 13 E. 2. M. 7. & 13. The ſame indempnity upon the like occaſion of defence, when they fonnd the Souldiers ad Rogatum Regis, and the King commanded the Chancellor to declare as much.

Cla. 13 E. 3. M. 38. Dorſ. pars prima. The Abbot of Ramſey diſcharged, pro Cuſtodia Maritina, in the County of Norf. becauſe he remained in his own Country of Huntington, cum Equis & Armis, to the defence thereof with this; that therefore it was not rationi conſonum to charge him further. The ſame it is Rot. Fraunc. 21 E. 3. in prima parte 1. Oxon', becauſe they were prompti & parati at home to defend the County. Rot. Sco.

But the practiſe, as it ſhould ſeem, not agreeing with the Right in the Parliament, 20 E. 3. N. 12. The Commons complain, that Commiſſions had iſſued out of the Chancery to charge the People

An. 1637. in this particular, and otherwiſe without conſent in Parliament, and pray, that they may diſobey ſuch Commiſſions: The Anſwer is, That the Commons had heretofore promiſed to aſſiſt the King with their Bodies and Goods, in the War with France, and likewiſe for the defence of the Realm; and that the great Lords conſidering the neceſſity, as well for defence, as the Kings Wars, agree thereto, and yet promiſeth, that this which is done en cel neceſſity ne ſoit treyt en conſequens n'enſample. My Lords, this is a full declaration of the Right, even when for the defence; and yet ſome practiſe to the contrary, before the making of the Stat. of 25 E. 3. procured the Complaints in this particular in the Parliament, 21 E. 3. N. and 22 E. 3. N. Pat. 8 H. 3. M. 4. Falcaſius de Brent. Inimicus publicus & excommunicatus, that impriſoned the Juſtices Itinerants in Bedford-Caſtle, and held the Caſtle againſt the King, the King, propter graves & manifeſtos exceſſus quibus Regnum multipliciter perturbavit, beſieged the Caſtle; and whereas the Clergy, de mera gra', had granted the King an Aid for the doing thereof, Rex nolens gratiam ſit nobis exhibitam ad debitam retorqueri, declared as much by the Letters Patents.

My Lords, it is here declared, that the King cannot, de debito, or de jure, take any Aid againſt the Subjects wills for beſieging a Caſtle held againſt the King by a publick Enemy.

Rot. inquiſitionem 3 E. 1. Ro. 4. Kent' coram auditoribus querelarum poſt Bellum Eveſham & Pacem proclamatam: The Caſtle of Tunbridge being held againſt the King, the Hundred at Feverſham was Seſſed at 15 l. pro Inſultatione of the Caſtle; the Jury preſent this as a grievance, which the Juſtices would never have received, nor ſuffered to be entred into the Roll, if this Seſs might have lawfully been made. My Lords, this Caſtle and Hundred they were in the ſame County; and being before the Stat. of Wincheſter, they are not compellable to beſiege the Caſtle; and if they were compellable to go in Perſon, and with Arms, yet no Seſs could be laid for the doing thereof.

My Lords, I ſhall only offer to your Lordſhips conſideration the Scotch Roll of 20 E, 3. M. 6. the Wardens of the Marches of Scotland were to appoint exploratores & vigiles, which were to eſpy out, and to give notice of the Enemies Intendments, by the Commiſſions in H. 4. H. 5. &. H. 6. time, they were ad explorandum pro defenſione Regni & partium ſumptibus Incolarum; but how? only de aſſenſu & voluntate ſua prout fieri conſuevit.

My Lords, I am now come to that of Victuals, the Stat. of 14 E. 3. Cap. 9. is, That for the Wars the proviſion for them ſhall be done by Merchants without Commiſſion, or other Power from the King, or any other Power, that the People may not be compelled to ſell againſt their wills: That this was as well for defenſive as offenſive Wars, and that this was not Introductivum novæ Legis; but ſo at Common Law is, by your favour, clear.

Pat. 29 E. 1. M. 16. & 19. ad reprimendum malitiam Scotorum; and to repel them, Commiſſions to moſt Counties to provide Victuals; and becauſe they refuſe, therefore the King there offers them ſecurity.

Bra. Trin. 8 E. 2. Ro. 99. Victuals brought mixtum forum patriæ pro munitione Marchiæ Scotiæ, and their payment upon Suit adjudged.

Sometimes at Newcaſtle, ſometimes at Carliſle, at Barwick, as the Wars required, were the Store-houſes where the Victuals were laid, and Clerks of the Store to iſſue them: That the King not only paid for the Victuals, but likewiſe for the Houſe where they were laid in, appears Bra. Tr. 2 E. 3. about the end of the Roll, Dorſo. The Burgeſſes of Newcaſtle complain in Parliament, that their Houſes had been taken up long time for the keeping of thoſe Victuals; this was tranſmitted to the Chequer by Writ, which ſays, Volumis eis pro domibus ſuis prædictis ſic occupatis ſatisfacere prout decet, & prout juſtum fuerit, & prout temporibus Progenitorum noſtrorum fieri conſuevit.

My Lords, in the next place.

3. For the defence, when thoſe that ſerved with Horſe, ad vadimonia Regis, they loſt their Horſes in the Service, the owners did not bear the loſs, but they were always paid for it by the King; and therefore when they firſt entred into the Service, the Marſhal, or elſe the Warden of the Marches, who had the command of them, did ſet down in a Roll the Horſe of each Man, and their marks, and price of each Horſe, to the intent the owner, by this Certificate, might be aſſured of the full value to be paid him in caſe the Horſe was loſt. This appears Clo. 34 E. 1. M. 16. where the Cuſtodes Marchiæ Scotiæ, aſſigned pro defenſione Marchiæ, were to do it.

Bra. Irrot. M. 26 E. 1. Rot. 105, 106. The Scots having entred the Realm, divers homicidia, incendia, & alia facinora perpetrantes, there the Horſes, ad vadimonia, for defence, were to be appriſed.

Secunda pars Pat. 10 E. 2. M. 7. the ſame, and the Scottiſh Roll of 21 E. 3. M. 7. the ſame prout Moris eſt: That upon Suit the Subject hath recovered accordingly of the King, are many Caſes; I'le inſtance but in two or three, M. 24. of E. 1. Ro. 16. Dor. Ro. Heigham, recovered 20 Marks in the Chequer, pro Equo perdito in conflictum Dover, inter homines Regis per hominum illar', & Inimicos Franciæ; at which time the French had aſſaulted Dover, and burnt the Priory, and a great part of the Town. Bra. Hill. 17 E. 2. pro reſtaur' trium Equor' perditor', at Carliſle, 9 E. 2.

Com' p. 9 E. 2. Richard Walgrave recovered for Horſes loſt at Carliſle.

4. For Caſtles, the Ancient Forts and Bulwarks for defence, the Stat. 14 E. 3. Cap. 19. ſays, That Merchants, without any Commiſſion or Power from the King, ſhall victual them ſo, that the People may not be compelled to ſell againſt their will. That Stat. in this Particular is not Introducte Novæ Legis, is cleared by the Caſe Tr. 16 E. 1. Ro. 3. Wiltes in a little Roll, and in a great Roll of the ſame Year Ro. 19. when in Treſpas, by John Eveſhorne againſt John Flavel, quia blada & garbas ſuas cepit: The Defendant ſays, he was Conſtable of the Kings Caſtle of the deviſes, and that he had in præceptis præd' Regno Regis quod munire faceret, the Caſtle de mortuo Stauro ut de bladijs, and other things; and that by vertue of this Writ he took an Enqueſt to know where he might have beſt laid theſe Victuals, ad minus nocumentum patriæ, and the Jury found that the Defendant might take it ad minus nocumentum patriæ of the Plaintiff, and that he came to the Plaintiffs houſe, and offered to buy pro denariis & ad juſtum Regis; and that becauſe the Plaintiff refuſed to ſell, he departed from his houſe: Iſſue joyned, and found againſt the Defendant, and 100 Marks damages given the Plaintiff, adjudged.

There were always anciently Viſores operationum appointed, and they upon Oath certified, that they ſaw the Kings Money expended, which was demanded in the Chequer; and for Victuals, as they were bought with the Kings Money, ſo when they grew ſtale, that the danger was paſſed, they were ſold again to the Kings uſe.

My Lords, that even in times of Wars, when the Frontier Towns and Caſtles were beſieged. and the Borders invaded, that even the King did bear the Charges, appears by the allowance in the Chequer.

R.* and C. B. that the licenſe was not good, and 13, & 297. the ſame cauſe cited accordingly to have been the opinion of all the Judges.

5. My Lords, For a Priſoner taken in defenſive Wars, and likewiſe for Pledges and Hoſtages for the ſecuring of peace, that the charge of the maintenance of theſe, and the carrying them to the ſeveral places of their abode, have been always born by the Kings of the Realm, the allowances in the Chequer are ſo frequent as that I intend to cite none of them, ſave that for the Priſoners taken in conflict at Dover before ſpoken, of which is Co'ia Hill. 4. E. 2. Ro. 22. Dor. neither do I find it at any time ſtood upon ſave only 8. E. 2. amongſt the Bra. Trin. 8. E. 2. R. 88. Dor. but the reaſon is becauſe that after the death of E. 1. in the commiſſion of granting the Conſtable Ships of the Caſtle, no mention was made of the Priſoners, and yet even in that caſe upon a Monſtravit Regi, a Writ of Privy Seal is awarded for allowance, prout Juſtum.

My Lords, If in all theſe particulars of Souldiers, Victuals, Caſtles and Forts, Horſes, Priſoners, and Pledges, in caſe of defenſive Wars, the main ſupports of them, the Kings could not tax their Subjects, but have born the charge thereof themſelves, I ſhall thence offer it to your Lordſhips to be ſo for the defence in general.

My Lords, The allowance in the Chequer in all the particulars before-mentioned are frequent in the caſe of Mines in the Co'ia. The profits of Silver-mines that they upon an account in the Chequer were always anſwered to the King, was one of the principal Arguments for the Kings right unto them, and there fol. 320. It's held that in all things that concern the Revenue of the Crown, becauſe they are there debated, that the Records of the Exchequer ſhew not only the courſe of the Court, but what the Law is throughout the Kingdom.

My Lords, That in Caſes of War and Embaſſies, that the Chequer made no allowance what great Conſideration appears by the Stat. of 5. R. 2. Cap. 10. that they were not allowed by the Court till the Partie brought the Great Seal, or the Privy Seal for it.

And if a Writ of allowance come to the Chequer before the Court had examined the account, yet they never made allowance till the Court had examined it.

My Lords, The next proof that I ſhall humbly offer unto your Lordſhips, is in that of borrowing of money by the King for the defence for the Realm, which, as they have uſually done it, ſo it is as clear that not only upon Petitions, at their own pleaſures, and upon grace, but likewiſe upon ſuit they have been adjudged ſo to do in the ordinary Courts of Juſtice.

Bra. M. 3. Eliz. 3. Circa princ'. Ro. 664 My Lords, in this particular I ſhall cite but this one Caſe Com. p. 29. E. 1. Ro. 18. the King, pro urgentiſſimis Regni negotiis & defenſione totius Regni, had ſeized divers ſums of mony in all the Abbies, and Cathedrals, and other Religious Houſes within the Realm, & quo citius commode poterit promiſed payment in the Parliament 29. E. 1. at Lincoln the King is petitioned for repayment of theſe monys, who promiſeth payment, Ita quod Regis Conſcientia ſuper hoc exoneratur, and there and Ro. 19. divers ſums adjudged to be paid, and p. 9. E. 2. Ro. 65.

My Lords, I ſhall thus humbly offer this to your Lordſhips, that if the King had conceived, that when himſelf wanted money for the defence that he might have charged his Subjects, he would never have made this anſwer of repayment ad exonerandum Conſcientiam; tiam; for then in Equity and in Conſcience the Parliament ſhould have taken care for the ſatisfaction of theſe debts, or ſhould at leaſt wiſe have diſtributed part of this Charge upon all his Subjects, neither ſhould the Parties have had full ſatisfaction for all their debt, but have born part themſelves.

An. 1637.

By the Statute of 35. H. 8. cap. 12. the King for the defence of the Realm had divers great loans made to him; now likewiſe there being cauſe of new defence againſt France and Scotland in aid of the King, they releaſe theſe aſſurances given by the King, and likewiſe releaſe to the King all Suits and Petitions concerning thoſe monys. My Lords, it will need no application; theſe were general Loans, and for the defence.

My Lords, I am now come to the other Authorities for proof thereof which is by the Acts of Parliament.

My Lords, before I come to the Acts of Parliament themſelves, I ſhall humbly offer to your Lordſhips the Summons —— and preparatives to them.

Firſt, The Ardua Regni Negotia, for which they are called, are principally defenſionem concernentia; that theſe are not the way and manner of the defence and their evidence therein, but the ſupplies and aides for this defence I have preſented cleer Proofs, to your Lordſhips before. That theſe aids cannot be raiſed without their conſents is ſtrongly inferred in this, that the Knights of the Shire are to have plenam & ſufficientem authoritatem pro ſe & communitate Comitatus prædicti ad faciendum & conſentiendum to the things in negotiis antedictis: if this might be done without the conſents of the Commons, this in the Writ would be needleſs; but that this cannot be done without their conſents is cleared by the words following in the Negative, Ita quod pro defectu poteſtatis hujuſmodi dicta negotia infecta non remaneant quoviſmodo. This, my Lords, is the conſtant form both of the Modern and all the Ancient Writs, and ſhews cleerly that the Commons without their conſent in Parliament are not chargeable to a defenſive War.

In the Acts of Parliament I ſhall begin with that of William the Conqueror the fourth of his Reign, which beſides that it is cited in the Preface to the eighth Report and Inſtit. fol. 75. b. and by Ingulph, fol. 519. and Mr. Selden in his Eadmerus p. 171. it's likewiſe of Record and enrolled in the Red book in the Chequer.

The words are thus.

Volumus & firmiter præcipimus & concedimus, quod omnes liberi homines totius Monarchiæ Regni noſtri habeant & teneant terras ſuas & poſſeſſiones ſuas, bene & in pace libere ab omni exactione injuſta & ab omni tallagio, ita quod nihil ab iis exigatur vel capiatur niſi ſervitium ſuum liberum, quod de jure nobis facere debent & facere tenentur, & conceſſum jure hæreditario in perpetuum per commune Conſilium totius Regni noſtri prædict.

My Lords, The words by reaſon of the disjunctive, & ab omni Tallagio, are plain, that the King ſhall not exact or take away any thing of any Free-man but what his tenure binds him unto, as in words, by reaſon of the generality of them, it extends to caſes to the defence of the Realm: that it doth ſo in intent, I ſhall endeavour thus to preſent it to your Lordſhips.

The Military Services before-mentioned for the defence of the Realm, they are by Bracton attributed to the Conquerors Inſtitution; for in his ſecond Book fol. 36. ſpeaking of them, he ſaith thus, Secundum quod in conqueſtu fuit ad inventum, Plowden in the Argument of Thom.us Treſham's Caſe.

Means the Conqueror had to do it by reaſon of the many Attaindors of thoſe that took part with Harold, and after his death with Edgar Ethling. That he did it in a great part appears by Math. Paris, fol. 8. That he put all the Clergy, which before held in Frankalmoigne ſub ſervitute militare, to do ſervice tempore hoſtilitatis, and by the County Palatine of Durham and Cheſter in thoſe places of danger. In the Book of Knights Fees, in H. 2. time it appears by the Certificate, that they held ſometimes de veteri Feoffeamento, and ſometimes de novo. And by ſome of them it appears, that the Tenures de Novo Feoffeomento were before King Stephens time, and therefore it's probable that the vetera might be thoſe created by the Conqueror. The proviſion for Soldiers pay by Tenures was likewiſe of his inſtitution, as appears by that before cited out of the Black Book, lib. 1. cap. 27. That in primitivo Regni ſtatu poſt Conqueſtum ad ſtipendia & donativa Militum, out of Caſtles and other Lands, in quibus agricultura non exercebatur pecunia numerata ſucreſcebat.

The Policy and Proviſion of the Conqueror for the defence being by Tenures, when in this Act of Parliament he ſaies, quod nihil ab eis exigatur vel capiatur, niſi ſervitium ſuum, quod de jure nobis facere tenentur, as I humbly conceive, ſhews plainly that the Subject was not otherwiſe to be charged for the defence, nor further than by their Tenures.

This, my Lords, further appears by other parts of the Parliament, where ſpeaking of any thing of Charges that is to be done according to their Tenures, as that all bene ſe teneant in Equis & Armis ad ſervitium ſuum integrum faciendum. But in the next place ſpeaking of the defence, it ſaith that all within the Realm ſint Fratres Conjurati pro viribus & facultatibus, to defend the Kingdom and the Peace, & ad judicium rectum, & juſtitium faciendum; the coupling of the Defence with that of the Peace, and doing Juſtice, ſhews the perſonal care that all by their Oath of Alleageance ought to bear to the Common Peace and Good of the Realm.

The next Statute which I ſhall preſent to your Lordſhips, is that of Runimead 17 Johannis, the words are theſe, Nullum ſcutagium vel auxilium ponam in Regno noſtro, niſi per Commune Conſilium Regni noſtri, niſi ad Corpus noſtrum redimendum, and to Knight his eldeſt Son, and to marry his eldeſt Daughter: as in words this extends to the defence, becauſe all ſupplies for that purpoſe from the ſubject, they are only in auxilium or in ſubventionem expenſarum of the King, who, as before is proved, is principally bound thereto. So may the intent likewiſe further be gathered, firſt from this, that the word Auxilium is joyned with that of Scutage, which is for the defence: and likewiſe from this, that particular ſatisfaction is made by other parts of that Statute to thoſe that had been diſſeiſed by R. 1. and King John, which were things done only for the increaſe of their Revenue without ſhew of the common defence, that both before 9 H. 3. and afterwards 20 E. 1. this was a Statute

An. 1637. a Statute and ſo accounted, I have before proved, and in the Book of 5 H. 3. it is called by the name of Magna Charta, Sans addition. So 37 H. 3. in that ſolemn Confirmation obſerved by Math. Paris, pag. 1155. this of Runimead is confirmed by the name of Magna Charta; and 5 of H. 3. pag. 1220. which I note only to this purpoſe, that of ſpeaking of Magna Charta this of Runimead is intended as well as that of 9 H. 3. as part thereof, and bodied both together; yet that neither of them were obſerved, either in King John's time, and of H. 3 time our Hiſtories are full of it, and by the Popes Bulls of 12, & 13 H. 3. the Pope abſolving the King from his Oath in their Confirmation, doth it, becauſe as the words of the Bull are Juramentum peccati vinculum eſſe non debet; neither till after 29 E. 1. as I ſhall hereafter prove, were they at all obſerved in things concerning the Kings Prerogative.

The next that I ſhall cite, are the Statutes of 25 E. 1. and the Statute de Talliagio non concedendo.

That of 25 E. 1. cap. 5, & 6. the grevance is for Aides and Prizes taken through the Realm for the Wars, the King grants that ſuch Aides, Tasks and Prizes taken through the Realm for the Wars ſhall not be brought into any Cuſtom for any thing before done, be it by Roll or any other Preſident that may be found; and further grants, that for no buſineſs from henceforth that he will take ſuch manner of Aides, Tasks and Prizes but by the common conſent of the Realm, and for the common Profit, ſaving the antient Aides and Prizes due and accuſtomed. My Lords, although by the Coplative it is clear enough, that there muſt be common conſent, and common profit concurring; and although the ſaving of the antient Prizes and Aides accuſtomed might well enough have been ſatisfied in the Aid excepted in Runimead, and the prizing of Wines and Purveiance.

Yet to out theſe and all other ſcruples the Statute de Tallagio made afterwards for that purpoſe is general, That no Tallage or Aid ſhall be taken by the King, nor that any of his Officers ſhall take any Corn, Leather, Cattel, or any other Goods without the Conſent of the Party.

My Lords, To bring theſe Statutes to the thing in queſtion, that theſe things cannot be done, though for the defence, the times of the making of them, and the circumſtances concurring thereto, I ſhall preſent to your Lordſhips.

That of 25 E. 1. by the date appears was the 10*th* of October 25 E. 1. My Lords, the King the 12*th* of Auguſt before being at Odimer, ready to go over to Flanders, the Parliament being then ſummoned by His Letters Patents, Rott. pat. 25 E. 1. m. 7. taking notice of the Conſtables and Marſhals departure from the Court in diſpleaſure, and of the rumors of the People, that the King refuſed to Seal Articles ſent him for the common profit, for redreſs of divers grievances done to the People: for the grievances, he ſaith, that without thoſe things he could not have defended the Realm, and yet ſaith that he is ſorry for it, and prayeth that this may be his excuſe, as he that hath done thoſe things, neither to buy Lands nor Tenements, nor Caſtles, nor Towns, but to defend himſelf and the whole Realm, and that if he returned again he would have all know that he had an intent to amend all thoſe things, to the Honour of God, and the content of His People, and that he hath done much already, that if he dies in this Service, his Heir ſhall make amends.

Hereby it appears, that the grievances which procured this Statute, were for the Defence of the Realm; therefore from hence it follows, that the Aids and Taxes there mentioned were for the Defence; ſo likewiſe that the exception of the ancient Aids extends not to thoſe of the Defence, that being the thing wholly complained of. This Declaration of the King was the 12*th* of Auguſt; the September after, the King being at Winchelſey, theſe Articles are ſent to him, to which he deferred for the preſent to give His aſſent unto, becauſe His Council was not there; and ſo Sails over into Flanders. This Statute of 25 E. 1. is paſt the King beyond the Sea: The Teſte Edwardo filio noſtro at this Return, as appears by Walſingham p. 42. The King is deſired to confirm theſe Articles, which in Walſingham p. 40. are the ſame word for word, as in the Statute de Tall. which the King then deferred.

27 E. 1. they deſire it again, which the King doth with a Salvo Jure Coronæ noſtræ in fine adjecta quam cum audiſſent Comites cum diſplacencia ad propria diſſeſſerunt, ſaith the Author, Sed revocatis ipſis ad quindenam Paſchæ ad votum eorum abſolute omnia ſunt conceſſa.

That the Statute de Tallagio, was after that of 25 E. 1. is plain in this, by the Kings going over to Flanders without aſſenting to any Articles. In September, and the 10*th* of October following, as appears by that Statute 25 E. 1. it ſelf, it was made; and likewiſe by the Statute de Tallagio it ſelf, in the Kings releaſing all Rancor to the Earl Marſhal and Conſtable, who had moſt offended him, and that firſt preſented theſe Articles to the King.

My Lords, I ſhall add this only, as I conceive it, it will not be proved that this King, either before or after the making of this Statute, or any of His Succeſſors ſince, ever claimed this abſolute Power over the Subjects, as to lay Aids and Tallages upon them for the ſupportation of their own private Eſtate, abſtracted from the common defence or good. This King at this time, we ſee by His own Declaration, was far from it; this laſt Statute fully ſatisfied thoſe that deſired it; for as Walſingham ſaith, ad eorum votum abſolute omnia ſunt conceſſa. If therefore it extend not to that of Defence, I ſhall humbly offer it by what conſtruction of it our Anceſtors Judgments and Diſcretions will be freed from a great deal of cenſure that were ſo well contented with it.

My Lords, Magna Charta being confirmed at the ſame time when the Statute of 25 E. 1. was made; and both that and the Statute de Tall' being only Articles upon Magna Charta, they were all of them, as I conceive, intended in the ſubſequent, and ſo often confirmation of Magna Charta.

My Lords, the next is the Statute of 14 E. 3. Cap. 1. that the People ſhall not be compelled to make any Aid, or to ſuſtain any Charge but in Parliament. That this cannot be done for the Defence, will (as I conceive) be inforced from the words; for a great Subſidy having been granted, as well for the Wars on this ſide the Sea, that is for defence, as for the French Wars.

An. 1637.

It's declared, that this ſhall not be drawn into example, and that out of Parliament, they ſhall not be compelled to ſuſtain any Charge; and then it is further enacted, That that Subſidy, and all the Profit of Wardſhips, Eſcheats, and other Profits of the Realm, ſhall be ſpent for the defence and ſafe-guard of the Realm, and the Wars in Scotland and France and not other-where: So that the Statute (as I humbly conceive) all put together, bears this ſence, that the Subſidies granted in Parliament, and the Wardſhips, being a fruit of the Tenures created for the defence of the Realm, and other Profits ariſing to the King by way of Prerogative are to be ſpent for the defence of the Realm, and the Kings other Wars; but that no Aid or Charge for any of theſe can be laid upon the Commons without conſent in Parliament.

My Lords, that the practiſe of this King, I mean E. 3. was contrary to the Statutes, and that they were not kept, appears by the Parliament Roll 15 E. 3. N. 9. the next year after, where the Commons ſhew, that their goods were ſeized, and their Bodies impriſoned without any Suit commenced againſt them.

My Lords, the next which I ſhall cite are the Statutes of 25 E. 3. and 1 R. 3. againſt Loans and Benevolences, which I ſhall humbly offer to your Lordſhips on this ground.

Ad eaq; frequentius accident ad aptantur Leges.

As for my part, I have ſeen no general Loans or Benevolences, but they were for the Defence: So I conceive, if they were any otherwiſe, they are but few in reſpect of the others: The Common grievances therefore being by Loans and Benevolences of that nature. Theſe Statutes, I conceive, were made againſt them; for theſe not being within the words of any of the former Statutes; as therefore the Kings might with the more colour put them in practiſe, ſo, on the other ſide, being equally as dangerous to the Subject, becauſe of the diſpleaſure by denial procured the Statutes. That Loans for Defence were after 25 E. 3. counted unlawful, appears by Walſingham, P. 179. that 44 E. 3. The King ſiniſtro uſus Conſilio magnus Summas Pecuniæ of all ſorts, mutuo petijt aſſerens quod in defenſionem Eccleſiæ, & Regni illas expenderet, but that the People would not lend.

My Lords, the next which I ſhall cite is direct in words, which although it be not an Act of Parliament, yet the weight of the Authority, by the putting of it, will appear, it's the ſecond part of the Parliament Roll 2 R. 2. N. 3, 4, & 5. the Kingdom being beſet with the Enemies of France, Spain and Scotland, who all three by Land and Sea invaded the Realm. The Privy-Council not willing in a thing ſo much concerning the Realm to take the whole carriage of it upon themſelves, not deſiring ſo ſoon to call a Parliament, but a little before being diſſolved, they therefore reſolve to aſſemble a great Counſel of moſt of the Biſhops, Lords, and other great Men, and Sages of the Realm, who meeting, and finding the abſolute neceſſity of a preſent preparation for defence, and that the King wanted Money to do it; what their full and final reſolution in this caſe of extremity for the Defence was, I ſhall read the words of the Roll; they ſay, Pur Concluſion final q'ils ne poient ceſt miſchief remedier ſans charger les homines de Realm quel charge ne pait de fait ne grant ſans Parliament. And therefore the neceſſity being urgent, theſe great Men lend Money for the preſent, which adviſe preſently to call a Parliament, as well to provide for the re-payment of this Loan, as for a further Supply. It's true, my Lords, this King at this time was within age; and it's as likely that many of His Council had been likewiſe: E. 3. His Grandfather, His Privy Council, who well knew His Prerogative, and extended it as far, by reaſon of His great Wars, to the charging of His Subjects, as any before or ſince His time; and that not only the Privy-Council, but likewiſe, as the Record is, almoſt all the Prelates, as well Abbots as others, Dukes, Earls, Barons, Bannerets, and other Sages of the Realm, which, as I conceive, were the Judges, ſhould be ſo far from putting this in execution, as that they declare in the negative, upon full deliberation, that the Commons cannot be charged herein but in Parliament. Themſelves likewiſe thereby being to undergo a preſent Charge, by lending to ſupply that neceſſity. The Authority muſt needs be weighty, that upon ſecond thoughts afterwards the ſame was declared in full Parliament by the Lord Chancellor, and ſo afterwards entred upon the Roll without any qualification at all, adds further to the Authority.

Ultimo Februar' 3 Caroli, a Commiſſion iſſued to divers great Lords, the end, as appears by the words, was for aiding the Kings Allies beyond Sea, and for the defence and ſafety of the Kingdom and People. They were by the Commiſſion to raiſe Money by Impoſition or otherwiſe, which, without extream danger to the King, Kingdom, and People, can admit no long delay, wherein Form and Circumſtances are to be diſpenſed with, rather than the ſubſtance loſt. This, my Lords, was a Commiſſion to tax the Subject in time of neceſſity for Defence. The laſt Parliament this Commiſſion, as againſt the Law, was condemned by both Houſes, and cancelled in His Majeſties Preſence, and ſent ſo to be viewed by both Houſes.

Philip Commines, in his fifth Book Cap. 8. obſerving the ſame above all others, commends the policy of the Engliſh Laws and Government. And both he and Bodinus, de Republica lib. 6. Cap. 11. And Paſquerus, Advocate-General in the King of France his Chamber of Accounts, in his ſecond Book Cap. 6, & 7. all ſhew this likewiſe to have been the ancient Law of France; and how the Practiſe comes to be otherwiſe, there Paſquerus ſhews at large; and that the King ſometimes endeavouring the contrary, found ſo much difficulty, that they afterwards, eſpecially Charles the 5*th*, procured by the conſent of the three Eſtates theſe Aids for Defence to be granted for three or four years together; and that this conſent of the People at firſt was that which afterwards gave the occaſion to the King to take it without conſent. And therefore he concludes, that France being un Relme de conſequens, that they muſt not eaſily promiſe any thing, though but once, which they will not be willing to permit for ever.

My Lords, I have now done with the Proofs. In the next place ſhall endeavour an Anſwer to ſome few Objections that are obvious both from Reaſon and Authority.

1. For thoſe of Authority, 13 H. 4. 14, 16. Gaſcoignes opinion, That the King may Charge His People without Parliament, to a thing that is for the common Profit of the People; the thing he applies it to, is, that the King may grant Pontage and Murage.

My Lords, that the King may grant both theſe, and Tolls upon erection of a new Fair or Market, and Panage, I ſhall not deny.

The Anſwer I ſhall give to them is; firſt, That theſe Grants do charge venalia only, that is Goods carryed to thoſe places for Merchandize; but that any Tax may be laid Secundum ſtatum & facultates, either upon the Hundred or County, I ſhall humbly deny it.

It is true, my Lord, by the Conquerors Laws it appears, that Cities and walled Towns were for the defence of the Country; and therefore by thoſe Laws no Fair nor Market might be kept but in Civitate, and Burgis Muro Wallatis; and therefore in Doomeſday, in all ſuch its found, that there are ſo many Manſions murales, which by their Tenure, when need was, were bound ad murum reficiendum.

That no other Land that holds not by that Service is liable, appears by the Parliament Roll, 1 R. 2. Secunda pars N. 76. where all the Cities and Burroughs of England petition, that in this time of danger, they not being able with their Merchandizes to do it, that others that had Land within the Town might be made Contributaries, avant ceo heure out port nul charge.

The Anſwer is, that all, according to their Tenure, as they have anciently done, ſo ſhall they ſtill. And if this might be done, there would have been no need of the Statutes of 2 & 3 P. & M. Cap. 1. 23 El. Cap. 4. for giving power to tax Men Secundum ſtatum & facultates to repair Caſtles and Towns within 20 Miles of Scotland.

For the Tolls, and Pontages, and Panaiages, as there is a great deal of equity for thoſe that receive benefit by bringing their Goods to the Markets, and over the Bridges, ſhould contribute to the Charge that may maintain the Market-places, and the Bridges; ſo neither are theſe compulſary, but voluntary Charges; for as no Man pays but he that receives the benefit, ſo is none compellable thereto, but is let to his liberty.

Neither is there any colour in reſpect of the Town it ſelf, to whom the Murage and Panage is granted, why they ſhould not be charged, becauſe the Grant cannot be but at their own Suits; for if it be not at the Suits tot Commoditates, the Grant is void, and to be revoked, as appears Pat. 5. E. 3 ſecunda pars M. 20.

It may be further objected, That as the Town hath intruſted the way and manner of managing of the Defence wholly, and independently unto His Majeſty; ſo likewiſe, if Aids and Means, as the Cauſa ſine qua non, the other cannot be effected. And therefore His Majeſty ſhould not be dependent upon the Parliament for them.

My Lords, The meer relation between His Majeſty and the Parliament, that they are but one Body, hath been preſented to your Lordſhips, and that His Majeſty did exerciſe the Summum imperium; there Bodine lib. 1. Cap. ult. ſays, ejuſdemq; eſſe poteſtat' tributa nova imponere, cujus eſt Legem ferre; but that the Legis la- tive power is not in His Majeſty out of Parliament, will be granted.

2. The Subjects Intereſt being as meerly concerned in the Defence, as His Majeſties, there's no cauſe why they ſhould not be willing to proportion the Aid to the occaſion; ſo neither can the Law preſume otherwiſe, which hath ſo high an opinion of the judgment and integrity of this Court; that as it is in the Comen' 398. it's unlawful for any Man to conceive any diſhonourable thing of it.

My Lords, my laſt Anſwer hereto is, That by the Law the King hath as independent a Power to make a forreign War, as well as defenſive. It will, I conceive, be granted, that His Majeſty in this Caſe hath not power to tax the Subject; for then it would follow, that as well as to the conquering of the next adjacent Realm, ſo of all Europe, the Subject ſhould be at the Charge, and yet the Land conquered ſhould be only His Majeſties; and yet upon this ground, in reſpect of the equality of the Powers, it might be done as well there as here.

Neither, my Lords, as I humbly conceive, doth this only anſwer the Objection, but returns upon the other ſide for His Majeſties Highneſs Power to make offenſive War, which for the moſt part cauſeth a defenſive; by this means that ſhould be in His Majeſties Power to cauſe a defenſive War, and to tax the Subject for the maintenance of it.

My Lords, The laſt Objection whereto I ſhall endeavour an Anſwer, ſtands thus; The Parliament is a great Body, and moves ſlowly, and that the cauſe may be ſuch, that the Kingdom may be loſt before the Parliamentary Supplies come.

My Lords, how the means of the effecting ſo ſudden, and ſo great a ſurprize can be ſo ſecretly carried, I ſhall not examine it in reaſon, but ſhall hereto humbly offer theſe Anſwers.

That the Services whereby the Law hath provided for the Defence both at Land and Sea, they have the ſame mention of time with the Parliamentary Supplies upon the Summons of the Tenants by Knights-Service ad exercitum; and of five Ports 40 days warning is to be given as for the Parliament.

And ſo is it probable from that of Mould. 13 E. 1. it was for others that held by Sea-Service.

And anciently the Summons, ad exercitum, to the Ports, and for the Parliament, went out much about the ſame time, that the Parliament might aſſeſs the Eſcuage; and that in caſe the Tenures, and other Revenues, were not able to maintain the War, that the Parliament might provide for further Supply, as appears 28 E. 1. M. 15. 31 E. and 34 E. 1. M. 15, 16. & oportet neminem legibus eſſe ſapientior'.

The Tunnage and Poundage, when granted for life, was, that the Kings might have always a Sum of Money ready upon ſuch ſudden occaſions.

In the Parliament, 4. R. 2. N. 42. the Commons deſired payment of E. 3*d*'s Debts, that they might be encouraged to lend the King in Aid of the Realm. If a ſudden cauſe of neceſſity ſhould fall out; the Anſwer is, that it ſhall be done ſolonq; le Petition.

My Lords, by this it appears, that this Objection was not then taken to be of weight; many of the Loans are in neceſſitatis Articulo.

The Authorities that further anſwer this Objection are great, and full in Point.

The firſt is that of the Parliament Roll of 2 R. 2. before cited; the buſineſs of Defence could not ſtay ſo long as for a Parliamentary Supply, yet agreed, that the Commons without Parliament could not be charged; and therefore the ſame Men that give the judgment preſently lend Money for that purpoſe.

In the Statute of 31 H. 8. for Proclamations, the cauſe of the making of the Statute is expreſſed in theſe words; Conſidering that ſudden cauſes and occaſions fortune many times, which do require ſpeedy remedies, and that by abiding a Parliament, in the mean time might happen great prejudice to enſue to the Realm: Therefore the Kings Proclamation is by that Act made equivolent to an Act of Parliament, but with a full exception of their Lands, Goods, and Chattels, which as it ſhews, that before, by the Common Law, the Kingdom could not, in Caſes of Exigency, that could not ſtay for a Parliament, take or ſeize their Goods; ſo were they careful ſtill to preſerve this Right.

My Lords, after this Statute of 31 H. 8. the Maxime of Juſtinian was true in H. 8. as of the Roman Emperors after the Lex Regia, whereby the People transferred their ſuffrage to the Emperor, quod principi placet Legis vim habet; ſo at that time was that other as true on the Subjects part here, as there in the digeſt, Lege 10 de regulis juris quod meum eſt non eſt univerſitatis, & quod noſtrum eſt ſine facto noſtro ad aliam transferri non poteſt.

The 7 Pertica of Spain, tit. 1. Pertica ſecunda, give ſomething more to the King; for He may take from the Subject pro neceſſitate Reipublicᵉ dato primus tali caſu Domino rei bona lambia ejuſdem, vel majoris precij bonorum virorum arbitrio; He may in this Caſe take, giving a Pawn to the Subject for the aſſurance of a future full ſatisfaction.

Livy in his 20 Book, Cap. 35. Bodine in his 6th Book, fo. 655. affirms, That when Hanibal had put Italy and Rome it ſelf, unto ſo great hazard; and that there was not Money left in the common Treaſury, that yet the Senate, without their conſent could not charge the People; but that unuſquiſq; of the Senate, mutuo debit aliquid in uſum publicum.

My Lords, the laſt Authority for the anſwering this Objection, and clearing of the whole buſineſs, is the Commiſſion for the Loan in the Weſt. 2 Car. 4. Pars Pat. the words are theſe, Great and Mighty Preparations, both by Sea and Land, did daily threaten the Kingdom, that the ſafety and very ſubſiſtance of the King and People, and the common Caſe of Chriſtendome, were in apparent danger of ſuffering irreparably, that the Kings Treaſure is exhauſt, and the Coffers empty; that the buſineſs of Supply cannot endure ſo long delay as the Calling of a Parliament; and inquiring into all means juſt in Caſes of ſuch unavoidable danger: A King is now reſolved to borrow of the Subject, to enable His Majeſty, for their ſafety, and promiſeth re-payment.

My Lords, the borrowing of Money only is the thing required, that is, for the Defence the King had no Money left, the Exigency ſuch, that it would not ſtay for a Parliament; this Commiſſion afterwards in the Parliament 3 Car. was queſtioned, upon debate adjudged by both the Houſes of Parliament to be void in Law, by the Petition of Right preſented ſo to the King, His Majeſty denies it not. My Lords, from this Objection of ſudden danger I come to the next, which is the third thing before offered to your Lordſhips, which is an admittance that the damage ſometimes may be ſuch, that the Subjects Goods without their conſent may be taken from them; for as propriety being both introduced and maintained by humane Laws, all things, by the Law of Nature, being common; there are therefore ſometimes like the Philiſtines being upon Sampſon, wherein theſe cords, they are too weak to hold us, neceſſitas enim, as Cicero ſays, Magnum humane in becillitatis patrocinium omnem legem frangit, at ſuch times as propriety ceaſeth, and all things are again reſolved into the common Principals of Nature.

Theſe times, as ſometimes they are only in inſtanti, and concern but ſome few, as in Caſes of killing one another in a Mans own defence, pulling down Houſes in a common Fire, making of Forts upon other Mens Lands, or with their Goods, upon ſudden Aſſaults; ſo ſometimes they are longer in continuance, and larger in extent, and concern the whole Kingdom, as it is in times of War, quando agitur pro aris & forcis flagrante bello.

And as on the Particulars before-mentioned, which are but for a ſhort time, and that concern ſome few only, the Law hath no power for that time, nor on any times any property; ſo in the latter it loſeth this power for a longer time, and over all.

A Diſſent upon Diſſeiſin in time of War takes not away the Entry of the Diſſeiſee, Litt' Sei' 412. no plenary after the ſix Months barrs not the Patron of his Quare Impedit, upon a Preſentation in time of War, 43 E. 3. Q. Imp. 135. W. 31.

And in a Writ of Right, where the Seiſin makes the Title, the taking of Eſplees muſt be alleadged to be done tempore Pacis, the Law allowing no Eſtate in ſuch times, but calls it an occupation in time of War, Litt. Sei' fo. 12.

And as inter arma leges ſilent, ſo that of Brac' H. 4. fo. 240. that tempus guerr' eſt tempus injuriæ is likewiſe true; for after the War is ended, the Law, as not having any conizance of things then done, gives no remedy for wrongs in that time ſuſtained, as the Caſe is adjudged in the Roll of Rent, 7 E. 1. inter plæcita de querelis Willielmum Parleton queretur de Petro Rardinum quod ipſe die Mercurie ante factum St. Tho. 46 H. 3. came to the Town of Cleve, and took of the Plaintiffs Goods three Oxen, four Cows, and three Heifers, and yet detains them; the Defendant alleadgeth the Pardon of H. 3. of omnes tranſgreſs' factas ratione turbationis tunc in Regno exiſtentis, and that it was tempus guerr' when the Goods were taken; the Plaintiff replies, That the King can pardon only offences done to himſelf, & non tranſgreſſionis aliis illatas, the Plaintiff rejoyns that tempus illud was tempus guerr', & non tempus Pacis, and upon this the Iſſue is joyned. The Jury find, that when the Defendant took the Goods, fuit tempus Belli, & non tempus Pacis; and therefore it was adjudged for the Defendant.

Tempus

An. 1637.

Tempus Belli, when property ſeizeth, is not upon every inteſtine or defenſive War; but only at ſuch times when the courſe of Juſtice is ſtopt, and Courts of Juſtice ſhut up; and that this is that Tempus Belli is the Inſtitutes Sec. 412. p. 39. E. 3. B. R. Ro. 49. the Attainder of Treaſon of Thomas Earl of Lancaſter reverſed the Error aſſigned, quia tempore Pacis maxime cum per totum tempus predictum Cancellaria & alia placit' Cur' Domini Regis aptæ fuerunt, & in quibus Lex cuicunq; fiebat prout fieri conſuevit; nec predictus Dominus Rex in tempore illorum cum Rex illis explicatis equitavit.

That there were greater Armies a foot on both ſides in this buſineſs, when the Earl was taken at Borowbrigge, our Hiſtories are full; but yet it was not that Tempus guerræ intended by the Law, becauſe the Courts of Juſtice were open, and the King, with Banners diſplayed, was not in Perſon in the Field.

My Lords, in theſe times of War I ſhall admit, that this Writ is legal, and not only His Majeſty, but likewiſe every other Man that hath Power in his Hands, may take the Goods of any within the Realm, pull down their Houſes, or burn up their Corn, to cut off Victuals from the Enemy, and do all other things that conduce to the ſafety of the Kingdom, without reſpect had to any Mans Propriety.

12 H. 8. 2. Br. Trans' 406. 8 E. 4. 23. That in ſuch times a Subject may make a Bulwark in another Mans Land, and that the Laws already eſtabliſhed are ſilent at ſuch times for any Law to be made: And although in that foreſeen and lingring War of Hannibals, whereof I have before ſpoken, the Senate could not charge the People; yet when there was a tumultus Gallicus, that is, when the Ciſalpini, their Neighbours, on the ſudden (as ſometimes they did) aſſaulted the City; by the ſame Author the Caſe was otherwiſe.

My Lords, beſides this ſudden and tumultuous War, which ſhuts the Courts of Juſtice, and brings His Majeſty in Perſon into the Field, and wherein Propriety ceaſeth: The Law likewiſe takes notice of other Times of War. As when His Majeſty, upon juſt cauſe known to Himſelf, by His Proclamation proclaims War againſt any Forreign State, and likewiſe the Law takes notice of the effects thereof: That is, that no Subject of ſuch Prince or State is capable to proſecute any Suit, though but in a Perſonal Action, in any His Majeſties Courts; and likewiſe that then it is lawful for any His Majeſties Subjects to ſeize and keep to their own uſe the Goods of the Subject of any ſuch Prince or State, as the Books are adjudged, 7 E. 4. 13. 3 H. 8. Br. Propertie 38. 22 E. 3. 16.

My Lords, it appears not by any thing in the Writ, that any War at all was proclaimed againſt any State, or that if any His Majeſties Subjects had taken away the Goods of any Princes Subjects in Chriſtendome, but that the Party might have recovered them before your Lordſhips in any His Majeſties Courts; ſo that the Caſe in the firſt place is, whether in times of Peace His Majeſty may, without conſent in Parliament, alter the property of the Subjects Goods for the defence of the Realm.

Secondly, The time that will ſerve the turn for the bringing in of the ſupplies and means of the defence, appears to your Lordſhips judicially by the Writ, that is ſeven months within four days; for the Writ went out 4. Aug. and commands the Ship to be at Portſmouth the place of the Rendezvous the firſt of March following; and thereby it appears that the neceſſity in reſpect of the time was not ſuch, but that a Parliamentary conſent might in that time have been endeavoured for the effecting of the ſupply.

Thirdly, Yet in the third place it is averred, that ſalus Regni periclibatur, and that was the cauſe of the iſſuing of the Writ, and this by the Demurrer if it ſhould be confeſſed.

Yet this is but a general, how or in what manner periclitabatur non conſtat. By the Law the Defendant may have a Protection when he is in negotiis Regni: but when he will make uſe of it, it's not allowable in that generality, but he muſt ſhew in particular in what Town, or Caſtle, or other particular Service he is in, that ſo the Court may judge whether the cauſe be ſufficient, yea or no; and yet is that His Majeſties Writ too, as well as this in queſtion: ſee the Books for it 36 H. 6. 39. 28 H. 6. 1. Yet in the fourth place, If your Lordſhips ſhall give any heed to this general, as to the particular of Pirates infeſting the Coaſts and preparations further ad Regnum gravandum, mentioned in the Writ, the caſe then, as I conceive, is this.

In a time of Peace His Majeſties vigilancy foreſees a danger likely to enſue, the ſupplies for prevention of this danger will ſerve if brought in ſeven Months after within four days, whether in this caſe without their conſent in Parliament His Majeſty may alter the property of His Subjects goods.

Mr. St. John's ſecond days Argument.

MY Lords, I have now done with the defence in general, and in the laſt place I ſhall endeavour to prove that this of the Sea hath no ſuch peculiarity in it, but that it will fall within that of the defence in general.

Wherein in the firſt place I endeavour an Anſwer to ſome Objections, both from Authority and Reaſon, that may ſeem to prove a right. And ſecondly, to ſome Preſidents concerning the uſe and practice; in thoſe of the firſt rank I ſhall begin with Danegelt.

It may be ſaid, that the Danes infeſting the Realm, that Ethelred, for the reſiſting of them, firſt by his own Authority laid this upon the Subject, and made it an annual Charge.

Secondly, That after the conqueſt, they ſeldom infeſting the Coaſts of the Conqueror, took it not annually as at the firſt, but at ſuch times only as it is in the Black-Book, lib. 1. Cap. 11. when ab exteris gentibus Bellum, vel opiniones Bellorum inſurgebant.

And Thirdly, That after H. 2. time the Kingdom being altogether freed from the Daniſh Invaſions, although the Danegelt both loſt the name and uſe, it never after his time being taken by Hydes of Land as before; that yet the ſucceeding Kings by the ſame Authority did lay other Taxes upon the Subject for defence of the Sea.

An. 1637.

My Lords, For Anſwer, in the firſt place I ſhall obſerve this only by the way, that the beſt and certaineſt Authorities for the Danegelt agree not what it was.

I mean the Laws of Edward the Confeſſor Cap. 11. and the Black Book, for the Confeſſors Laws ſay, that it was one ſhilling upon every Hide of Land, and the Black Book two Shillings, by which it ſhould ſeem that it was little in uſe in H. 2. time, nor much known.

That 11*th* Chapter in the Confeſſor's Laws, where this is mentioned, was no part of the ancient Laws themſelves, but ſomething afterward added appears by the words themſelves.

Firſt, It ſpeaks of the freedom which the Church in the firſt Inſtitution of it had, which freedom, we know, was not loſt till after the Conqueſt, and likewiſe of the granting of it to William Rufus by Parliament; and therefore it ſhould ſeem to be inſerted in thoſe Laws afterwards out of the Laws of H. 2. for this 11*th* Chapter, and that of Danegelt in H. 2. Laws are the ſame de verbo in verbum, as appears in Hoveden, fol. 344.

But admitting the thing, I ſhall endeavour anſwers to each part of the Objection, as firſt, That the Danegelt was granted in Parliament.

Mr. Camb. Britt. p. 142. obſerved that the Danes firſt infeſted the Coaſts Anno Dom. 800. and, as his words are, with ſuch Hurly Burlies, as the like was never heard of, made havock of all, razing of Cities and burning of Churches, and for their continual Piracy had got the name of Weccingi, that is Pirates as the Pirates.

The Danegelt firſt began in Ethelreds time, almoſt 200 years after the Danes firſt Invaſion, for he began his reign Anno Dom. 978. That proviſion for Sea-defence was made in the interim after 800. and before Ethelreds time, appears by the many Sea-fights of Alfred and other Kings made within them: that this proviſion was uſually in Parliament, is probable from that of Ingulph, London Print, *fol.*488. where, Anno Dom. 833 which was 33 years after the Danes firſt Invaſion, a deed to the Abbot of Crowland is dated thus; Coram Pontificibus, Proceribus, & Majoribus totius Angliæ, in Civitate Londoniæ, ubi omnes congregati ſumus pro conſilio capiendo, contra Danicas Piratas littora Angliæ aſſidue infeſtantes: if King Ethelred by his own Authority might have impoſed this, it's like ſome of his Predeceſſors, the caſe ſo neceſſarily requiring it, in almoſt 200 years ſpace would have done it before his time.

That this of Danegelt was done in Parliament the words carry as much, for the words of the Law are danſgeldi redditio primitus Statuta fuit, a word moſt proper for the Parliamentary Authority.

But fully by the Laws of that King, I mean Ethelreds times, in Mr. Lamberts Saxon Laws, fol. 85. there ex ſapientum ſuorum Conſilio peace is made with the Danes, and a certain ſum of money in preſent granted to the Army, as our Hiſtorians obſerve. The Danes by compoſition were to ſend away their whole Fleet ſaving 45 Ships, which were to remain to defend the Kingdom againſt other Enemies, and the King was to maintain theſe Ships at his charge: that the Danegelt was paid to the Danes for this defence many of our Hiſtorians obſerve. My Lords, That at the ſame Parliament this was provided for, appears by the words of the Law, Si quis igitur poſt hac Navalis aparatus in Anglia præd. fecerit, hic nobis auxilium ferat exercitus noſq; ei (quamdiu in fide manſerit) quæ ad commeatum ſupputent paravimus per omnia, that this was a Parliament, as the words ſhew it, ſo is it held in the Preface to the 9th Rep. If this was not the Danegelt, yet this is clear, that in that Kings time then promiſed contra navales apparatus vias, made by Parl. Huntingdon, fol. 265. London Print: Primrum ſtatuerunt Angli infauſto concilio quod ipſi Danis cenſum perſolveret Regibus, namque noſtris modo perſolvitur ex conſuetudine quod Danis perſolvebatur ex ineffabili terrore, that Danegelt, which after the Conqueſt was paid to the King, we ſee by that Author primum ſtatuerunt Angli; ſtatutum Anglorum, muſt needs be by Parliament.

If the Danegelt in time of ſuch great danger was not impoſed without Parliament, it will ſtrongly make againſt thoſe that ſhall object againſt it.

Secondly, The Danes having quitted the Realm, that the Danegelt was releaſed by Edward the Confeſſor is affirmed by Ingulph. fol. 510. and Hovedon, fol. 253. and all our later Hiſtorians. That of Ingulph, my Lords, alone is without all exception who lived in thoſe times, for he was brought up in England in the Confeſſors days, and therefore knew what he wrote. He afterwards went over into Normandy, and was the Conquerors Secretary; came over with him to the Conqueſt, and at his own charge maintained twelve Horſes; he was ſo great at Court, that as himſelf writes, fol. 514. quos voluit humiliavit, quos voluit exaltavit; and p. 518. a Charter of the Conquerors to the Abby of Crowland was made ad petitionem familiaris mei Ingulphi, and therefore in all likelihood would not report this partially againſt the King.

My Lords, That we are not to put out our Fires and ringing of the Coverfew Bell, we have no other Law for it but diſuſe, and the teſtimony of Hiſtorians that H. 1. releaſed it.

For that of the Black Book, that William the Conqueror retained it quando Bella, vel opiniones Bellorum inſurgebant, as that Book is miſtaken in the thing, ſaying it was two Shillings on every Hide, being in truth but one; ſo it is poſſible he might miſtake in the other too: That it was releaſed in æternum is apparent; that many things were done de facto, to the infringing of the liberty of the Subject, both in his time, and of H. 1, and H. 2. too, it is clear by our Hiſtorians; and if it were not releaſed before, yet that King Stephen releaſed it, is written by Huntingdon, fol. 221, Hoveden, fol. 276. hoc Deus voluit ſay theſe Hiſtorians, ſed nihil horum tenuit, and as our Hiſtorians all agree, that after H. 2. time, in whoſe Reign the Black Book was compiled, it was never paid, ſo may it be collected out of the Red Book, for all or moſt of the Aids and Eſcuages in H. 2. and King Johns time being there mentioned in 8 H. 2. quod Danegeldum aſſeſſum fuit, but after that, neither in his time nor of King Johns is any more mention of it.

Sir Henry Spellman in his Gloſſary, that when it was taken in the Conquerors time, and ſince that it is was conſulti Magnatibus Regni & Parliamentari demum authoritate. My Lords, In the laſt place, If the ſucceeding Kings mutato nomine, only have in lieu thereof laid other Taxes upon the Subject, they muſt then hold proportion with that of Danegelt, that is, that they have been equally ſet upon all the Inland Towns throughout the Kingdom as that was. 2. Upon every Hide of Land: And 3. Likewiſe in time, and that there was no intermiſſion but that in R. 1. and King John's times which were active, that then it was put in execution.

Clo. 15. Johannis m. 3. Dor. & 7. and Matthew Paris p. 312, 313. The Pope had granted the Crown of England to the French King, who was ready to invade the Realm; great proviſion of Shipping was made ad liberationes Regis, & ad ſtipendia Regis. So far was this King in this time of neceſſity, from impoſing any aid upon the ſubject for the Sea-ſervice, as that he himſelf bore the charge.

My Lords, The next authority from the right which I ſhall inſiſt upon, is that in the terms of the Law, fol. 114. in the Title of (Hydage) the taxing by Hides was much uſed in old time, and that chiefly in King Ethelreds days, who in the year 1006. when the Danes landed at Sandwich in Kent, taxed all the Realm by Hides, and every 910. Hides of Land ſhould find one Ship.

My Lords, My firſt anſwer is, That this was done when there was a formidable Enemy, and which ſoon after conquered the Kingdom, was upon the Shore, as by the Book appears, and therefore likely that the Courts of Juſtice were ſhut, and that the King was in Perſon in the Field.

Secondly, This was but actus unicus, and even by the Common Law that ſo eaſily admits of Cuſtoms, it's actus Binus that hath any colour inducendi conſuetudinem.

Thirdly, It appears not by any thing in the Book, but that this might be done by Parliament, many of the antient Acts of Parliament are ſtatuit Rex, vult Dominus Rex. And whereas the Book ſaith, taxing by Hydage was much uſed in old time. That theſe were by Parliament appears both by uſe and authority, expreſs in Print. Doomeſday in Barkſhire, quando geldum dabatur communiter per totum Barkſhire dabat Hydam 3 s. there we ſee Hydage dabatur, Matthew Paris, p. 780. many Caruragia and Hydagia recited in Parliament that had formerly been given to that King in Parliament.

Bracton in his ſecond Book, fol. 37. is expreſs in the Point, that they cannot be taken but by grant in Parliament; his words are theſe, Sunt quædam communes præſtationes quæ ſervitia non dicuntur, nec de conſuetudine veniunt, niſi cum neceſſitas intervenerit, ſicut ſunt Hydagia & Caruragia de neceſſitate & ex conſenſu totius Regni introducta, Rot. p. 8. h. 3. m. 4.

My Lords, The next authority I ſhall inſiſt on, is the caſe of the Abbot of Roberts-Bridge in Kent, which becauſe prima facie it ſeems to be in point, I will put it at large.

M. 25. E. 1. finiente C. B. R. 77. The Abbot brought a Replevin again Adam de Brigland and others for taking his Cattle, the Defendants avow in theſe words, dicunt enim quod occaſione turbationis inter Regem & Regem Franciæ ſuborta aſſignatus fuit Will. de Leyborn ex parte Regis ad Cuſtodiam Maris faciendam, ratione cujus cuſtodiæ faciendæ Terra & Tenementa hominum ejuſdem Comitatus agiſtata fuerunt ad Cuſtodiam faciendam, and the Abbot was ſeſſed 22 E. 1. at 7*s.* 23 E. 1. at 13*s. and* 24 E. 1. at 15*s. ad prædictam Cuſtodiam faciendam,* and becauſe he reſiſted to pay that, the Defendants being Collectors for the Town diſtrained the Abbot. The Abbot in Bar of this Avoury ſays, that for his Lands he was aſſeſſed to find a Horſe and Man in Subſidiam Cuſtodiæ prædictæ, and that he found this Man and Horſe accordingly, ad eandem Cuſtodiam faciendam, and therefore demands Judgement, ſi una & eadem occaſione Cuſtodiæ prædictæ, he ought to find the Horſe & nihilominus prædictam pecuniam ſolvere. The Defendants maintain their avowry, and ſay, that the Abbot had divers other Lands within the Town, and that he was ſeſſed for them for money, and that he was not ſeſſed for thoſe for the Man and Horſe, therefore iſſue is joyned and day given without any more thereupon that I have ſeen.

My Lords, Beſides the Authority of it in point, theſe two things may further be objected from this Caſe.

The common uſe that 22, 23, 24. E. 1. the County was agiſted ad Cuſtodiam Maris, and likewiſe to find Land Forces.

My Lords, For the laſt I have before admitted, that by the Statute of Wincheſter this may be done, for the ſervice was to be performed in Kent, the ſame County where the Land lay.

My Lords, Becauſe this Caſe prima facie hath ſome ſhew of Authority in point, I ſhall endeavour a full and clear Anſwer to it.

By the caſe it ſelf it appears, that the Seſſes were in time of War, the words are occaſione turbationis inter Regem & Regem Franciæ; neither was the War with France only at that time, but likewiſe with Scotland and Wales, and all the effects of War.

The French had landed in divers parts of the Realm, and in particular 23 E. 1. in this County of Kent, and had burnt the Priory and the greateſt part of Dover; Dover Haven was ſhut up for a great part of that time the goods both of the French and Scotch ſeized throughout the whole Kingdom, the Lands of all Priors Aliens ſeized, and thoſe that were upon the Maritime parts removed, and Natives put in their Houſes, and all Strangers whatſoever that landed within the Kingdom to be arreſted: all theſe, if any of them ſhall be denied, will be made good, not only by our Hiſtories, but likewiſe by the publick Records of the Kingdom: ſo that my firſt anſwer is, that theſe Seſſes were in time of an actual defenſive War from the two next and greateſt States unto the Realm.

My ſecond Anſwer is, that it appears not at all by any thing in this Caſe, that theſe Seſſes were made by any Authority from the King, for the words are only in the general, that the County was agiſted, and that the Abbot himſelf was agiſted, but ſays not by whom or whoſe Authority.

That it was not by the Kings Authority appears by Leyborns Commiſſion, appointed ad cuſtodiam prædictam faciendam, as the words of the Caſe are; for by his Commiſſion whereby he was to do this, which is Rot. vas. 22 E. 1. M. 8. He was ſo far from having any power to Tax the County hereunto, that he is Commanded for Victuals, Arms and other things that he ſhall need in this buſineſs, that they ſhall pay thoſe from whom they ſhall have any ſuch thing, which likewiſe is entred in the Co'ia 23. E. 1. Rot. 77.

My Lords, That there were Parliaments in every one of theſe years appears by the Summons, and thoſe in words not uſual; for the great Fleet of France being mentioned, and that the French did intend Linguam Anglicanam omnino delere, they were now called

An. 1637. called ad tractandum Ordinandum & faciendum nobiſcum, and the Lords & aliis incolis Regni qualiter ſit hujuſmodi periculis obviandum, as it is in the Cloſe Roll 23 E. 1. M. 4. dorſ. and 24 E. 1. M. 7. dorſ.

My Lords, That accordingly order was taken cum incolis, and that the Gentlemen and other Inhabitants by way of By-law and agreement amongſt themſelves did make proviſion in this particular, I ſhall endeavour to prove to your Lordſhips, that it hath been done at other times, and ſuch By-laws good appears in 14 E. 2. B. R. Rot. C. 60.

The Scots entring Durham and a By-law was made by the Inhabitants for raiſing mony, and one that refuſed it was adjudged to pay it. Beſides, Leyborn who was Admiral of all the Engliſh Fleet, there were Cuſtodes Maris in each Maritime County; theſe as appears Co'ia. 24 E. 1. Rot. 78. dorſ. were choſen by the Commonalty of each County.

And that theſe together with the Sheriff and Inhabitants did make Orders for thoſe things appears by the Co'ia 23 E. 1. Rot. 79. where Writs are directed to the Sheriff of Kent, and all the Sheriffs of other Maritime Counties, commanding them, that Circa Maris Cuſtodiam viſis præſentibus Milites, & Potentiores liberos homines de balliva tua evoces, & cum ipſis provida circumſpectione deliberes, how he ſhould do it. This, I conceive, is preſſed in point, and the practice grounded upon that in Parliament ad ordinandum cum incolis.

My Lords, My third Anſwer to this Caſe is, that theſe Seſſers were for Land ſervice only, and not for Shipping.

And this appears firſt by the Caſe it ſelf, for the Abbot in Bar of the Avowry ſays, that he was ſeſſed to find a Man and Horſe in Subſidium Cuſtodiæ prædictæ, which muſt be for Land Service, and therefore demands Judgement ſi una & eadem occaſione Cuſtodiæ prædictæ, he ought both to find the Horſe and pay the Seſs.

My Lords, This is not denied by the Defendants, but they ſay that the Abbot had other Lands, and that this Seſs was for thoſe other Lands; ſo that it's admitted that the Seſs for the Horſe, which muſt be for Land-ſervice, and that for which they avow were both for the ſame Cauſe, all the difference is, whether the Seſs were upon the ſame Land or not?

My Lords, If the Seſſes for which the Defendants avow had been for Shipping, they might have admitted all that the Abbot had ſaid in Bar of their Avowry, that is, that notwithſtanding he found Arms for Land-ſervice, that yet he might for the ſame Land have been ſeſſed again to the finding of Shipping. Neither do I doubt but that the Parties in the actions now before your Lordſhips do find Arms, and yet they are ſeſſed for the Shipping, and that it will be ſtood upon by the other ſide, that the finding of Arms for Land-ſervice excuſeth not for the Shipping.

But it may be ſaid, that the very words are, that the Seſſes were pro Cuſtodia Maris.

My Lords, By divers Records it appears expreſly, that the Cuſtody of the Maritime parts by Land is called Cuſtodia Maris.

Clauſ. 23 E. 1. m. 4. dorſ. A Writ directed Collectoribus pecuniæ ad Cuſtodiam Maris in this County of Kent, commanding them, that in reſpect that the five Ports were at the charge of Shipping quod quieti ſint de Cuſtodia Maris facienda, which muſt needs lye at Land.

Co'ia 24 E. 1. Ro. 79. A Writ to William Bonill & Sociis ſuis ad Cuſtodiam Maris in Com. Suffolk aſſignatis, and yet all that they are to do in that Office is for defence at Land; ſo Tr. 31 E. 1. n. 20. Co'ia. This Cuſtodia Maritime how it is to be done appears Rot. Parliament. 46 E. 1. n. 49. and by the Statute of 5 H. 4. cap. 3. It is to be done as heretofore it hath been done according to the Statute of Wincheſter.

5 H. 4. cap. 3. nata.

My fourth Anſwer to this Caſe is, that the Plaintiff was a Clergy-man, for the Clergy having denied in Parliament to aid the King as the Laity did this year, and at this time they ſtood at the Kings diſfavour, and in H. Term as appears Co'ia H. 25. E. 1. Rot. 17. the King Commanded all his Courts of Juſtice, that if any Clergyman was Plaintiff in any Action quod nullum ei fiet remedium, and therefore Walſingham, P. 41. in his annatis concluſio of this year of 25 E. 1. ſays thus, that it was clero Angliæ importabilis, quia de protectione Regia eſt excluſus, & per Regem nihilominus deperdat.

But my Lords, if I ſhould let all go that hath been ſaid, yet under your Lordſhips favours, the Caſe is of no authority at all; for admitting that the Seſſes were for Shipping, and that by the Kings Authority, yet had the Plaintiff no reaſon to put himſelf upon the point of Law, when the matter of Fact would help him.

For the Plaintiff ſays, that he had been ſeſſed before for thoſe Lands; the other Part ſays no, but that it was for other Lands, and upon this the iſſue is joyned.

Nay, my Lords, if there be any Authority at all in the Caſe, under favour it's ſtrong the other way.

For if the Seſſes were for Shipping, the Abbot ſays, that before he found Arms for the Land-Service, and demands the Judgement of the Court, if therefore he ought to pay this Seſs too. The other part, if the Law had been clear, might have demurred thereupon, ſo that the Authority ſways this way, that none for the ſame Land are chargeable for Arms at Land, and for Shipping too.

My Lords, Not only for the clearing of this Caſe, but of all other things that concern it, either in the meer right or matter of Fact before, 29 E. 1. that before the Parliament at Lincoln, 29 E. 1. all things concerning the Kings Prerogative and the Subjects Liberty were altogether upon uncertainties.

The Statutes of Runimede of Magna Charta and Charta de foreſta had been confirmed at leaſt eight times, from 17 John unto 29. E. 1. and yet not only the Practice, but likewiſe the Judgements in Courts of Juſtice were clear contrary, to the plain both words and meaning.

By the ſecond Chapter of Magna Charta a Baron pro Baronia integra was to pay but 100. Marks for his relief, the practice and proceſs out of the Chequer till 29 E. 1, was always for this relief 100 l.

M. 28. E. 1. Rot. 34. Co'ia after the death of John Gray that held per Baroniam, the queſtion was whether he ſhould pay 100 l. as the Record ſays, Prout ante hæc onerari ſolebant, or only 100. Markes

propter

An. 1637. propter Confirmationem Mag. Chart. and this the Court would not determine before they had conſulted with the King, and yet the ſtatute of Magna Charta had been confirmed but 25. E. 1. and likewiſe the ſame year, as appears by the Statute de Articulis ſuper Chartas.

Co'ia M. 32 E. 1. Rot. 26. Phillippe Marmion died 23 E. 1. and 100 l. paid for his relief.

It was now 32 E. 1. in queſtion whether 100 l. or 100 Marks ſhould be paid, and accordingly adjudged but 100 Markes. The Judgement is thus entred ſciendum enim quod fines iſta of 100 Marks admittuntur, licet hactenus they were always 100 l. becauſe the King had confirmed Magna Charta 29 of his reign, and by his Writ had Commanded the Courts to inroll it, and would have it de caetero in omnibus ſuis Articulis obſervari. My Lords, of this kind there be many Caſes.

The Charter of the Forreſt, Cap. 10. is nullus de caetero amittat vitam vel membrum pro venatione noſtra, and yet againſt the plain letter and meaning, Co'ia Tr. 27 E. 1. Rot. 44. Adam Gower of Scarburough, as appears, had in this Kings reign been beheaded pro venatione in the Forreſt of Danby; and now an Inquiſition went out to find what Lands and Goods he had, and then upon the return the queſtion was, whether his Land was forfeited and ſhould eſcheat upon ſuch an Attainder, and reſolved that his Land was not to be forfeited, P. 22 E. 1. Rot. 48. The Kings Shepheard had put the Kings Sheep into a mans ground who had diſtrained them, and for this Proceſs went out of the Chequer to puniſh the man, who there pleads that he knew not they were the Kings Sheep.

And there Rot. 51. Dorſ. Leſſee for life of a Mannor of the Kings with the Advowſon accepted, by preſenting to the Advowſon, the Court declared that he had forfeited the Mannor it ſelf.

By theſe Caſes it appears, that neither the Practice nor proceedings in the Courts of Juſtice in theſe times, in things between the King and the Subjects, are ſo much to be relied upon as the words of the Law.

Ob. 4. My Lords, It may further be objected, that at the Common Law, before the Statutes of Wincheſter, the King might compel the Subject to find Arms for the defence of the Land, and therefore by the ſame reaſon he may charge them to find ſhips for defence of the Sea.

My Lords, not granting the thing, yet for the preſent admitting it, I ſhall thereunto give theſe Anſwers.

1. That His Majeſty by the Tonage and Poundage, and other duties at Common Law, before-mentioned, hath a particular ſupply for that of Shipping, but hath nothing in particular for the other of Armes, and therefore that may with more reaſon be laid upon the Subject than the other.

And yet for one of the principal things in that Statute of Wincheſter, that is, for Watching and Warding, the Kings before that Statute had a particular and certain farm or ſum of money of each County for the doing of it, which after that Statute the County was diſcharged of, becauſe by that Statute the County took the charges of doing it upon themſelves, as the Caſes are, Co'ia H. 20 E. 1. Rot. 10. and Br. Tr. 33. E. 1. Rot. 23. dorſ. 18 l. pro Can. and 16 l. pro Northumb.

My ſecond anſwer is, That each Subject, and that Secundum ſtatum & facultates, is already chargeable for that of Ships, as hath been before proved; and therefore if he be chargeable both in Money and kind too, the charge is double in the one, and but ſingle in the other: Neither would it hold proportion with theſe Caſes of Watching, where the County was diſcharged of Money, when they took the things in kind upon themſelves: And therefore this Objection cannot, as I conceive, be made, unleſs His Majeſty firſt quit all the before-mentioned Duties upon Merchandiſe.

3. My third Anſwer is, That in that of Arms there is only mutatio ſpeciei, changing of Money into Arms, for they remain the Subjects ſtill in property, and are in his own cuſtody; he may ſell them, or imploy them at his Pleaſure for his private uſe.

But in this way of Shipping there's Oblatio Rei, in reſpect of the Victuals and Mariners Wages for 26 Weeks.

4. My fourth Anſwer is, That that of Arms is not only for the Defence againſt Forreigners, but in the Watchings and Wardings upon Hue and Cry, and otherwiſe, to keep the Peace within the Realm, and for the execution of Juſtice, by aſſeſſing the Sheriff, when he ſhall have cauſe to uſe the Poſſe Comitatus, and otherwiſe; all which do fail in the other.

And as the uſe of Arms is more general, ſo are they for the more immediate Defence of that Element, wherein we have our moſt uſual and certain livelihood.

And yet the ordering of theſe for 300 years and upwards, was by Authority of Parliament.

Laſtly, my Lords, in reſpect of the Victuals and Mariners Wages to be found for 26 weeks; the Caſe in queſtion as I conceive, cannot be compared to that of Arms, but rather to that of taxing the Country for finding of Souldiers to go out of their Counties.

5 Obj. My Lords, the next Objection that I ſhall endeavour to give anſwer unto is, That it is in His Majeſties Power, for the ſafety of the Realm, to ſhut up the Ports and Havens of the Kingdom, and thereby to make a general ſtoppage of all Forreign Trade: And therefore, as His Majeſty may anticipate gain, by barring Men from the exerciſing of their Callings, ſo by the ſame reaſon may He take ſomething away.

My Lords, my firſt Anſwer is, That the Law therein doth truſt the King only with that, which being done, is moſt to his own loſs, as in reſpect of the Cuſtoms, and other Duties, this of prohibiting Forreign Trade would be.

My ſecond Anſwer is, That this cannot be done but in time of War, and imminent danger; and that this Objection therefore will not be ſeaſonable, until the other be put in execution.

6 Obj. The laſt Objection is, That in divers old Charters of Liberties and Exemptions, the Patentees are freed de Danegeldo & Navigio; hereby is implyed a Right. My Anſwer is, From the ſame Charters it may as well be inferred, that the Subject is bound to make and repair the Kings Parks and Houſes, and to make new Bridges, and divers other things; theſe Charters of Exemption freeing them ab operationibus Dominiorum Regalium, Parcorum, & Pontium, and from divers other things, which by Law the Subject is not bound unto.

Obj. from matter of Fact and Charge.

My Lords, for the Preſidents that may be brought for proof of the uſe and matter of Fact; as I do not profeſs to know them all, ſo if I did, yet time would not permit a particular Anſwer to each of them; I ſhall therefore offer theſe general Anſwers to them.

That moſt of them, or all of them, are for charging the Sea-Towns, and not of the In-land Counties: That beſides the Five Ports, many great Sea-Towns and Havens which have Ships, have many great Priviledges, and are infranchiſed for that purpoſe, is declared in the Parliament Roll of 13 E. 3. N. 11. before cited. Thoſe that are to find Ships, beſides the many Preſcriptions for Wrecks and benefit of Fiſhing, are diſcharged of Arms and Defence at Land, as appears not only by that Parliament Roll, but by the Scotch Roll, 10 E. 3. N. 28. Dorſ. The Town of Shoram, in the County of Suſſex, time out of mind had found Ships; and therefore being by the Commiſſioners for the Array taxed to Arms for the Land-Service, a Superſedeas for that very cauſe awarded.

Iter Suſſex 7 E. 1. Roll 63. Dorſ. William de Bruiſe Lord of Shoram, upon his Claim adjudged, that all the Cuſtoms of Merchants at Shoram belonged to him, Rot. Pat. 26 E. 1. M. 16. The Town of Yarmouth, pro ſervitio Navium impenſo & impendendo, are diſcharged of all Subſidies granted in Parliament, Pro Corporibus Navium & attito, & Co'ia Tr. 3 E. 2. Ro. 30. The Town of Baldſey, in the County of Suffolk, for the ſame cauſe diſcharged by Judgment of the Court.

Iter Cant. 21 E. 1. Rot. 44. Dorſ. Certain Land-owners within the Five Ports have Tall' de quolibet homine applicante upon their Lands.

Petitions 1 E. 3. Ro. 9. Office de Pa', in conſideration of the Charge of providing Ships, the Town of Southampton petition, That their Priviledges of having Cuſtoms within the Ports be confirmed unto them. That they had theſe, appears H. 13. H. 4. B. R. Ro. 39. where they are indicted for Extortion, for taking more Cuſtom than was due, Rot. Par. 45 E. 3. N. 31. The Commons pray, that the Franchiſes of the Sea-Towns and Havens may be allowed them as heretofore, and that by default thereof the Navy of England is much decayed, to the diſaſſurance of all the Realm if need ſhould be. That thoſe that are not Maritime Towns, ought not to be charged, which is the very Caſe of the Defendant: I ſhall cite to your Lordſhips expreſs Preſidents.

Clauſ. 13 E. 3. M. 14. Dorſ. pars ſecunda. The Town of Bodwine in Cornwel diſcharged of Ships, becauſe dicta villa portus non eſt, & longe a Mare diſtat, and hath not uſed before-time to find Shipping. And an Inquiſition awarded to enquire of theſe Particulars, whereby it appears, that the In-land Counties had not ſo much as de facto been uſually charged with Ships.

Rot. Franc. 21 E. 3. M. 17. Thoſe Towns quæ Naves non habent, & quæ aliis Naves habentibus contributoria non exiſtunt, that they ſhould be diſcharged. It appears thereby, that there be ſome Towns that are Members of great Sea-Towns, and are contributory to Shipping, and other In-land Towns are not contributory, Secunda Pars Pat. 2. R. 2. M. 42. a Chertre 51 E. 3. whereby it is likewiſe recited, that the Burgeſſes of Beverly had by their Petition in Parliament complained, That that Town is in loco arido, & a Mari, that ad ſiniſtram procurationem quorundam Machinantium ipſos indebite prægravare ad contribuendum ſimul cum hominibus villæ de Kingſton ſuper Hull, to the making of a Barge, per mandatum Regis. Now they pray de omnibus & ſingulis hujuſmodi oneribus inſolitis, to be diſcharged by the Charter; it appears that they are diſcharged accordingly, and this now exemplified 2 R. 2.

2. To thoſe of 48 H. 3. both for Taxes for Souldiers, and ſome to Shipping, I ſhall give a particular Anſwer: That it was then Tempus Belli, when the Courts of Juſtice were ſhut, for the Commiſſions went out after April; and in the Red Book fo. 241. 6. it was Tempus Belli from 4 Sept. 48 H. 3. till the 16th of Sept. 49 H. 3. and that the Courts of Juſtice were ſhut, appears in 49 H. 3. R. 4. Co'ia Scaccario non fuer' Barones reſidentes in Scaccario ad Paſ. 48 H. 3. and Co'ia Paſ. the 49 H. 3. propter turbationem nuper habitam; there were no Sheriffs in aliquibus Comitatibus, 48 H. 3. and thoſe that were, non potuerunt ſic facere qua ad Officium Vic' pertinebat.

3. To thoſe Commiſſions that went out before 29 E. 1. I have given an anſwer already, That the liberties of the Subject had been adjudged againſt the direct words of Magna Charta.

To the Commiſſions 30 E. 1. M. 9. In the Patent Roll de puniendo homines that refuſed, it is quia ad rogatum Regis mittere conceſſerunt ſo many Ships; and if a By-law were good to bind them, as is before proved, as well as their own promiſe: neither have I ſeen any legal Proceedings againſt any of thoſe that refuſed at that time, ſave only againſt the Five Ports that are cited by their Service.

P. 33 E. 1. Ro. 38. B. R. & Ro. 82. againſt Seaford, as a Member of the Ports, and the Charge is, That per ſervitium tenent' invenire unam navem.

5. For thoſe of E. 3*d's* time, His Reign was for the moſt part a time of War, and that the offenſive brought a defenſive upon the Kingdom is plain. Wal. ſays, That P. 119. 10 E. 3. the French, Wal. P. 131. burnt Southampton. Stowe P. 234. 12 E. 3. They aſſaulted Southampton, and burnt part of Plimouth. 13 E. 3. They aſſaulted the Iſle of Wight, Rot. Parliament 13 E. 3. pars prima N. 9. That they had done much miſchief upon the Coaſt, and conquered the Iſle of Jerneſey.

Scotch Roll 10 E. 3. M. 5. Dorſ. & M. 2. All the Ports throughout England ſhut up.

My Lords, in theſe years, wherein moſt of thoſe Writs iſſued, the great danger appears, and yet that the Charge laid upon the Country was by Law and agreement.

I ſhall cite to your Lordſhips the Scotch Roll 10 E. 3. M. 3. The French riding at Anchor at the Iſle of Wight, the King ſent divers Privy-Councellors to Dover, and commanded all the Officers, Maſters of Ships, Mariners, and Inhabitants, from the Thames to the Weſt to come thither, and ad tractandum with thoſe Lords of the Council about the

An. 1637.

Defence at Sea by Ships; and in the Records recited, that notwithſtanding the Kings former Command, hactenus quicquid non fecer' in præmiſſis, the Writs for Shipping iſſued before, and were not executed, and therefore now a Commiſſion, if ſo it might be done with conſent. 20 E. 3. Other Writs went out, Ro. Fr. ſecunda pars M. 24. 20 E. 3. writ to Yarmouth, propter pericula Maris, to ſtop up their Havens; and Rot. Fr. prima pars M. 19. Dorſ. That no Fiſhermen go out to Sea.

Clauſ. 10 E. 3. M. 23. I ſhall endeavour a particular Anſwer to this: The Writ ſays, That vadia pro defenſione ſuper Mare ſolvi non ſolebant temporibus Progenitor' of the King.

To this I ſhall give this Anſwer, That theſe Wages were demanded before the time of their going to the Service; and the Record is, That hujuſmodi vadia have not been paid.

2. My Lords, If this Anſwer be not ſufficient, my ſecond Anſwer is, by denying the King; for beſides that of 15 Joh. in that time of neceſſity the Ships were to ſerve ad liberationes, & ad ſtipendia Regis, and 46 H. 3. M. 4. both in E. 1. E. 2. and this Kings time, before the tenth year of His Reign, Wages for Defence were frequently paid.

My Lords, Becauſe I know not how far this will be ſtood upon, I ſhall ſpare the citing of any of them, and ſhall to this purpoſe cite to your Lordſhips only this Caſe: It is amongſt the Pa. Petitions, 1 E. 3. and tranſmitted into the Chequer, H. 2. E. 2. Dorſ.

The Fiſhermen upon the Coaſt of Yarmouth, 20 E. 2. were daily robbed and killed, and for Reſcue of them, thoſe of Yarmouth were commanded to ſet out ſome Ships to Sea, and Adam Bridlington, the Kings Clerk, ſent with 300 l. to ſet out this Fleet, which the Men of Yarmouth intended they ſhould have as Wages for the Voyage; but the Clerk would not let them have above 230 l. and that as Money borrowed of the King; and for this they gave their Bond of re-payment hereof, 1 E. 3. They complained in Parliament, and pray, That they may be diſcharged of the 230 l. and that the Bond may be cancelled; which is adjudged accordingly, and tranſmitted into the   for a Tryal, whether they had done the Service or no.

My laſt Anſwer to theſe Preſidents is, That the Matters of Fact in theſe years, to the violation of the Subjects Rights, procured upon freſh Suits, not only the before-mentioned Stat. of 14 E. 3. Cap. 1. againſt any Charge to be laid upon the Subject without aſſent in Parliament.

But afterwards they complained in Parliament, 15 E. 3. N. 9. That their Goods were ſeized, and their Bodies taken without any Suit commenced againſt them, contrary to Magna Charta, and the Statutes and Ordinances made thereupon with ſo much diſcretion of their Anceſtors.

And in particular, in the Parliament Roll of 22 E. 3. N. 4. for the guarding of the Seas. And in 36 E. 3. N. 9. and 37 E. 3. N. 2. as before in 15 E. 3.

My Lords, I am now come to the laſt thing, which is the Proofs in the Point, which I ſhall humbly offer to your Lordſhips. My Lords, the firſt Authority that I ſhall cite to your Lordſhips is, the Patent Roll 26 E. 1. M. 21. whereby I ſhall endeavour to prove to your Lordſhips theſe two things.

1. The confeſſion of that King and His Council, That He was ſo far from having power to tax the People for the Cuſtody of the Seas, as that he is bound to make ſatisfaction for any thing taken from the People for that purpoſe.

2. The ſecond, That the Charges laid upon the People for the Cuſtody of the Sea, were the principal grievances that occaſioned the making of the Statutes of 25 E. 1. and de Tallagio non concedendo.

For the laſt, the King there declares, That He had a deſire to redreſs the grievances made to the People in His Name, and inſtanceth what they were, veluti de rebus captis in Eccleſiis, & omnimodis alijs rebus captis & aſportatis, tam de Clericis quam de Laicis, ſive pro Cuſtodia Maris, vel alio modo quocunq;. Whereby, my Lords, there's an acknowledgment, that it is a grievance, and to be redreſſed, —— to lay any Tax upon the Subject for the Cuſtody of the Sea.

Commiſſioners are there named throughout all England, to enquire of theſe grievances; herein they are to proceed accordingly to certain Inſtructions from the King and the Council.

Which are theſe three.

1. Whether the things were taken without Warrant; and if ſo, then the Party that took the Goods is to make ſatisfaction, and further, to be puniſhed for the Treſpaſs.

2. If there were a Warrant, whether the Sheriff, or other Miniſter, took more than the Warrant allowed; if ſo, then the Officer was to make ſatisfaction.

3. If all were done according to, and in purſuance of the Warrant, and no more than upon certificate thereof unto the King, as the words are, it en ferra tant que il ſe ſiendra appayes pro reaſon.

The King hereby promiſeth, That whatſoever things were taken from the People, by any command of His, for the Cuſtody of the Sea, that he will make reaſonable ſatisfaction to the Party for ſuch things.

My Lords, for the ſecond thing, that is, That theſe grievances occaſioned the making of theſe Statutes, is clear from the words of the Patent; for they were made, Poſt guerram inter Regem, & Regem Franciæ; which, as appears by the Caſe of the Abbot of Roberdsbridge, was from 22 E. 1. until 25 E. 1. and by all our Hiſtorians, and many Records.

It appears likewiſe by thoſe other words, that the King, before His going into Flanders, intended to have remedied thoſe grievances; He went over in September 25 E. 1. and the Statute 25 E. 1. was made the 10*th* of October after.

Hence likewiſe it follows, that the exception of the Kings ancient Aids and Prizes, mentioned in the Statute of 25 E. 1. extends not to this of charging of the People to the Cuſtody of the Sea; that being one of the principal grievances that occaſioned the making of it. That the ſame grievances cauſed the making of the Statute de Tallagio, I have before offered the proof to your Lordſhips.

2. My Lords, The next Authority which I ſhall preſent is the Co'ia H. 23. *E.*1. *Ro.*77. there the King commanded 30 Gallies to be made by ſeveral great Towns, every Gally was to have ſixſcore Oars a-piece. Theſe were pro defenſione Regni & ſecuritate Maris. My Lords, the Caſes are many in the Chequer, where the Mony for the making of theſe Gallies was recovered againſt the King.

I confeſs, my Lords, that the King had promiſed payment to thoſe that made them, which I ſhall thus ſubmit to your Lordſhips: That in caſe the King might have commanded the making of them at the Charge of the Towns, that then the Kings Promiſe was but Nudum pactum, in promiſing payment for that which by Law they might have been forced to do; And ſo the payment reſted only in the Kings Grace and Pleaſure. But, my Lords, upon Suits in His own time of E. 2. and E. 3d's time, the Money for making theſe Gallies was recovered by ſeveral Towns. M. 29 E. 1. Ro. 29. Dorſ. for York. M. 31 E. 1. Ro. 77. Ipſwich and Donwich. P. 5 E. 2. Rot. 21. for him, prout juſtum fuerit, nothing having been paid before.

Bra. M. 6 E. 2. Rot. 14. Both for the Gally made at Southampton, and bringing her to Winchelſey at their own Charge.

Præcepta P. 1 E. 3. All the Money from Southampton not being paid, now ordered that it ſhould be paid.

3. My Lords, The next Authority which I ſhall preſent to your Lordſhips, is the Parliament Roll of 13 E. 3. Pars prima N. 9. and 11. The Cauſes of calling the Parliament are declared to be Three.

1. Firſt the keeping of the Peace.
2. The defence of the Marches.
3. The third, the ſafe-guard of the Sea, that the Enemies might not enter the Realm to deſtroy it.

Theſe three Points for the Commons to adviſe upon, are put into writing, and entered in the Roll.

My Lords, by the Articles themſelves propounded on the Kings part, it appears that the Commons are not chargeable to the guarding of the Sea; for it is propounded unto them with caution, That not being bound to the guarding of the Sea, that this advice of theirs ſhould not be prejudicial to them, to bind them thereunto, and that there are Ships enow in England to do it, if the People were willing, N. 11. The Commons afterwards, in debating theſe Articles, when they came to this of the Sea, notwithſtanding the caution before, they are afraid, that if they ſhould debate it, that it might imply that they are chargeable to do it; and therefore they proteſt againſt giving any advice therein, as a thing whereof they have no cognizance; and do further declare, That the five Ports, and divers other great Towns that have Franchiſes, and are bound thereunto, that they ſhould do it.

And therefore the Merchants, Maſters of Ships, and Mariners through England, are ſummoned to be at the next Parliament for advice about Shipping.

4. My Lords, The next Authority, is the Parliament Roll 20 E. 3. N. 21. The Commons petition in theſe words, que la gard de la mere ſe face deſcries Res ſoit le gard ſit man ad refait amant vis ſe-

Quer de ceux parolls en le Record.

nois ut ſemble que Melliur gard ne poit eſtre fait que le Roy ne fait no’ poſt il de marrit iſſint per de la ſur Ca’ guer’ & pr’ de faire de ceſt terr’.

My Lords, The Commons having formerly granted the King divers Aids and Subſidies upon Wools, Wooll-fells, and Leather, and otherwiſe, for the guarding of the Sea, they now grew weary of it, and deſire that the King himſelf from thenceforth ſhould bear the whole burthen thereof, and charge him with his promiſe to that purpoſe.

My Lords, This Petition, although in the Name of the Commons, yet the Lords joyned in it; for otherwiſe all our Acts of Parliaments of thoſe times being made upon Petition and Anſwer, ſhould be without the Lords aſſent. Hence it appeared, that the whole Kingdom at this time was ſo far from thinking that the King could charge them without their conſents, to the guarding of the Sea, as that they alleadge that the King himſelf ought to bear the whole Charge; neither doth the King deny His promiſe, nor wholly deny the thing; for though he ſays, that it ſhould be done as hath been done before, yet it is with a qualification, becauſe the Sea cannot be better kept than he hath kept it, by reaſon of his ſo often being at Sea in Perſon, in going and returning from France, and diverting the Enemy by his Wars in France; if the King had given His abſolute denial, yet here's the Judgment that both the Houſes of Parliament expreſs in Point.

Rot. Franc’ 21 E. 3. Secunda pars N. 11. and 9. The Merchants had granted 2 s. 8 d. upon their Goods till Michaelmas, for providing 120 great Ships pro ſecura conductione Navium & Merchandizarum, & pro defenſione cæterarum maritinarum Regni, & aliis periculis his guerrinis temporibus regno venientibus. This Grant being made by Merchants, the King alleadgeth this was not ſufficient for the Service, and the cauſes of the ſtoppage of Trade by reaſon of the Wars: the King now lengthens out the time from Mich. till Eaſter following; and to ſatisfie the People the King by His Proclamation declares, That the 2 s. 8 d. ſhall ceaſe at Eaſter according to the Grant; which, as it ſhould ſeem, not ſatisfying the People, or the King ſtill continuing the taking thereof, the Commons in Parliament, 22 E. 3. N. 16. pray, that it may ceaſe, and that by procurement of no Merchant, Pluis l’argent ſoit continue.

An Impoſition but for half a year, and that upon Merchandiſe, and by conſent of the Merchants, for the Defence, yet taken off upon complaint.

The Anſwer is, that it ſhould ceaſe.

My next Authority is the Parliament Roll 2 R. 2. Pars ſecunda N. 5. before cited, where the great Councel and Sages of the Kingdom reſolve, That the Commons are not chargeable to the Defence of the Realm without Parliament, extends to this Particular of the Sea, for the preſent preparation whereto the Commons are not chargeable for defence at Sea; and therefore the Money lent was to provide an Army for the Sea en defence & ſalvation del’ dit Realme, & de la navie, & des coſtiers del’ mere.

My Lords, The next Authority is the Parliament Roll of 2 H. 4. N. 22. Commiſſions to charge the People to make Ships for the defence of the Realm without conſent in Parliament, repealed by the King, and the whole Parliament, for that very cauſe.

The firſt Commiſſions repealed, becauſe the Commons were not chargeable without conſent in Parliament; and now the King will put it into the Parliamentary way by doing with aſſent of the Lords and Commons.

8. My Lords, my next Authority is the Par. Roll 9 H. 4. The cauſe of the calling of the Parliament is for the ſafe guard of the Sea, and of the North Marches; and N. 17. great miſchief ſhewn for default of the ſafe keeping of the Sea; and N. 21. It's there inrolled by the Kings Commandment, that there was Communication had between the King and the Lords of the Defence of the Realm, and for reſiſting the Enemies, who made preparation on all ſides, whereunto ſufficient reſiſtance cannot be provided, without that the King have in His Parliament ſome notable Aid granted unto him.

My Lords, The King hereby acknowledgeth, that he cannot without the Parliament charge the People for the ſafe-keeping of the Sea, that being the principal part for the defence there intended. The ſame with the Summons, that without the conſent of the Commons, negotia prædicta infra remanerent; and with the Summons in the cloſe Roll, 23 E. 1. before-mentioned, quod omnes tangit per omnes debet approbari.

My Lords, the next Authority in the Parliament Roll, 4 H. 4. N. 28. The Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and the Commons grant to the King a Subſidy upon the ſtaple Commodities, and Tunnage and Poundage, and likewiſe a 10*th* and 15*th* with this proteſtation, Proteſtant que ceſt grant en temps avener' ne ſoit paſſe in example de charger les dits ſeniors ne les Commons du Realme de nul manner Subſidie ne 10th ne 15th a les guerris deſcore, gates ou ſafeguard de mere s'il ne ſoit Ples volunts des Seigniors & Commons de veſtre Realm, & ceo a novel grant faire in plein Parliament.

Rot. Parliament. 6 H. 4. N. 12. and

Rot. Parliament. 1 H. 5. N. 17. the ſame Proteſtation as before.

My Lords, That the Charge of the Defence at Sea, and that in a large proportion, by reaſon of the before-mentioned Duties, is to be born by His Majeſty, I conceive that it will not be denied, that in Subſediam, and Aid of His Majeſty, therein the Commons are not chargeable without their conſent in full Parliament: in theſe three Records there is not only theſe Proteſtations of the whole Realm, being made by the Lords and Commons, but likewiſe theſe Kings conſents, by accepting the things granted, and that without any qualification of the Proteſtations. Theſe Proteſtations, ſtations, that they are not chargeable to the guarding of the Sea in a certain way, as are 10*ths* and 15*ths*, do much more fail in a way uncertain, as here.

My Lords, my next proof is from the practiſe of former Kings in their frequent demands of Aids in Parliament, for the defence of the Sea, as well before the Statute of Tunnage and Poundage, as then; and ſithence Monies borrowed by the former Kings for Ships and Defence at Sea, and Indentures of Reteyner for that purpoſe at the Kings Charge.

And not only ſo, but upon Suit, allowances in the Chequer for Victuals, Mariners Wages, Archers, Priſoners taken in Sea-Fights, pro defenſione, and all other things neceſſary for Shipping, when for the Defence of the Realm. Whereupon the ſame Argument may be made in this particular for the Sea, as was before for the Defence in general.

The laſt thing which I ſhall preſs, is that of the five Ports. Their Service is certain in reſpect of the time, but 15 days in a year, in reſpect of the Charge, but 20 Men and a Maſter, the number of Ships certain.

Beſides, that they are diſcharged of Arms for the Land-Service, they have divers other Priviledges for the doing hereof; they were free from all Aids and Subſidies granted in Parliament, and are by Privy-Seal diſcharged thereof, H. 2. E. 3. Co'ia, about the end of the Roll.

They are freed from all Tolls, Murage aud Pontage throughout the Realm, which bringeth a greater Charge upon the reſt of the Subjects.

My Lords, I ſhall thus offer it to your Lordſhips, if they that have theſe Priviledges ſhall ſerve but 15 days in a year, how the others that have no Priviledges at all ſhall do it for 26 weeks, as in the Writ.

Secondly, their Charge is certain in the number of Men and Ships, how the reſt of the Commons, that are ſo far from having any Priviledges or recompence for it, as that they do contribute to this Charge of the five Ports, ſhall, as by the way in the Writ, be altogether uncertain in the matter of Charge, both in the number of Men, and of Ships, and of every other thing.

My Lords, I ſhall preſs this farther, thus, when the Ports exceed their Charge in the number of Men or Ships, allowance by the King is to be made unto them.

This, as it appears by the Quier of Dover, and the Patent Roll of 7 H. 7. before cited, that after the 15 days they were to be at the Kings Charge. So in the Patent Roll, 19 H. 3. 14 becauſe they found 40 Men in the Ship, the King promiſeth payment for all over and above the number of 21. Bra. Tr. 33 E. 1. R. 22. allowance to Service in Scotland. The Scots, as appears by Wal. P. 53. and other-where, having about that time burnt divers Engliſh Towns and Ships, and a School-houſe with 200 Scholars in it.

Viſus Com. P. 33 E. 1. R. 70. Pro ingenio Ro. Scotland
P. 34 E. 1. Ro. 37. Co'ia la Compoſition.

An. 1637. My Lords, if the Ports, who are bound to the Defence at Sea, when they have performed their Service, be not compellable to any farther Charge; I ſhall humbly offer it to your Lordſhips, whether thoſe that be not bound at all, are from the ſame reaſon chargeable at all.

My Lords, I have now done, and ſhall not further preſs upon the patience of your Lordſhips.

I know that nullum Tempus occurrit Regi: The diſuſe thereof I ſhall preſs it no otherwiſe than as it is an Interpretation of the Statute made againſt all Aids and Tallages in general, and of the complaints in Parliament of 5 N. 9. 36. N. 9. and 37 E. 3. That thoſe Statutes had not been duly kept: And further, as it is an Interpretation likewiſe of the before-mentioned Declarations, Petitions, and Proteſtations againſt this in particular, and as it is an execution of them, and putting them in practice.

Praxis Sanctorum, as the Divines ſay, eſt interpres præceptorum.

The Claims which anciently the Subject hath made upon the Crown, that none of the great Officers of the Kingdom could be choſen but in Parliament, nor that the King had power to ſell any of the ancient Crown-Lands; the diſuſe it ſhews, that thoſe Claims of theirs were not legal.

Bra. in his fourth Book, fo. 209. ſays, That longa Patientia trahitur ad conſenſum; the Non-Claims therefore of ſo many of the later Kings and Queens, I ſhall preſent unto your Lordſhips, as ſo many le Voat's and Declarations of their ſeveral conſents; That without Aſſent in Parliament they could not have laid the like Seſs upon any of their Subjects, as is now laid upon my Clyent.

The End of Mr. St. John's Argument.

Sir John Bankes Knight, the Kings Attorney-General, his firſt days Argument in the Caſe of Ship-Money in the Exchequer-Chamber, December 16. 1637.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips.

THere was a Scire Fac' brought againſt Mr. Hampden, and divers others, to ſhew cauſe why thoſe Sums of Money Seſſed upon them by the Sheriff of Buckingham ſhould not be paid and anſwered. It beareth Teſte 22 Maii 13 Car. and a Sci' Fac' Returned: Mr. Hampden demandeth Oyer of the original Writ 4. Aug. and of the Certiorari, Mittimus, and ſeveral Returns. The Writ of 4 Auguſti went out to provide a Ship of 450 Tun, with Victuals, Men, Munition, &c. The Writ giveth Power to the Sheriff to make an Aſſeſſment upon the County, and giveth Power of Diſtreſs and Impriſonment contra rebelles in caſe of Non-payment. He demandeth Oyer of the Certiorari, which conſiſteth of two parts, the one to certifie the Sums aſſeſſed, the other to certifie the Names of the defaulters. And the Names of thoſe that made default were Returned, and Mr. Hampden amongſt others. He demandeth Oyer of the Mitimus, which doth recite the tenure of the firſt Writ.

Upon Oyer of all theſe, both of the Writ 4 Auguſti, of the Certiorari, Mittimus, and Sci' Fac', and their ſeveral Returns, Mr. Hampden hath demurred in Law.

The Caſe that ariſeth upon this Record is thus: The King is Lord of the Sea. That's part of the Record. The Sea is infeſted by Pyrates and Turks, who commit depredations, and take Goods of Merchandizes, both of the Kings Subjects, and others that traffick there, and carry them away into Captivity. There is preparation of Shipping, eminent danger; for ſo the Writ reciteth: A danger, that the Kings Dominion at Sea ſhould be loſt, or at leaſt diminiſhed. There was a farther danger, that Salus Regni periclitabatur: Whether in this Caſe the King, pro defenſione Regni, tuitione Maris, &c. may command His Subjects, per totam Angliam, by Writ under the Great Seal to provide Ships at their own Coſts and Charges. And this when the King in His own Judgment conceiveth ſuch a danger as doth neceſſarily require this Aid. That, under favour, is the Queſtion upon this Record.

There is in this Record, whereof your Lordſhips are Judges, four Writs. (1) 4 Auguſti 11 Car. which goeth out of the Chancery for the ſetting forth of this Ship of 450 Tunn. (2) That 9 Martii 12 Car. and that's the Certiorari. (3) 5 Maii 13 Car. which is the Mittimus. (4) 22 Maii 13 Car. which is the Sci' Fac'. The ſecond and the fourth Writ, which is the Certiorari and the Sci' Fac', they are Returnable. The firſt Writ and the third Writ, which is the Writ 4 Auguſti, and the Mittimus, they have no Return; but they give command, and require execution ſhould be done, prout de jure, &c. ſecundum conſuetudinem Angliæ.

The firſt Writ, which is the ground of this Buſineſs, ſtandeth upon two Parts, viz. A Preamble, and the Body of the Writ: The Preamble, that containeth, firſt, a Direction; ſecondly, the Motive and Cauſes of the iſſuing of the Writ. The Body containeth ſix; The direction that is unto the Sheriff of the County of Bucks, Necnon unto the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of Buckingham, and probis hominibus of all the County. The Motives, and the Reaſons inducing this Writ, are nine in number. (1.) Quia Piati, &c. That theſe commit ſpoils and depredations by Sea, and take the Goods of the Kings Subjects. (2.) Becauſe they carry the Kings Subjects into miſerable Captivity. (3.) Becauſe of the preparation of Shipping that is made undiq; to infeſt the Coaſts. (4.) Quia periculum, &c. (5.) Quia pro defenſione Regni, tuitione Maris, &c. (6.) Quia pro repulſione, &c. (7.) Quia Progenitores noſtri Reges Angl' Dominium Maris temporibus, &c. (8.) Quia onus defenſionis, &c. (9.) The moſt prevalent, Quia hoc per Legem & Conſuetudinem Angl', &c. The Body of the Writ containeth ſeveral Mandates to the Sheriff, and Head Officers, quod fide & ligeantia, &c. ſicut nos & honorem diligitis. The Mandates are ſix. (1.) To provide a Ship of 450 Tunns, well-armed, and furniſhed with Proviſion, and that was to be in readineſs by the firſt of March, to continue for the ſpace of 26 Weeks, ad proficiſcend' cum Navibus noſtris pro tuitione Maris, &c. (2.) Mandate was a command unto the Sheriff, and the Head-Officers, that they ſhall meet within 30 days, and ſet down what ſhall be taxed upon the incorporate Towns. (3.) A Command unto the Head-Officers of thoſe incorporate Towns, that within their Bayliwicks they make an Aſſeſſment upon particular Perſons, and compel them to pay the ſame. (4.) A Power unto the Sheriff to Aſſeſs all within the reſidue of the County, juxta ſtatum & facultatem. (5.) A Command for the levying of thoſe Sums by diſtreſs, ut contra rebelles, to impriſon their Perſons. (6.) That no part of this Sum collected ſhall be converted unto any private uſe; but if any Money be remaining, it ſhall be paid inter ſolvenda.

My Lords, the Reaſons expreſſed in the Writ might juſtly ſatisfie any Man's Judgment without further Argument; but I ſhall clearly manifeſt, there is no Clauſe or Particle in this Writ, but is verified by many Records, and is ſecundum Legem & Conſuetudinem Angliæ. The Queſtion that is made is of a high and tranſcendent nature: It concerneth the King in thoſe Caſes, where He in His Royal Judgment ſhall conceive a neceſſity for the Defence of the Realm, to command Shipping in this kind; whether by His Royal Power He can do it, or muſt require the Aid per Commune Concilium in Parliament. And I conceive His Majeſty may do it, not only by His Kingly Prerogative, but Jure Majeſtatis. This Power is not only inter Prerogativa Regis, ſed inter Jura Summæ Majeſtatis. I find by many Records, that theſe Writs have iſſued out in all ſucceſſion in the times of the Saxon before the Conqueſt. But I never find that this Power was ever Judicially queſtioned in any Court at Weſtminſter. I find queſtion made touching Aſſeſſments, whether they have been equal; touching the levying, whether within the Warrant of the Officers; touching the diſcharging of ſome by reaſon of a Grant of exemption: but to queſtion the main Power, whether the King by His Royal Power might command this for the defence of Himſelf and the Kingdom, was never diſputed. But His Gracious Majeſty, who hath declared Himſelf, that He will rule His People according to His Laws; for the ſatisfaction of the People, and to clear His Juſtice and Judgment, doth ſuffer theſe Writs to go forth, to which ſome have demurred, and to be queſtioned in this Legal way to be determined by your Lordſhips, to which I hope you will give a clear end.

My Poſition ſhall be this, That the King, as He is King of England, pro defenſione Regni, tuitione Maris, &c. When His Majeſty in His Royal Judgment conceiveth it time of danger, as doth neceſſarily require the Aid commanded in this Writ, that He may command and compel His Subjects, per totam Angliam, to ſet forth Ships with Men and Munition, and double equipage; and this may be done as well by the Kings Writ under the Great Seal, as conſent in Parliament. For the Proof of this Poſition, I ſhall reduce what I have to ſay to theſe Heads. 1. That this Power it is inter Jura Summæ Majeſtatis innate in the Perſon of an abſolute King, and in the Perſons of the Kings of England; ſo inherent in the King, that it is not any ways derived from the People, but reſerved unto the King, when Poſitive Laws firſt began; and that in this Caſe the King is the Sole Judge of the danger, and how this danger is to be prevented and avoided: This is my firſt Ground. The ſecond is this, That this Regal Power it is not confined to the politick advice, that the King muſt be in Cathedra ſitting in Parliament. But that it hath been always done, either per ipſum Regem, aut per Concilium, aut per Dominos ſuos, aut per Regem, when He ſhall pleaſe to call a Conſultation of Merchants and Portſmen experienced in the Service.

My Lords, upon this Head I ſhall prove unto your Lordſhips, that this Power is ſo inherent in the King, that during the time of Parliament, and in thoſe years when Parliaments were ſitting, that theſe Writs iſſued out by a Regal Power, without any Power of Aid in Parliameut; and that Advice was not thought neceſſary in former times. In the third place I ſhall ſhew your Lordſhips out of the very Title which the Common Law of England giveth to the King, that this Power is implyed out of His Sovereign Title given unto Him by the Common Laws of England. In the fourth Place I ſhall inſiſt upon Preſidents, and herein I ſhall deſire you to take notice, that theſe Writs have not iſſued out at the firſt upon any ſudden advice, but that there was a great ſearch made firſt by my Predeceſſor Mr. Noy, a Man of great Learning and profound Judgment; other Searches made by the Kings Counſel, and ſome others; and a great number of Records were conſidered of, and maturely, before theſe Writs iſſued; ſo nothing was done upon the ſudden. And we that are of the Kings Counſel did think it fit, that moſt of theſe Records ſhould be cited in the firſt Argument by Mr. Solicitor, to the end that the Counſel at the Bar might give an Anſwer in their Reply. Many other Records have been added by Mr. Solicitor, and many more I ſhall cite which have not been remembred.

My Lords, in the vouching of theſe Records I ſhall obſerve eight things. Firſt, That the Records we inſiſt upon, they are not grounded upon any private Cuſtom, upon any Charter, upon any Covenants, but upon the Law of the Land. And there is not in any of theſe Records any recital, that theſe Writs went out upon any of theſe Grounds. 2. That in all Ages before the Conqueſt, and in the time of William the firſt, that theſe Writs have iſſued, per ipſum Regem, per Regem & Concilium, and did not iſſue by any Advice in Parliament. 3. That theſe VVrits were ſent out, not in Caſe of Hannibal ad portas, or an Enemy diſcovered, or ſudden Invaſion, but in Caſe of rumors of dangers, and in that a danger might happen; ſo not in approach of an Enemy, but in Caſe of preparation to be provided againſt an Enemy. 4. That the King did command Shipping to be ſet forth, and in thoſe years wherein there were Parliaments, and ſitting Parliaments, and by His Regal Power, without advice in Parliament. 5. That great Subſidies and Aids have been given unto the King in Parliament, pro defenſione Regni, in the ſame years that VVrits went forth for the Defence of the Kingdom. 6, That thoſe Aids have not only been required from the Maritime Parts, the Ports, nor from the Maritime Counties, but from the In-land Counties, as this Caſe is Buckinghamſhire, and per totam Angliam. 7. That many times when theſe VVrits iſſued, there hath been no ſuch Cauſes declared, as hath been in this VVrit. I ſhall obſerve, that in many of theſe VVrits no cauſe at all was ſet forth in them, but only that they ſhould repair to the place of Randezvous, and there receive further direction. 8. I ſhall verifie every Clauſe of this VVrit by many Preſidents. A Mandamus, damus, and not a Mandamus Rogantes Shipping at the charge of the County and aſſeſſment by Sheriffs as Commiſſioners, and a penalty greater, not only Diſtreſs and Impriſonment, but extent of Lands, ſeizing of Goods till the King were paid. Theſe are the things I ſhall obſerve out of the Preſidents when I come unto them.

My Lords, In the fifth place, when I have laid theſe foundations, I ſhall then diſpel thoſe miſts that have been raiſed, remove thoſe Forces that have been muſtered, and anſwer the Objection of thoſe Gentlemen that will not be defended by the Kings Writ under the Great Seal. And in this give a particular anſwer to the Acts of Parliament, that they have cited, to the Records that they have inſiſted upon, to the Reaſons and Authorities. And I ſhall anſwer their exceptions that have been taken unto the ſeveral Writs, Records, and Proceedings thereupon. In the ſixth place I ſhall collect ſome concluſions and reaſons out of the Premiſes, and cite unto your Lordſhips ſome Judicial Records, that may ſatisfie your Lordſhips in point of Judgement. Theſe are my Materials, I ſhall proceed unto the Building.

My Lords, My firſt ground was, that this power was innate in the perſon of an abſolute King, and in the perſon of the King of England. All Magiſtracy is of nature, and obedience, and Subjection is of nature; and before any poſitive Laws were written, or any municipal Law, people were governed by the Law of Nature, and Practiſe did rule according to natural equity: this appears in the Reports of Sir Edward Cook, written by him when he was Chief-Juſtice, 7 Report fol. 13. I will not take occaſion to diſcourſe, either of the Law of Nature, which doth teach us to love our Country, and to defend it, and to expoſe the Hand to danger rather than the Head ſhould ſuffer: nor of the Law of God, which commandeth obedience and ſubjection unto the Ordinances of Superiors: nor of the Law of Nations, which doth agree, that there muſt be protection from the King, and obedience from the People; and without defence there can be no protection, and without aid of the People there can be no defence: nor of the Imperial Law, which ſaith, that in caſes pro utilitate the King may ſtatuere alone.

My Lords, I will upon this Subject confine my ſelf to the Law of the Land, and inſiſt upon ſuch Records, and ſuch Preſidents, and ſuch Reaſons, and ſuch Authorities as I find both by Record of former times and by our Books. 1. In the original government of this Nation I do not find the contrary, that there was a great number of Petty Regiments. And when Julius Cæſar did invade this Realm, he writeth that there were four Kings in Kent, and other places; and Strabo, lib. 4. ſaith the like.

So thoſe times will not be material. During the domination of the Romans from Julius Cæſar, which continued 500 years, the Romans had their Prefects here in England; no man will doubt but they might command what they pleaſed: that in their times there were ſpecial Officers called Comites, and Officers appointed by Sea, and others by Land. Thoſe that ſucceeded the Romans were the Saxons, and in their times both by antient Grant, and by Edicts of the Princes of thoſe times, that this Naval Power was commanded by them for defence of the Realm. Firſt to begin with King Inas, Anno Dom. 725. King of the Weſt Saxons. This King in that year made a grant to the Abbot of Glaſſenbury, Quod, &c. ſint quieti ex omnibus Regis exactionibus & operibus, except expedite Arcium, Pontium, &c. conſtructionem ſicut in antiquo, &c. Which ſhews that theſe expeditions were accuſtomed to be done. Wuldredus, King of Kent, he in the year 742. granted to His Churches, quod ſint liberi ab omnibus ſecularibus ſervitiis, except expedit. pontis, &c. ſo in that grant theſe expeditions were excepted.

Ethelbaldus, King of the Mercians, Anno 749. granted Monaſterio de, &c. except ut ſupra: So that as in this time the ſervices were common, and were done a dicto Regis, that the Churches ſhould be free from all ſervices but theſe three of expedition, of building Caſtles, Bridges and Forts, A quibus nulli unquam laxari poſſunt.

Egbert, Anno 840. commanded a great Navy to be provided, and that was for the defence of the Realm and ſafegard of Ships.

Ethelwald that was King of the Weſt Saxons, Anno 854. granted to the Church that it ſhould be free from all Services temporal, except Regalibus Tributis. In the time of King Alfred, who was the firſt Monarch and King of all England, there was one . . . . who was a Privy Councellor in his time, and writ his Life and the Story of his Time, and he in his ninth page ſaith, quod Rex Alfredus juſſit Gall, longas Naves, &c. and agreeing with the Hiſtory of Wigorenſis 316. Huntington 351. wherein your Lordſhips may ſee by the Records, that it was done ex præcepto Regis per totum Regnum.

This King made a Law (which is not remembred by Lambert in his Saxon Laws) to this ſubſtance; that no man upon Summons by the Horn or word of Mouth ſhould ſit ſtill in matter of Theft, Bloodſhed or going to War, whatſoever his expedition ſhould require: and there he doth mention it to be upon pain of forfeiture of Life and Death. King Edgar who ſtiled himſelf Angliæ Baſilius, he in the year 959. provided a mighty Navy of 3600 Ships, as ſaith Wigornenſis and Math. of Weſtminſter; and he gave a Command that every year at Eaſter a Navy of 3 or 4000 Ships be ſet out and divided into three parts, Eaſt, Weſt and North. The Ships in thoſe times were not ſo great as now they be. The ſame Edgar in the year 973. granted unto the Abby of Thorney all manner of Immunities, and that it ſhould be free, except thoſe three defences of building of Bridges, Caſtles and Forts. And the ſame King, in his Charter to the Church at Worſter granteth unto them to be free ab omnibus exactionibus, except conſtructionem Pontium, Arcium, &c. My Lords, by all theſe ſeveral grants, and what hath been done by thoſe Kings it doth appear, that theſe three fundamental ſervices were reſerved unto the Crown, ſaving ſome two or three Abbys which had ſome particular exemption. In the year 1008. which was remembred by Mr. Solicitor, there was then a great Navy prepared by King Ethelred. The words are thus, Rex Ethelredus per totam Angliam ex 310. Hidis Navem unam, &c. præparare fecerit, That was for every 310 Hides of Land to build one Ship, and every eight Hides to find a Man and a Corſlet, and to meet at Sandwich for defence againſt the Danes;

This

An. 1637.

This appeareth, Huntington 360. Math. of Weſtminſter 387. Hovenden 426. Malmsbury 100. In this Record theſe things are obſervable. 1. Rex parare facit & Rex juſſit, then per totam Angliam, all England was to be charged by the Gloſſary of that Learned and Judicious Antiquary; it appears that virgata terra continet 24 Acras; upon caſting up of this it doth appear, that there be in England 363600 Hides, every 310 Hides being to ſet forth one Ship, the whole number amounteth to divers thouſands, and every 8 Hides to ſet forth a Souldier 45450 men; but it is not the number but the matter that is done by the Kings Command per totam Angliam.

Sir H. Spelman.

In the thirteen year of King Ethelred he made an Edict, which Mr. Attorney cauſed to be read in Court, ſaying he had it out of an old Book at Cambridge, quod inſtaurant tiel nomber de naves per ſingulos Annos, &c. I read it to this purpoſe, to ſhew that in the 30*th* year of his Reign there was a Naval expedition always to be ready at Eaſter, and ſheweth the penalty of ſuch as did depart without licenſe.

King Canutus, Lambert, fol. 117, 118. ex ſapientium Concilio, &c. ordained a Command among his temporal Laws, Cap. 10. quod præſidii fiant, &c. Command Shipping to be provided, and fol. 118. a penalty upon thoſe that did refuſe to pay 120 s. which was a great ſum in thoſe days. That which I do obſerve out of theſe two, were theſe; 1. That they were made by the King by the advice of his Lords; that there was to be yearly preparation for ſhipping. Thoſe that departed out of the ſervice, were to incur the forfeiture of all their Eſtates. If theſe Edicts were Acts of Parliament, they ſtand unrepealed, and if no Acts, then they ſtand by Command from the Kings power.

My Lords, I have ſhewed unto your Lordſhips the practice as it was before the time of William the firſt. He did not abrogate the former Laws, but was ſworn to obſerve them. Nay, it was ſaid, he did confirm Antiquas Leges & Conſuetudines Angliæ; So as then, if theſe were the Laws, and the ancient Kings of England had before his time, he did ratifie and confirm it, but not diminiſh it. This Power of commanding of Shipping, for the defence of Realm, it is a principal part of the Royal Power. This Kingdom, it is a Monarchy conſiſts of Head and Members, the King is the Head of this Politick Body, it conſiſts of Clergy and Laiety. It is furniſhed with intire Power and Juriſdiction, not only to miniſter Juſtice in cauſes Eccleſiaſtical and Temporal unto His People, but likewiſe for defence both of the one and the other. This Power I find to be mentioned in the Regiſter of original Writs before the Conqueſt; 127. b. it reciteth, that Nos inconſideratione ad providendum ſalvationem Regni noſtri, &c. It appears by Stamford in his Prerogative, Cap. 1. That as the King is the moſt excellent and worthieſt part or member of the Common-wealth, ſo is He alſo the Preſerver, Nouriſher and Defender of His People. I find it in Forteſcue, which they have cited, that a Common-wealth without this Head were but a Trunk. I find it in Fitz. Nat. Bre. fol. 73, or 173. that the King of Right ought to defend the Realm, as well againſt the Enemies at Sea, as againſt other Enemies, that it be not ſurrounded, nor waſted. How is this defence againſt the Sea and Enemies, is the King bound to defend the Realm by Sea-walls at his own Charges? No, the Power of the defence is a Superintendent Power in His Majeſty to authorize Sheriffs and Commiſſioners to ſee it done, but by His Power, yet at the charge of the People, Regiſter 227. b. It appeareth there where the King commandeth His People by His Writ, one directed to the Sheriff, the other to Commiſſioners, and in both Willeth and Commandeth quod diſtringat A. B. & alios, to diſtrain the Lands of all thoſe that may receive damage to repair to the Sea-banks, as well as the Terrtennant. This Writ was before any Statute, for the Regiſter was before the Conqueſt; and the firſt Statute that concerneth Sewers was made 6 H. 6. ſo it is by the power the King had at Common-Law, and not upon any Statute; and this was to the Sheriff as well as to Commiſſioners: and that it was done at the charge of the Country, and not at the Kings charge, Pat. 23. E. 1. m. 4. dorſ. agreeth with the Regiſter. The King doth there recite quod ratione dignitatis Regis, &c. & per juramentum ſumus aſtricti ad providendum ſalvationem Regni, and there he giveth power to Commiſſioners to diſtrain the People to make defence againſt the Sea at their own charges, Pat. 2. E. 3. 2. m. 5. dorſ. in the Caſe of Wiſeman, 2 Rep. fol. 15. The King ex officio is to govern his Subjects in peace and tranquillity, 7. Rep. fol. 9. protection of the King is generally over all the Kingdom. There is reaſon why it ſhould be thus, for the King of England he hath an entire Empire, he is an abſolute Monarch; nothing can be given unto any abſolute Prince, but is inherent in his Perſon, as may appear both by Books, Records and Acts of Parliament, Brac. lib. 2. fol. 55. b. Sciendum, &c. Dominus Rex ſuper omnes, qui ad Coronam pertinent. This appeareth likewiſe in the Statute 24 H. 8. there it is declared, that this Realm of England is one Empire, and hath been ſo accepted in the world, Stat. 25 H. 8. c. 21. 1 El. c. 1. 1 Jac. c. 1. the Crown of England is affirmed to be an Imperial Crown, and Acts of Parliament proove the higheſt nature, 16 R. 2. c. 5. that the King holdeth his Empire immediately of the God of Heaven, and at His Coronation the Crown is elevated as a ſignification thereof: this is likewiſe acknowledged in the Iriſh-Reports, fol. 60. Rex Angl. eſt abſolutus. Forteſcue ſaith the King of England, as well as any other King or Emperor, hath all his liberties within His Kingdom in Imperio ſuo. The Law of England maketh the King of England not as His Subjects, nor a natural Body, but a politick Body, freeth him from all imperfection or infirmity; he is immortal, he never dieth, the King ever liveth, 1 Com. 177. 11 Rep. 7. 21. E. 4. and other Records.

My Lords, As he is an abſolute Monarch, ſo all theſe inter jura ſummæ Majeſtatis are given unto His Perſon by the Common-Law. 1. He hath Supreme Dominion both by Sea and Land: this is proved by Mirror, the greateſt part whereof was written before the Conqueſt, ſome things added to it by H. Horn in the Reign of E. 4. he concludeth all Lands, and all Juriſdiction, and all Dominion is derived from the Crown, that whatſoever was not granted from the Crown remaineth in the Perſon of the King. This ſupremum dominium is ſo inherent in the Kings Perſon, that if the King grant away His Lands abſque aliquo reddendo, yet the tenure muſt ſtill remain to the King.

8 H. 7. 12. 30 H. 8. 45 Dyer. This Dominion is not only upon the Land, but it is upon the Sea. And ſo the King He hath not only a Dominion by Sea, but He is Dominus Mar' Angl', &c. He is both an owner of the Sea, and Soil under the Sea. And ſo it was lately reſolved by my Lord Chief-Baron, and the reſt of the Barons of the Exchequer, in the Caſe of Sutton Marſh, That the Soil of the Land, as the Sea floweth and re-floweth, is the Kings, and the King is ſeized thereof Jure Coronæ, Mirror 8. only the Dominion of the Sea, but the very Soil thereof belongeth unto the King.

Next place, He hath, beſides His Supremum Dominium, a Sovereign Juriſdiction, and that extends both by Sea and Land: 1. For creation of all His Majeſties great Officers and Judges, creation of the Admiralty time out of mind. 20 H. 7. fo. 8. 12 H. 7. 17. Power to make Juſtices could not be granted; and all theſe Powers reſumed in the Statute, as inherent in the Crown, &c. Surely this Juriſdiction by Sea did not begin in the time of R. 1. when thoſe Laws were renewed by Him at His return from the Holy-Land. But there were Admirals in England, and the Admiral-Law by Sea long before 27 E. 1. A famous Record in the Tower, that the Commiſſioners for the Emperors of Spain and France did appear before the Kings Commiſſioners, and did acknowledge, the Sovereignty of the King of England upon the Sea did belong unto Him time out of mind. And for further proof of this, it appeareth likewiſe in that Learned Book of Mr. Seldens (Mare Clauſum.)

My Lords, The next inherent Power of the Crown is 1. Pardons, 2. Reſtitutions, and 3*ly*, Pardoning of Condemned Perſons, which none can do but the King Himſelf, 1 H. 4. fo. 5. 20 H. 7. 8. The 4*th* is Jus nummi percutiendi, a ſetting of a Royal Stamp upon His Coin, and the debaſing of it, 21 E. 3. 6. That the King only can put a Value upon it, 5 Rep. 114. That the King by His abſolute Prerogative may make any Forreign Coin lawful Money of England, by His Proclamation, Daves Rep. fo. 20.

Next is, Jus Sum' Majeſtatis, that of concluding War and Peace, which is abſolutely inherent in the Kings Perſon, which He may do without calling of His great Council, 19 E. 4. 6. That all the Subjects of England without the King, 7 Rep. 25. cannot make War Bellum indicere. And to make Aliens Denizens, is a Point of High Prerogative.

My Lords, This Truſt that the King hath for making of War and Peace, and for the Defence of the Realm both by Sea and Land, it is a great Truſt inherent in the Perſon of the Crown. No Man ought to miſtruſt where the Law doth truſt. There is an Objection: If it ſhould reſt in the Power of the King, He might do it, where there ſhould be no ground for it, and without cauſe, and cauſe Forces to be muſtred, and Ships provided, where there is no eminent danger, in ſuch a manner as it might be grievous to the People. Theſe are Objections clearly againſt preſumption of Law; for where the Law truſteth we ought not to diſtruſt. The King, as appeareth by all our Books, is the Fountain of Piety and Juſtice, and will do right unto His Subjects, 1. Com' 240. All Juſtice is derived from the King, 13 E. 4. 8. The King can do no wrong, Bract.

lib. 3. ca. 9. 8 H. 6. 20. Royal Power de aver Correction de luy m'; He is the ſole Judge, and we ought not to queſtion Him, Bract. Rex non habet Superiorem niſi Deum, 11 Rep. 72. The King is the Fountain of Juſtice and Common Right. Aud the King being the Lieutenant of God cannot do wrong, 17 E. 3. 59. The King could not be made an Inſtrument of coven and fraud, but the Patent was void, 5 Rep. 14. That Religion, Juſtice and Vertue are the ſure ſupporters of Crowns and Diadems, 24 E. 3. 42. Stamford's Pleas of the Crown, 72. At the Common Law, if the King commit a Man by His Bouche; he is not repleviable. The Law doth not diſtruſt where the King committeth a Man; but it is upon juſt cauſe, and we are not to doubt it. And therefore at the Common Law ca. 15. a Man committed by the King was not repleviable. Nay, if he were committed by his Council, that was his repreſentative Body, not repleviable: Shall we then, when the Law hath committed this Power unto the King, who is the Fountain of Juſtice and Equity, who is truſted by the Law of the Realm, and the Common-Wealth, miſtruſt Him? Shall we think that ſucceeding Kings will do that which is not fit to be done? I ſay, if the Law truſt them, we ought to truſt them. But for a further Reaſon; Thoſe that are His Delegates and Judges, ought not to be miſtruſted. That which the Judge doth, as in his Office, ſhall not be aſſigned for error. If it be ſo in the Delegates Power, much more in the Primitive and Fountain. 5 Ma. Dyer 163. The Court of Kings-Bench did receive a Record of Niſi prius, the Poſtea Returned by the Clark, and the death of the Juſtice of Aſſize aſſigned for Error, and could not be received. So 1 Ma. Dyer 89. a Writ of Error to reverſe a Fine, prout en Dyer.

That is the reaſon of the Book 7 H. 7. fo. 40. 10 H. 7. 28. Fitz. Nat. Bre. ſaith the Books, he cannot aſſign for Error, nor ſhall not be admitted to alledge any thing contrary to the Office of a Judge, as to ſay the Judge did not give right Judgment, or the Clark did not make right Entries, M. 7 E. 1. coram Rege. And that is the reaſon why a Man of Non compos mentis in a Fine, and ſuffering of a Recovery, it ſhall not be aſſigned for Error againſt the Acts of a Judge, 8 Rep. fo. 121. Doctor Bonnors Caſe, Record by a Judge or Juſtice of Peace not traverſable.

(Good my Lords,) Then if by the Laws of the Kingdom one ſhall not be admitted to receive an averment againſt any Acts done by your Lordſhips, the Judges, againſt Acts done by inferior Judges; ſurely in this, where the King is abſolute Judge, it ſhall not be averred, to ſay it was no cauſe of danger, or that is done by the King which ought not to be done.

Bract. lib. 1. ca. 24. eſt in Corone Regis. The King is ſo abſolutely truſted with this Defence, that the Subject cannot make a Fort or Caſtle upon his own Free-hold without the Kings Licence. That appeareth in the old Magna Charta, fo. 162. Enquiry made of thoſe that do build Forts and Caſtles without the Kings Licence, Rot. Parliament. 45 E. 3. N. 34. 6 H. 4 59. and in a Book of Long, 5 E. 4. fo. 129. That a Subject cannot make a Fort or Caſtle without the Kings Licence, not in his own ground.

An. 1637. My Lords, The King hath ſo diſcharged this Truſt, that though there were no account unto His Subject, yet theſe Ships that have been commanded, was but ad proficiſcend' cum Navibus noſtris. The King hath been at greater Charge with theſe Ships gone out, than ever any King of England ever was, as will appear by thoſe vaſt Sums of Money the King hath ſpent theſe years, beſides what hath been contributed unto by His Subjects.

My Lords, I have done with my firſt Poſition, That the Kings of England have done this before the time of William the firſt: That it was an inherent Right in the Perſon of the King of England, and that the King is the ſole Judge both of, and when, and how the dangers are to be avoided.

It hath been objected, that the King of England may do it, but how? It muſt be according to the Inſtitution of the Laws of the Realm. There muſt be a Concurrent Power, a Politick Advice in Parliament; and ſo it may be done: But the King, either by His ordinary Power, or abſolute, without the aſſiſtance of the great Council, He cannot do it, as hath been objected.

2. Therefore in the ſecond place I ſhall come to the ſecond thing I did propoſe, and that was, that the King, as He is King of England, that He alone, for this common Defence of the Realm, without the Aid of Parliament, that he may Statuere, &c. That the King, by advice of His Council, when He pleaſe may do it: That He may ordain ſeveral ways by the Inſtitution of the Common-Law, by His Ordinance, by His Proclamation, by His Patent, by His VVrits, and by His Judges. That this may be done by Him; (1.) It is agreeable to reaſon; for Kings were before Parliaments, and then ſurely they might have done it. All Juſtice doth flow from the Crown; and originally, as it was in Moſes, ſo it was in the Kings of England, only in the Kings Perſon: But afterwards the King did depute His Deputies, and gave other Powers. This is no conceit of mine, 12 H. 7. fo. 176. per Fineaux. There was a time when there were no Municipal Laws, when Poſitive Laws were not eſtabliſhed, when Kings did rule their People according to natural Equity; and then ſurely the King might ordain, no Man will queſtion it; ſince there hath been Poſitive Laws, and Municipal Laws, the Kings of England they have ordained, as by theſe ſeveral Records cited appears. It appears by the practice that hath been ſince the time of W. 1. That the Kings of England in all thoſe VVrits, that they have ordained the iſſuing of thoſe VVrits; The number of the Ships, the times of meeting, the manner of Munition, and the ſtay for the Defence, quam diu nobis placuerit. I have made a Collection of what hath gone out by the King Himſelf, what per Regem and His Council, and what by the Advice of His Council, and with advice of Merchants and Portſ-men. But they are ſo infinite, and ſo many of them, that I will not trouble your Lordſhips with Repetition.

Theſe Ordinances concerning the Defence, they are ſuitable and agreeable to the Ordinance the King maketh in other Caſes, wherein the King alone doth ordain, as by His Proclamation, Clauſ. 24 E. 1. 3. pſ. 2. M. 2. Dor. The King by His Proclamation commanded all Earls, Barons, Knights, Eſquires, and other Men at Arms, that none of them ſhould depart into Forreign Parts. F. N. B. 85. He agreeth it, and ſaith the Book, He that ſhall tranſgreſs this Proclamation, ſhall be fined for his diſobedience. And this Command may be under the Great Seal, or Signature, or Privy-Seal: For, ſaith the Book, the Subject is to take notice of any of the Kings Seals. So in all Ages, Clauſ. 24. E. 3. M. 7. Dorſ. 4 H. 8. 11 H. 7. 23. The King granted a Proclamation for Recreations, as by Juſting, or the like, that He may command Jus by His Proclamation. And if one of the Two that is fighting be killed, it is no Felony; but if done without the Kings Proclamation, it is Felony, 5. Rep. 114. The King, by His abſolute Prerogative, may make any Coin of Money by His Proclamation.

Next place the King may ordain by His Patent alone, 40 E. 3. fo. 17, 18. The King did grant a Priviledge unto the Scholars of Oxford, That they ſhould have the choice of Inns in Oxford, which was before there was any fair Colledge in Oxford: ſaith the Townſ-man, this is my Free-hold, they cannot do it; ſay the Judges, this is a good Patent, and is in favour of Learning, and therefore a good Ordinance. So the Juſtices in Eyre may take up the principal Inn. If the King make a Corporation, is there any thing more uſual, than for the King to give Power to the Corporation to make Ordinances for common good? 49 E. 3. 162. Shall it be ſo in the Creature, and not in him that makes the Creature? A Caſe or two upon every one of them. The King may ordain by His VVrit, and that appeareth 9 E. 3. 16. A VVrit of Ceſſavit againſt the Tenants of Northumberland: The Tenants have been mightily oppreſſed by the Scots; they petitioned the King, and ſaid, they were not able to pay their Land-lords their Rents, by reaſon of thoſe incurſions upon them by the Scots, and deſire ſtay of Suit; and there it appeareth the King did ordain by His VVrit, thoſe Suits upon thoſe Reaſons ſhould not proceed againſt the Tenants for Non-payment of their Rents: out of the ſame Reaſon are the VVrits of Protection.

Then the King and His Council may ordain; for that I find M. 4. H. 3, Fitz. Dower 179. VVrit of Dower there brought by a French VVoman; the Tenant of the VVrit pleaded, That there was an Ordinance of the King and His Council, quod nullus de Regno Franciæ, &c. That is, that no Engliſh Man ſhould be compelled to anſwer any French Man or VVoman in a Legal Suit, till the Engliſh were anſwered in France to their Suits; there 39 E. 3. 7. per Thorp. The King and His Lords may make an Ordinance, which ſhall be binding as a Statute, Rot. Fr 72 E. 3. M. 6.

Upon Ordinance of the King and His Council I can ſhew above 40 VVrits that have gone out unto the Nobility, Clergy, Arch-Biſhops and Biſhops, and to all the Kings Subjects, to aid for the Maritime Parts, Rot. Fr. 22 E. 3. M. 16. & 50 E. 3. M. 41. Do. 24 E. 3. M. 6. That of 24 is to thoſe In-lands within ſix Miles of the Sea. 40 E. 3. M. 37. The like VVrits awarded to moſt of the Maritime Counties, upon pain of the ſeizure of their Lands and Goods: So likewiſe for Proviſion for the Army the King and His Council hath ordained, both for Markets to be kept within ſuch a diſtance of the Army, and VVine ſold there, and no where elſe, Rot. Sco. 10. 12 E. 2. M. 13. Dor. So they have ſet down the number of the Men of Arms that every Town ſhould be charged with, Cl. 13 E. 3. pſ. 1. 14. Dor. with a Command, that they ſhould deſtroy the Commonalty of that County, for the Wages of thoſe Men at Arms.

My Lords, If the King may at all times of danger, by His Proclamation, by His Patent, by His Writs, by the Advice of His Council, ſurely in Caſes of neceſſity it is much more, for neceſſitas eſt Lex temporis, where a Defence by Sea and Land is neceſſarily required, M. 12 Car' opinion, That Men might be compelled to bring in their Proviſion to the Market, whether they will or no, 5 E. 4. 6. 14 H. 7. 29.

Jurors are by Law to hold together till they give their Verdicts; yet otherwiſe if the Houſe be like to fall over their Heads, 38 H. 6. 11. Upon a Præcipe the Tenants may be excuſed, if he could not paſs the Waters.

My Lords, I find that in Legal matters the King, by the Advice of His Judges, who are His Councel, may ordain, that the Judges are the Kings Councel in Legal Matters, 19 E. 3. 17. 4. Fitz. Judgment, 27 H. 6. fo. 5. Court of Kings-Bench called the Kings Councel, 6 E. 1. the King and His Judges make certain explanations upon the Statute of Glouceſter, as appeareth by Magna Charta; and what was done then by the Judges Advice, is the force of a Law at this day. So as you ſee by the Laws of England, as well in other Caſes, as Caſes of Defence, the Law hath given the King of England this Power to ordain for the good and ſafety thereof. I find that in all Ages, and in all Times, all the Incidents to a Defence, as well as this principal part, hath been given to the King Himſelf, as He is King of England. (1.) For the Murage of Towns, that the King hath commanded the Murage of Towns to be done at the Peoples charge. And ſhall His Power extend to particuler Cities, as Towns? and ſhall not He command for the Defence of the Wooden-walls of the Kingdom? Rot. Alur' 12 E. 3. pſ. 2. M. 10. The King commandeth, by Writ, a Place to be Fortified towards a War approaching, and every Man having Rent there to contribute, or be compelled by diſtreſs; this was commanded to be done, by the Writ, Pat. 12 E. 3. pſ. 3. M. 5. appeareth it was done. The King impoſed a certain Rate upon all Goods and Merchandizes that came unto Kingſton upon Hull, and commanded, that this ſhould be imployed to the Walling of the Town. And this was de voluntate Regis; this appeareth 19 E. 2. pſ. 1. M. 12. There was the ſame Command for Dover and other Towns, ſame Roll in 22. Pat. 12 E. 3. pſ. 3. M. 14. Dor. A Writ for the repairing of the Walls of Wincheſter at the Subjects Charge, Rot. ibidem M. 15. The King by ſpecial Grant gave Power to the Major and Burgeſſes to Aſſeſs the Inhabitants for the Defence of the Town, Clauſ. 1. R. 2. M. 12. Oxford was commanded by the King to be fortified at the Inhabitants Charge, Cl. 12 E. 3. pſ. 3. M. 32.

The King commanded particular Subjects to fortifie their Caſtles at their own Charges in time of danger, Pat. 1. 8 E. 3, M. 9. The King taketh the Caſtle of the Subjects into His own Hands in times of danger, ad defendend' contra Inimicos, &c. Clauſ. 13 E. 3. pſ, 1. M. 36. Dor. the King, by the Advice of His Council, did ordain, That the Town of Southampton, pro ſalvatione ejuſdem, ſhould build a Wall. My Lords, The King may command the walling of the Town at the Charge of the Inhabitants; He may likewiſe command the Defence of the Kingdom by Sea. So for other incidents of Defence; as for erecting of Beacons upon the Sea-Coaſt, Rot. vaſ. 11. 12 E. 3. m. 29. Dor. Combuſt' inſigniis, &c.. Clauſ. 1 R. 2. m. 4 Dor. de ordinatione pro vigiliis; &c. An. 1637.

Ordinances by themſelves, by their Council, by their Judges, by their Peers, and theſe Ordinances have been obeyed.

My Lords, I promiſed upon this Head to make it good, that in theſe times, and in theſe years, wherein there were Parliaments, that though the Parliaments did determine concerning the Land-Forces, and the going of the Kings Army into Scotland, that yet the Parliament ſitting, the King hath commanded the ſetting forth of Ships by His Writ; this was ever left unto the Royal Power. For the proof of this there was 24 E. 1. a Parliament, as appereth in the Printed Books; yet we find in that year, the King hath commanded the ſetting forth of Ships at the Charge of the Subject, Pat. 24 E. 1. m. 17. Command to take up 100 Ships; and in P. 24 E. 1. ex parte Regis, Rem' Exchequer Rot. 22. Command, pro Cuſtod' Marit', 9 E. 2. Parliament holden at Lincoln; and yet in the ſame year Writs went out to provide Shipping, as appeareth by Rot. Pat. 9 E. 2. pars 2. m. 26. I find that there was a Parliament holden 12 E. 2. This appeareth in the Book of Statutes, Rot. Sco. 11. 12 E. 2. m. 8. The King recites certain Inrodes made upon the Men in Northumberland, Et quod de Communi Concilio held at York, Ordinavimus, &c. and Aſſigns the Earls of Pembroke, and Biſhop of Norwich, ad requirend', Norfolke & Suffolke, juxta diſcretiones veſtras Subſidium facere per Naves, &c. per tempus 3 vel 4 Menſium. At this time there was a Proviſion by Parliament for the Kings Service by Land, and for his Armies to meet him at New-Caſtle, and for two Reaſons, why Navale Subſidium ſhould be neceſſary: 1. To hinder the bringing of any Victuals into Scotland. 2. For the free entercourſe of Trade, ſo as you in this year, wherein a Parliament was holden, this Navale Subſidium was commanded by the Kings Writ without any Act of Parliament; though the Writ was for Norfolk and Suffolk, yet the like was for Dorſet, Somerſet, &c. It appeareth likewiſe 10, 11 E. 3. which were thoſe great years of ſending out of Writs, that then Parliaments were holden: and ſo it doth appear by the printed Book of Statutes; yet in that year of 10. Clauſ. 10 E. 3. m. 37. Do. a Writ directed to the Major and Bailiffs of Briſtol, with a Command, that all Ships of 40 Tun, & ultra, ſhould be ſeized, 10 E. 3. m. 21. Do. Command that the Ships ſhould be ſent forth for the preventing of danger; and that no Forreign Ships come in to aid the Scots, Membr' 21. Dor. ſame Roll, Command to the City of London to ſet forth Ships at their own Charge, Sco. 10 E. 3. m. 21. Do. Writs to the Sheriff of   to ſend Horſe-men and Foot-men to the County of Southampton. So there were Men drawn out of their own County, and the refuſers were called their Rebels, Rot. ibidem m. 21. de Navibus pro defenſione Regni.

My Lords, There was ſomething more obſervable in this year of E. 3. for ſome of the Writs that went out beareth Teſte 3 Octob. Sco. 10 E. 3. m. 7. and mentioneth a Parliament, but did not go out by any Ordinance of Parliament; and by the Royal Power, which is a ſtrong Argument, there needeth no Aid of Parliament for the King to command His Forces; 11 E. 3. was likewiſe a Parliament, as appeareth in the Printed Book of Statutes: Writ dated 10 Jan. 17 E. 3. m. 2. Do. per ipſum Regem; Ships are commanded pro guerra ſuper Mare, Vaſc. 10 E. 3. m. 6. Do. Procla. to ſeveral Counties, ties, that all Ships be in a readineſs; 12th year of E. 3. Parliament ſummoned at Northampton, Cl. 12 E. 3. pars 2. m. 1. ſame Roll, pars 3. m. 22. Do. and yet this ſame year the King commanded Shipping at the Charge of the Counties, as appeareth 12 E. 3. pars 1. m. 12. Cl. 12 E. 2. pars 3. m. 29. And in the 13th year of E. 3. was likewiſe a Parliament holden; and that appeareth Parl 13 E. 3. m. 9. 12. Printed Statutes make no mention of a Parliament then.

My Lords, In this Record theſe things are obſervable, cited, and made uſe of by the Defendants Counſel, a ſtrong Record as any can be againſt them.

In that Parliament, the King He did pray the Advice of the Commons in Parliament, touching His Wars with France, and the guarding of the Sea-Coaſts: The Commons make anſwer, Prient les Commons que ils ne Counſel doner al choſes de quel ne pas Conizance, &c. They ſay further, and they grant, That the Maritime Towns ought to make the Guard upon the Sea without Wages taken, and the In-land Commons upon the Land. Two things that are obſervable in this Record: 1. When the King to deſcend ſo low as to pray the Advice of the Commons in Parliament, and Aſſiſtance, for the Guarding of the Sea: The Commons diſclaimed and ſaid, they have no Juriſdiction &c. And yet the Defendants Counſel did preſs, that now the King ſhould ask the Advice of the Commons in Parliament, a thing diſclaimed 13 year E. 3. to have any Juriſdiction. 2. By this Record the Maritime Parts ought to guard the Sea at their own Coſts; this though it be granted in their Petition, it was not granted by the King: For it appeareth in the ſame year, Rot. Alm' 13 E. 3. m. 13. Do. that King Edward in that year heard of ſome Preparation in France, commanded Ships for three Months, Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 1. m. 14. That in ſeveral Counties Men were diſtrained for payment of Wages for the Archers, and others that guarded the Sea-Coaſts. It appeareth by thoſe Records, that both the Guard of the Sea and Sea-Coaſts was done juxta Ordinationem noſtram, Order made by us and our Counſel, Rot. Alm' 13 E. 3. m. 15. Do. The King appointed the Arch-Biſhop of York, Hugh de Peircy et al' for that purpoſe, &c. So, my Lords, I have done with the ſecond Ground, that is, That the King is ſole Judge of this, without His Parliament.

That the Commons in Parliament have diſclaimed to have any Cognizance of it.

That in the ſame year where Parliaments were holden, the ſame years the ſame Writs have iſſued without Advice in Parliament.

The third thing that I did propoſe, was thoſe Supreme Titles which the Common Law of England giveth unto the King, which may inforce this. Bra. lib. 2. Cap. 24. ſaith, That the King is Vicarius Dei, His Power ſurely, as was agreed, is Jure Divino; God is the God of Hoſts, and the King is a Model of God himſelf, 40 E. 3. fo. 18. The King is the chief Guardian of the Common-Wealth: The Sheriff hath poſſe Comitatus under the King, the Kings Vicegerent in his County; this Power not only for the execution of Legal Proceſs, but for the Defence of the Realm, 12 H. 7. fo. 7. This delegate Power of the Sheriffs, is as well for De-

An. 1637. fence, as Execution of Proceſs; Shall the Sheriff do it and not the King? 10 H. 3. *fo.*1. The King is the Conſervator of the Law, 20 H. 7. fo. 4. Rex eſt Capitalis Juſticiarius totius Angliæ; He is not only to maintain Juſtice in Courts of Juſtice, but to protect and defend His People. Stamfords Prerogative Cap. 1. The King is the moſt worthy part of the Body of the Common-Wealth, Preſerver, Nouriſher, and Defender; and by this they enjoy their Lands, Goods and Lives, 11 Rep. 7. 6. Maudlin Colledge Caſe. Rex eſt Medicus Regni, & ſponſus Reipublicæ: It is the part of a good Phyſitian, as well to prevent Diſeaſes as to cure them; and an Office of a good King, as well to prevent danger as to remedy it, Com' fo. 130. He is the Soul that animates the Body of the Common-Wealth, and we ought to move as He moves, 11 Rep. fo. 72. the Fountain of common Right; therefore we have no reaſon to ſtain the Fountain. I am now come unto my fourth Proof, which is by Preſidents; wherein I ſhall be ſomewhat long; and therefore I humbly crave leave to argue another day.

The End of Mr. Attorney-Generals firſt day's Argument.

Mr. Attorney General his ſecond days Argument for the King in the Caſe of Ship-Money, Dec. 1637.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips to remember I ſhewed you by Charters Aids, and by a great number of Preſidents, that this Regal Power was in the King of England before the Conqueſt; and that though ſome were exempted from the ſetting forth of Ships, by Grant unto ſome particular Men, or ſome particular Churches; yet theſe three fundamental Services of Expedition, repairing Caſtles, and making of Bridges, &c. were always excepted: Then I ſhewed by a great number of Preſidents, that not only the Principals, but all Acceſſories that concern the Defence of the Realm, both by Sea and Land, have been always commanded by the Kings; the fortifying of Towns and Caſtles, and the Murage of Towns, the appointment of Admirals of the Fleet, and thoſe that ſhould be Guardians by Sea and Land, the Imbarging of Ships, and Arrayes of Men, erection of Beacons, diſcharging of others upon juſt cauſe, by puniſhing of thoſe that were Rebels; and all this was done by the Kings Command, per ipſum Regem aut per Regem & Concilium, without any Aid in Parliament. Likewiſe I have made it appear unto your Lordſhips, That the King is the Sole Judge of the Defence, that the King is not to be miſtruſted in the execution of His Office as King, nor your Lordſhips as Judges are to be miſtruſted.

I have now ſhewn out of the Preſidents, That in thoſe years, wherein there have been Parliaments, and ſometimes ſitting, the Parliament Writs have iſſued per ipſum Regem, aut per Regem & Concilium. I ſhall now proceed to make good the other Particulars which I have opened unto your Lordſhips. 1. That theſe Preſidents which have been ſhewed, and which I ſhall ſhew unto your Lordſhips, that they have not been grounded upon any particular Covenant, Charter, Cuſtom, but upon the Law of the Land, and upon ſuch Reaſons as are univerſal, and binds all the Kings Subjects, as well Clergy as Laity. For this I ſhall remember Cl. 48 H. 3. m. 3. the Writ doth recite, Quod tam Milites & Liberi tenentes & omnes alij, &c. ad defenſionem Regni teneantur, Cl. 9 E. 3. m. 11. pro defenſione Regni omnes teneantur, Sco. 10 E. 3. m. 12. Quia quod omnes tangit per omnes ſupportari debet. And the ſame Roll, m. 20. Do. Ex ligeantia ad defenſionem contra hoſtes Aggreſſus Inimicos manus apponere, Malm. 12. E. 3 m. Do. omnes & ſinguli tenentur, & ſe & ſua exponere, ſame Roll m. 21. Do. omnes & ſinguli ad defenſionem Regni ſunt aſtricti. And I think every Man will acknowledge himſelf to be bound out of his Allegiance, Malm. 13 E. 3. m. 13. Do. ex ligeantia ad defenſionem Regni, & veſtrum & veſtrorum, ſame Roll m. 17. and there be ſeveral Writs unto all the Biſhops of England, quod invenerint homines ad Arma pro defenſione; Frankalmaine Tenure was no Plea againſt this Service, Rot. Franc. 46 E. 3. m. 34. There was a Writ directed to the Biſhop of Canterbury for the Arming and Arraying of all Eccleſiaſtical Perſons within his Province; the like to the Biſhop of York for the Arming and Arraying of all Eccleſiaſtical Perſons within his Province; the like to the Biſhop of Durham in the ſame Roll; ſo it extends to all the Kings Subjects, and to the Clergy as well as to the Laity: Nay, it doth appear, that theſe Towns, and theſe Ports, that were obliged to do particular Service; that yet in caſe of an extraordinary Defence, that there the Writs went out not only to perform the ordinary Service, but Services ultra debita. The Cinque-Ports, by the Charter E. 1. was to ſet forth 52 Ships at their own Charge for 15 days; yet we find by divers Writs, and in ſeveral Kings Times, that the five Ports have been required to do further Service, Arreſts have been made of their Ships ultra Servitia debita, Sco. 10 E. 3. m. 23. Do. 28. Do. There was a Command, That all their Ships of 40 Tun ſhould be arreſted for the Kings Service; and ſo likewiſe, ſame Roll M. 22. That all Ships of the five Ports, tam majores quam minores, ſhould be arreſted, Malm. 13 E. 3. m. 13. Omnes Naves qui tranſire poterint arreſted to the five Ports; ſo then for the Councel on the other ſide, to tell us of particular Rolls, that theſe and theſe Towns were obliged to do theſe Services; this, under favour, is no VVarrant, for though they be obliged to do theſe Services; yet upon the occaſions to take all their Ships ultra Servitia debita, Cl. 16 E. 3. m. 13. Do. The King writeth unto divers Earls, Barons, and others, in this manner, Quod ſint tam citius, &c. quam poterint parati, at ſuch a place beyond your Service, with Horſe and Arms, and come to our Town of New-Caſtle upon Tyne; ſo as the Writ was directed to all the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and all the Kings Subjects, but not only with their due Service, but beyond their Service, to be at New-Caſtle; ſo as your Lordſhips ſee the Motives, the Grounds, and the Reaſons of theſe Writs are univerſal, they concern not particular Port and Subject, but all the Kings Subjects, and they are generally ex ligeantia ſua debita; ſo as that is the firſt thing I would obſerve unto your Lordſhips, That theſe Writs and Preſidents are grounded upon the Law of the Land, and not upon particular Truſt.

An. 1637. The ſecond is this, That all theſe Writs have iſſued by the Kings Mandate, either by the King, or by the King and His Council, without Advice in Parliament, of which I have made a Collection, which is better for me to attend your Lordſhips withal, than to cite them, becauſe there are above 500; wherein I have diſtinguiſhed what hath been awarded per Regem, and what per Regem & Concilium, and where the advice of particular Merchants and Portſ-men were required, Sco. 11 E. 3. m. 2. Do. 19 E. 3. pars 1. m. 26. Do. And in theſe the advice of particular Men were called to aſſiſt the King and His Council. Now, my Lords, if before the time of William, and ſince the time of William the firſt, for many hundred years together, that this hath been done, ſhall not theſe Preſidents make a Law-Rule of our Books? that Preſidents that are not againſt the Law, nor contrary to the Rules and Reaſons of the Law, they make a Law; that appeareth by 4 E. 4. fo. 43. The Chancellor ſent forth a Writ of Error, the Judges take exception both to the matter and to the manner, ſaith the Book, becauſe it hath been always uſed; for the Preſidents make a Law, though the Writ were contrary to Law and Reaſon, 33 H. 6. fo. 20. An abſurd Return made by Sheriffs, yet becauſe Preſidents to warrant it, a good Return, 20 R. 2. fo. 7. Where a Duty was to be paid to a Corporation of Major and Commonalty, the Duty being to be paid to the Body, and an Acquittance to be had from them; but becauſe it hath been uſed, the Major alone to make the Acquittance, a good Acquittance, 2 Rep. Lanies Caſe. The King ſhall not part with his Intereſt without the Great Seal: But yet a Leaſe for years, under the Great Seal of the Exchequer, good by Cuſtom, 4 Rep. 9. That the Preſidents of a Court are good againſt the expreſs words of a Statute: Having ſo many Preſidents, I will not trouble you any longer, though I have reſerved a ſpecial place for the anſwering of Objections; yet to ſuch Objections as fall materially in the way I ſhall give an Anſwer, though reſerve the Anſwer of the main Objection unto the fifth place. It hath been ſaid by Mr. Holborne, That here hath been a diſcontinuance of time; and that ſince the time of 50 E 3. none of theſe Writs have iſſued: Shall diſcontinuance of time take away the Kings Right? If there have been no uſe within the time of memory, yet if this have been an inherent Right in the Crown of England, ſhall the Crown loſe it by diſcontinuance of time againſt the Rules of Law? 10 H. 4. fo. 6. Where the King is a Founder of a Biſhop or Abbot, and is by common Right to have a Corody, though not uſed, that the King hath not demanded it in time of memory, yet the King ſhall not loſe it, N. B. 5. Writ of Right brought by the King, wherein muſt alledge Seiſin, will you bind the King to alledge a Seiſin in Him and His Progenitors? For if once the King had a Seiſin, protract of time ſhall not diſcontinue it, 22 H. 7. fo. 20. The Stat. of Mortmaine confineth the Lord to enter within a year and a day; but it ſhall not bind the King, for He may do it at any time, 35 H. 6. fo. 26. If a Villain do alien the Land, it bindeth not the King, Plenartie 6 Month no Plea againſt the King, 6 Rep. 20. No diſcontinuance of time if the King hath a Right, 7 E. 4. 30. If an Alien and another Man purchaſe Lands together, and the Alien die, the King ſhall not be prevented by Survivorſhip, and in Perſonal Goods you ſhall raiſe no preſcription againſt the King, 35 H. 6. fo. 27. there is no Man can pretend a Title to the Kings Goods, for Waifs, Strays or Wrecks, for no preſcription can invade the Kings Profit, but then they ſay, that the Preſidents are not in all times, for we have not ſhewn, nor cannot ſhew, that in all times theſe Writs have iſſued. A ſtrange objection in all times. My Lords, It is a caſual Service. In all times, God be thanked, not that occaſion or neceſſity of this Defence: VVill you have us ſhew Preſidents for a Caſual Service? 4 Rep. 10. If a Man hold to do Service to his Lord, to go with him into the War of the King, this is out of the Stat. of Limitation; for it may happen not once in 200 or 300 years; therefore the Law doth not require you ſhould have a Seiſin for this, for it is caſual; that is the reaſon that Homage and Fealty and caſual Services, they are out of that Statute of Limitations; ſo as now by the ſame reaſon, that they would tie us to Preſidents, where there was no occaſion; by the ſame reaſon the Tenants are to do Homage, or go into Wars, when there was no occaſion; but beſides, he is much miſtaken, for theſe Preſidents did not end with E. 3. 7 R. 2. m. 18. 13 H. 6. m. 10. 14 pars 1. m. 14. a great number of Ships commanded them in the Kings Service; but it hath been ſaid, That the People have always petitioned againſt it, and there hath been a decrying by the People; they have petitioned in Parliament, and theſe things good by Cuſtom, muſt gather ſtrength by a conſent; and that further, when Petitions have been preferred, the King hath not denied the Petition expreſly.

My Lords, I ſhall ſhew, when I come to a particular Anſwer to theſe Records and Petitions, that they have mentioned, That notwithſtanding theſe Petitions, this Service hath been always continued; and for the Anſwer that he ſpeaketh of, that they have not been denied: Theſe are the words, Le Roy adviſera; we may know whether this be an expreſs denial or no; ſo though the King take time to adviſe of the Parliament, of His Commons, this is no Argument, but that it is a mannerly kind of denial; beſides, in the very years of 13 E. 3. the Writs for the Shipping Buſineſs went out by the Royal Power for the ſame year; then it hath been ſaid, that we can make no Preſidents of this; for though Writs have gone out, yet it doth not appear, that theſe Writs have been put in practice, nor any execution of it; but the Services have been done, as appeareth by the Monuments of Times; then it doth appear by other Records, that the Wages of Mariners were paid by the Country theſe very years, Cl. 20 E. 2. m. 6, 7. It doth appear, that ſome particular Men that had particular diſcharges, either becauſe they were in the Kings Service, or in Gaſcoigne, or lived in the Sea-Coaſts, that they pleaded their diſcharges, and had the ſame for that reaſon, 23 E. 1. m. 14. So as, my Lords, upon this ſecond Ground, that theſe Writs have gone forth thus conſtantly in ſeveral Ages, that there being ſuch a number of Preſidents, that the diſcontinuances have been even when there was no occaſion: That the Preſidents of the Courts of Juſtice make a Law, and diſcontinuance cannot take away the Kings Title. This is the ſecond that I do inſiſt upon, and that theſe Preſidents make a Law.

The

An. 1637.

The third thing I ſhall obſerve upon theſe Preſidents is this, that theſe Writs have gone forth, not only in Caſes of an actual War, or in caſes of an Invaſion, when the Fleet hath been upon the Seas, but by way of preparation before-hand, when the Enemy meant to come, and in contingent Caſes when the King might conceive any danger might enſue, but in theſe Caſes Writs have iſſued, that will appear, Cl. 48. H. 3. m. 2. the Writs are here in Court, cum neceſſe ſit ad defenſionem Regni eſſe promptum, &c. Cl. 23. E. 1. M. 5. dorſ. there was ſeveral writs directed unto divers Earls, Biſhops and others de Cuſtod. Marit. the words are theſe, *quia volumus quod partes Marit. in Com. Remembrance in the Exchequer upon information, that there was 1000 Men in Flanders, and preparation to come unto Yarmouth to burn the Town, Writs ſent forth by the Treaſurer and Barons ex officio to be in readineſs, in cauſe there was Invaſion, Pat. 9. E. 2. pars 2. M. 26. Writs directed to all the Port Towns between Southampton and Thames, to ſet forth Ships at their own charge for the better defence of the Kingdom, and againſt others that commit depredations upon the Sea, as well to our men of this Kingdom, as to others coming to our Kingdom, Sco. 11. 12 E. 2. M. 18. the King by ſeveral Writs directed to the ſeveral Commiſſioners in ſeveral Counties, reciting the proviſion made for his Army in Land at the laſt Parliament, and ſaith, nos conſiderantes ad expeditionem præd. tam ad impediend. Scotos quam pro Cuſtod. Maris, &c. And ſo commandeth for that purpoſe, that Ships ſhould be ſent forth out of ſeveral Counties for theſe two Cauſes, The one to hinder Victuals going into Scotland, the other for free entercourſe of Trade, that appeareth in the 10*th* year of E. 3. that the Ships of France were not upon our Sea-Coaſts, but were in Britain and in France, and yet the King upon relation that they have an intention to invade the Realm, did ſend forth for the providing of Ships into moſt parts of the Realm, this was only upon information, Sco. 10. E. 3. M. 30. ut audivimus M. 13. ut intelligimus, M. 16. 22. quòd auditum, M. 18. do. 12. do. 5. do. in portibus tranſmarinis parat. ſo by the Records this preparation of Ships was only upon information, Fra. 26. E. 3. M. 5. quia vulgaris opinio noſtrum Regnum Angl. invadere, therefore commandeth Shipping by Sea, and Forces by Land, Fra. 10. R. 2. M. 23, 24. quia cert. Rumores quod Francia infra breve tempus hoc Regnum invadere, and for the reſt commandeth the cuſtody of the Sea and the Sea-Coaſts, ſo as it doth appear by theſe Records, that upon an Information or Conjecture of the King, that he may ſend forth theſe Writs, and command His Subjects to be in readineſs in caſe that danger might happen, better ſo than to receive a blow, and then to make preparation for defence, we ſhould buy that with repentance, prudentiſſimæ ratio qui timor Belli, &c. præparavit, and ſurely when the King ſeeth theſe preparations abroad, the great Armies in adjacent Countries, great reaſon we ſhould be in preparation; this is not only conſonant to Preſidents, Wiſdom of Time, Policy of State, but to the reaſon of our Common-Law. If a man be in fear that another man lyeth in wait for him to do him a miſchief, ſhall he ſtay ſtill he receive a wound? 17. E. 4. 4. in this Caſe he may have a Writ to bind him to the Peace, 13 H. 7. fol. 17. if a man have a warranty for his Land, ſhall he ſtay till he be impleaded? No, a Warantia Charta lyeth till he be impleaded. If Lord and Tenant in antient demeſn, and the Lord will require that other ſervices of his Tenant than he ought to perform, ſhall the Tenant ſtay till there be a Diſtreſs taken, nay, he ſhall have his monſtraverunt, F. N. 40 E. 3. fol. 45, 46. and this only upon a verbal demand of ſervices, ſhall then the Common-Law of England ſecure the Subject not to ſtay till a preſent danger, but ſhall have his war' Charta monſtraver' before Diſtreſs taken, and ſhall not the Common-Law provide for the King, that he in his expectation of danger make his preparation, for ſurely theſe Preſidents are according to reaſon of Law.

The next thing that I did obſerve out of theſe Preſidents was, that in theſe very years where there have been aids granted to the Crown, pro defenſione Regni, and in the very year theſe Writs have iſſued out of the Royal Power, Cl. 48 H. 3. m. 2. 3. dorſ. there was then a tenth given by the Clergy pro defenſione Regni, and yet in that year he did command the defence of the Realm both by Sea and Land, and that appeareth Pat. 48. H. 3. m. c. dorſ. Cl. 48. H. 3. m. 30. in the 22 E. 1. the King had given unto him in Parliament pro ſubſidio guerræ a tenth of all moveable Goods which was to be collected in the 23*d* year, as appeareth Pat. 22. E. 1. m. 2.

My Lords, This very year wherein this was paid, he commanded a great number of Shipping for the defence of the Coaſts, and that appeareth Pat. 23. E. 1. m. 6. Writs were directed unto divers Sheriffs of divers Counties, Suſſex, Southamton, Dorſet, &c. commanding them to be aiding and aſſiſting to William Thornton in the taking of all the Ships of thoſe Counties, Pat. 23. E. 1. m. 7. Commiſſion. Radulphus de Salvica ad providendum de Navibus, ita quod fuit quandocunque mandamus, ſo to be in readineſs with all Ships in thoſe parts that were of 40 Tunn, m. 5. ſame Roll Writs directed to moſt of the Sheriffs of England to be aſſiſting to John de Barwick to the chuſing and ſending forth Archers ad proficiſcendum in Fleta noſtra, ſo as they were not only brought out of their own Counties, but out of all the Counties in England ad proficiſcendum. My Lords, This 23*d* year wherein the grant was of the tenth of all the moveables, Pat. 2. E. 1. m. 7. the King writeth to all the Archbiſhops, Earls and others, reciting that he hath committed the Cuſtody of the Sea to Will. de Stocks, ita quod idem Will. omnes, &c. naming the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Earls, &c. compellere, &c. prout neceſſe fuer. ſo as you ſee the greateſt Subject is not exempted from theſe Commands, but ſhould be auxiliantes, reſpondentes & intendentes, Cl. 23. E. 1. m. 5. dorſ. the King commanded the Biſhop of London and Norwich for the ſafeguard of the Sea-coaſts, Pat. 23. E. 1. m. 1. A Command unto all Archbiſhops, Abbots, Earls, Barons, Knights, and others commanding them, to be aiding unto Adam de S. ita quod idem Adam compellere poſſet quoties neceſſe, &c. ſo Cl. 23. E. 1. m. 5. dorſ. the like Command; ſo as, my Lords, in thoſe times which were 23. E. 1. when there was an aid granted by Parliament, it doth appear theſe great defences both by Sea and Land were commanded.

My Lords, 10 E. 3. in a Parliament holden at Notingham, there was a fifteenth granted to the King for three years, and ſo it was recited

An. 1637. recited in the Record, and appeareth likewiſe, Pat. 12. E. 3. m. 2. pars 3. Cl. 12. E. 3. m. 28. pars 3. it appeareth that a tenth and fifteenth granted to the King in Parliament, and this was tam pro defenſione quam pro arduis negotiis, 12. E. 3. the Prelates and Lords, and Commons, at a Parliament holden at Weſtminſter gave the King 10000 Sacks of Wooll, ſaid to be given pro defenſione Regni, as appears Rot. Alm. 12 E. 3. pars 1. In the ſame year there was granted likewiſe pro defenſione Regni medietat. Lanar. the moity of all their Woolls. m. 31, 32. dorſ. 2.

In the ſame year of 12. E. 3. the Clergy, they gave the King in Parliament medietat. Lanar. uſque viginti mille Saccar. as appeareth Cl. R. 12. E. 3. pars 3. m. 13.

Cl. 12 E. 3. pars 2. m. 1. dorſ. and in this 12 year of E. 3. the King collected a tenth and fifteenth that was granted unto him by the Laiety in Parliament, as appeareth Cl. 12 E. 3. pars 3. m. 30. 1. & 28.

And beſides all this the Clergy gave the King a tenth Cl. 12 E. 3. pars 3. m. 30. 1. theſe I cite more particularly becauſe no memory of them in the Printed Statutes.

Were all theſe Aids granted 10, 11, 12 E. 3. pro defenſione Regni, and ſhall the King in theſe very years ſend forth Writs for the defence of the Sea and the Kingdom? Now, my Lords, in this 12*th* year wherein all theſe great aids were granted Rot. m. 12 E. 3. 1 pars m. 12. that Walter de M. was appointed Admiral of the Fleet towards the North, and appointed Commiſſioners ad aſſidendum Villas bonis & Catallis ad contribuendum, &c. and Commanded all Sheriffs and Officers to be aſſiſting, ſo as by this Record it doth appear that in the 12*th* year Ships and Forces were commanded, Cl. 12 E. 3. pars 1. m. 17. dorſ. Commanded by the King, that the men of Surry and Suſſex ſhould have their Goods ſeized, and their Perſons impriſoned if they refuſed to contribute towards the charge for Shipping. Alm. 12 E. 3. pars 1. m. 2. a Commiſſion to William de B. and others, ad aſſidendum Omnes homines jnxta ſtatutum, &c. and to ſeize their Goods and Chattels to contribute for the wages of Mariners for the Ships, ſo as your Lordſhips ſee by that Record, though there be Aids, Tenths, Subſidies and Fifteenths granted by the Clergy and Laiety, yet in that very ſame year if any extraordinary occaſion, though Ships not upon the Sea, the King hath commanded the defence of the Sea and Land at the charge of the Country; I have done with the fourth particular.

The fifth particular is this Aid, and theſe Contributions, they have not been required from the Maritime Towns, but from the Inland Counties per totam Angliam; and this materially is to be inſiſted upon, becauſe we are more in an Inland County: the County of Bucks, my Lords, this was done before the conqueſt, your Lordſhips have heard, for Alfred the firſt Monarch 827. juſſit omnibus, &c. per totam Angl.

fol. 108. quod, &c. —— &c. So it was general and univerſal throughout the Realm, concurring with theſe antient Preſidents and Councils ſince the time of Will. the firſt, Cl. 48 H. 3. m. 2. For where a Record is to be applied unto ſeveral purpoſes, I muſt mention the Record: again it appeareth by the Record of Bedfordſhire, which is an Inland County, was charged with the guard of the Sea-Coaſts, and paid for Wages, ſame Roll m. 3. in bl. 20. dorſ. Rutland, Oxfordſhire and Dorſetſhire, Inland Counties, charged for the ſame ſervices, Pat. 48. H. 3. m. 7. Cambridge and Huntingtonſhire charged for the like ſervice, and that they ſhould do prout Concilium noſtrum ordinarum, &c. 24 E. 1. Kings Remembrancer ſide Rot. 77, 78, 79. title de —— pro Cuſtodienda Maris, and Writs went out for Ships into divers Counties, and amongſt others to Buck-ſhire, Pat. 26. E. 4. m. 21. when there was a complaint that the Subject did ſuffer upon undue levies, the Commiſſioners that are directed for enquiry, directed to all the Counties of England, as well Inland as Maritime: It proveth this Cuſtody of the Sea was as well by the Inland Counties, as by the Maritime, 23 E. 1. Pat. m. 5. that men to furniſh a Fleet were drawn and commanded from the moſt parts of the Kingdom, Sco. 10 E. 3. m. 14. Inland Counties charged with Shipping for the defence of the Kingdom, as Cambridge, Huntington, Nottingham, Darby, Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 3. m. 14. dorſ. And there Oxfordſhire is charged with Cuſtod. Marit. Sco. 12 E. 3. dorſ. de Bedfordſhire, Buckinghamſhire (your County) and Darbyſhire there charged with the ſame defence, Cl. 1. R. 2. M. 18. there Cambridge and Huntington were to provide a Barge at their own charge, and yet no ſeafaring men there, and like Writs were directed to Nottingham and Darby, though they had none, yet they had money and means to provide them.

Fra. 7. R. 2. m. 18. The King ſends His Writs into moſt Counties of England, as well Inland as Maritime, reciting that the King of France was gone with an Army into Flanders, that Callice was in danger, and commandeth that all Knights, Eſquires and Archers, and every of them according to their Eſtate and Faculty be ſufficiently arrayed and armed, and come to the Port of Sandwich ad proficiſcendum, &c.

My Lords, In this Record there was a mention of Buckingham, Bedford, Huntington Cambridge, Nottingham, Darby, Exeter, Rutland, Northampton, Bucks and Berks, all theſe Inland Counties; the words of the Writ are, quod omnes teneantur pro defenſione Regni, Cl. 9. E. 3. m. 10, vel 20. quod, &c. all and every of our Kingdom out of their Allegiance to be ready to defend the Realm, 13 E. 3. dorſ. a great number of others, by all which it doth appear, 1. That the ſervice was commanded from thoſe Inland Counties. 2. That the ſame reaſons which are given extend to bind the Inland Counties as Maritime Counties.

Pat. 23 E. 1. m. 6. for the taking of Ships in the County of Suſſex, Devon, Middleſex and other Counties, if ſo be the Maritime Counties be in danger, ſurely the Inland Counties cannot be in ſafety; we are in an Inland County, and if an entry upon any part, it concerns the ſafety of us all.

And by the rule of the Law, every one that is to receive a benefit, is to give a Contribution, as the Caſe of 16 H. 7. fol. 13.

An. 1637. all Feoffees, whoſe Lands were liable unto a Statute, the one ſhall have contribution againſt the other.

If 4, or 5. Cognizors in a Recognizance, all ſhall have Contribution one againſt another 46 E. 3. Parceners upon whom a warranty deſcendeth, they ſhall be equally charged.

If a man bind himſelf and his Heirs in an Obligation, having Lands, part by his Father and part by his Mother, and deſcend to ſeveral Heirs both equally charged, as it is the third Rep. 13. Harberts Caſe, ſo I go upon theſe reaſons, that it is conſtant to Reaſon and the Law, beſides theſe Preſidents, that where a danger to all, and receiving of benefit by all, all be equally charged.

My Lords, To illuſtrate by further reaſons, that though the Inland Counties and Maritime Counties be charged, I find that the Ports by the Charter of E. 1. were to find 57 Ships. I find that when the neceſſity of the ſervice did require it, then all their Ships were ſeized into the Kings Service, I find likewiſe that when there hath been a diſability in the Port to perform the ſervice as now they are, for then the main part of the Trade was in the Port Towns, but now it is gone from thence and come to London, and few Ports have the Trade, but London, Newcaſtle, Briſtol, Hull; and ſhall it not now be required by the Inland Counties ſince a diſability in the Ports, Fra. 21 E. 1. m. 23. I find there that Plimouth and ſome of the Port Towns did bear more than London; for Plimouth found four Ships, Dartmouth ſix, Briſtol four, Newcaſtle three, Norwich and Yarmouth four, London two, Hartlepool two, Sandwich two, Dover two, Rye two, Shoram and Arrundel and other places found but one; it appeareth, Alm. 13. E. 3. m. 13. dorſ. that Yarmouth furniſhed at their own charges four Ships, Kingſton two, Boſton two, Lynn two, Harwich two, Ipſwich two. My Lords, Are theſe Ports able to furniſh the King with ſo many Ships in theſe days to do theſe ſervices: the wealth of one Portſman in thoſe days was worth the whole Town as it is now, admit the Maritime Town were bound unto it, yet of a failing of the ability that they cannot do it, ſhall it not elſewhere be required, that is agreeable to the Rules of the Law; before Commiſſions for Sewers where particular men are bound to defend the Sea, yet before any Statute in Caſe that the man was not able, the ſervice was required from the County, for by it they might have either gain or loſs, this appeareth by the Rule of the Common Law before the Statute Regiſter 123 quod diſtringat omnes, &c. when one man was to maintain the Bank of the Sea, if not able, the reſt that have benefit by it were to be diſtrained for it, 5 Rep. fol. 99. 10 Rep. 140, 141. Caſe of the Iſle of Ely, agreeable that all men who have ſalvationem & damnum ſhall contribute.

To this purpoſe are thoſe two Records remembred by Mr. Sollicitor, Pl. 7. H. 4. No. 18. that where there was a Subſidie granted to the King for the defence of the Realm, was aſſigned to certain Merchants, yet with a ſalvo unleſs a Royal Power came fr. 6. R. 2. m. 8. certain Merchants had the cuſtody of the Sea, except Regal. poteſtatem, ſo the concluſion is, if an ordinary defence there may be no cauſe to go into the Inland Counties; but if a Royal Power or extraordinary danger, though not eminent, the King may require an extraordinary Contribution per totam Angl'; but this hath been objected againſt, and ſome Records have been vouched; that is (ſay they) we will ſhew you many Preſidents, wherein the Navale Subſidium hath been required from Inland-Towns, and they have been diſcharged thereof, as Pat. 2. R. 2. pars 2. M. 42. Dor. the Town of Beverley Petition, becauſe they were to contribute, being an In-land Town, towards the finding of a Ship for the Town of Hull, and was diſcharged thereof. This Truth, but not the whole Truth; for the Town of Beverly was diſcharged by reaſon of a Charter of Exemption granted unto them in honorem Sti. Johannis Beverley; the Kings Confeſſor upon that Charter; were diſcharged: They have objected likewiſe for the Town of Bodman: They were diſcharged a Cuſtod' Maris an In-land Town in Cornwel; for this, Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 2. M. 14. was vouched for it, that the Town was diſcharged of this Contribution; for Anſwer unto that it will appear, that one Truſſel was then Admiral of the Fleet, and was by his Commiſſion to be furniſhed from the Ports at their own Charges for three Months.

My Lords, this appeareth Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 1. M. 35. and ſo that Town and In-land was to be diſcharged.

My Lords, likewiſe there were other diſcharges upon that Reaſon, as Norwich was diſcharged for finding of Men, for making of Ships, becauſe the Admirals Commiſſion did not warrant it, Sco. 10 E. 3. M. 15. for it only extended to the Ports; but yet Norwich was charged to find Ships, Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 1. m. 14. So Colcheſter was diſcharged from finding of a Ship; but becauſe they were not within the words of the VVrit, as appeareth Cl. 13 E. 3. pars 1. m. So as to tell your Lordſhips a Story of a great number of Land-Towns diſcharged de Cuſtod' Marit', and not to give your Lordſhips the reaſon, it's nothing to the purpoſe.

So, my Lords, having verified this fifth Point by theſe Preſidents, and juſtified by theſe Reaſons, and anſwered theſe Objections, I ſhall now come unto the ſixth matter upon this Record.

And that is, that though no cauſe be declared in the VVrit, no danger manifeſt, nor againſt what Enemy; that yet the Kings VVrit hath commanded Shipping both for Defence of Sea and Land; and, in the Kings VViſdom, the danger hath been reſerved in His Breaſt, and not communicated to His People by His VVrits.

1. I find that ancient Preſidents have been ſo, that it hath been reſerved unto the King Himſelf, and thoſe whom He did depute; that appears Cl. 14. Jo. m. 2. The King directed His VVrits to Harbert, with a Mandamus to make ready all Ships for our Service when we ſhall command; not a word of a Cauſe declared, or an Enemy proclaimed; ſame Roll m. 6. The King by VVrit directed unto other Parts, cauſeth all Ships that could carry ſix Horſes or more to be ſent unto Portſmouth; and the like VVrits were directed unto other Parts, 1 Pat. 15. Jo. m. 4. The King appointed a Guardian upon the Sea-Coaſts, and commandeth all Men that they ſhould be Intendentes, and other VVrits in the ſame Roll directed into many Counties with a Mandamus, 17 Jo. Cl. m. 7. Do. VVrits for the taking of Ships, and bringing them into Thames mouth, without ſhewing any cauſe. All this was done in the time of King John.

In the time of H. 3. Pat. 13. H. 3. m. 5. a Writ commanding the Sheriffs of Kent and Suſſex to arreſt all Ships in thoſe Counties to be be at Portſmouth to be ready to go in that Service we ſhall command: And it appeareth in the ſame Roll, that theſe Ships were able but to bear ſix Horſes; ſo in the Cl. Roll 14 E. 3. m. 13. To Our Bailiffs of Portſmouth, and keeper of Our Navy, to make ready one good Ship, and be ready to go in the Service of the ſame King, whither, and where He ſhall command it, Cl. 23 E. 1. m. 5. Do. The King declares, That He will have the Sea-Coaſts in Eſſex guarded againſt Enemies; and there commandeth them to be obedient to ſuch a one who had the Cuſtody, Pat. 23 E. 1. m. 2. The King writeth unto all Arch-Biſhops, Biſhops, Sheriffs, Knights, and others, to be aſſiſting unto who had the Cuſtody of the Sea.

10 E. 3. m. 37. The King commandeth all Ships to be arreſted, and Men and Mariners to be ſent unto the Admiral of the Fleet, ad proficiſcend', &c. ſame Roll, m. 5. Do. A matter fit for the Counſel, and not for the People to know; ſame Roll 2c. that ſhould do, prout vobis, &c. The King to give no Account to His Subjects of thoſe things, 24 E. 1. m. 19. The King having commanded O. S. to take up 100 Ships fit for His Service, commandeth the Sheriff of Northumberland and others to be aſſiſting; ſame Roll. m. 17. Command to the ſame effect for all Ships that ſhould be taken between Lynne and Barwick; it was likewiſe in the time of E. 2, 9 E. 2. Pat. pars 2. 26 Ships taken up at the Charge of the Inhabitants to defend the Sea againſt Malefactors, Cl. 12 E. 3. m. 11. Do. a VVrit directed to the Major and Sheriff of Sandwich, to make ready all Ships within their Ports of 40 Tun Ha. &c. that they be ready within three days warning to go, as we ſhall more fully declare, the Service that was to be done; ſo it appeareth by other VVrits to other Towns, in the ſame Roll, 17 E. 2. m. 11. Do. Pat. 14 H. 6. pars 1. m. 14. Rex pro quibuſdam arduis Cauſis, &c. doth aſſign John Hexam to take up all Barges of 10 Men and upwards; ſo in all theſe times of King John, H. 3. E. 1. E. 2. E. 3. and H. 6. Writs have gone out generally, that the Service hath been concealed, and for inſtruction referred unto the Council, ſometimes to the Guardian of the Fleet.

It ſtandeth with reaſon, for reſolutions of War are not to be communicated; His Majeſty hath a ſeparated Council of VVar from the Body of the Privy-Council.

Now, my Lords, for the Objection that hath been made againſt the firſt VVrit 4. Aug. 11 Car. that is, the King hath not declared cauſe for the iſſuing of thoſe VVrits; the King hath not communicated it to J. D. and J. M. what the imployments muſt be; he muſt ſatisfie the Counſel at Bar, which he ought not to communicate to His Privy-Council, but is reſerved for the Council of VVar: This is a VVrit to command obedience from His Subjects, and upon ſuch Reaſons as may ſatisfie any reaſonable Man; and if fewer Reaſons, it had been the better agreeable to all former VVrits: For the next matter out of the Preſidents, which is, that during the times of Parliament, that theſe VVrits have iſſued, I have made that good upon my former Head.

The laſt thing I obſerved upon the Preſidents is, that there was no cauſe, nor Particular in this VVrit of 4. but was warranted by many Preſidents; and in this the King doth jubere per Legem.

Firſt, for the direction, as in the VVrit, ſometimes upon one, or Probis Hominibus of ſuch a County, ſometimes the direction to Commiſſioners, ſometimes one way, ſometimes another way; and of this of the Preſidents themſelves, when your Lordſhips come to ſee them, I ſhall ſpeak, they would have the King to deſcend ſo low as to give them a Reaſon why he did it; ſome Reaſons are expreſſed in the VVrit, as, Quia periculum eminens, quia pro defenſione Regni, Tuitione Maris, ſecuritate Subditorum, ſalva conductione Navium, &c.

My Lords, All theſe are expreſſed in the Records, 9 E. 3. M. 12. Sco. 10 E. 3. M. 20. Malm. 12 E. 3. M. 1. 12. Malm. 13 E. 3. M. 13. I find in theſe Writs the ſame matter, power of Aſſeſſment, ſame Services by diſtreſs, and by Impriſonment; nay, ſeizure of Lands and Tenements, Goods and Chattels that are expreſſed in the former Writ; and that it was of the charge of the County, both Inland and Maritime: This appeareth Rot. Sco. 8 E. 3. M. 9. 4. de Navigio providendo pro Cuſtodia Maris; many of theſe, Sco. 10 E. 3. That the VVages of the Men that went into the Ships, and guarded the Coaſts, were at the Charge of the County; this appeareth 10 E. 3. M. 2. Do. 60. Men appointed and ſent to Portſmouth, and they refuſed to go without VVages; but a Command came from the King, and commanded the Counties to pay them VVages, 10 E. 3. M. 21. Do. and His Predeceſſors not bound to bear any Charge, though pro defenſione, Alm. 12 E. 3. pars 1. Thoſe of Lynne, who refuſed to contribute towards the Charge, were aſſeſſed by Commiſſioners, juxta quantitatem, and were compelled to contribute; ſo in the Cloſe Roll, 12 E. 3. M. 8. the like pro Cuſtod' Marit'. I might be infinite in theſe Particulars; but I will not tire your Lordſhips. Here they have made ſome Objections, though to anſwer the main Objection I am not yet come.

Obj. They ſay, this Power of aſſeſſing the People for Sums uncertain, theſe ought not to be, no more than Eſcuage uncertain, and muſt be aſſeſſed in Parliament; and this Aſſeſſment for Defence ought not to be by Commiſſion, not for the Kings VVrit.

Firſt, for the Authority, which is Littleton, he ſaith fo. 20. Que communment ditq; Eſcuage ſerra aſſeſe per Parliament. I do not find by the Regiſter where theſe VVrits are, neither do I find them provided upon any Act of Parliament; but what if it be by Parliament, a Service that is to be done by the Tenant to his Lord, what if this be ſo, that it muſt be aſſeſſed in Parliament? your Lordſhips know, that the Tenant muſt do according to his original Duty of them he holds: And if this be ſo, that the Lords ſhall not aſſeſs them in Parliament, is that an Argument from a Tenant to a Lord to this Caſe? This is a Service commanded not by Tenure, but by a King from His Subjects; this is ſuitable to the reaſon of Law in other Caſes for theſe ancient ties which the King doth require for the making of His eldeſt Son a Knight, or pur file marrier: Are theſe certain at the Common Law? Muſt there be an Act of Parliament to aſſeſs thoſe Aids? the Books are otherwiſe; but the King at the Common Law might require an Aid uncertain, and might Seſs it as He pleaſeth. Glanvil lib. 9. Cap. 8. Brit. fo. 57. Cap. 27. Bract. lib. 4. Cap. 16. ſo as at the Common Law they were uncertain, 11 Rep. 68. D. It is ſaid there, the Stat. of Weſtm. 1. Cap. 15. which putteth reaſonable Aid in certain, doth not bind the King a Fortiori; we muſt not tie Him to a certainty, for the Defence of the Realm. No Man can tell what the Preparation muſt be, or the Charge thereof; if they can ſhew an Act of Parliament that limits the King for Defence of the Realm, they can ſay ſomething.

But they ſay the Sheriff is no Officer, nor ſworn to execute the Writs: This is as wide as the other; for, my Lords, the Sheriff is ſworn to execute all Writs that ſhall be delivered to him for the Kings Service; and ſurely this Writ, if it come unto him, he muſt at his peril execute it.

Firſt, the direction of thoſe Writs have been many times as well to the Sheriff, as to the Commiſſioners, Sco. 10 E. 3. M. 13. Cl. 15. E. 3. M. 17. Beſides theſe Writs at the Common Law, he is ſeconded by the Authority of the Common Law, Regiſter 122, or 127.

That Writs went generally unto the Sheriffs, for that in all Times and Ages it hath ever been in theſe Caſes, where no cer- tainty left to the diſcretion of the Sheriff and Commiſſioners.

My Lords, For the manner of levying by diſtrictions, and by Impriſonment of thoſe that do refuſe, it hath been ſo in all the Preſidents that have been vouched both by diſtreſs and impriſonment: for the Diſtreſs, if the King make a Corporation, and give them Power to make Ordinances for the Common-Wealth, and they make an Order, that they ſhall not pay the ſame, they ſhall be diſtrained. And is not this adjudged a good Ordinance, 5 Rep. 64. Clarks Caſe, T. 7 H. 7. Rot. 3. There is a Benevolence granted to E. 4. for his Voyage into France; one *T. They except to the penalty of the Writ, the penalty of former Writs have gone higher inter Co'ia in the Exchequer. There was a Mandamus to aſſeſs thoſe imployed in the proviſion for Shipping; and this Mandamus was, Sicut nos & honorem & ſalvationem Regni diligitis. In that Roll that is ſo often remembred, Sco. 10 E. 3. M. 1. Do. quod, &c. tire of all they had; ſo as your Lordſhips ſee plainly, Mr. Holborne his Conceit was very far miſtaken.

My Lords, in the next place they have inſiſted of the diſtance of time, they ſay there was ſeven Months between the Teſt of the Writ, and time of Randezvous, that the King might have called a Parliament, and there might have been an Aid granted, and the Service performed in a Parliamentary way; but they may remember the 40 days between the Return and Teſt of the Writ, the time ſpent in preferring a Speaker, the ſolemnity uſed before they begin, their grand Committees, their reading of a Bill thrice, their debate about it, the paſſing of both Houſes before it be granted. After all this be done, and the Parliament ended, a time for the levying of the Money muſt be had; and when it is levyed, time for the Return of it; when it is returned, time for the expending of the Money. And the Preparations will go ſlowly on till the Money be returned, 48 H. 3. M. 4. Do. There was a Command for guarding the Sea-Coaſts, Cl. 23 E. 1. M. 5. Do.

That the Ports of Yarmouth commanded to find Ships for a certain time, Scot. 11, 12, 13 E. 3. they are put down in that Roll 8. That there was a Command Navale ſubſidium for three or four Months.

So as, my Lords, both for the time of preparation, and for the time of the continuance it hath ever been reſerved unto the wiſdom of the King.

My Lords, for the Spaniſh Invaſion, that hath been ſo late in our memory, I find by the Books that are kept in the Council-Chamber, that the Preparations were in October Anno 87. againſt the coming of the Spaniſh Fleet in 88. which did not ſet forth till June. I find no Parliaments called that year: And by the Letters and Orders from the Council-Board, thoſe Ships and Defence that were made, was at ſumptu of the Subject: So as, my Lords, by this that hath been ſaid it doth appear unto your Lordſhips, that there was not any Clauſe in this Writ, either for the Direction, Motives, Mandates and Penalties; but are warranted by former Preſidents, that I have collected and reduced unto theſe ſeveral Heads. I ſhall now remember unto your Lordſhips divers things; and in the firſt place obſerve, that William 1. came not to abrogate any former Law, but was ſworn to obſerve Antiquas Leges Anglicanas: That appeareth in Lambert 125. So every Man, by this Law, which was but a confirmation, muſt provide pro viribus & facultatibus.

I find in the Grant, that William the firſt made unto his Abby of B. of his own Foundation, a Charter to be free from Danegeldis & omnibus auxiliis: If they had not been freed, they had been ſubject. I find Pat. 7. Jo. M. 3. The King authorized Walter Scot, and others, that omnes Naves, &c. which could carry ſix Horſes, which they ſhould find, to arreſt and command all to aſſiſt as they love us and our Peace in our Realm, 14 Jo. M. 6. As your Lordſhips have heard all the Ships were arreſted that could carry ſix Horſes, and to be at Portſmouth M. 2. all the Ships of the Ports were to go in this Service, without expreſſing for what Particulars, Cl. 12. Jo. 7. Do. commandeth all the Ships to be brought to the Thames mouth: So here was not a laying down the continuance of it.

So

And there be divers others in the time of H. 3. upon other occaſions, which I have remembred in that time of E. 1. All the Port-Towns were appointed by the King and His Council, how many Ships every one ſhould ſet forth, Vaſc. 22 E. 1. M. 11. Do. N. 6 The King of England in that Writ doth ſtile Himſelf Superior Dominus Regni Scotiæ, &c. and ſendeth His Writs to the King of Scotland, to let him know the King of France had taken part of Gaſcoigne, an Inheritance of the Crown of England, that he ſhould, in Fide & Homagio, be at London with Horſe and Arms, &c. This Writ is very obſervable, the King of England is Superior Dominus, a part of Gaſcoigne then loſt: The King of Scotland was required by this Writ, as well as requeſted, to give him Aid, for the Recovery of thoſe Grounds taken from him in Gaſcoigne.

My Lords, This Power is not confined only to England, but it reacheth (as great Lord) into Scotland, alſo into Ireland, Vaſc. 22 E. 1. N. 5. Dor. The King by His Writs commandeth divers Earls and others of England and Ireland to do the like, to ſend Men to London with Horſe and Arms; the ſame *Rot. My Lords, in that VVrit which is Cl. 23 E. 1. M. 5. Dor. I will obſerve theſe things: 1. A Command unto all Biſhops, Abbots, Lords Spiritual and Temporal, Quod ſint intendentes reſpondentes ad Cuſtodiam Maris. 2. In contingent Cauſes. Thirdly, VVrit ſaith, Quod omnes ad Arma, &c. Secundum Statum, &c. Ad transferendum [illegible] nobis. And poſſeſſion of Goods and Lands to be taken for the Cuſtody of the Sea, as in times they were accuſtomed; ſo it is to be done in this manner, as in times paſt.

Mr. Attorney General his third days Argument.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhips,

THe Matters I did propoſe to inſiſt upon this day, was the anſwering of the Objections, I ſhall uſe no Preamble, no Repetition to induce what I have to ſay: But in the anſwering of the Objections I ſhall firſt give anſwer to the ſeveral Acts of Parliament inſiſted upon, then unto the ſeveral Records and Reaſons that have been urged; and in the laſt place I ſhall anſwer the Exceptions that have been taken unto the Writ 4 Auguſti,Mittimus, and form of Proceedings.

The firſt Act that they have inſiſted upon,is that of William 1. Call it what you will, an Act or a Charter: The words of it are verbatim in Matthew Paris. Volumus & concedimus quod omnes liberi homines ſint quieti ab omni Pallagio, &c. Surely this Act of Parliament or Charter, it doth no way trench upon this Royal Power: For, as in the beginning of my Argument I opened unto your Lordſhips, that this Power was inherent in the Kings of England before the Conqueſt; here is only a Conceſſion, that they ſhall be free ab omni injuſta exactione; now this is no unjuſt exaction, for it is of common Right; and then the other part of this Law doth explain it, for it ſaith, That ſumus fratres Conjurati, &c. ſo far as the Defence of the Realm: By the ſame Law they would urge to take away this Power, by the ſame Law it is reſerved.

Next place they inſiſted upon, was the Charter 10 Jo. or on Magna Charta, as they call it, which indeed is mentioned in Matthew Paris, and may be under the Great Seal: The words of that are thus. Nullum ſcutagium vel auxilium, niſi per Commune Concilium militem faciend', & maritand' fil', &c. This Charter it is, as was acknowledged by themſelves, granted at Rumny-meade, when the Banners were diſplayed, wheu there was War or Rebellion, between the Barons, Commonalty, and the King. It was not aſſented unto the King ſitting in Parliament; for Parliaments are not called with Arms, and in the Field: It was in truth an inforced Act from a diſtreſſed King; ſhall this bind the Crown? I ſhall remember the Acts of Parliament made 15 E. 3. and there only were things that were in Parliament enacted derogatory to the Crown, as this is, that no Peer ſhould be queſtioned but in Parliament, that no great Officer be removed but in Parliament, that no Clergy-man ſhall come before Temporal Judges; theſe were things that were much derogatory to the Prerogative of the King.

15 E. 3. That King the ſame year, when he was better adviſed, did make a Charter, which is in Print, for the re-calling of this prejudicial Act of Parliament ſtill in force.

It appeareth by the Parliament Rolls, and Printed Books, where the King declareth, it was drawn from Him with an unwilling mind, and was prejudicial to the Prerogative of His Crown; and therefore by that Charter it was repealed.

But, my Lords, this Charter 17 Jo. if this ſhould be in force, why hath there been no confirmation of it in ſo many Parliaments ſince?

ſince? The Statutes of Magna Charta, 9 H. 3. hath been confirmed 31 times, why no confirmation of the Charter 17 Jo. and why have we not heard of it ſince that time? Reaſon for it, becauſe it trencheth too high on the Prerogative of the King and Crown. But take the words as they are; what be they? Nullum ſcutagium niſi per Commune Concilium Regni noſtri. If it were an Act, doth this extend to take away any thing of common Right unto the Crown? And that hath been the Expoſition of my Lords the Judges of Acts of Parliament, That Aids due of common Right are not taken away by general words of Commune, &c. And therefore theſe Aids due of common Right, as this is, are no way taken away; beſides, for the Statute of Magna Charta, it is made, 9 H. 3. Cap. 29. Nullus liber homo capietur, aut impriſonetur, niſi per Legem, &c.

The general words of this Act of Parliament doth no way impeach the Royal Power; for this Royal Power it is Lex Terræ; beſides in theſe Preſidents, 14 H. 3. 15 H. 3. 26 H. 3. 48 H. 3. and all the ſucceeding Kings remembred in all them, that theſe Writs went out to provide Shipping at the Charge of the Inhabitants: So ſurely, if they had been taken away by Magna Charta, the Writs after Magna Charta would not have uſed it.

Obj. But then there hath been objected the Statute de Tallagio non concedendo; if it be 25 E. 1. as it is printed, or 34 E. 1. or, as the Petition of Right doth recite it, Temps E. 1. Be it when they will; I ſay, under favour, there is nothing in that Act doth take away this Power: The words are thus. Nullum Tallagium vel auxilium, ſine voluntate Epiſcoporum, Baronum, Burgenſium, &c. Mr. Solicitor, in his Argument upon probable Grounds, did make queſtion, whether this was an Act of Parliament, yea or no?

1. In reſpect it was not inrolled among other Acts of that time.
2. Becauſe the Penning of it may rather ſeem to be an Abſtract.
3. Becauſe when the other Acts of thoſe times were ſent over to E. 1. to be Sealed and Confirmed, no ſuch Act was ſent over.

My Lords, I will not lay hold on this; but will admit with them, that as it is recited in the Petition of Right to be an Act of Parliament, ſo I will admit, (yet to wave nothing that hath been ſaid) but by way of Admittance I give this Anſwer.

Anſ. 1. That it taketh away no Aids that are due by the Aids of the Realm; yet the words are general, Nullum ſcutagium vel auxilium, niſi aſſenſu Parliamenti, &c. Here is not in this Act of Parliament ſo much as an exemption of an Aid to Knight the Kings Son, or to marry the Kings Daughter; Yet in this the Law is reſolved, that theſe Aids are not taken away. And ſo it is declared, 25 E. 1. Ca. 11. which doth reduce theſe Aids unto certainty, ſo as your general words of Nullum auxilium will not do it. If this be an Aid due by the Law of the Land, then I ſay this is not properly an Aid; but a Contribution of King and People for the Defence of the Realm: It is ad proficiſcend' cum Navibus Noſtris; then I ſay, that this Power is inter Jura Summæ Majeſtatis, one of the higheſt Prerogatives of the King, and ſhall never be taken away by the King, 12 H. 7. Stat. quia emptores terrarum doth not extend unto the King to take away his Tenure; If you will have ſuch an high Prerogative taken away, you muſt ſhew it in the Acts of Parliament. Nay, my Lords, I ſay that in the time of E. 1. this Royal Power is expreſly reſerved by Act of Parliament unto the Crown, and therefore in after times never intended to be taken away.

(1.) I ſhall inforce it out of the Statute of 25 E. 1. cap. 5, 6. That doth recite that Aids and Taxes which have been given unto us before time towards our Wars and other Buſineſſes of our own grant and good will, howſoever they were made might turn to a Bondage, &c. We have granted that we ſhall not draw theſe Taxes into a Cuſtom, &c. and do grant that for no Buſineſs henceforth we ſhall take ſuch manner of Aids, but by a common conſent of the Realm, &c. ſaving the antient Aids due and accuſtomed. This Aid is not taken to be an Aid, for this was never given unto the Kings of England, but taken by Royal Power, the Statute of 25 —— ſpeaketh of ſuch Aids as have been given, and excepteth ſuch Aids as have been due and accuſtomed, and by the Preſidents ſhown it appeareth thoſe have been due and accuſtomed. It hath been deſired fide & Ligeantia and with a Mandamus, 2 E. 1. cap. 1. This Statute doth confirm the great Charter, and the Charter of the Forreſts. But in the end of it in the Parliament Roll, that notwithſtanding all theſe things before mentioned, both the King and His Council, and all they preſent at the making of this Ordinance, will intend the prerogative of His Crown be ſaved unto him.

A further Anſwer to the Statute de Tallagio non concedendo, the practice that hath been ſince the time of E. 1. in the time of E. 2. E. 3. R. 2. and the practice ſince doth ſhew plainly that it was never intended by the Statute to take away this Royal Power. But then a thing materially objected, if the Records had warranted what had been ſaid, and that was Rot. Parl. 29. E. 1. and there it was ſaid that though there be a ſaving 25 E. 1. 28 E. 1. yet here is no ſaving in this Act, ſo then Act of 29 E. 1. all was loſt.

My Lords, In this, I ſay, there is nul tiel Record, and therefore I ſhall deſire that this which they call an Act, 29 E. 1. I may attend your Lordſhips, which by the Record it doth appear that it is only a Record of the perambulation of the Forreſt, and no repealing of any former Law, neither is any thing enacted by that Law derogatory to the Crown.

Next Statute objected, 1 E. 3. cap. 5. words are, that no man ſhall be charged to arm himſelf otherwiſe than in the time of the Kings Progenitors, and that none be compelled to go out of his Shire, but where neceſſity requireth, and ſodain coming of ſtrange Enemies within the Realm. So this Statute is relative to what hath been formerly done, and what hath been formerly done appeareth by the Records of King John, E. 1. that the Subjects were to ſet forth Ships for their defence, at their own charge, then thoſe Writs went out in E. 3. time, as hath been ſhewed. And then this Statute alloweth in two caſes, one where neceſſity requireth, the other upon the ſodain coming of ſtrange Enemies; and this Writ requireth no other, but where neceſſity is in the Kings judgement.

An. 1637.

Obj. Next Statute of 1 E. 3. cap. 7. was objected where men of Armes were conveyed into Scotland and Gaſcoign without wages; the King ſaith it ſhall be done ſo no more: the Statute mentioneth Scotland and Gaſcoign, foreign wars, and ſo foreign to this buſineſs; for though Scotland was ſubject to the dominion of England, yet it was adjudged a divided Kingdom. 8 R. 2. continual claim Com. 376. That a Fine ſhall be paid by a Stranger, becauſe he was in Scotland at the time of the Fine levied. Bract. 436. an Abjuration into Scotland is good, 6 R. 2. protection 46. that Scotland is out of the Realm. Therefore this Statute that ſpeaketh of Gaſcoign and Scotland, ſpeaketh of foreign Wars, not of Defence.

Next 10 E. 3. cap. 7. Men of Armes, Hoblers and Archers ſhall be at the Kings wages. This Statute likewiſe ſpeaketh of going out of England; but he that is upon defence of the Kings Seas, he is not out of England, for that 6 R. 2. protection 40. The ſending of Ships for the defence of the Coaſts is no going out of England.

Obj. Next Statute 15 E. 3. cap. 8. no man ſhall be conſtrained to find men of Armes, Hoblers or Archers, otherwiſe than thoſe who hold of ſuch ſervices without Common Conſent. My Lords, This Statute of 25. doth not take away any former Laws, in that Statute of 4 H. 4. cap. 13. theſe three former Statutes of 1 E. 3. 18 E. 3. 25 E. 3. are recited in the Statute of 4 H. 4. and enacted they ſhall be firmly holden and kept in all points. So if theſe Statutes muſt be kept firmly in all points, then the Statute of 25 E. 3. doth not repeal any of theſe: Now that of 1 E. 3. cap. 5. reſerveth a power unto the Crown, where neceſſity requireth, and when ſodain Enemies come. 26 E. 3. thoſe Ships were ſent forth, and commanded for the defence of the Realm at the charge of the Subjects, Rot. Fran. 26 E. 3. m. 4, 5. Fran. 28. E. 3. m. 6. ſo as clearly there is no part of this Power impeached by this Statute of 25.

Then they have objected Parliament Roll, 2 R. 2. No. 3. Earles and Barons and other Sages of the Realm declared the great miſchief by Sea and Land, and therefore declared they could not remedy this miſchief but by charging of the Commons, which cannot be done without Parliament.

This is no Act of Parliament, it is but a Parly or Diſcourſe and Communication between the Lords and Commons. It was in 2 R. 2. in the nonage of a young Prince, who did not aſſent, for there was no Royal aſſent unto it, ſo no proof in this Caſe.

Next Record 9 R. 2. parl. no. 10. there was a tenth and a half and fifteenth and half granted to the King, upon condition contained in the Schedule, which is that the King ſhould aſſent that the Officer ſhould be named in Parliament, and Servants be appointed for diſpence of the money.

If the King will accept the Subſidies and Aids upon condition, doth this take away the Royal Power? there is no more done in this than was in the Parliament 21 Jo. for there the Officers and Treaſurers were appointed by the Houſes of Parliament. But then further it doth appear, that this was granted pro viagio Johannis Regis de Caſteel, &c. ſo that it was not granted for the Cuſtody of the Sea, but for this voyage. Next place they inſiſted upon the [illegible] great and urgent occa[illegible] My Lords! This [illegible] upon the subjects, [illegible] them [illegible] rer and under Treaſurer that looketh into the ſecrets [illegible] of his Eſtate, and they know well whether his ordinary or extraordinary Revenue do anſwer more than his Annual expence. The ſtory of Actæon might deter men from looking into the ſecrets of Princes.

For his Tenures, that Knight-ſervice tenure was originally inſtituted for the Service of Scotland and Wales, 19 R. 2. Fitz. Gar. 165. and old Tenures fol. 19. thoſe Called Tunnage and Poundage, when they were given it was meerly for the great charge of this great defence.

And beſides thoſe Acts of Tunnage and Poundage only concerned the ordinary defence, the ſending forth of the 75. Ships out of the five Ports. It was but for 15. days at their own Charges, and for your profit of the Sea of Sturgeon and Whales, a proper defence for a King. And for the ſervice of the Ports, you may remember by the Records ſhewn, they were Commanded [illegible]; but then they have granted the Caſe, and I think but one, that the King may obtain a Toll in a Fair or Market, or grant Pontage or the like, becauſe there is an ad quod damnum, and therefore ſhall be an inquiry ſi Patria gravaretur. The King may grant a Fair without an ad quod damnum, if in his Judgement, &c.

Rot. Sco. 1 E. 3. m. 8. Writ directed to the Treaſurer, to pay for the ſhipping at Yarmouth. My Lords, it doth appear particularly in the Records, that E. 3. was Admiral, and going into Scotland, ſo the defence was for a foreign War.

It hath been mightily inſiſted upon, that here needeth no Command to furniſh Ships by the Kings Writs; every man by the inſtinct of nature will do it, where is neceſſity of Royal Power or Command needs; ſurely this Argument is made by the People, or to pleaſe the People; what will the Conſequence of it be, but the introducing of a Democratical Government when man ſhall be his own defender. The God of Hoſts choſe Captains and Leaders to go before his People, and commanded them; but to give the People this liberty, that every man ſhall do as he pleaſe, and make a defence by inſtinct of nature, is a ſtrange Poſition — But it hath been ſaid in theſe Caſes, it is better to ſuſtain a miſchief than an Inconvenience; by this Inconvenience every mans property is taken away from him as often as the King pleaſeth, and what proportion he pleaſeth: This though a Maxime in Law, yet it goeth unto particulars; but the loſs of a Kingdom is both Liberty and Eſtate; this is not to be reckoned amongſt the miſchiefs, for this miſchief deſtroyeth both Head and Members, therefore I do marvel to hear the Rule of Mr. Holborn ſuffer a Miſchief, rather than an Inconvenience.

Next Objection, Parl. 2 H. 4. nu. 22. pur faire Barges. This was the Petition of the Commons, that the Commiſſions granted to Cities, Boroughs and Towns for building of Barges ſhould be repealed; the Kings Anſwer for the preſent they ſhould be repealed, but for the future for caſe of neceſſity he would adviſe with the Lords: It doth not appear that theſe were granted for the building of any Ships for the defence of the Realm.

An. 1637.

These are the Objections that have been made out of the Acts of Parliament, out of the Records and Reasons they have insisted upon; now I come to the Exception and Objection against the Writs and Proceedings in this manner.

1. They say there was no sufficient danger represented by the Writ 4 Aug. They say the Scire facias by a Mittimus doth come too late, and that the words of this Mittimus are not a good affirmative, quia salus, &c. and it doth not appear there was any danger 4 Aug. 11. For this I have given it an Answer, that it was not necessary to represent the danger in the Writ. The King he hath secret intelligence, he hath his Spies abroad, His Ambassadors beyond Sea, he knoweth the danger we know not, nay, that which is not fit to be discovered; and those dangers by proportion perhaps diverted another way. It is not fit by a publick Writ to reveal the danger.

Prout in le Brief.

But my Lords, for the satisfaction of His People he hath expressed sufficient cause enough in the Writ, Quia salus Regni periclitatur, &c. they say there was no danger represented at that time when the Writ went out; that is mistaken, for the Writ of Mittimus doth recite 4 Aug. and saith quod quidem periculum Regni, &c. Which sheweth the danger was the cause of the issuing of those Writs; then they except this same word salus, it is a Physical word signifieth health, and you must have no Metaphors in Writs; surely the Gramarians can tell that salus is taken pro incolumitate, as for health, for safety; Metaphors are usual in Writs; I dare be bold to speak there are more Metaphors in the Register, than in any Book. Register [illegible]

Then they have left no stone unturned in this Case. Now, they say the Kings Testimony by His Writ is not sufficient; for that under favour it is Teste meipso, without exception we are bound to give credit unto it. [illegible] Eliz. fol. 10[illegible] Nota, si Rex, the King affirms I. S. will go beyond sea, saith the Book, this averment of the King in His Writ, it is not Traversable, you shall not aver against it. The Case remembred by Mr. Solicitor, which was mistaken by Mr. Holborn in the Answer Hill. 20 E. 3. Coram Rege Rot. 14. he said these words vouched in the Record, was but the saying of the Kings Council, and not the opinion of the Court; clear otherways, for it was the saying of the Judges, and then agreed quod Dominus Rex est superlativus Recordum & potentius; will your Lordships give credit to the Certificate of the Marshal of the Kings Host,

To the Certificate of the Captain of a Company all the men be in the Kings service, [illegible] Hen. [illegible] to the Certificate of a Bishop in case of Bastardy, to the certificate of a Major and Aldermen by the Recorder, [illegible] 30. 22 Ed. 3 [illegible] 16. and will you not admit of the Certificate of the King by his Mittimus?

Next exception was taken to the Scir' Fac' that this Scir' Fac' ought not to go forth upon this, as a Duty for the King.

1. The Writ [illegible] doth direct the form of levying, which is by distress or imprisonment of those that are Rebels.

2. It is no Duty to the King, and therefore ought not to be levied by Scir' Fac'.

My

1637.

My Lords for this, this Duty is a Duty to the Common-Wealth; it is pro defensione Regni Thesaurus publicus respicit Regem; whosoever shall detain any publick Duty, he may be questioned by the King as the Head of the Body; for this it appeareth [illegible]. It was declared, that J. A. and J. B. had levied 100 Marks on the County for the Array of certain Archers, which Money did not come for the Profit of the King; Out of this I observe two things: 1. This Money that was for Archers, the Money was levyed on the Body of the County. 2. Recovered by an Indictment at the Kings Suit, 27 Aſs. pl. 17. 11 H. 4. fo. 2. the Fees of the Knights of the Shire that served in Parliament, they are esteemed as publick Duties; therefore the Goods of a stranger may be taken within the Town to pay those Fees; If the Money be not paid, the distreſs may be sold, for it is for a publick Duty, so it is, and ſo is the Book, Reg. 19. 2. The King commandeth the Sheriff to levy those Fees, as well within the Liberty, quam extra, Paſc. 20. E. 3. Rot. 47. coram Rege Juratores [illegible]. They make a Preſentment, that J. A. and J. B. Chief Conſtables of [illegible] paid Wages to Archers which went not beyond Sea.

So as by this Record, it appeareth, these publick Duties are recoverable at the Suit of the King, Quia ad opus Domini Regis, Paſc. 14 E. 2. Rot. 101. The King commandeth an Account to be taken of the Murage, and how the Sums have been employed, [illegible] E. 1. coram Rege [illegible] Rippon was beſieged, they gave Hoſtages; Promiſe made by the Town, that thoſe Hoſtages ſhould be redeemed, they were not, complaint made unto the King, and came to the Kings-Bench; and the Monies being part that was promiſed by the Town, for bringing back of thoſe Hoſtages, was ordered to be paid, becauſe it was for the publick Service. So for other things that are pro Commodo [illegible]. Mich. 13 Eliz. Rot. 4. Aurum Reginæ, due unto the Queen, may be levied by Proceſs out of the Exchequer in the Kings name; nothing more uſual. This Scir' Fac' it is grounded upon the whole matter, the Writ 4 Aug. Cart. and Mittimus, and commanded that the Defendants ſhould ſhew cauſe why they ſhould not pay the Monies aſſeſſed upon them for the publick Service.

My Lords, I have done with the Objections, I ſhall come to the Judicial Records, 24 E. 1. ad Cuſtodiam Maris, Berk-ſhire, an Inland County, refuſed to contribute; the Names of thoſe that made default were certified into the Exchequer.

It appeareth by the Records cited, that Proceſs went out of the Exchequer in the ordinary manner, pro Capiend' their Lands, Tenements, Goods and Chattels, and also their Bodies with Horſe and Armour to come to Portſmouth, &c. beſides the doing of their Services, the ſeizure of their Lands and Goods. The [illegible], ex parte Rem' Theſaurar', on the other ſide [illegible] gave information unto the Chancellor of the Exchequer, and Barons, in the abſence of the Lord Treaſurer and Biſhop of [illegible] the preparation of Men in Flanders, (this being remembred before to another purpoſe.) It appeareth, after Conſultation had, they did reſolve to ſend forth two Writs, one to the Towns, the other to T. H. Cuſtos Maris, to call in for defence of the Maritime Parts; ex parte Rem' Regis, 24 E. 1. Rot. 80. Henry Huſſey was ſeized of the

An. 1637.

Mannor of W. in Berk-shire, he was assessed to find a Horse pro Custod' Maris; he complained in the Exchequer, he had not the whole Mannor, and yet was assessed to find a whole Horse; so he did not come and say, I ought not to be taxed; he submitted to the Power, and desired a mannerly Contribution, 25 E. 1. Rot. 72. The Abbot of Robertsbridge Case remembred on both sides divers times; under favour, the laying of the Hire in the Record, is a very full Proof in this Case; he brought a Replevin against Jo. S. for taking of his Goods, an In-land Town in Kent, he pleadeth the Confirmation between our King and the King of France, and Defence assigned keeper of the Sea. That the Plaintiff was assessed unto 7 l. 7. d. [illegible] 22. 13 & 23. 15. 14. and the Defendant being Collector, did distrain. The Plaintiff did not say in Bar of this, he ought not to be taxed; but he was seised ad inveniend', &c. for such Lands.

The Defendant, saith the Plaintiff, did hold other Lands in the County, and for that Land he was assessed; now, this doth affirm the Power of taxing, Hill. 16 E. 3. Rot. 23. coram Rege. The Jury of Norfolk did present, that Jo. Russel and others, 8 E. 3. were Hoblers elected in the Hundred of E. and staid at home; they plead not guilty; the Jury find that Jo. Russel did perform the Service, but Jo. S. did not perform, therefore committed to Prison, and paid a Fine unto the King. By this Record it appeareth, the Money paid to the Archers and Hoblers was at the Counties Charge.

Methinks the disclaimer that is by the Commons, 13 E. 3. Parl. N. 9. 11. is in nature of a Judgment in this Case; for there they did disclaim they had no Counsel, and there likewise upon their own confession, that the Maritime Parts ought to defend by their own Charges, as the In-land Parts the In-land Counties; This Confession, 13 E. 3. is a strong Argument, Parl. 21 E. 3. Rot. 20. when the Commons did petition de garde le Mare, answer soit garde fait, and that was at the Charge of the Country, as your Lordships know.

20 E. 3. Divers Ordinances made, which Ordinances made had the force of a Law: The King and His Council did ordain, Quod omnes illi, &c. which have such a quantity of Land, should be assessed to find one Archer. Decem librat' terræ Hobelar', viginti libr' a Hobelar', 25 libr' unum hominem ad Arma. This appeareth Fra. 20 E. 3. pars 1. M. 17. in the County of Bedford and Bucks. In the same year another Ordinance, that those that did reside with their Families, cum tota posse, within six Miles of the Maritime Parts, were excused for finding of Men without.

My Lords, Upon the occasion of this Service there was divers refusals made. Certificate by Ministers of their Names into the Exchequer, as in this Case. J. T. and W. G. were certified defaulters among others; upon this the Court of Exchequer they award Process against these Men and others, which was a Capias in manu Seizure of their Lands and Goods; they came in and pleaded, that they did reside infra sex leucas with their Families, and all their Power: Issue joyned upon this, Jury impannelled, and it appears, those that were found within six Miles, Judgment quod sine die, but for others imprisoned and fined, for so much Land as they had without

3. By a further Admittance, admit the King had Power to Charge, and Power to Aſſeſs, Whether can he levy the Money unpaid by this courſe of Certiorari and Mittimus, as he might do if it were his own proper Debt?

The firſt Queſtion is, Whether or no upon the whole Record the Caſe appears ſo for the King, that 4 Auguſti 11 Car. being the Date of the Writ, the King could by His Writ charge the County of Buckingham for finding a Ship of War? As it hath been on His Majeſties part ſtated, by the Kings Solicitor, who ſtated his Queſtion in theſe Words.

The Queſtion as it was ſtated by the Solicitor-General.

BEfore I enter into my Argument, becauſe the true ſtating of a Queſtion in this and all other things doth exceedingly conduce to the clearing of a thing in queſtion. I ſhall in the firſt place obſerve the Writ Dated 4 Auguſti 11 Caroli, (the ground of this Aſſeſs) which was directed into Buckingham-ſhire, and into all the Counties of England; and this was for raiſing of Money towards the Proviſion for Ships for the Defence of the Kingdom, with a notable Circumſtance, Quia ſalus Regni periclitabatur; which being expreſſed in the Record, is confeſſed by the Defendants demurrer; and not only ſo, but teſtified by the King Himſelf under the Great Seal, (in the Mittimus) and in all matters, eſpecially concerning the publick ſafety. The King is Recordum Superlativum, & ſuper precellens, as is ſtiled in the great Caſe between the Earls of Glouceſter and Hereford, 20 E. 1. ſo that the Queſtion is only thus; Whether the King, finding in His Judgment the ſafety and preſervation of the Kingdom and People, neceſſarily and unavoidably to require the Aid commanded by this Writ, may not command ſuch Aid by Writ, for ſaving and preſerving the Kingdom and People?

Wherein, I confeſs, there is not a word but hath its weight. As to this Queſtion thus made, I ſhall make three Exceptions, which are things taken in to be granted, which I ſhall not agree to, if I can avoid them.

1. That, at the leaſt, in the Kings Judgment, the ſafety and preſervation of the Kingdom was endangered 4 Auguſti; that is, that the Kingdom was in danger to be loſt.

2. If it be ſo, that the Kingdom was in ſuch danger, and that the danger was ſo inſtant and unavoidable, that it neceſſarily required this Aid by this Writ, (that is) it required a preſent Charge of Shipping preſently, 4 Auguſti 11 Caroli, to be forthwith commanded, and that the expectation could not ſtay for a Parliamentary Conſideration and Supply: Theſe be the things wherein we differ.

And laſtly, for the truth of it, that the Certificate under the Great Seal, was ſufficient in a Legal way. Theſe are three things to which I take exception.

My Lords, To find out whether the Record doth warrant theſe three things of great importance: Firſt, I ſhall ſeek for them in the Writ 4 Auguſti, and next in the Mittimus; there is no colour elſe-were to look for them; to open the Writs rightly will clear theſe differences, as I humbly conceive, without any great Argument. And firſt the Writ dated 4 Auguſti 11 Car. I ſhall read the words wherein the dangers of the Writ are expreſſed; and then explain what words give that ſence that is taken out of them. Quia datum nobis intelligi, quod Prædones quidam Pirati & Maris Graſſatores tam Nomine Chriſtiani Hoſtes Mahumetani quam alij Congregati; Naves & Bona & Mercimonia non ſolum ſubditorum noſtrorum, verum etiam ſubditorum Amicorum noſtrorum in Mari, quod per Gentem Anglicanam ab olim defendi Conſuevit: Nefarie diripientes homines & ſpoliantes ea ad libitum ſuum deportavere, hominesq; eoſdem in Captivitate Miſerima Mancipantes: Cumq; ipſos conſpicimus, &c. Here are the Cauſes and Occaſions; all that come after are not material to the ſtating of the Queſtion.

My Lords, in the opening of this Writ, it is true there was mention of loſs by Merchants, ſome particular Members of the Kingdom, and this loſs but by Prædones Pirati quia Mahumetani & alij; and though alij, yet Pirati ſtill, and no more, then it ſaith ipſi; ſtill theſe Pirates daily moleſt the Merchants, ad gravandum Pirati ſtill.

Hitherto, I conceive, there is not a word of danger from an Enemy, but from Pirates; not a word of danger to the Kingdom, but to Merchants; however all this is quod intelleximus.

The Record goes on thus, Conſideratis etiam periculis, &c. This part, as I conceive, is not ſo poſitive, the dangers are but Conſideratis, nor the danger to the Body of the Kingdom, no word of that; or if to the Kingdom, yet nothing, whether it be in point of ſafety, but only in point of moleſtation, none of all theſe appears.

And beſides, the Clauſe is too general, not expreſſing any particular danger, from whom, or how; however, be the danger to the one, or to the other, be it to the Kingdom or Merchants, be it for troubles or ſafety; hitherto I may ſay, that there is no mention of any ſuch inſtant danger, as neceſſarily did require this inſtant command in the Writ, not ſo much as in the Kings Judgment.

For ought it appears, a Parliament, even in the Kings Judgment, might have been called, a conſideration taken for Defence: Here be all the Premiſſes upon which the Concluſion muſt ariſe; and hitherto nothing material to make a danger to the ſafety of the Kingdom, and ſo inſtantly that a Supply, nunc aut unnquam, muſt come in. Although the Premiſſes, I conceive, are only conſiderable, yet even the concluſion will be but this, convenit accelerare, it is fitting to haſten, but no ſuch neceſſity; and though it be convenit accelerare pro defenſione Regni; if that were material, it cannot be conſtrued but with relation to the Premiſſes, whereupon it is built; and whether in fear of trouble, or danger, or loſs, non conſtat, and though it be cum omni feſtinatione, yet it is quia poterimus, and that is poſſumus quod jure poterimus, that is, with all the haſt that by Law you can make, which way that is your Lordſhips have heard.

Now, my Lords, under favour, it appears on the Record, that there was no ſuch inſtant neceſſity, but that a Parliament might have been time enough; for as it was obſerved, that between the Teſt of the Writ, and the Randezvous, there was 200 and odd days, whereas a Parliament required but 40 days for meeting, the remainder of theſe 500 days a Parliament might have conſidered of the means of a Defence; but I leave it to your Lordſhips to judge, notwithſtanding thoſe expences of time cunningly numbered unto your Lordſhips by the Solicitor; and though it be true, that things oftentimes are long in ſetling, and deliberation in Parliament; yet Nature tells us, they can be done ſooner; and if there be a neceſſity, we know that will inforce.

I have but opened this Writ quarto Auguſti: I am now come to the Mittimus. The only doubt which I conceive in the Writ of Mittimus, is only that where the Caſe ſtands but thus.

In this Writ is recited the Tenor of the Writ dated quarto Auguſti, and then the Writ goes on, and ſaith, Quia ſalus Regni periclitabitur, &c. and that is all the Clauſe in the Record that doth give colour to the Caſe, ſo it be made, and on the whole Record we have demurred; here it hath been ſaid, that we have confeſſed all by the Demurrer; and if that hold not, the King, who is the Judge of the danger, he hath ſaid ſo, he hath certified it ſo by the Great Seal.

I ſhall ſelect a few from many other, on which I ſhall rely.

My firſt Anſwer is this here, the words are, that ſalus Regni periclitabitur, theſe words in ſhew ſeem to be poſitive, but in ſubſtance but relative, and is rather a Comment on the Writ, or an abſtract in Point of thoſe dangers mentioned in the Writ, for the Clauſe was brought in on the Return of the VVrit; and if we have the VVrit it ſelf, the Comment thereupon, or further explanation thereof, is not material.

2. Second anſwer I doubt, I ſay no more; If the King put particular Reaſons into the VVrit of quarto Auguſti, whether the Law, I ſpeak of the Legal Courſe, do permit an After-VVrit to put in further Cauſes of the ſame nature with the former, and to the ſame end.

If the Caſe be thus, our Demurr will be no no confeſſion of any ſuch danger.

In the next place, admit the words in the VVrit had been Poſitive, and materially expreſſed; yet, according to our Rules of Law, it cannot make uſe of that ſence they are now applyed unto; for, at the beſt, the word Salus being proper only to a Phyſitian, Natural Body is applyed as a Body-Politick: It is but a Metaphor which the Law will not endure in VVrits, for it would bring in great miſchief in Writs and Pleadings. Metaphors are dangerous; we know not how to take Iſſue upon it; and therefore is not regularly allowed; but I leave it to your Lordſhips Judgment.

There are no words of ſuch danger of the loſs of the Kingdom, that is ſuch inſtant danger; for apply the words to a natural Body, as Salus, J. S. is in danger, it doth not preſently imply it, that he is in ſuch inſtant danger of Death; a Doctor will ſay, that a Patient hath not his Health, yet no danger of death, which is the common ſpeech; the ſame ſence it muſt have in a Body-Politique.

If the words were good, and did imply a danger, yet not ſuch a danger of words, as ſhew a danger that may hazard the loſs of the Kingdom; for the words are only Salus Regni periclitabitur, and

An. 1637. the thing may be now in action, which twenty years hence, if not prevented, may loſe the Kingdom: A Man may ſay that ſafety is in danger, at the beſt, the words will not make the Caſe as it is put.

Mr. Solicitor, out of his great care, ſearching into every hole where he thought we might peep out, doubting our Demurrer would not be a Confeſſion ſufficient; he takes in another help, which is this, that if this be ſo declared by the Kings opinion, and under the Great Seal, that this alone had been ſufficient: for this there hath been urged the legal weight of the Kings affirmation, and of a Certificate under the Great Seal, and both be concluded in this Caſe.

My Lords, before I anſwer unto this matter, I profeſs for my Client and my ſelf, that we owe as much Loyalty to the King our Sovereign, as any; yet I hope I ſhall be permitted in a legal way to have the Priviledge of them that uſually ſpeak in this place: In ſpeaking what is pertinent and material for my Client, I make no doubt of the Kings word, and believe there was danger, though not ſo apparent to us, but only loth to allow it as ſufficient in a legal Proceeding, and that His Majeſty, who in His own worth deſerves it, by after Princes might turn to diſadvantage. That which we urge is, how far in form of Law this may be allowed, which we ſhall argue, and that briefly, for the Caſe needeth not help.

For this Point, I take it for clear, under your Lordſhips favour, that in legal Proceeding, and regularly, His Majeſties Opinion and Certificate in things of fact, is not binding.

My Lords, the Reaſon wherein I ſhall moſt rely to avoid the ſence of the Writ Salus Regni, &c. is this, That though it do now appear by the Mittimus, that quarto Auguſti the Kingdom was in danger of being loſt; yet it is not ſufficient in Law, nor can our Demurrer hurt us, becauſe it muſt have ſo appeared by the Writ quarto Auguſti it ſelf; for the Writ and Declaration in Law muſt ever contain preciſely ſo much of matter, as is neceſſarily true to warrant the demand.

In this, to ſee the miſchief, if a danger now declared makes the Caſe, how ſhall the Subject know on the Writ quarto Auguſti, whether to obey or no? the Law binds no Man to divine; and if this ſubſequent Declaration ſhall mend the Caſe, then the Subject ſhall be a wrong-doer, ex poſt facto, which is againſt the reaſon of our Books. I ſhall remember the Caſes put by Mr. St. John to another purpoſe, 22. Aſſ. 5. 24 E. 3 Br. Com.

A Commiſſion ſent forth without expreſſing the cauſe, that Commiſſion is not good, and it is not denied by Mr. Solicitor; a cauſe muſt be ſet forth to make it good in Law. And if your Lordſhips be pleaſed to look on the Preſidents, (as I know you will) which the Kings ſide ſhall bring unto you, your Lordſhips will find the danger turned from the firſt Writ to the laſt; nay in in the Writ of this year, as I am told, it is ſo, out of their opinion fearing the Writ quarto Auguſti was not ſo good as they would have it; they put it into the Mittimus: which they know could not do good, but they did it only to cavil.

But laſtly, admit that the King had ſaid, that the Kingdom was in ſuch inſtant danger and loſs, and that there was an inſtant neceſſity of the command this way, and that this could not have expected a conſideration in Parliament; yet if the contrary appears in the Record, then neither was the Demurrer a Confeſſion, nor the Certificate concluſive.

My Lords, In the concluſion upon all this diſcourſe it appears, I have ſo pared the Caſe, that on the Writ dated quarto Auguſti there appears no danger to the Kingdom of being loſt; that on the Mittimus there is no legal home expreſs words of danger to the Kingdom, inſtant or unavoidable; if it were ſo, yet it cometh not time enough, for it ſhould have been in the Writ dated quarto Auguſti.

And if expreſſion of ſuch inſtant danger in Quarto or Mittimus, yet not material, if otherwiſe on Record.

And laſtly, this Certificate doth not conclude us: Thus then to ſhew what the Caſe is, and to what it is not, I have put out of the conſideration of the Caſe, all conſideration of ſuch dangers to the ſafety of the Kingdom as are unavoidable.

I have left nothing in the Caſe but conſideration of protecting Merchants againſt Pirates, but for ordinary Defence of the Sea.

If the Caſe do fall thus, I humbly conceive, that in this place without further Argument, I might with ſome confidence venture my Client upon your Lordſhips Judgments, notwithſtanding any thing offered on the Kings part. Here Mr. Holborne made a little ſtay, but the Lord Chief Juſtice Finch, in the name of the Court bid him proceed in his Argument; then ſaid he, By your Lordſhips command I ſhall proceed, having laid aſide the Mittimus, and Salus Regni, and taking the Caſe only on quarto Auguſti, which as I take it, is nothing of danger to the Kingdom, but againſt Merchants, and but of common Defence: The Caſe ſtands thus.

That though there be no actual Invaſion, no known or declared Enemy, yet the King, out of His Judgment, quarto Auguſti 11 Car. apprehendeth, and foreſeeth danger to the Kingdom in point to be loſt; and that the danger ſo inſtant and unavoidable requireth this Aid, whether the King out of Parliament, by His Regal Power, can command this Supply?

I have endeavoured not to miſtake the Solicitor; it were an injury to require him ſo ill.

Upon the whole my end is to ſhew, that by the fundamental Policy of England the King cannot, out of Parliament, charge the Subject, neither for common good, unleſs in ſpecial Caſes, and of a different nature, or upon different reaſon, nor for a neceſſary Defence, though, in the Kings Judgment, inſtant and unavoidable.

My Lords, In the debate of theſe two Queſtions I have learned of Mr. Solicitor not to ſay all I could, but ſo much as is neceſſary; and as he hath chalked out the way, I ſhall enquire on this Power by Arguments upon practice conſtant and allowed in time of good Government, when the liberty of the Subject was not trampled upon, and ſhew it by Acts of Parliament, Reaſon and Authority on both.

An. 1637.

My Lords, I am now come cloſe to the Argument upon the main; I hope herein give me leave to profeſs, that I am in a Dilemma; the Queſtion will be what the King can do in theſe Caſes by his Royal Power; it much concerns him, and I have learned out of a Speech of his late Majeſty what it is to debate ſuch queſtions; not to argue it were to diſobey the Aſſignment of the Court, and to deſert my Client and the Cauſe; for my Part, as your Lordſhips ſee I have laboured to decline the main Queſtion, and ſhould be glad it ſhould ſo ſleep: I ſhall offer it if happily the caſe fall off in the opening of the VVrits, I doubt whether the way of Argument I muſt otherwiſe take ſhould do the Crown diſ- your ſervice.

Out of my duty to His Majeſtie, and ſervice to your Lordſhips I humbly offer it whether your Lordſhips may not think it fitting to determine the Queſtion upon the framing of the caſe as it is upon record, before it be further argued; and here I ſhall reſt, or upon Command ready to go on.

Whereupon the Court declared by the Lord Chief Juſtice Finch, that they do not uſe to Judge Caſes by Fractions, whereupon Mr. Holborn ſaid, ſince it is your Command I ſhall go on.

I hope His Majeſty will excuſe us for arguing that which elſe cannot be determined, and as he hath given way to an Argument, I hope his goodneſs will excuſe us while we do our duty for our Clyent, and if I err in my materials, or in the way of my arguing, it is from the defect of my wiſdom (I cannot be wiſer than God hath made me) and not out of any diſaffection to the ſervice.

My Lords, I hope neither His Majeſty nor your Lordſhips will think it a preſumption if I make a ſtraight enquiry into a point of a higher nature, yet thus far I aſſure your Lordſhips, if any matter or conſideration of State come in my way, I ſhall tread as lightly as I can, yet I muſt crave liberty to pick out ſome to refer to your Lordſhips Conſideration, and forbear thoſe things that are unfit. Here the Court ſaid by the Lord Chief Juſtice Finch, keep you within the bounds of duty, as becomes one of your Profeſſion at the Bar at Weſtminſter, and you ſhall have no interruption.

My Lords, I ſhall be very wary and tender: I ſhall now open the diviſion and ſeveral parts of my Argument.

My Negative part, that the King cannot out of Parliament charge the Subject, not only for guard of Sea againſt Pyrates, but not for the defence of the Kingdom ordinary through the King ſuppoſe the Kingdom to be loſt and unavoidably endammaged, and in this I muſt take in the defence, as well the defence of Land as Sea.

My poſitive part, regularly the King is to be at the charge for guarding the Sea againſt Pyrates, for defence of Land and Sea againſt Enemies ſo far as he is able; and further if he were more able, [illegible] hath proviſion and conſideration for both, [illegible]

[illegible] two general parts I ſhall not only [illegible] but [illegible] Mr. St. John [illegible] againſt the Subjects deni[illegible] [illegible]ration.

And this courſe will neceſſarily bring in many of his Arguments, which I could be glad to ſpare if the cauſe would bear it, becauſe your Lordſhips ſhould not think that I do nothing but repeat.

In this way I ſhall humbly endeavour to clear each part by giving a reply before I deſcend to other particulars, and where I conceive a new Objection which will not fall within any former Anſwers, I will raiſe it and endeavour to lay it. Into theſe general Queſtions will fall many other of greater conſequence.

For ſuch as not being the main, I will not draw upon particular debate where there is any thing that concerns matter of State or revenue, I hope to admit ſuch and ſave my Clients caſe.

Having thus unfolded my form of Argument, I deſcend to my Negative, that the King in none of theſe caſes without Parliament can charge the Subject.

1. I'le prove it from reaſon, which is Maſter over all Authority as ſaid Mr. Solicitor, and from reaſon drawn from the fundamental policy of the frame of this Engliſh Government, in the neceſſary attendance of the publick advice in Parliament upon the Royal Power: And ſecondly from the abſolute property the Subject hath in his Lands and Goods. From theſe things I ſhall draw my Reaſons.

For the political advice in Parliament, I ſhall here decline all School diſputes, the Spider may make Poyſon out of that which the Bee ſucks Honey; I ſhall omit the conſideration of ſome points, I ſhall make my riſe from the Judgement of King James 169. in his Speech of Parliament, wherein His Majeſty agrees that a King in Concreto can do no more than the fundamental Laws of the Kingdom alloweth, for more I aſſure my ſelf His Majeſty deſireth not.

Before I enter into the Argument further, whether the Law hath intruſted the King out of Parliament in either of the caſes put, I here profeſs for my Clyent and my ſelf, that while we ſpeak of political advice, and how far a Governor is ſubject to Error and VVill may uſe a Regal Power, we do always with thankfulneſs to him acknowledge our preſent happineſs to be bleſſed with ſo juſt a Prince, and we fetch it from our hearts, and were His Majeſty ſo immortal as he deſerves, and that His Succeſſors might be Heirs to His Vertues and His Crown, we ſhould wiſh that the Regal Power might be free from political advice and unlimited.

L. C. J. Finch.

Here my Lord Chief Juſtice Finch ſaid, this belongs not to the Bar to talk of future Government; it is not agreeable to duty to have you bandy what is the hopes of ſucceeding Princes when the King hath a Bleſſed Iſſue ſo hopeful to ſucceed him in his Crown and Vertues.

My Lords, For that whereof I ſpeak, I ſpeak looking far off, many ages of 500 years hence.

My Lords, Becauſe I might run on to a further error, if I ſhould not take your advice I ſhall ſlip over much, and the ſum of all is;

1. An Argument from the Policy of England, in the neceſſary attendance on the particular adviſe in Parliament.

An. 1637.

2. It will be from the abſolute property that the Subject hath in his Goods.

Taking that for granted againſt the Book of Cowel, the Proclamation againſt it in the year of King James; that Cowel hath written under the word Parliament, of the Kings Power out of Parliament, ſaith, that Power in Parliament is but a politick mercy; this was complained of in Parliament, and by a Proclamation the Book was denied: your Lordſhips know another Book that was ſentenced upon the ſame occaſion; this uſe that I make of it is,

If the form of Engliſh Government ſtand in the Regal Power, and the Subject hath a property in his Goods, then the adequate reaſon from both theſe, that therefore the King cannot without Parliament charge the Subject in his Eſtate, though in pretence of common good, then a Prince 500 years hence, if ſubject to Error or Will, may if he will upon any occaſion or no occaſion, may at what rate he will charge the Subject to the height.

As to the advice political, if the King can do this alone, what is become of the policy for which the political advice was made, attendant to the Regal Power, Ne reſpub. &c.

If the Subject hath a property in his Goods, how is it in the power of any one alone to charge that with mony.

This reaſon I muſt not leave, for on this the Cauſe ſtands or falls; though there be many Books and Caſes, yet all are from reaſon, but eſpecially when theſe ſtand together.

The Author here breaks off with theſe few paſſages in Mr. Hoborns firſt days Argument, which continued three days longer; here followeth the days that the Councel of both ſides argued upon, viz.

It was Trin. Term. 1638. before Judgement was entred in this Caſe, and in regard that year will be clogged with much matter of preparation for a War with the Scots, &c. We ſhall here inſert though out of time, theſe following Orders concerning the entring Judgement againſt Mr. Hambden, viz.

Termino Sanctæ Trinitatis Anno 14. Regis Car. Martis 11. die Junij.

Ex parte remērat; Regis.

Bucks. An Order upon Mr. Attorney Generals Motion to enter Judgment againſt Mr. Hampden.

WHereas divers ſeveral ſums of mony, by vertue of the Kings Majeſties Writ, under the Great Seal of England, bearing date the 4*th* of Auguſt, in the 11*th* year of His Majeſties Reign were Aſſeſſed and Charged upon ſeveral Perſons, for, and towards the proviſion of a Ship of War, together for the Furniture and other things thereunto belonging, in the ſaid Writ particularly mentioned; which ſaid ſeveral ſums of money ſo Aſſeſſed and Charged and not being ſatiſfied and paid, the names of the ſeveral Perſons, together with the ſeveral ſums charged upon them, were by His Majeſties Writ of Certiorar', bearing date the 9*th* day of March, in the twelfth year of His Majeſties reign, certified into this Court of Chancery, and by His Writ of Mittimus under the ſame Seal, bearing date the 5*th* day of May, in the 13*th* year of His Majeſties reign, were ſent into this Court of Exchequer for further Proceſs to be had thereupon, as by the ſaid ſeveral VVrits may appear: And whereas Proceſs of Scire Facias was the 22*d* of May, in the ſaid 13*th* year of His Majeſties reign awarded to the Sheriff of the ſaid County of Bucks, directed to garniſh the ſaid ſeveral Perſons in a Schedule to the ſaid Scire Facias annexed, contained to ſhew cauſe the utas of the Holy Trinity then enſuing why they ſhould not be charged, and ſatisfie the ſaid ſums of money aſſeſſed upon them. In which Schedule it was contained amongſt divers others, that John Hampden Eſquire was aſſeſſed at 20*s.* as by the ſaid Scire Facias, and the Schedules thereunto annexed may alſo more fully appear; whereupon the ſaid John Hampden Eſquire being garniſhed by Sr. Anthony Cheſter Barronet, then Sheriff of the ſaid County of Bucks, appeared and demanded Oyer of all the aforeſaid VVrits, which being read unto him, he thereupon demurred in Law, and Sr. John Banks Knight, His Majeſties Attorney General joyned in the ſaid Demurrer; and the Record thereof being made up, it pleaſed the Barons of this Court (the ſame matter being of great Conſequence and VVeight) to adjourn the arguing of the ſame matter into the Exchequer Chamber, and to deſire the Aſſiſtance and Judgement of all the Judges in England touching the ſame. Now upon the motion of His Majeſties Attorney General this day informing this Court, that ſeeing the ſaid matter hath been ſo ſolemnly debated and argued, as well by the Counſel of the ſaid Defendant, and by ſome of His Majeſties learned Counſel, as alſo by all the Judges of England, and by the Barons of the Exchequer, and that the major part of the ſaid Judges and Barons have delivered their Opinions and Judgement, that the ſaid John Hampden ought to be charged with, and to ſatisfie the ſaid ſum of 20*s.* and therefore the ſaid Mr. Attorney moved this Court that Judgement might be entred accordingly; it is thereupon ordered by this Court that Judgement ſhall be forthwith entred, that the aforeſaid John Hampden ought to be charged with and ſatisfie the aforeſaid ſum of 20*s.*

Memorandum, that 12 Junii 14 Caroli Mr. Attorney moved the Court of Exchequer for Judgement againſt Mr. Hampden, and after he had opened the Record he ſaid,

Your Lordſhips and the Court in reſpect of the greatneſs of the Cauſe did adjourn it into the Exchequer Chamber, that your Lordſhips and the Court might receive the advice of all the Judges, whoſe advice and opinion your Lordſhips have already heard and received, and the plurality of their voices is, that Judgement ſhould be given againſt Mr. Hampden, and accordingly I do pray Judgement.

To which the Lord Chief Baron anſwered.

It is very true, it was referred from hence to the Exchequer Chamber to receive the advice of all the Judges in the Land, we do not take them to aſſiſt only by way of advice, but for a judicial direction; for admitting we four were of one opinion and the reſt of the Judges of another (though the Cauſe properly depends in this Court) yet we muſt apply our ſelves to their reſolution, and our Voices are involved in theirs, and there accordingly ſecundum Legem, &c. oneretur Johannes Hampden.

Now that we have imparted to the Reader the Arguments of two of the Council Pro & Con, in the Caſe of Ship-money, the Author begs leave (although out of time) to mention the Articles of Impeachment againſt Judge Berkley (one of the Judges before whom that Caſe was Argued) for delivering his opinion againſt Mr. Hampden, which is a Preſident as to the reſt of the Judges; for it would be too tedious to mention every particular Judges Charge; and as an Introduction to the ſaid Articles of Impeachment, here is alſo mentioned the Speech of William Perepoint Eſquire (a Member of the Houſe of Commons) unto the Lords at the time of the delivery of the Charge againſt the ſaid Earl.

William Perpoint Eſquire, his Speech in Parliament, at a Conference of both Houſes in the Painted Chamber.

My Lords,

I Am commanded to preſent your Lordſhips theſe Articles, with which the Knights, Citizens and Burgeſſes of the Commons Houſe of Parliament, in their own name and in the name of all the Commons of England, impeach Sir Robert Berkley, Knight, one of the Juſtices of His Majeſties Court of Kings Bench, in maintenance of their accuſation of High-Treaſon, and other great miſdemeanors, the Articles they deſire may be read. Whereupon the Articles were read by Mr. Francis Newport, a Member of the Houſe of Commons, then Mr. Perpoint proceeded and ſaid.

The high Treaſon is in the firſt Article, in his endeavours to ſubvert the fundamental Laws of this Realm, and to introduce an arbitrary and tyrannical Government, which hath been lately adjudged Treaſon in the Cauſe of the Earl of Strafford.

The other Articles prove the firſt by his Opinions, Certificates, Judgments, by his denials of the benefit of our Laws, which have been read by your Lordſhips. No fundamental Law to the Subject is left; our Goods, our Lands, our Bodies, the peace of a good Conſcience, are by him given up to arbitrary tyrannical Government.

Nothing hath been omitted to make a Judge know the Laws, to make him juſt, or fear him from being evil: We have Inns of Court peculiar to that Study, Judges from thence only choſen; ſeldom any but what have been twenty years there; Honours and Revenues are given to Judges, encouragement to do well; this Judge had theſe: Judges are ſworn according to Law to ſerve the King, and His People; according to Law to counſel the King; and for not ſo doing, to be at His Will for Body, Lands and Goods; this Judge took that Oath; the Laws, the Judges Study, impoſe the greateſt puniſhment upon unjuſt Judges, they ſhew that theſe puniſhments have been inflicted, more could not be done to perſwade or fear a Judge.

His offences ſhew in him great ambition, yet he was moſt timerous of diſpleaſing the great in Power; he did not only forbear doing what he was ſworn to do, but was moſt active againſt our Laws, and in oppoſing and puniſhing any that did maintain them.

To have only received Bribes, (though they blind the Eyes, and though the deſire to get Money increaſeth with Age) that hainous crime in a Judge had been in compariſon with his offences, a tolerable vice; for from ſuch a Judge Juſtice is alſo to be had for Money. Ambition is violent, and ruines, whilſt covetouſneſs is making a bargain.

The words of his Opinioh and Judgment are for the Kings Power. It is pleaſing to the nature of Man that others ſhould obey his Will; and well-framed diſpoſitions of Princes may eaſily be perſwaded their Power is unlimited, when they are alſo put in mind, that therefore they have more cauſe to do well, and for doing well are more renowned; for the moſt oppreſſive deſigns, (which we have ſuffered under) the pretences of His Majeſty have ever been the good of His Subjects; his is the ſin, that is to judge by the Laws, and knows the Laws are to the contrary, yet puts and confirms ſuch thoughts in his Prince.

He that incites another to arbitrary Government, when his ſelf-ends are thereby compaſſed, hates him for taking that Power he perſwaded him unto.

The Writs, thoſe monſters of neceſſity to provide Ships to avoid imminent danger that could not ſtay 40 days for the calling of a Parliament, were therefore to go out in September, to have Ships ready in March, This hath been adjudged by your Lordſhips to be deſtructive to the fundamental Laws of this Realm, and to the Subjects right of Property and Liberty, &c. that I ſhall ſay but this concerning them; that this Judge publiſhed them to be inſepera-

An. 1637. perable Flowers of the Crown. And that we have lived to ſee for five years together imminent danger, and thus to be prevented.

This Judge did adviſe to ſuch a Government, as future Kings here might exerciſe the higheſt tyranny, and the Subjects want the benefit of reſtraints, known to the moſt ſlaviſh Eaſtern Nations; where, if their Prince do unjuſtly, he hath hatred for it, and the dangers that follow that. This Judge will have that hatred to go to our good Laws: No ſuch bondage as when the Laws of freedom are miſ-interpreted by Judges to make Men Slaves.

What can be conſidered of in a Judge of Law, to give his opinion and adviſe to his Prince, how the Laws (the mutual Covenants of Kings and Subjects) are to be broken, but that his intentions are to have his Prince do ill, by making his evil Servants to ſtudy, and to be pleaſed with their wicked deſigns; becauſe they ſee means to put them in execution, by making them to perſwade their Prince, becauſe in imminent danger His Subjects Goods are at his Will, that there is ſuch danger when there is not, and that they have only ſome by-ends of their own.

This Judge will have the Law to be what to him ſeems reaſon; the reaſon limited to him to judge of, is what the Common-Law ſaith is ſo, what a Statute hath ſo enacted. For him to judge this or that is Law, elſe a miſchief ſhall follow, becauſe the Law in ſuch a thing is imperfect, therefore he will make a Law to ſupply it; or becauſe that the Law written in ſuch Particulars is againſt his reaſon, therefore his reaſon is to be Law; then muſt follow, as often as a Judges reaſon changes, or Judges change, our Laws change alſo.

Our Liberties are in our Laws, where a Subject may read, or hear read; this is his, this he may do and be ſafe; and that thus the Judge ought to give Judgment, he is free. The exceſſive growths of Courts of Reaſon, Conſcience came from great and cunning Perſons; and though not the moſt ſudden, yet the moſt dangerous, and ſure ways to eat out our Laws, our Liberties.

Unlimited Power muſt be in ſome to make and repeal Laws to fit the diſpoſitions of times and perſons; Nature placeth this in common conſent only, and where all cannot conveniently meet, inſtructeth them to give their conſents to ſome they know or believe ſo well of, as to be bound to what they agree on. His Majeſty your Lordſhips, and the Commons, are thus met in Parliament; and ſo long as we are often reduced to this main foundation, our King and we ſhall proſper.

This Judge will not allow us our Knowledge, or any Reaſon, he will have our minds, our Souls Slaves: A Grand-Jury-man gave his Fellows true Information; they preſent an Innovation in the Church, are threatned and reviled for it; he that told this truth is charged (I ſhall uſe this Judges own words) to ſin in that, and that he made others forſwear themſelves; this Judge ſent him to the Common Gaol, where he is laid in Irons; and all this, becauſe he and they durſt meddle with Church matters. He is forced to tear the Preſentments in Pieces in open Court; our Laws provide for the peace of our Conſciences, many Acts of Parliament are for it, and the truſt by thoſe Acts ſet to Juries; this Judge well knew all this, your Lordſhips have heard what he did to the Jury at Hartford; he would have us know no more Divinity than to obey what the great of the Clergy directed, no more Law than what he ſaid was ſo.

Judges in former times, (but only ſuch as were examples of puniſhment, as of injuſtice in Caſes of great and publick concernment) forbare proceedings, till the next Parliament. This neceſſitated the calling of Parliaments;this Judge had as many ſuch Cauſes before him, as ever any had; yet he never deſired the reſolution of Parliament in any one, for the ways he went, the neceſſity was never to have a Parliament; he would pull up that root of our ſafeties, and liberties, which whilſt we enjoy, the malice or injuſtice of all other Courts and Perſons can never ruine, and when near to ruine (as moſt near of late) this only ſure remedy will help us; nothing can ruine a Parliament, but it ſelf.

The evils which we have ſuffered under, they were committed by the Judges, or by them ought to have been, and might have been prevented.

This Judge aſſiſted in cauſing the miſeries we ſuffered in the Star-Chamber, and at the Council-Table, he denied the known Rights which he ought to have granted us to ſtop our grievances in the Eccleſiaſtical Courts, he was the cauſer of our ſufferings in other Courts.

The beſt lovers of their Laws and Liberties, the moſt honeſt ſuffer moſt by an unjuſt Judge, they moſt oppoſe his vices; diſhoneſt perſons find ſuch a Judge to fit their purpoſes, the Judge finds them for his, the Bond of iniquity confederates them.

He that will do no wrong, will ſuffer none which he can help; The Man that knows himſelf born free, will do his utmoſt to live ſo, and to leave freedom to his Poſterity; were he in ſlavery, when by outward geſture thought to be moſt delighted, were his mind then known, there would be found vexation, and his buſie thoughts employed to redeem himſelf and his Poſterity from thraldom. But to ſay, could this Judge intend to make himſelf and his own Poſterity Slaves? what he did was through error of Judgment only: No, my Lords, what his aymes and endeavours were, is apparent. To conſider Man in the general, we ſhall find in every Age he will be a Slave to ſome few, that many may be Slaves to him, he looks to himſelf only; this he would do, or forbear doing, to be great, to be rich, had he Children or Kindred, or had none. This highly unjuſt Judge, by continuing ſins, maintained his actions to preſerve himſelf, he knows to be found guilty in one of his offences, the penalty of the Law for it, therefore covers the offences committed with inventing and acting other.

For a Judge to be unjuſt, more hurts the publick than any other, he is not ſuſpected. What a Judge doth, is looked on as a thing that ought to be done. The moſt pernitious great Man, that by cunning hath got to himſelf the Heart and Tongue of his Prince, his ill Acts have dyed with him, if not taken up by others, and then they walk in darkneſs: No Man will juſtifie what he doth by ſaying ſuch a favourite did it; but the unjuſt Judgments of this Judge were given in Noon-day, were done in the face of the whole Kingdom, in the hearing of ſuch as might carry the news to all

An. 1637.

all parts of the Realm, and was therefore done; his unjuſt Judgments were our Records. VVe have ſeen wicked great Men moſt craftily politique, they hated our Laws, yet not meeting with active Judges moulded to their purpoſes, they and their Acts have dyed, the Realm flouriſhed; but of late, others leſs politique meeting with moſt unjuſt Judges, every way as ill as they could wiſh them to be, then did the Kingdom faint, under the load of its miſery did long ſtruggle; now it's riſing, I aſſure my ſelf, your Lordſhips will aſſiſt to take off the burden.

If the deſigns of ſome would not have ſuch a Man to be at liberty, a VVarrant from ſome Lords of the Council would ſoon have laid him in Priſon, and given no cauſe; had he moved this Judge to be diſcharged or bailed, he could have obtained neither, if their ways would not have endured that Man to live, a Judge reviling the Priſoner, and the Council that moved for his diſcharge or bail, joyned with the hate of ſome great Man, might ſoon have moved a Goaler for unwholeſom rooms and lodging, and ill diet for his Priſoner, and they may ſoon take life away: Offenders in Priſons are looked after to be ſafe only, ſuch as are brought in by Power againſt Law, are abuſed.

Had a great Man deſired the Eſtates of others, the breach of a Proclamation might readily have been charged againſt them in Star-Chamber: but they, it may be, could have anſwered and cleared themſelves, and proved their Anſwer by Teſtimonies; had they been referred to this Judge, he would have expunged the one, ſuppreſſed the other. Then followed Fines to the value of their Eſtates, or more than Impriſonments of courſe till they paid ſuch Fines; your Lordſhips have heard what this Judge did to the Soap-boilers.

The Country-man followed the Plough, and to his thinking he was aſſured of his Right, Property, and Liberty, gave him ability to do it. He believed his Neighbour, his Land-lord, his King, could not take his Goods from him without his conſent. He knew the uſual Payments by Law, and in extraordinary Cauſes thought to have that care to chuſe ſuch for the Knights of his Shire, or for his Burgeſſes, as might be mindful of the cauſe of payment, and of his Eſtate.

This Country-man hath heard the Opinions and Judgment of this Judge, hath ſeen his Goods taken from him, without his, or his Knights of the Shire, or Burgeſſes conſent or advice. Theſe have made him, his Wife and Children to joyn in tears to wiſh they had never been born, they have made them think on many ways to keep ſafe that Eſtate which was yet left them, have made them deſire to ſell all their Goods, and hide the Money; but then he remembers this Judge, how that he ſhall be carried to Priſon, and remain there, if he pay not what pleaſe others to Aſſeſs him: Then they think idle perſons (the Drones and Moths of the Common-Wealth) to be a wiſe People, whilſt the Country-men expect, and can think of nothing, but being Beggers.

Where publick and enormous offences have been committed, eminent and notorious puniſhments muſt be; ſuch will make your Lordſhips Proceedings highly eſteamed, elſe there will be ſo many offenders, and none without danger can be puniſhed.

This

13 Caroli.

This Judge ſubverting our Laws, took away the Hearts of many; he ſubſcribed for the Kings Power, but ſo as he put him on taking his Subjects Goods, and of all other, ſuch ways be moſt dangerous; for we know His Majeſty is not the laſt that ſuffers, and is not the King worth many thouſands?

The place of this Judge was to have given and preſerved to the King the Hearts of His Subjects, the due execution of the Laws had done this; and when ſuch notice is taken of a Prince, none will conſpire againſt him, who cannot feign to themſelves ſafety before or after any Fact committed, Forreign Enemies will not invade His Kingdoms.

Thus hath His Majeſty now got our Hearts, and will for ever have them. This Judge is to anſwer for what His Majeſty, and for what we have ſuffered.

I am commanded by the Houſe of Commons to deſire of your Lordſhips, that the Proceedings againſt Sir Robert Berkeley Knight, one of the Juſtices of His Majeſties Court of Kings-Bench, may be put in as ſpeedy a way of Tryal, as the Courſe of Parliament will allow.

Alſo Mr. Hollis, at the ſame time, made a Speech in the behalf of Sir Randolph Crew, ſometimes Lord Chief-Juſtice of the Kings-Bench, but removed, his opinion was againſt Loan-Money; but more of this hereafter.

Articles

An. 1637.

Articles of Impeachment of Sir Robert Berkeley, Knight, one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench; by the Commons in this preſent Parliament aſſembled, in their own Name, and in the Name of all the Commons of England, in maintenance of their Accuſation, whereby he ſtandeth charged with High Treaſon, and other great miſdemeanours.

Imprimis, That the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then being one of the Juſtices of the ſaid Court of Kings-Bench, hath traiterouſly and wickedly endeavoured to ſubvert the fundamental Laws, and eſtabliſhed Government of the Realm of England; and inſtead thereof, to introduce an Arbitrary and Tyrannical Government againſt Law, which he hath declared by traiterous and wicked words, opinions, judgments, practiſes, and actions appearing in the ſeveral Articles enſuing.

2. Whereas by the Statute made in the 25th year of the Reign of King Henry the 8. Prices of Victuals are appointed to be rated in ſuch manner, as in the ſaid Statute is declared: But it is manifeſt by the ſaid Statute, Corn is none of the Victuals thereby intended. Nevertheleſs ſome ill-affected Perſons endeavouring to bring a Charge upon the Subjects contrary to Law, did ſurmiſe, that the Prices of Corn might be rated, and ſet according to the direction of that Statute; and thereupon great gain might be raiſed to His Majeſty by Licenſes and Diſpenſations for ſelling Corn at other Prices: And a Command from His Majeſty being procured to the Judges, and ſent to them by William Noy Eſq; His Majeſties then Attorney-General, to deliver their Opinions touching the Queſtion, whether Corn was ſuch Victuals as was intended to have the Price rated within the ſaid Statute: In anſwer to which demand, the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley then being one of His Majeſties Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, in furtherance of the ſaid unlawful Charge, endeavoured to be impoſed, as aforeſaid, the thirtieth day of November, in the eighth year of His now Majeſties Reign, did deliver his Opinion, That Corn was ſuch Victual as was intended to have the Price rated within the ſaid Statute; which ſaid opinion was contrary to Law, and to the plain ſenſe and meaning of the ſaid Statute, and contrary to his own knowledge, and was given and delivered by him, with a purpoſe and intention, that the ſaid unlawful Charge might be impoſed upon the Subject.

3. That an Information being preferred in the Court of Star-Chamber by the ſaid William Noy, His Majeſties then Attorney-General, againſt John Overman, and fifteen other Soap-makers, Defendants, charging them with ſeveral pretended offences, contrary to divers Letters Patents, and Proclamations, touching the making and uttering Soap, and uſing the Trade of Soap-makers, and other offences in the ſaid Information mentioned; whereunto the Defendants did plead, and demurr as to part, and anſwer to other part of the ſaid Information: And the ſaid Plea and Demurrer being over-ruled, for that the Particulars therein inſiſted upon, would appear more fully after anſwer and proof; therefore the Defendants were ordered to anſwer without prejudice, and were to be admitted to ſuch exceptions to the ſaid Information and advantages of the matter of the Plea and Demurrer upon the hearing, as ſhall be material;and accordingly theDefendants did put in their Anſwers,and ſet forth ſeveral Acts of Parliament,Letters Patents,Charters,Cuſtoms,and Acts of Common-Councel of the City of London, and other matters materially conducing to their Defence; and, in concluſion, pleaded not guilty. The ſaid Sir Robert Berkely then being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, upon the 30*th* day of March, in the eighth year of His Majeſties Reign, upon an Order of reference to him and others, by the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber, to conſider of the impertinency of the ſaid Anſwers, did certifie the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber, That the whole Anſwers, excepting the four words, and ten laſt lines, ſhould be expunged; leaving thereby no more ſubſtance of the ſaid Anſwers, than the Plea of not guilty. And after, upon a reference to him and others, by Order of the ſaid Court, of the impertinency of the Interrogatories, and Depoſitions of Witneſſes taken on the Defendants part, in the ſame Caſe of Sir Robert Berkeley, upon the ſecond day of May, in the eighth year of His now Majeſties Reign, certified, That nine and thirty of the ſaid Interrogatories, and the Depoſitions upon them taken, ſhould be ſuppreſſed with Anſwers, (except as aforeſaid) and Depoſitions, although the ſame did contain the ſaid Defendants moſt material defence. Yet were expunged and ſuppreſſed according to the ſaid Certificates; both which ſaid Certificates were contrary to Law and Juſtice, and contrary to his the ſaid Sir Robert Berkleys own knowledge, and contrary to the ſaid former Order, whereby the advantages were ſaved to the Defendants, as aforeſaid: And by reaſon thereof the ſaid John Overman, and the ſaid other fifteen Defendants, were ſentenced in the ſaid Court of Star-Chamber to be committed Priſoners to the Fleet, and diſabled from uſing their Trade of Soap-makers; and one of them fined in 1500 l. two of them in 1000 l. a-piece, four of them in 1000 Marks a-piece; which Fines were eſtreated into the Exchequer without any mitigation: And the ſaid Defendants, according to the ſaid Sentence, were impriſoned, and deprived of their Trade and Livelihood, tending to the utter ruine of the ſaid Defendants, and to the overthrow of free Trade, and contrary to the liberty of the Subject.

4. That he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then being one of the Juſtices of the Kings-Bench, and having taken an Oath for the due adminiſtration of Juſtice, according to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm, to His Majeſties Liege-People, on or about the laſt of December ſubſcribed an opinion in hac verba. I am of opinion, that as where the benefit doth more particularly redound to the good of the Ports or Maritime Parts, (as in Caſe of Piracy or Depredations upon the Seas) there the charge hath been, and may be lawfully impoſed upon them, according to Preſidents of former times; ſo where the ſafety and good of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger, (of which His Majeſty is the only Judge) there the charge of the defence ought to be born by all the Realm in general: This I hold agreeable both to Law and Reaſon.

5. That he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then being one of the Juſtices of our Court of Kings-Bench, and duly ſworn as aforeſaid; in Feb. 1636. ſubſcribed an extra-judicial opinion, in anſwer to Queſtions in a Letter from His Majeſty in hac verba.

Charles Rex.

‘WHen the good and ſafety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger; whether may not the King, by Writ under the Great Seal of England, command all the Subjects of this Kingdom at their charge to provide and furniſh ſuch number of Ships, with Men, Victuals and Munition; and for ſuch time as he ſhall think fit, for the defence and ſafeguard of the Kingdom, from ſuch danger and peril? and by Law compel the doing thereof in caſe of refuſal, or refractorineſs? and whether in ſuch caſe is not the King ſole Judge, both of the danger, and when and how the ſame is to be prevented and avoided? C. R.

‘May it pleaſe your moſt excellent Majeſty, we have, according to your Majeſties command, ſeverally every Man by himſelf, and all of us together, taken into ſerious conſideration, the Caſe and Queſtion Signed by your Majeſty, and incloſed in your Royal Letter; And we are of opinion, that when the good and ſafety of the Kingdom in general is concerned, and the whole Kingdom in danger, your Majeſty may, by Writ under the Great Seal of England, command all your Subjects of this your Kingdom, at their charge to provide and furniſh ſuch number of Ships, with Men, Victuals, and Munition, and for ſuch time as your Majeſty ſhall think fit for the defence and ſafeguard of the Kingdom from ſuch danger and peril; and that by Law your Majeſty may compel the doing thereof in caſe of refuſal, and refractorineſs: And we are alſo of opinion, that in ſuch caſe your Majeſty is the ſole Judge, both of the danger, and when and how the ſame is to be prevented and avoided. John Brampſton, John Finch, Humphrey Davenport, John Denham, Richard Hutton, William Jones, George Crooke, Thomas Trevor, George Vernon, Robert Barkeley, Francis Crawley, Richard Weſton.

6. That he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, being then one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, and having ſworn as aforeſaid, did on the deliver his Opinion in the Exchequer-Chamber againſt John Hampden Eſq; in the Caſe of Ship-Money, That he the ſaid John Hampden, upon the matter and ſubſtance of the Caſe, was chargeable with the Money then in queſtion; a Copy of which Proceedings and Judgment the Commons of this preſent Parliament have delivered to your Lordſhips.

7. That he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, and one of the Juſtices of Aſſize for the County of York, did at the Aſſizes held at York, in Lent 1636. deliver his Charge to the Grand Jury, That it was a lawful and inſeperable Flower of the Crown for the King to command, not only the Maritime Counties, but alſo thoſe that were Inland, to find Ships for the defence of the Kingdom. And then likewiſe falſely and malitiouſly affirmed, That it was not his ſingle Judgment, but the Judgment of all his Brethren, witneſſed by their Subſcriptions. And then alſo ſaid, That there was a Rumor, that ſome of his Brethren that had ſubſcribed, were of a contrary Judgment; but it was a baſe and unworthy thing, for any to give his Hand contrary to his Heart; and then wiſhed for his own part, that his Hand might rot from his Arm, that was guilty of any ſuch crime; when as he knew that Mr. Juſtice Hutton, and Mr. Juſtice Crooke, who had ſubſcribed, were of a contrary opinion, and was preſent when they were perſwaded to ſubſcribe; and did ſubſcribe for conformity, only becauſe the major number of the Judges had ſubſcribed. And he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley then alſo ſaid, That in ſome Caſes the Judges were above an Act of Parliament; which ſaid falſe malitious words were uttered, as aforeſaid, with intent and purpoſe to countenance and maintain the ſaid unjuſt opinions, and to terrifie His Majeſties Subjects that ſhould refuſe to pay Ship-Money, or ſeek any remedy by Law, againſt the ſaid unjuſt and illegal Taxation.

8. That whereas Richard Chambers Merchant, having commenced a Suit for Treſpaſs, and falſe Impriſonment, againſt Sir Edward Bromfeild Knight, for impriſoning him the ſaid Chambers, for refuſing to pay Ship-Money, in the time that the ſaid Sir Edward Bromfeild was Lord Major of the City of London; in which Suit the ſaid Sir Edward Bromfeild did make a ſpecial Juſtification: The ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley then being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, in Trinity Term laſt, then ſitting on the Bench in the ſaid Court, upon debate of the ſaid Caſe between the ſaid Chambers and Sir Edward Bromfeild, ſaid openly in the Court, That there was a Rule of Law, and a Rule of Government: And that many things which might not be done by the Rule of Law, might be done by the Rule of Government: And would not ſuffer the point of Legality of Ship-Money to be argued by Chambers his Councel; all which Opinions, Declarations, words,

An. 1637.

Words, and Speeches, contained in the third, fourth, fifth, ſixth, ſeventh, [illegible] Articles, are deſtructive to the fundamental Laws of [illegible], the Subjects right of Property, and contrary to former Reſolutions in Parliament, and to the Petition of Right; which reſolution in Parliament, and Petition of Right, were [illegible] known to him, and reſolved, and enacted, when he was the Kings Serjeant at Law, and attendant in the Lords Houſe of Parliament.

9. That the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then being one of the Judges of the Court of Kings-Bench, and being in Commiſſion of the Peace, and duly ſworn to execute the Office of a Juſtice of the Peace in the County of Hertford, on or about the 7th of January 1638. at which time this general Seſſions of the Peace for the ſaid County were there holden: The ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, then and there ſitting on the Bench, did revile and threaten the Grand Jury returned to ſerve at the ſaid Seſſions, for preſenting the removal of the Communion-Table in All-Saints Church in Hertford aforeſaid, out of the place where it anciently and uſually ſtood, and ſetting it Altar-ways, againſt the Laws of this Realm, in that Caſe made and provided, as an Innovation in matters concerning the Church, the ſaid Grand Jury having delivered to them in charge at the ſaid Seſſions, by Mr. Serjeant Atkins, a Juſtice of the Peace for the ſaid County of Hertford, that by the Oath they had taken, they were bound to Preſent all Innovations concerning Church matters. And he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley compelled the Fore-man of the Jury to tell him who gave him any ſuch Information; and thereby knowing it to be one Henry Brown, one of the ſaid Grand Jury, he asked the ſaid Brown, how he durſt meddle with Church matters, who affirming, that in the ſaid Charge, from Mr. Serjeant Atkins, the ſaid Jury was charged to do, he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley told the ſaid Brown, He ſhould therefore find Sureties for his good behaviour; and that he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley would ſet a great Fine on his Head, to make him an example to others; and thereupon the ſaid Brown offered ſufficient Bail; but he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, being incenſed againſt him, refuſed the ſaid Bail, and committed the ſaid Brown to Priſon, where he lay in Irons till the next morning, and uſed to the ſaid Brown, and the reſt of the Jurors, many other reviling and terrifying Speeches; and ſaid, he knew no Law for the ſaid Preſentment; and told the ſaid Brown, That he had ſinned in the ſaid Preſentment: And he compelled the ſaid Grand-Jurors to ſay, they were ſorry for what they had done in that Preſentment, and did bid them to trample the ſaid Preſentment under their feet; and cauſed Brown to tear the ſaid Preſentment in his ſight. And he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, when as John Howland, and Ralph Pemberton, late Majors of St. Albons, came to deſire his opinion on ſeveral Indictments againſt John Brown, Parſon of St. Albons, and Anthony Smith, Vicar of St. Peters in St. Albons, at the Quarter Seſſions held at the ſaid Town of St. Albons, on the 24th of June 1639. for the Removal of the Communion-Table out of the the uſual place, and not adminiſtring the Sacrament according to Law in that caſe provided: He the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley then told them that ſuch an Indictment was before him at [illegible], and that he quaſhed the ſame, and impriſoned the Proſecutors; by which threatning and reviling ſpeeches againſt Articles and Declarations, he ſo terrified the Jurors in thoſe parts, that they durſt not preſent any Innovations in the Church matters, to their great grief and trouble of their conſciences.

And whereas ſeveral Indictments were preferred againſt Matthew Brook, Parſon of Yarmouth, by John Ingram and John Carter, for refuſing ſeveral times to adminiſter the Sacrament of the Lords Supper to them without any lawful cauſe, at the Aſſizes held at Norwich in the year 1633. he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, then being one of the Judges of the Aſſize, proceeded then to the Tryal on the ſaid Indictments; where the matter in iſſue being, That the ſaid Brook refuſed to adminiſter the ſaid Sacrament, becauſe the ſaid Ingram and Carter would not receive Tickets with their Sirnames before their Chriſtian names; which was a courſe never uſed amongſt them, but by the ſaid Brook. And the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley did then much diſcourage the ſaid Ingrams Councel, and over-rule the Cauſe for matter of Law, ſo as the Jury never went from the Bar, but there found for the ſaid Brook: And the ſaid Sir R. Berkley bound the ſaid Ingram to the good behaviour for the proſecuting the ſaid Indictments, and ordered him to pay coſts to the ſaid Brook for wrongfully inditing him. And whereas the ſaid Carter, not expecting the Tryal at the ſame Aſſizes he preferred his Indictment, was then abſent; whereupon the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley did cauſe to be entred upon the ſaid Indictment a Vacat, quia non ſufficiens in lege, and ordered an Attachment againſt the ſaid Carter, which ſaid proceedings againſt the ſaid Ingram and Carter, by the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, were contrary to Law and Juſtice, and to his own Knowledge.

10. That the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley, being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings-Bench, and duly ſworn as aforeſaid in Trinity Term 1637, deferred to diſcharge or bayl Alexander Jennings Priſoner in the Fleet, brought by Habeas Corpus to the Bar of the ſaid Court; the return of his Commitment being, that he was committed by two ſeveral Warrants from the Lords of the Council, dated the 5th of November 1636. The firſt being onely read in Court expreſſing no cauſe, the other for not paying Meſſengers Fees, and until he ſhould bring a Certificate that he had paid his Aſſeſſment for Ship-money in the County of Bucks, but remitted him: And in Michaelmas Term after, the ſaid Jennings being brought by another Habeas Corpus before him as aforeſaid, and the ſame returned; yet he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkeley refuſed to diſcharge or bayl him, but remitted him. And in Eaſter Term, after ſeveral rules were given for his Majeſties Councel, to ſhew cauſe why the ſaid Jennings ſhould not be bayled, a fourth Rule was made for the ſaid Jennings to let his Majeſties Attorney General have notice thereof, and notice was given accordingly; and the ſaid Jennings by another

Habeas

[illegible] Corpus, [illegible] soon after, and the [illegible] a new Commitment of the [illegible] hath used divers ſcandalous [illegible] and diſparagement of his Majeſties [illegible] after ſeveral Rules in the [illegible] again remanded to Priſon. And he the ſaid [illegible] on the 18th of June laſt, defer to grant [illegible] Corpus for William Pargiter and Samuel [illegible] Priſoners in the Gatehouſe, and in the Fleet [illegible] granted the ſaid Writ of Habeas Corpus, the [illegible] and Danvers were on the 18th of June laſt brought [illegible] the ſaid Court, where the returns of their Commitments were ſeveral Warrants from the Lords of the Council not [illegible] any Cauſe; yet he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley [illegible] the ſaid Court, deferred to bail the ſaid Pargiter and Danvers, and the 18th of June laſt, made a Rule for a new Return to be returned, which were returned the 25th of June laſt, in hac verba.

'Whereas His Majeſty finding that His Subjects of Scotland 'have in Rebellious and Hoſtile manner aſſembled themſelves together, and intend not only to ſhake off their obedience unto 'His Majeſty, but alſo as enemies to invade and infeſt this His 'Kingdom of England, to the danger of His Royal Perſon, &c.

For preventing whereof His Majeſty hath by the advice of His Council-board, given ſpecial commandment to all the ſaid Lord Lieutenants of the Counties of this Realm, appointed for their Randezvous in their ſeveral and reſpective Counties, there to be conducted and drawn together into a Body for this Service. And whereas His Majeſty according to the Laws and Statutes of this Realm and the conſtant cuſtom of His Predeceſſors Kings and Queens of this Realm, hath Power for the defence of this Kingdom, and reſiſting the force of the Enemies thereof, to grant forth Commiſſions under His Great Seal to ſuch fit perſons as he ſhall make choice of, to array and arm the Subjects of this Kingdom, and to compel thoſe who are of able Bodys and able Eſtates, to arm themſelves; and ſuch as ſhould not be of able bodies, but of ability in Eſtate, to aſſeſs them according to their Eſtates to contribute towards the Charge of arraying others, being able of body, and not able in Eſtate to arm themſelves; and ſuch Perſons as ſhould be contrariant to Commit to Priſon, there to remain untill the King ſhould take further order therein.

And whereas the Earl of Exeter, by vertue of His Majeſties Commiſſion to him directed, for the arraying and arming of a certain number of Perſons in the County of Northampton, hath aſſeſt William Pargiter being a man unfit of body for that Service, but being of Eſtate and Ability to contribute amongſt others, to pay the ſum of five Shillings towards the arraying and arming of others of able bodies, and wanting ability to array and arm themſelves.

And whereas we have received Information from the ſaid Earl, that the ſaid William Pargiter hath not only in a wilful diſobedient manner refuſed to pay the ſaid money aſſeſſed upon him towards ſo important a ſervice, to the diſturbance and hindrance of the neceſſary defence of this Kingdom; but alſo by his ill example hath miſled many others; and, as we have juſt cauſe to believe hath practized to ſeduce others from that ready obedience which they owe, and would otherwiſe have yeilded to His Majeſties juſt Command, for the publick defence of his Perſon and Kingdom, which we purpoſe with all convenient ſpeed to enquire further of and examine.

Theſe are therefore to Will and Require you, to take into your cuſtody the perſons of the ſaid William Pargiter and Samuel Danvers, and them ſafely to keep Priſoners till further order from this Board, or until by due courſe of Law they ſhall be delivered; yet he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley being deſired to bail the ſaid Pargiter and Danvers, remitted them, where they remained Priſoners till the ninth of November laſt, or thereabouts; although the ſaid Jennings, Pargiter and Danvers, on all and every the ſaid returns were clearly bailable by Law; and the Councel of the ſaid Jennings, Pargiter and Danvers offered in Court very ſufficient bail. And he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, being one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings Bench, denied to grant His Majeſties Writs of Habeas Corpus to very many others His Majeſties Subjects, and when he had granted the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus to very many others His Majeſties Subjects, and on the return no cauſe appeared, or ſuch only as was clearly bailed by Law; yet he remanded them, where they remained Priſoners very long: which ſaid deferring to grant the ſaid Writs of Habeas Corpus, and refuſals and delaies to diſcharge Priſoners, or to ſuffer them to be bailed, contained in this Article are deſtructive to the fundamental Laws of this Realm, and contrary to former Reſolutions in Parliament, and to the Petition of Right, which ſaid reſolutions and Petitions of Right were well known to him the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, and were reſolved on and enacted when he was the Kings Sergeant at Law, and Attendant in the Lords Houſe of Parliament.

11. That whereas there was a Cauſe depending in the Court-Chriſtian at Norwich, between Samuel Booty Clerk, and Collard for two ſhillings in the pound, for Tithes for Rents and Houſes in Norwich, and the ſaid Collard moved by His Councel in the Court of Kings Bench for a Prohibition to ſtay proceedings in the Court-Chriſtian at Norwich, and delivered into the ſaid Court of Kings Bench his Suggeſtions, that the ſaid Cauſe in the ſaid Court-Chriſtian was only for Tithes for Rents of Houſes in Norwich, which was determinable by the Common-Law only; yet he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, being one of the Juſtices of the ſaid Court of Kings Bench, and ſitting in the ſaid Court, deferred to grant a Prohibition to the ſaid Court-Chriſtian in the ſaid cauſe, although the Councel did move in the ſaid Court many ſeveral times, and ſeveral Terms for a Prohibition. And he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley deferred to grant His Majeſties Writ of Prohibition to ſeveral other Courts, on the motions of divers others of His Majeſties Subjects, where the ſame by the Laws of this Realm ought to have been granted, contrary to the Laws of this Realm and his own knowledge.

All which Words, Opinions, and Actions were ſo ſpoken and done by him the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley traiterouſly and wickedly to alienate the hearts of His Majeſties liege people from His Majeſtie, and to ſet a diviſion betwixt them, and to ſubvert the Fundamental Laws and Eſtabliſhed Government of His Majeſties Realm of England; for which they do impeach him the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings Bench of High-treaſon againſt our Sovereign Lord the King His Crown and Dignity, and of the miſdemeanors above mentioned.

And the ſaid Commons by proteſtation, ſaving to themſelves only the liberty of exhibiting at any time hereafter any other accuſation or impeachment againſt the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, and alſo of replying to the Anſwer, that he the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley ſhall make to the ſaid Articles, or any of them, or of offering proof of the premiſes, or any other impeachments or accuſations that ſhall be exhibited by them, as the caſe ſhall according to the courſe of Parliaments require, do pray that the ſaid Sir Robert Berkley, one of the Juſtices of the Court of Kings Bench, may be put to anſwer to all and every the premiſes; and that ſuch Proceedings, Examinations, Trials, Judgements and Executions may be upon every of them had and uſed as is agreeable to Law and Juſtice.

The Kings pleaſure declared concerning the Surveying and Marking of Iron, and Surveying Woods in the making thereof.

‘WHereas the Kings moſt Noble Progenitors and Predeceſſors, Kings and Queens of this Realm, duly conſidering the neceſſary and important uſe of the Woods and Timber of this Kingdom have taken into their conſtant care to preſerve the ſame from waſte and deſtruction; and to that end divers good and wholeſom Laws and Statutes have been made, nevertheleſs by a common neglect of the ſaid Laws, and by an unlawful liberty, which many of the Kings Subjects have taken, there hath been a ſpoil of Timber and Woods in the Kingdom, by converting the ſame into Coals for the making of Iron; ſo that it may be feared, that within few years, unleſs a ſpeedy courſe be taken to prevent it, there will follow ſuch a want of Wood and Timber, as cannot be ſupplied by any future providence; and which together with the frequent tranſportation of Iron and Iron-metal unlawfully, without Licenſe, hath already produced a great ſcarcity of Timber, Wood and Iron: for a remedy whereof, and for reſtraint of Tranſportation of Iron, and for Reformation of ſundry ſecret Deceits and Abuſes now uſed and practiſed in the making of Iron, and in the vent and ſale thereof in Bars by intermingling the worſer ſort with the better; His Majeſty by His Letters Patents under the Great Seal, dated the 14*th* of October laſt, did erect an Office to be for ever continued, and did thereby appoint John Cupper and Grimbald Pauncefoot Surveyor or Surveyors of all Iron-works, Furnaces and Forges within England and Wales, and of all Woods to be uſed or employed thereat; and for the Surveying and Marking of Iron with divers Stamps and Marks; for the doing whereof they are allowed by the ſaid Letters Patents, to have a moderate fee at the time of their Surveying and Marking. And notwithſtanding ſome complaint hath been made of this matter before the King and Council, yet it is thought fit and neceſſary, that the ſaid Patent be put in execution; and therefore the King doth Command, that no Perſon whatſoever ſhall employ any Woods to be converted into Coals for the making of Iron, or ſhall tranſport any Iron or Iron Metal. And that no Iron-Maſter, Owner or Farmer of Iron-works ſhall put to ſale any ſort of Iron, nor ſhall any Merchant, Trader or Dealer in Iron remove the ſame from the Iron-Works, Furnaces, or Forges before the ſaid Iron ſhall be firſt Surveyed and Marked by the Kings Officers, or their Deputies. And all Perſons are required to permit the ſaid Officers, or their Deputies to enter into the Iron-Works, Warehouſes, &c. to Survey and Mark the ſaid Iron. The King doth further declare, that his ſaid Officers, or their Deputies may enter into any Woods, or Wood-grounds, wherein any Woods are, or ſhall be felled, to be converted into Coals, for the Making of Iron, or Iron-Metal, and there to Survey the ſame.
